War Encourages Practical Dress

What influence will the war have on the dress of American women? Will the idea of uniforms grow, or will fashions prevail as always along the line of extravagance and costly change?

"Women of all classes went to give war service and this will react automatically," said Dr. Jessica Peixotto, professor of social economics in the University of California and at present executive chairman of the Department of Child Welfare of the Woman's Committee, Council of National Defense. "It seems to me that the war will sound the doom of unpractical, ceremonial dress. In a time like this elegant attire that is the badge of the leisure class becomes offensive to persons of taste. Today inexpensive, fresh, practical, attractive dress is the mark of leaders, among American women.

"The war should bring up a new habit of thinking about dress. Perhaps as a Nation we may learn to apply to our clothing the same tests that dietists have told us to apply to food. Expenditure for display is practised universally in the matter of dress. Apparel is the chief means of putting financial standing in evidence. It tells observers at first glance something about purchasing power and whether or not the wearer is being subjected to any kind of productive labor. Our ethics of dress for many years said practically that women should wear clothing not suitable for any sort of work, that they should, as it were, wear the insignia of leisure.

"When the day is filled with regular work done inside a schedule made for a group and not for a particular woman, little times remains in which to buy many and elaborate costumes to suit long-standing conventions. The three or four changes a day prescribed for women of leisure, become something that can be worn all day without being conspicuous and inappropriate. Thus service will bring about a kind of self-acting standardization and in this way introduce into dress the element of thrift.

"But we can make conscious changes, too, changes that will bring only advantage to the individual and the Nation. It is a genuine struggle for any American to turn to simplicity. Hard as it is to take thought about what we eat, the task is nothing cmpared to the effort we must take when we resolve to dress wisely. And when the resolution is made there are no discovered rules to go by.

"Besides, the habit of spending to display good clothes has penetrated wider circles with us than perhaps with any other nation. Democracy does this. As I said, apparel is an easy means of displaying publicly the class of society to which you think you belong. No nation pays more homage than does ous to the adage, 'The apparel makes the man.' Yet the exigencies of the present situation demand emphatically that we wear inexpensive and simply made clothing and that we wear it longer than heretofore. This is in itself a radical change.

"When I say that we must be thrifty in purchasing clothing, I do not mean that we should have tawdyr or poor materials. When I say inexpensive I do not mean chap. It is as true as it ever was that "the cheap coat makes the cheap man." Inexpensiveness means low cost, not cheapness. Clothing to be really inexpensive must be made of good materials. Such materials should be used in the smallest quantity, should be i na style consistent with past fashions lest last year's clothes be maid grotesqut and therefore unsuitable o wear out. Thrift also means that clothing fashions should call for the least expertness, and that they can be made in the shortest possible time.

"A little reflection will make plain that simplicity of clothing would liberate a very large quantity of labor now employed to develop intricate styles and elaborate trimmings, whose design changes greatly and frequently. Before we do what we are actually doing—call women with young children to leave home and to go into factories—don't you think the country might first bring some National pressure to bear to call to work those who make such things as passementeries, embroideries, lace, fancy neckwear, and the like?

"In a word, I believe that those who create elegant trifles of all kinds and eccentric overelaborate garments ought go into war industries. Undoubtedly, it might be disagreeable for these special workers to turn from their specialties, but that has been the fate of many during the war; and when they do make the change the Nation runs no such risk as it does when a mother goes out to a factory leaving her young children alone at home or sending them to a day nursery.

"Standardization of dress? I do not think that strictly standardized dress is practical or desirable. In the first place, for most women it would involve an additional and unnecessary expense. All their existing stock of outside garments would become useless. In the second place, it would interfere with what seems to be a very natural and insistent craving in most people—the craving for variety."

Lumber Production in U. S. Is Decreasing

A total computed lumber cut for the United States in 1917 of 35,831,239,000 feet was announced at Washington by the Forest Service. This figure is based on reports received up to May 15, from 16,408 sawmills out of the 24,815 believed to have operated last year. It is estimated that the actual cut in 1917, on the basis of compiled figures, was approximately 10 per cent. less than the production of 1916.

The falling off in lumber production during the past year is attributed principally to largely decreased private building operations, the scarcity of labor in connection with small operations, transportation difficulties, curtailment of demand on the part of wood-using industries, and a more or less general dislocation of lumber distribution through ordinary channels of trade. A consideration portion of the total quantity produced was utilized in meeting the exceptional demands for Government construction and other war emergency projects, including ship material.

The State of Washington was again the largest producer, with a lumber cut of 4,570,000,000 feet; Louisiana was second with 4,210,000,000 feet, and Oregon third with 2,585,000,000 feet, crowding into the fourth position Mississippi with a cut of 2,425,000,000 feet.

Southern yellow pine, with a total of 13,539,464,000 feet, forms 37.7 per cent. of the total cut. Douglas fir, its nearest competitor, is credited with 5,585,000,000 feet. White oak and white pine are each credited with 2,250,000,000 feet.

The number of mills in operation reporting in 1917 was smaller than for the two preceding years.

A comparison of the computed cut for 1917 with the total cut of the previous year in the larger producing regions shows a decrease of about 10 per cent. in the southern yellow pine group of States, a decrease of 23 per cent. in the North Carolina pine group, and a decrease of 11 per cent. in the Lake States. On the other hand there was an increase in production of 3 per cent. in Oregon and Washington.

John W. Murray Dies After Illness of a Year

John W. Murray, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known resident and for many years one of the leading figures in New York's insurance world, died at his home at 804 Central avenue, at 10 o'clock last night. He had been in failing health for the past twelve months due to a slight attack of paralysis. The end had been expected for some time and members of his family were at his bedside at the time of the demise.

The funeral will take place at the home tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 and will be in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church. A quartet composed of Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Etta Raybert, William Holmes and William J. Tallamy will sing two of Mr. Murray's favorite hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me." Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Murray was born in Scotland in 1834, but came to this country when only a boy. The family made their home in New York city and Mr. Murray resided there until 1867, at which time he removed to Plainfield. After completing his education, he entered business in New York city, and observing the possibilities of fire insurance, made this field his special effort. He was very successful from the outset and for nearly half a century was prominent in the downtown district where the insurance companies are located. When still a young man, he was the principal promoter in organizing the German-American Fire Insurance Company, which grew to be one of the strongest in the country. For many years he served as its vice president and general manager and at his retirement from active work he continued to serve on the board of directors. He was well past the three score and ten mark in life before he decided to give up business entirely and devote the remainder of his years to quiet recreation.

Although he never held public office outside of school trustee, Mr. Murray had been prominent in Plainfield politics for many years. He repeatedly picked men for city and county offices who became State officials later on and there was never an instance when one of his choice did not verify the predictions that he would give the people full reimbursement if elected. It was principally because of the excellent school system in town that Mr. Murray decided to move to Plainfield and for nearly forty years he devoted his energies to keeping up the splendid standard inaugurated by the late Dr. Charles L. Stillman. He was elected to the Board of Education and gave up much of his spare time to a close study of school methods. He was one of the men responsible for placing the Irving School at Monroe avenue and Fourth street, although at the time the people insisted it was "a terrible mistake" because it was "way out in the wilderness." Mr. Murray saw how the city was growing in that section and knew it would be only a short time when his foresight would have full corroboration.

Another interest of Mr. Murray's in past years was the city fire department. In the volunteer days he served on the board of engineers and aided in the formation of the old Alert Hose Company, in which his eldest son, the late John W. Murray, Jr., was a big factor. The latter afterward became assistant chief in the fire department, serving without pay. He died a few months ago.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Murray enlisted in the old Seventh New York Regiment and served with distinction through the conflict. He was made a lieutenant later and his company was detailed for duty in the metropolis during the draft riots of 1863 and the coolness displayed by Mr. Murray at critical junctures was responsible on more than one occasion for the prevention of a great loss of life. At one time, in the midst of the worst part of the rioting, Mr. Murray had his men swing an unloaded cannon into the street and by pretending to make ready for firing, scattered an angry crowd of 5,000 persons in every direction. Before the ruse was discovered his men had the situation well in hand. After the war Mr. Murray was made senior captain of the old Seventh Regiment.

On July 16, 1856, Mr. Murray married Miss Mary Struther Davidson, who survives him. The ceremony was performed in New York by Rev. Dr. Buchard. In 1906, Mr. and Mrs. Murray celebrated the golden anniversary of the wedding at their summer home, "Burnbrae," Wolfboro, N. H. The affair was attended by seventy-five relatives and friends and congratulatory messages came from all parts of the country. Each year thereafter Mr. and Mrs. Murray observed the anniversary at "Burnmrae," the observance really being in the nature of a family gathering.

Beside his widow, Mr. Murray is survived by four sons and three daughters. There are: William D. Murray, former Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, Mrs. William Sandford, Mrs. A. A. Tilney and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, all of Plainfield, and Walter F. and James L. Murray, of New York.

SUBSCRIPTIONS STILL NEEDED FOR SEND-OFFS.

Plainfield citizens are again reminded that donations are needed for the send-off demonstrations for Plainfield selectives. Treasurer Townsend reports a balance on hand of $393.64, but as several contingents are to go away in the near future, this will not be sufficient to take care of all of it. Any amount, no matter how small, is welcomed. The latest donors to the fund are the following.

R. Henry Depew, George J. Finger, Francis C. Harder, Mrs. William C. Hubbard, I. O. F., Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Hattie E. Kline, S. D. Lounsbuy, Mrs. Charles E. Ryder, John P. Stevens, Mrs. Florence Tweedy, Tepper Brothers.

Judge Connolly Being Groomed For Senate Race

James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, former judge of the Court of Common Pleas, is being mentioned as the Democratic candidate for the United States senatorship, and is in a receptive mood. He said yesterday that if the sentiment of the people was in his favor he would run, and that he would be guided particularly by the sentiment in Union. Hudson, Essex and Morris counties.

The former judge had been mentioned as a probable candidate for the mayoralty of Elizabeth, but is understood to have decided to stay out of the race, regardless of his action on the senatorship matter. A friend of his yesterday said that Judge Connolly would not accept the Democratic nomination for the mayoralty.

It is also understood that responsible party leaders in Union county are strongly in favor of the Elizabeth man. State Committeeman Collins has been closely associated with the judge for years, and would naturally back him. The recent nervous breakdown of Richard A. Claybrook, of this city, and his inactivity, probably removes the one Union county man that General Collins had said he would back. Other leaders are watching the movement in favor of Judge Connolly, and expect it to develop into a real boom.

Comptroller Collins, of Elizabeth, today declined to comment at length on the Connolly candidacy, beyond saying that "The judge was a bigger and better candidate than most of those mentoined who had any chance of success." The comptroller is not particularly impressed with the abilities of some of the Democratic possibilities whose claims are being pressed.

Judge Connolly said yesterday: "It is true that good many of my friends have urged me to run for the senatorship. The list of those who urged me includes one of the most prominent Democratic leaders in the State. To them I said that I was trying to take care of my law practice, and devote myself to private affairs, but that if it developed that there was a real desire for me I would naturally be in the field. One does not refuse a nomination for the United States senatorship, if it is made authoritatively. However, I am still undecided and am watching developments.

"If from the discussion now in progress there should emerge the name of a strong man manifestly fitted for the position, and with a chance of winning. I would cheerfully withdraw, and give him all the support in my power. I am not in any danger of mistaking the advice of staunch personal friends and political followers for the voice of the people. I shall pay particular attention to sentiment in neighboring counties.

"If I ran, it would naturally be on a platform containing the principles I have expressed so often as a judge and a private citizen, namely, 100 per cent. Americanism, curbing of profiteering, government control of railroads and telegraphs and a postponement of peace talk until we can state terms of peace."

The sentiment is said to be growing in Union county that a "dark horse" will carry away the nomination. Most of the "logical" candidates either have refused to run or have created enemies who will fight their ambitions. Lindley Garrison, James F. Field and Secretary Joseph Tumulty are three of the men local politicians say cannot possibly get the party indorsement. Garrison is not on close terms with the administration, Tumulty is too much an administration man to suit New Jersey independents, and Fielder has practically counted himself out. The Connolly boom, it is predicted, will gather momentum within a few days.

Governor Edge Renames County Election Boards

Accepting the recommendations made by Supreme Court justice and county judges, Governor Edge, this week, made his apointments for the county election boards in all but Atlantic county, where Justice Black and Judge Ingersoll failed to reach an agreement. This is the first time the boards have been appointed in this manner and it th eresult of the act introduced into the Legislature last winter by Senator William N. Runyon, of this city.

In Union county, the present board was renamed as follows: Fred Zior, Elizabeth, Democrat, reappointed, two yearsm Frank Pfaff, Elizabeth, Democrat, reappointed, one year; Andrew McCardell, Plainfield, reappointed, two years; George J. Stewart, Elizabeth, Republican, reappointed, one year.

The Somerset county board was designated by the Governor to consist of the following: Charles H. Matthews, Somerville, Democrat, reappointed, one year; Timothy W. O'Brien, Somerville, Democrat, reappointed, two years; Joseph M. Lambruskin, Somerville, reappointed, one year; Julius J. Stahl, of North Plainfield, Republican, reappointed, two years.

Exhausted Lad Escapes Death By Few Inches

By the narrow margin of a few inches, George King, eighteen years old, of 627 East Seventh street, escaped death, Monday night, when he was knocked from a step of the 5:11 west bound train by colliding with the girder of the Park avenue bridge. As it was, he is a patient in Muhlenberg Hospital, suffering from torn ligaments in one hip and numerous contused wounds about the head and body. It is probabl ethat he will be laid up for many weeks.

King is employed at Manville on a night "trick" at the Johns-Manville plant and started for the North avenue station a little late Monday afternoon. He had to run for the 5:11 tram and manager to catch the last car but was so badly out of breath he was unable to pull himself up to safety on the platform. He was clinging to the hand-rails when the lower part of his body was caught by the bridge projection, causing him to be jerked violently to the roadbed. With presence of mind he clung to the girder and although shoved by the car trucks escaped the wheels by a very close margin.

The injured youth was picked up by Patrolman Loerch and William O'Loughlin, who carried him to the railroad station. There he was given "first aid" by Dr. C. B. Lutburrow before being removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. The young man is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. King, of East Seventh street.

Father and Son Reach Court In An Odd Dispute

An argument between George Stites, of East Second street, and his eighteen-year-old son, Ernest, as to whom was the owner of a motorcycle purchased by the latter ended up in the city court, Wednesday morning, and gave Judge DeMeza a few knotty problems to work out in deciding what to do about the complaint made by the father against his young hopeful. In the end, the Magistrate awarded the custody of the machine to the parent and told both branches of the family to go home for a peace pow-wow.

Testimony produced by the hearing disclosed the fact that Ernest very much desired a motorcycle but not having the necessary wherewith-all to buy him one, he appropriated the needed amount from his father's sock-hidden savings. The amount was thirty-three dollars, for which he secured a machine from a friend guaranteed to be worth at least one hundred dollars.

Naturally enough, Pa Stites missed his thirty-three from men and when Ernest came home astride the motorcycle, he wanted to know how he came by it. After more or less rambling during which the son was tripped up on his explanations, he admitted much the same as did George Washington with the cherry tree, that he had declared a dividend on the family exchequer. The elder Stites declared on hearing this that inasmuch as he had earned the thirty-three dollars by the sweat of his brow and the son was not man enough to put up security for the loan of it, the motorcycle belonged to him. After gaining possession of the machine, not without a struggle however, he picked out a place of concealment where, he thought, it would be safely hidden from Ernest until the latter produced the necessary money to get it out of hock. In this he was fooled for Ernest located the motor vehicle and claimed it for his own. When he refused to give it back to his father and the intervention of relatives and friends failed to bring matters to an amicable adjustment, the old gentleman got real huffy and appealed to the police. He charged Ernest with stealing thirty-three dollars as an initial offense and appropriating the motorcycle as a subsequent misdemeanor.

Accusations of various degree and magniture were passed by father and son when the circumstances were aired in the court room, Wednesday morning, but in the end Judge DeMeza decided that Ernest was very much at fault, although he claimed that the taking of the thirty-three dollars was only a temporary loan. The Magistrate told the father to take possession of the motorcycle and keep it as security until the son secured the necessary money to make it his own. This was agreed to by both sides with the additional understanding that Father Stites was to introduce the wood-shed style of treatment if the son did any more appropriating.

DR. GRACEY IN FRANCE.

Dr. George D. Gracey, of East Seventh street, who has been doing hospital service in home camps, arrived overseas a short time ago and is at present attached to hospital unit No. 38 in France.

New Regulations For Recruits in Army Divisions

According to an official order received by Corporal E. D. Peck, of the Plainfield recruiting office, yesterday, young men hereafter offering themselves for enlistment will have to have physical fitness different than the requirements heretofore.

Under the old regulation a volunteer ha dto be but sixty-one inches in height and 110 pounds in weight. Now he must be sixty-three inches in height and 116 pounds in weight. In addition the men applying must have twelve teeth, four molars and eight incisors, where as it was formerly only four molars. If by chance an application should be five feet two inches in height, weigh 112 pounds and be skilled in a certain line of work, he may secure a special permit to enter the service.

Private Harry Derflinger, who has been assisting Corporal Peck at the post office station, is devoting much of his time to looking over the suburban territories. He has been meeting with considerable success as four as the six men enrolled at the station this week are from other places than Plainfield. Tomorrow, Private Derflinger will go to Somerville and station himself at the post office there to give all information to young men resiring to enlist. It is quite likely that he may be at the same place on succeeding Saturdays.

Daily men are reporting at the army recruiting station in the Plainfield post office for volunteer enlistment, and leave the office disappointed, owing to the fact that they are registered and cannot volunteer. Now young men, if you are not in the registered age, you can pick your branch of service.

You have opportunities to become commissioned officers on your merits by volunteering in the following branches: Engineers, artillery, cavalry, infantry, coast artillery corps, medical and quartermaster corps.

Any occupation or trade is used. Enlist now before you are one of those who are too late. Information will be furnished at the recruiting office to place you where you are best fitted and can render the best services to your country..

Six young men were recruited by Corporal Peck this week. The two from Plainfield are Samuel Mann, of 120 West Fourth street, who has been assigned to the signal corps, and Gustave A. Fritz, of 1028 West Front street, who enters the field artillery. Mann left for the signal corps training school in Virginia, yesterday, where he will take a special course fitting him for radio work, while Fritz goes to Fort Slocum tomorrow. The other four men, all of whom went to Fort Slocum several days ago, are as follows: Robert L. Smith, Dunellen, coast artillery; Frank L. Coyle, Somerville, medical corps; George B. Cloke, Martinsville, signal corps, and Edward Richardson, Somerville, field artillery.

Knights of Columbus Visit Perth Amboy

Forty members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, paid a fraternal visit to the Perth Amboy Council, last night, for the express purpose of witnessing a big class initiation. The trip to and from the Middlesex county town was made by auto-bus and a most enjoyable time was had, as the Perth Amboyans gave the Plainfielders a royal welcome.

Watchung Council is enjoying an unusually active period despite the fact that nearly fifty of its members are in the service. This number has been off-set by the initiation of nearly fifty new members and many others have made application. The Council is now bending every effort to make the annual excursion to Asbury Park on July 8 a complete success. This is already assured as the Jersey Central has stated that not more than thirty-six cars can be provided for the outing and this number has always been easily reached.

FUNERAL OF MISS MORALLER TOMORROW.

The funeral of Miss Mathilda Moraller, who died Wednesday night at the home of her brother, Max Moraller, of West Sixth street will be held in St. Mary's church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Moraller, who had been ill a long time, was the daughter of Louis Moraller, who went to Germany before the war broke out and has been detained in that country since. She had lived in Plainfield practically all her life. Beside her father and brother Max, she leaves three other brothers, Louis and Edward, of this city, and Eric, formerly Y. M. C. A. secretary at Petrograd, Russia, but now doing Y. M. C. A. work in New York.

Louis LaRock, of Providence, R. I., arrived in Plainfield, yesterday, to spend the summer at the home of his uncle, Albert F. LaRock, of West Sixth street.

Ending of Tag Days and Drives Plan in First of "War Chest Conferences"

The Mayor's War Chest conference, held last night in the Council Chamber, was attended by about seventy-five representatives of Plainfield's War Relief activities and local charities. Mayor Calkins opened the conference by stating that it was held for the purpose of ascertaining the general sentiment regarding the war chest plan; which could be best brought out by an informal discussion of its advantages and disadvantages. He then explained the system, as it has been worked successfully in Rochester, Syracuse, Ithaca, Columbus and many other places. The plan in brief consists in making up a budget to include all the money necessary for all the war relief agencies, and for the usual public support of local charities, for one year. The budget includes also an item for contingencies, that is, small worthy objects which may come up during the year which cannot be foreseen. Then, one intensive campaign or drive is conducted to raise the entire amount. Each war agency, and charity, will get the amount allotted in the budget. If the drive "goes over the top," the excess is allotted pro rata, except that the American Red Cross has a preferred appropriation up to a certain amount of the over subscription.

Messrs. C. W. McCutchen, J. H. Case, R. B. Corey, R. H. Depew and others spoke in praise of the workings of the war chest plan in other cities, in all of which the amount was largely oversubscribed, and the number of subscribers three or four times as many, as when separate drives had been conducted. The meeting was practically unanimous in favoring further consideration of the plan.

Mayor Calkins was of the opinion that if the plan is to be adopted it should be supported by all the war relief agencies, and all the more important local charitable institutions; because the one great object sought is to do away with the innumerable separate drives and tag days. If Plainfield is to have a war chest, the people are entitled to one year's vacation from this business of soliciting, and giving. He suggested that all the important activities might be asked to consider the plan, at meetings of their own boards of directors, and send delegates to another general conference, authorized to vote on the question for their respective bodies.

Senator Reed moved, and the motion was unanimously adopted, that another conference be called by the Mayor at a later date; and that the war relief and charitable agencies of the city be requested in the meantime to hold meetings of their boards to consider the subject and to select delegates authorized to act finally on the proposition.

Mayor Calkins will shortly appoint a committee to list the war relief agencies and charities which will be asked to send delegates. He stated this morning that all nationalities and denominations should be included, as this is a community proposition, but that the local charities to be included in the budget could be only those of recognized standing, which have had general public support. Any such, wishing to participate in the proposed conference, should advise the Mayor by letter at an early date.

The following were among the organizations invited by the Mayor to take part in the discussion: The Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A., Y. W. H. A., Muhlenberg Hospital, Children's Home, Salvation Army, Mercy Committee, King's Daughters, Daughters of Isabelle, League of the Sacred Heart, Day Nursery, Charity Organization Society. The officers of the Business and Civic Associations were also invited, and a general invitation to the public was announced in the newspapers.

Work Commenced on $50,000 Addition to Standard Oil Plant

Contractor Joseph Burke, of Monroe avenue, this week began grading the property at Front street and Rock avenue in preparation for the extensive additions to be built to the Standard Oil Company's plant at that location.

According to the plans filed with Building Inspector T. O. Doane, the improvements will cost about $50,000. They include tripling the present office building, doubling the storage house, enlarging the garage and putting up several new tanks for lubricating oils. Everything will be as nearly fire-proof as possible and concrete and steel will be used chiefly in the construction of the various buildings. H. D. Best & Company, of New York, have the contract and expect to begin operations next week.

With the completion of the present improvement, the Standard Company will have one of the largest district plants in this part of the State at the Front street and Rock avenue corner. This office supplies Plainfield, Dunellen and all adjacent territory with gasoline, kerosene, crude and lubricating oils, the products being distributed by motor tanks.

Addresses will be made by officials and others and a supper will be served by women volunteers. The Citizens' Committee, of which John J. Varley is chairman, has charge of the arrangments. James J. McNamee Placed in Class 1-A

James J. McNamee, the former well-known local newspaper man who was official correspondent for the Twenty-ninth Division during its long stay at Camp McClellan, is among the local young men who have been placed in Class 1-A through a reclassification of local questionnaires.

It was the intention of Mr. McNamee to go abroad with the Twenty-ninth Division but at the last moment he declined General Morton's appointment to attend to some business affair at home. He was about to go to Washington as correspondent for a number of New York and New Jersey newspapers when the Plainfield Exemption Board notified him that he had been placed among the registrants eligible for general military duty. He was married on June 6, of last year, his bride being Miss Madeline Booth, of Elizabeth.

While in the South, Mr. McNamee did excellent work as correspondent for twenty-two newspaper in New York, New Jersey, Philadelphia and Baltimore. In this way he gained a valuable military experience in addition to that already acquired as correspondent for New Jersey papers during the Mexican trouble two years ago. At that time he was located at Douglas, Ariz., in the same camp with Troop D, of Plainfield.

William C. Ryder, of Grant avenue, a former member of the local fire department, but more recently employed by the Standard Aero Corporation at the Bayway plant, has also been placed in Class 1-A. Among the others placed in the first class by the local exemption board are the following:

Russell W. Smith, Roy C. Smalley, Evan D. Peterson, Constantine Constantinedes, Thomas Morton, Gustav Johnson, Stanley Maczyn, Anthony Russo, Robert H. Earl, Fred Burton, James M. Dunbar, Howard W. Peck, T. C. Harding, P. G. Wilmerding, Horace H. Daniels, Carlo Reganti, Alphonse Condina, Thomas Varrius, Salvatore Labino, Spyridian Verides, James B. Carter, Clarence J. Edwards, Arthur L. Grisley and A. J. Aquado.

WILLIAM MAHONEY IS MADE A SERGEANT.

William J. Mahoney, of Liberty street, who entered the service at Fort Slocum several weeks ago, and was assigned to the Field Artillery, has already made excellent progress as a military man. Word came today that he had been promoted to the rank of sergeant in Battery B, Seventh Battalion, now stationed at Camp Jackson, S. C.

Before entering the army Mr. Mahoney was employed at the International Motor plant on West Front street.

Sergeant James Stranahan, of Harrison avenue, and John Hogan, of Manning avenue, are among the North Plainfield men recently arriving overseas.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Lawrence DeMari, the Plainfield registrant who failed to present himself at the exemption office last Friday in order to proceed with the contingent of six other men to Camp Humphreys, Va., was arrested at 39 Cherry street, New York, by Police Lieutenant Higgins, and a metropolitan officer, on Monday. Failing to give any reasonable excuse for his tardiness to Secretary Walter Freeman, of the local board, DeMari was ordered to Camp Dix for immediate induction. He was taken to the latter place by Lieutenant Higgins on Tuesday.

Announcement has been made by A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Alien Property, that the Bosch Magneto plant, on South avenue, had been sold to the Wright-Martin Aeroplane Company, of Dayton, Ohio. The concern has a branch shop at New Brunswick and they use the Plainfield place for motor work, as it is fully equipped with all kinds of machinery. The price paid by the new owners or any of the details of the Wright-Martin plans have been withheld. The Bosch company purchased the factory from Samuel W. Rushmore only three years ago, paying $750,000 for the buildings, grounds and rights to the Rushmore patents.

Louis Kornfield, the West Front street baker, who recently purchased the Commercial Mills on South Second street, as reported in the Record last month, has taken possession of the property and is now operating the plant independently of his bakery business. The Mills were purchased from the estate of Otis Corbett, the latter having secured the property from the late A. L. Cadmus, the founder. Mr. Kornfield also recently purchased the Boice property on Park avenue, occupied at present by the Martin Auto Garage Company, and may possibly remodel it some time in the future to an up-to-date bakery plant.

Appearing in the District Court Wednesday, as defendant in an action brought against him by Dr. D. G. Atwood to recover $40 for professional services, Leonard Collins, of Westfield, produced several teeth teeth from his pocket in support of his contention that the dentist had inserted them in his mouth but that they had dropped out seven days later. Collins acted as his own counsel and acquitted himself in a creditable manner but failed to prove that Dr. Atwood had not agreed to make good any defect in the molar work. Judge Crane rendered a verdict for the full amount, with the understanding that Dr. Atwood would do over any deficiency claimed by the defendant. Nicholas Myers, Jr., of this city, also acted as his own counsel in defending a suit for $130 for professional services brought by Dr. T. S. Davis. Robert Newton Crane appeared for the plaintiff. Judge Crane rendered a verdict for the full amount.

The loss is placed at $250, most of which is on the building, owned by William D. Thickstun.

Miss Frances Kelly, the eighteen-year-old Jersey City girl, who is touring the State on horseback to promote the sale of Thrift Stamps, visited Plainfield, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. She spoke at the local theatres Saturday afternoon and night, and visited nearby places over Sunday. The young woman is an expert equestrienne and attracted much attention by her stately posing and becoming garb of khaki. She is being accompanied on her tour by Police Lieutenant Buckley, of the Jersey City police force, who visited Chief Kiely at local headquarters during the stay here.

Seven more Plainfield Boy Scouts left for Camp Watchung, at Bear Mountain, on the Hudson, Monday morning. They were Hamley, Deakin and Van Blaricom, of Troop 2; Detweiler, of Troop 5; Burgess and Tilley, of Troop 14; and Pound, of Troop 19. This makes fourteen scouts now at the camp, which is one of the most ideal in this part of the country. The Plainfielders are in charge of Scout Executive Ernest Powlison, assisted by William Abbe and H. F. Hubbard.

Receiving assurances from the New Jersey Central that cars will be available, Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, has announced that its annual excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove will be conducted on Thursday, August 8. This outing is always one of the largest leaving Plainfield, some times as many as three sections being required to transport the happy crowd to and from the shore. All the children of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's parishes are made the guests of the Council for the day and the profit derived from the sale of adult tickets is to be added this year to the K. of C. war fund. He lodged a protest with the Standard officials who are making an investigation.

For refusing to pay their fares on a New Jersey Central train in charge of Conductor Ferdinand Dencklau, of this city, Andrew Judge and Richard Sutton, of North Plainfield, were fined $50 each by Judge DeMeza in the city police court Monday morning. Dencklau was in court and testified that the men had been very abusive and conducted themselves in a manner decidedly obnoxious to the rest of the passengers. The men were arrested as the train reached the North avenue station 11 o'clock Saturday night. In court on Monday also, Charles Cassalt, colored, of West Third street, was fined $20 for entering the hennery of Benjamin Frankel, on Plainfield avenue, and maliciously killing a duck. A third man arraigned in court, Conrad Winckler, was told to remove his effects from a home on Johannes place, where he had been boarding and which the police say he had broken up through attentions paid to another man's wife. Judge DeMeza told Winckler his reappearance on a similar charge would mean a heavy jail sentence.

Among the six Union county men completing the military course at the Plattsburg training camp and receiving certificates of commendation from Colonel C. R. Dentler, this week, are two Plainfielders, A. R. Dayton and R. G. Sykes.

Charles Rising, who claimed to live in Philadelphia, was discovered by Patrolman Roy Martin, wandering about South avenue, near Berckman street, early Tuesday morning. He could give no reasonable excuse for his presence in that neighborhood and was locked up. A charge of vagrancy was preferred against him and when arraigned before Judge DeMeza, Rising was ordered to leave town.

Camp Endeavor, maintained by the Union County Christion Endeavor Society, and located on the mountain back of Scotch Plains, opened for the season this week. Fifty children and their mothers took possession of the quarters on Monday and will remain for two weeks, after which they will be succeeded by others in need of recreation, pure fresh air and wholesome food. Miss Jennie Stoddard, of Elizabeth, is in charge of the camp as superintendent and she is directly assisted by Miss Marjorie Keates. Miss Edna Keates, Miss Elsie Sperling and Miss Bertha Wenke. Mrs. Edgar Fenty is in charge of the kitchen and Mrs. Lukash looks after the dormitories, while Harry Zehl acts as errand boy.

In stepping from the platform at Columbus Auditorium, Sunday night, where she acted as pianist during the Italian Refugee Benefit, Miss May Vincent Whitney, of 828 First place, fell and fractured an ankle. She was assisted to her home for surgical attention and it is possible that she will be confined to the house for six of eight weeks. Miss Whitney was to have left Monday for Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., to begin a six weeks' normal course in music, having won it as a scholarship offered by the Art Publication Society.

Following the recent announcement of the New Jersey Central, that a limited number of cars would be available for seashore excursions, various local Sunday-schools have commenced arrangements for their annual outing to Asbury Park. The Methodist Sunday-schools, which include those of the First, Monroe Avenue and Grace churches, will hold their excursion on Saturday, July 20, while those of the First and Park Avenue Baptists, Congregational and First Presbyterian will make the trip on Thursday, July 25. Hope chapel, which has always had one of the largest Plainfield outings, and which has always gone on a Saturday, has not yet decided upon a date owing to the difficulty of getting cars on a Saturday in August. It is possible that some other day may have to be selected by the committee.

The borough police dragnet spread out for auto speeders enmeshed Louis Simit, of Stirling, a few days ago, and he appeared before Recorder Fred Hand on a charge of running his car up Somerset street at thirty miles an hour. The burst of speed cost him $10 in the form of a fine.

The fictitious "George Wilson," who lived on the pat of the land as a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital after telling fake yarns about being a returned wounded soldier and one of the few survivors of the original Princess Pat regiment, is now languishing in the county jail. He was sentenced to a sixty-day stay at the County Bastile by Judge DeMeza after the police had found out that "Wilson," whose right name is William Lund, was a thirty-third degree liar. It is believed that his home is in Newburg, N. Y., although he has been wandering about the country for some time.

Becoming despondent over family troubles, Mrs. John Hope, twenty-one years old, of 40 Harmony street, the borough, drank a quantity of iodine Tuesday, with suicidal intent. Directly after mibibing the liquid, she became frightened at the apparent consequences of her act and screamed for help. Neighbors summoned Dr. Albert Pittis and after emetics had been given she was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. It was stated at the institution this morning that Mrs. Hope had fully decovered and would be discharged today.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel will hold an all-day birthday social at the home of Mrs. Frank Rimmer, on Greenbrook road, near Rock avenue, Thursday, July 18. The Union County Board of Freeholders has authorized County Collector Nathan Leavitt to issue $261,000 worth of improvement bonds for work either underway or contemplated at Bonnie Burn Sanatorium and for county roads. It was not intended to issue these bonds until some time later but a change in the money market lowering rates of interest from six to four and a half per cent. will save the county $35,000 in interest by putting out the bonds at once.

Save Your Old Straw "Lid;" We Are Facing A Famine of Materials Needed for New Ones

Save your old straw hat. Cherish it, keep it out of the rain, and, at the end of the season pack it carefully away where the mice can't get at it. It will be valuable next year; for next year, straw hats are going to be very scarce and expensive. Indeed, it is even predicted that a large percentage of the Nation may have to go straw-hatless.

While the United States is a large manufacturer of straw hats, all the many different varieties of braid from which they are made are imported. Before the war large quantites of straw braid were imported from Belgium, and from Switzerland, which, in turn, obtained its raw material from Italy. Now the straw wheat fields of Belgium are planted with German potatoes and those of Italy are raising beans for the army.

The shortage in Belgian and Swiss braids hats was quickly made up by Chinese and Japanese braids, as well as by a heavier importation of Philippine and Porto Rican hats. Now, however, with every scrap of shipping needed to carry supplies for the army, the Government is rapidly transferring ships from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, and the Shipping Board is formulating far-reaching restrictions that will certainly interfere with the importation of braid. The supply of Panamas and Porto Rican hats will also soon be cut off by the diversion of ships from South American to European service.

Under the circumstances, as soon as the reserve of supply of straw braids is exhausted Mexico will be the only country to which the manufacturers may turn for new supplies. The Mexicans make a coarse-fibered straw, used almost wholly in the manufacture of children's hats in this country, although some of it is fashioned into high-crowned, wide-brimmed Mexican sombreros, which are becoming increasingly popular for farm work in this country. The Mexican sombrero is the one ray of hope in the hat situation. If it comes to the worst we can all affect this style, which, by the way, is the greatest safeguard against sunstroke, and go about looking like the picturesque but feeble-minded villains of moving picture fame.

Unlike the chemical shortage, the dye shortage and several other war shortages, the straw hat shortage cannot be alleviated by the sudden development of a home straw braid industry. It is quite possible to grow a good grade of straw wheat in American soil but it is manifestly impossible to secure labor cheap enough to make it a paying investment. In China, Japan, the Philippines, and in Cuba, Panama and Porto Rico the braiding of hat straw is more or less of home industry—an occupation in which the women and children and old people engage about their own homes. Their wages are incredibly small.

In the Philippines, where the United States Bureau of Education has introduced hat making into the public schools, the industry is growing rapidly. Filipino women everywhere may be seen squatting on the floor and braiding the abacaca fiber into straw braid or weaving it into hats that bring but a small return for their labor. Large quantities of the fibre are also shipped to Japan, where it is either braided by hand or by small machines of the type used for braiding shoe laces. This braid is sold at the price of thirty-five cents per eighty yards, that being the amount required to make one hat. Sewn into a hat in this country in the space of twenty minutes or half an hour, this braid is passed on to the consumer at the price of $5.

In Porto Rico, a girl who is a rapid worker can finish a hat in from one and a half to two days, according to the texture of the straw. She is delighted if she receives seventy-five cents for her labor, although she is aware that the same hat will retail for $2.50 in Porto Rico—for approximately $7 if retailed in the United States. Until machinery is invented that will braid and weave frail srtaw fibers, Americans can never meet such competition.

The straw hat shortage, however, is only one feature of a precarious hat situation. It may be necessary for you to save your felt hat, too, if the war continues much longer. Felt hats will be horribly expensive this fall, while a year from now there may be no felt hats at all. It all depends upon an experiment.

American felt hat manufacturers have been in the habit of importing their raw material in the form of rabbit skins from Australia, and, in somewhat less proportion, from France. France has now placed an embargo on its skins, while the United States Government has ordered the steamship companies running to and from Australia to cancel all shipments of any product but wool and wheat until all available supplies of these materials have been moved. It is estimated that it will require three months at least to do this, and in the meantime American hatters must wait patiently for rabbit skins, ordered and ready for shipmenti n Australia, but which are not apt to reach this country until the fall hat season is nearly over.

Made desperate by this shortage, American felt hat manufacturers are for the first time using American rabbit skins as substitutes for the imported skin. It is believed that this fur will prove practical, but the manufacturers are pessimistic about the supply; they are doubtful if enough rabbit skins can be obtained in this country to hat the population. Nevertheless, they are in the market for all they can get.

Rabbit-hunting, from a necessary and laborious duty in many sections throughout the West and Middle West, has sprung into a profitable occupation. Many people have quit steady, remunerative jobs in favor of it. Rabbit pelts are now worth from five to eight cents, based on a price of $5 per pound for rabbit fur ready for manufacture. Before the war, the price of rabbit skins was only from ten to fifteen cents a pound. The fur of the cotton-tail rabbit is preferred for hat-making, but Jack-rabbit skinsn are also being accepted by the hundreds.

The Jack-rabbit, as one of the worse grain-destroyers of the West, has been hunted and killed in large numbers every year, but this is the first year in which his skin has been worth anything. By next year it is believed his skin will be worth enough to make the raising of Jack-rabbits a profitable occupation. The United States Biological Survey is now urging people to raise rabbits both for meat and commercial use. They expect to add several new rabbit experts to their force within the next few months to make some experiments in rabbit-raising and give every possible assistance to persons interested in raising and shipping rabbits to city markets.

This is already proving extremely profitable. A man in Kansas City who has been sending rabbit meat to the eastern markets wrapped in oiled paper and securely packed in wooden boxes, is now taking up the matter of rabbit-skins as a by-product. He is shipping a steady supply of skins to hat-manufacturers.

The Biological Survey recommends poison as the best method of killing rabbits for commercial purposes, although this method is impossible, of course, when the animal is also to be used for food. The most efficacious poison is strychnine, which should be places in pieces of apple or melon rind and placed at intervals along rabbit paths or runs. Care should be taken not to place the poisoned bait where children and domestic animals might get it. For this reason it is better to use the poison method only in winter when cattle and horses are not so likely to come across it. For hat-making the poisoned skin is preferred, since shot usually tears the skin and renders it useless.

For years efforts have been made to establish a market for rabbit skins—especially Jack-rabbit skins. Such a market has at last been contributed by American hatters; it is now up to the citizens of the West and Middle West to maintain it, not only as a personal duty, but as a duty to the whole National which, without a large number of American rabbit skins, may have to go hatless.

No Time Lost In Training New Men at Camp Dix

Little time is being lost in getting recent rookies into shape for the trip across seas, and those who went from Plainfield and Union county with the June contingent are already in uniform, and some have been transferred to units in the Eighty-seventh Division and others to camps where divisions are preparing to go "over there."

The men now going to France will not have as hard a time getting along as the first contingents, for there are now thousands of veterans on French soil who will assist their comrades and show them about the cities and towns. But to make the work easier H. A. Townsend, of Newark, Y. M. C. A. educational director, has devised a plan whereby the men who are soon to sail will be given the benefit of a series of short lectures on the use of French coins, frequently used words, the methods of geeting about towns and cities; the relative values of weights and measures, and other interesting facts that will greatly aid them while they are stationed in rest villages or on furloughs in the bigger cities. The War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. is now considering the establishment of the plan in the various cantonments so that the men may get the advantage of the new scheme to aid the soldiers.

A detail of 265 men from the Remount Station, under command of Major Thomson, will give an exhibition in Philadelphia on the Strawbridge and Clothier field on July 19 and 20. They will leave the camp Wednesday, July 17, and ride to Moorestown, where they will be entertained over night. They will continue their journey the next day. Several Plainfield boys are in the division.

Owing to the fact that the railroad company has notified the camp authorities that they can carry only five per cent. of the usual number of men on week-ends, the empression has gone out that the camp is to be quarantined, beginning this week. There is no truth to the report, which seems to be quite prevalent, that it has likely started from the fact that a number of men who expected passes were disappointed, and have notified their relatives that they will be unable to come home on account of the railroad ban. The order will not affect those men who journey by auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Freligh, of Fourth and John streets, are spending two weeks at Arverne, L. I., where they have a bungalow.

No Favoritism For Men In Class 1-A

With one exception, the conditions under which men placed in Class 1 in the selective service draft may volunteer for immediate induction into the marine corps, the navy and army have been withdrawn.

The one exception is in the case of men whose qualifities peculiarly fit them for a position in the engineers corps.

This ruling of Provost Marshal-General Crowder became known recently when repeated requests from congressmen to have men inducted into service were refused.

The congressmen were informed that their constituents would have to proceed through the regular channels established by the selective service law.

The information which became known at the same time was that only 10 per cent. of the original number of men placed in class 1 were not in uniforms and remained to be called. The terrific drain upon the men supply of the first class began to be realized by every one when this statement was made.

For some time Washington has been haunted by young men in the first class who realized they must go to war and who decided then to apply for some "position where civilian training will benefit both myself and the government."

As a rule the position sought happened to be in some government department far removed from the firing line. The ruling of the provost marshal general strikes direct, at these men. Their day of opportunity has ended and they must accept their fate along with their brothers who were less fortunate in civilian life.

Government Will Pay County for Damaged Roads

Assurance has been given to County Engineer Bauer through the State Highway Commission that Union county will receive financial aid in repairing roads damaged by heavy military traffic. Mr. Bauer lodged a protest with the commission over the condition of St. George's avenue, Rahway, and has secured an allotment for the repaving of a portion of it.

As a result of County Engineer Bauer's action, the commission investigated the roads throughout the State and on Saturday forwarded a request to the government asking that provision for the repairing of roads torn up by heavy military trucks be made in the form of financial aid. When that is done Union county will be apportioned a share of the funds, according to the amount of damage done.

The State has allowed the rescinding of a contract for repairing Springfield avenue so that $17,500 appropriated by the commission may be used on St. George's avenue.

Arthur Harris, of Central avenue, who has been doing Y. M. C. A. work in France for the past few months, is due back in America shortly for the purpose of assisting in the new Y. M. C. A. war fund campaign soon to be launched.

The wedding of Helen F. Callahan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Callahan, of East Second street, and Lieutenant Earl W. Beatty, of Detroit, Mich., which was forecasted in the last issue of the Record, took place at St. Mary's rectory last Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock. It was intended that there should be no witnesses beyond the immediate bridal party but fifteen young women friends who had been Miss Callahan's classmates at St. Mary's school surprised her by appearing on the scene just before the nuptial proceeding commenced. Miss Anna Callahan, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Lieutenant Daniel J. McAfee, of West Sixth street, was best man. Following the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, a wedding supper and reception took place at the home of the bride's brother, Jeremiah Callahan, of East Second street. Later Lieutenant and Mrs. Beatty left for New York and it is possible that they may visit Detroit before the former is recalled into service as physician in the naval hospital corps. It is possible that he and his bride may spend a part of their wedding trip in Detroit. Mrs. Beatty went abroad early last summer as a member of a naval nursing unit and met Lieutenant Beatty at a base hospital to which both were assigned. There is a likelihood of the Lieutenant being assigned to duty in Samoa and his bride, if she can secure her release from service in France, is to accompany him.

Private R. W. Medick son of Mr. and Mrs. William Medick, of West Front street, left this week for Camp Humphreys, Va., after a five-day furlough at the home of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Jenkins, of First place, returned recently after a six weeks' stay at Greenwood Lake.

Albert Harris, of Clinton avenue and West Eighth street, returned this week after a sojourn at Ocean Grove.

Miss Elizabeth Smith, of Darrow avenue, who has been employed at Gavett's crockery store on West Front street, for the past ten years, has resigned her position to take another one with the Federal Reserve Bank in New York.

George Hill, of Central avenue, who enlisted in the Naval Reserves several weeks ago, was in town Tuesday and Wednesday on a brief furlough.

Hoawrd Allegar, of Elm place, has returned after a stay at Asbury Park.

Miss Mae Newell, of Spruce street, who is a pupil nurse at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Elizabeth, is spending a two weeks' vacation at home.

Stanley Burner, of Jackson avenue, the borough, will spend the summer at Asbury Park as an employe at the Hotel Gardner.

Mrs. Edward McCue and daughter, Miss Catherine McCue, and son, Edward McCue, Jr., of West Fourth street, are spending two weeks with Mrs. McCue's sister, Mrs. Edward Waterson, of New Rochelle.

Mrs. J. Russell Brennan, of Jackson avenue, the borough, left recently for Indianapolis, Ind., to join her husband, Lieutenant Brennan, who is stationed in that city for the time being. Lieutenant Brennan is a brother to Dr. A. K. Brennan, of Grant avenue.

Michael L. Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre, and John Powers, of West Fourth street, spent the past week-end as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Rogers, at Camp Billjack, Halsey Island, Lake Hopatcong.

Clifford A. Braider, of Putnam avenue, will sail for France within the next few days to assist in Y. M. C. A. work. According to the present schedule, he is to have charge of music at one of the Y. M. C. A. huts.

Martin J. Miltner, of Church street, who is one of several men sent from this district to Browne University, Providence, R. I., in May, for technical courses fitting them for special work in the army, was a visitor at his home during the past week-end. He will complete his training tomorrow as will also Philip Moskovitz, of East Second street, who went away at the same time and it is probable they will be transferred to the Quartermasters' Corps. Waldorf C. Ulrich, of East Seventh street, is to remain at the university for a short time longer, and Hyman Fass, of North Plainfield, who was sent from the Somerset County Exemption Board, was transferred from the university to an infantry regiment at Camp Devins, Mass., last week.

F. J. Unger, the newly appointed physical director of the North Plainfield schools, has leased the residence at 56 Chatham street, the borough, and will remove from Passaic the first of next month. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop are planning to remove to White House.

Harry Williams, formerly of Watchung, but now of Millington, left yesterday to enter the navy, having been accepted for enlistment some time ago. He is the son of Henry Williams, of Mountain Boulevard, Watchung, who is employed at the Schloss Grocery in this city.

Borough Clerk Fred A. Martin, of Grandview avenue, returned Monday after a stay at Rsbury Park. The trip to the shore was made by automobile.

Mrs. John J. Greene, of West Seventh street, has gone to Rutherford in response to a telephone message telling her of the serious illness of her mother.

Rev. N. J. Wessell, formerly of Warren, Pa., the newly appointed pastor of the Swedish Pilgrim church, commenced his new duties here last Sunday. He succeeds Rev. Gustav Sjoblom, who resigned to take another charge.

Judge Vincent W. Nash, of Prospect avenue, who is spending the summer at his cottage at Spring Lake, received word, this week, of the birthday celebration of his uncle, William Smith, of Albion, Edwards County, Ill., who on July 1 reached his100th milestone in life's journey. The event was made a community affair and the whole town turned out to do honor to the centenarian. Mr. Smith was born in England but came to this country when he was eighteen years of age. He has two hundred and eight living descendants, many of whom were at the celebration on July 1. In writing about his uncle to a friend in this city, Judge Nash said among other things: "I hope our good Captain William Smith, of Plainfield, will live as long as my relatives. My uncle's years and his descendants remind me of the old song:

"'To the West, to the West,
To the land of the Free,
Where the bright Missouri
Rolls down to the sea;
Where children as blessings,
And he who hath most
Has heir to his fortune
And riches to boast'"

Andrew Schillinger, of 120 Watchung avenue, known to his friends as "Hank," was a visitor in town over the past week-end for the first time since he enlisted in the Merchant Marine at Boston. He was recently transferred to a station in New York.

Plainfield Benefits By New 'Phone Rates

By the new toll rates put into effect the past week by the New York Telephone Company, Plainfield subscribers are saved five cents on most of their out of town calls.

This applies to New York, which is now twenty cents for five minutes' conversation instead of twenty-five; ten cents to Newark instead of fifteen; ten cents to Morristown in place of fifteen, and five cents to Rahway, Cranford and Bound Brook instead of ten cents. This rate, it must be understood, applies only to subscribers and does not include the five-cent war tax. The rate to Westfield, New Brunswick and Somerville is to remain the same as heretofore.

The reduction of toll rates was ordered some time ago by the Public Utilities Commission and it is asserted that the change means a lessening of $800,000 in the New York Telephone Company's annual receipts. Conditions have changed materially since the State Commission gave the order but the Telephone Company has accepted it in the belief and hope that its effects upon revenues will not be too severe to be borne. In case results should prove otherwise, the company will ask the Commission for relief in some form or other, and has no doubt but that the Commission will grant whatever relief may be necessary.

WHY NOT PLAINFIELD

Sending Troops Home Papers

William Boyce Thompson, of 1 Madison avenue, is making an effort to enlarge his Home Paper Service for men at the front. He has issued a request that persons interested in this plan of keeping our soldiers abroad in touch with every-day affairs in their home towns should write him and he will be glad to use his organization to look after the work if others will supply the papers.

Mr. Thompson is sending about 3,500 Westchester County papers to men at the front, and he expects to increase the number until every man from that county will be receiving his home paper. He believes the idea should be carried out all over the country, and he wants others to join him.

SPLENDID RESULTS ALREADY.

"Such splendid results have followed the inauguration of this service in sustaining the morale of the men in the service, as well as their friends at home, that I will gladly do anything I can to assist in furthering this," said Mr. Thompson. "If there should be any one who desires to interest himself by contributing to sending papers to the men of any section I shall be glad to add to my organization and take up the correspondence in connection with this work for other counties, to furnish information, and by co-operation assist any movement to make the service either State-wide or Nation-wide. No doubt there are individuals who would gladly respond and meet the expenses in their counties and the war chest cities might find it easy to respond."

ANSWERS LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS.

In his work in Westchester County Mr. Thompson asks the men to write him freely, and if there is anything they wish to communicate to their friends through the "home paper" he will see that it is arranged. Every letter received from the soldiers is answered by Mr. Thompson personally or by some one selected in the home locality of the soldier.

"I regret that I cannot send a 'home paper' to every soldier in the war," said Mr. Thompson. "The sending of the Westchester County papers only is a considerable undertaking, and I trust that men in other communities will see the merit of forwarding their 'home paper' to their boys in the war."—Reprinted from N. SAVING THEMSELVES A LOT OF TROUBLE.

Although they disagree on certain other points, several hundred politicians gathered at Sea Girt, Tuesday, as the guest of Governor Edge, were of one opinion when it came time to talk about the congressional situation in the Fifth district. They decided unanimously that Senator Ernest R. Ackerman should be the unopposed candidate at the September primaries to secure the nomination on the Republican ticket. We, here in Plainfield, have held that opinion for a long time and the faithful from the rest of the State were only doing what is right when they fell in line. There is no need of wasting time in coaxing other men to get in the race as it is only a waste of their own time and every one's else and beside, if there is any energy to be expended these days it might be applied to one of the numerous worthy war causes. There should be half a dozen other primary candidates and yet it is our bounden belief that Mr. Ackerman would walk away with the honor.

After considerable argument there was another point on which the politicians almost reached an agreement and that was that Thomas Birch, of Morris county, should be the candidate for the short term in Congress to succeed the late John H. Capstick. Why the leaders should bring out Mr. Birch at this time is not clear to the average voter. At best, he would only serve a little more than two months, from January until March, and why they should go to all the trouble of seating a man for that short period is a matter of conjecture. Since the vacancy has gone so far without exciting any particular attention, why not let it remain until it is time for the long termed incumbent to be sworn in? Perhaps it may be necessary to give Mr. Birch the honor to pay a political debt and if so, of course, no further explanation need be given. On the other hand, if it seems absolutely necessary to have the district represented during the two months, why not let Mr. Ackerman do it? The probabilities are that he will go there in March anyway and he might just as well begin the first of the year as at any other time.

All in all, the gathering at Sea Girt, Tuesday, seemed like an old-fashioned love feast. There seemed to be an absence of discord and before the conferences were declared over all the rough spots in the Edge machine were smoothed out. George L. Record seems to be the only thorne in the side of the political planners but even at that he is entitled to his try for a chance to prove his statements that he is far better qualified to go to the United States Senate than Governor Edge or any other candidate. The G. O. P. voters will decide for themselves when they cast their ballots in September.

GIVING THEM A CHANCE TO "MAKE GOOD."

In the office of the Business Men's Association, today, Plainfield people who have been agitating the building of homes for working men will have an opportunity to prove that they are sincere in what they say. On this occasion, subscriptions to a fund of $5,000 will be received from anyone wishing to support a plan that has been hit upon by a committee as the best to solve the housing problem. The industrial concerns in town have agreed that if $5,000 be secured by popular subscriptions, they will add an additional $5,000 with the understanding that the total amount be given out in the form of a $100 bonus to every person building a working man's home in the preserihed territory.

This plan was adopted after the Business Men's Association had gone over the ground in a most careful and concise manner. Special committees consulted with the merchants, the business firms and investors, getting the opinions of each and sifting them down to an absolute comprehensive point. It was seen long ago that more good, substantial houses were needed if the newly arrived mechanics were to be kept here, but as individual investors seemed to be slow in putting out the money at this time the Business Men's Association had to take the initiative in getting operations started.

It is quite apparent that the present activities at the Pond, the International, the Scott and other industrial plants are to continue. Even if the war should come to a sudden end the products of these factories will be needed for the rebuilding of devastated Europe and the refurnishing of over-taxed American shops that have pushed their equipment to the limit. In consequence the hundreds of new workmen and families who have come here during the rush will want to remain. With no proper accommodations in the housing line, they will not be long in deciding to go elsewhere, consequently now is the time to act and the Business Men's Association is doing the proper thing in getting the entire community interested in the building project.

According to the plan, any person who builds a house in Plainfield is to receive a bonus of $100, provided that the plans for the structure meet with the approval of a committee composed of J. D. Loizeaux and Peter J. McDonough. These men have had a wide experience in real estate development and the building of homes, a fact which makes it possible for them to tell the difference between a slung-together shack and a substantial dwelling. The city wants its present form of dwelling continued and any attempt to make this a community of ram-shackled structures will put an end to the plan.

The $100 bonus is a splendid idea and all that is needed to bring success to the Business Men's proposition is for the $5,000 of subscriptions to be received. Today will decide whether or not those who have been agitating building really want to see the homes take form or are talking just because talk is cheap.

GETTING AFTER THE SWIVEL-CHAIR WARRIORS.

Provost Marshal General Crowder has decided that men in Class 1-A will not be allowed to enlist, except in the Engineers' Corps. It is good news, if true. Here's hoping that the order will not be rescinded later. This significant statement is added to the decision: "Young men in the first class, realizing they had to go to war, have haunted Washington looking for positions where their civilian training would be of use to themselves and the government. As a rule, the position sought happened to be in some government department far removed from the firing line." This sweeping assertion seems justified at times, when we consider the numbers who seek extraodinary credit for "volunteering" into some job where they hope at least to be exempt from fighting, instead of waiting to be "drafted," loathed word.

There has been too much of this four-flushing. Most of the young men who have volunteered have done so out of a sense of duty, a real desire to get into the fighting, and that quickly. Many of them, however, have enlisted for the contrary purpose, to get away from real war. These latter are the sort who will doubtless twenty years from now be boasting that "they didn't wait to be drafted."

They are the most voluble concerning their own superior brand of patriotism, and by their loud-mouthed bragging have done their best to discredit the draft, the method by which this nation more than a year ago voted to get the bulk of its armies.

The government has, by this enlistment policy, pursued after the draft went into operation, secured the services of some of the best fighting material it possesses for they were eager to fight.

It has also secured prematurely the services of the lazy clerks and pseudo mechanics, who might have made good fighting men, if compelled to bear arms, as they were meant to do.

The decision of the provost marshal general shows that he thinks the time has come to assert the dignity of the National Army and its rights against those who would avoid it to do non-combatant duty somewhere else.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When regulation summer weather came during June and July?

When the drivers of the fire appartus strapped themselves in their seats?

When the aristocratic kids for Seventh and Eighth streets were the only ones who did not go barefooted during the warm months?

When you didn't amount to much if you didn't know every cop and fireman in town by his first name?

When fifteen minutes' walk from any part of town would bring you to a patch where many quarts of blackberries could be picked in an hour?

When the Plainfield social clubs journeyed by stage to Florida Grove every Sunday and at least once a month there was a three-cornered fight between Perth Amboy, New Brunswick and Plainfield contingents?

When the Fouth of July was welcomed with a roar and a bang that kept everybody awake all night and the biggest event of the holiday was the Plainfield picnic at Washington Rock?

When 'Gene O'Reilly, Jack Sullivan and "Mose" Quaas took the famous Boston Variety Company to its first and only stand at Milburn, escaping the wrath of the angry audience of hat-makers by getting out the back windows of the hall and taking refuge in a carry-all moving toward Plainfield as fast as the horses could gallop?

WHAT COMES OF LISTENING TO A LISPING LOUNGE LIZARD.

After man came woman—and she has been after him ever since.

The reason there is plenty of room at the top is because everyone wants to get in on the ground floor.

Before this war started, it used to be "Hohenzollern" but after America gets through with him, Kaiser Bill and all the rest of his kind will be "Huns—Hollerin'."

An observing subscriber in another town writes to ask "Why do all girls kiss soldiers?" Somebody has given him the wrong dope. In Plainfield, the soldiers kiss the girls.

"While hunting for the key to the situation," says Link Martin, "be sure that your competitor does not pick the lock."

Because you love your enemies is no reason why you should be disagreeable to your friends.

A few more boys like Plainfield's own "Jimmie" Ackerman, and German airplanes over the Allied lines will be as scarce as back-talk in the army.

In common with everything else, it comes high nowadays to appear in police court. Only a short time ago, a ten-dollar fine was considered big but this week Judge DeMeza handed out one of $120, two more of fifty dollars and a good sized batch of twenties.

Here's a man telling us that children will grow up to be liars as long as the parents spank them. But even so, if you don't spank them when they are little they may take things. It's no use to have a legal, "Thou shalt not," unless you have penalties going with it.

A bulletin posted up in the City Hall announces that a certain bonding corporation is located in "New York, N. J." Knew the City Hall could do some great things but never realized it could annex the great metropolis to our own little State.

Speaking of the City Hall, they put in a lot of new furniture at the front entrance early yesterday morning. Either the storage company got tired of seeing it around or else somebody is determined that we are to have that reception, finished or unfinished.

Pretty hard when Friend Wife, who promised to "love, honor and obey," goes back during the trials and tribulations of the draft period and sends Friend Husband kiting off to Camp Dix as a non-supporter.

By the way, Mr. Exemption Board, don't be too quick in looking over 2-d's while the reclassifying is on. There's a whole lot of so-called machinists hereabouts who, if you sent them out in the morning for a left-handed monkey-wrench would come back late in the afternoon with the statement that they could find nothing but a leaky cotter pin.

The trouble is, even when you find a feller utterly wrapped up in farm life, it is pretty safe to bet that some hired man is holding the plowliness behind the old gray mule.

Roselle has gone Plainfield one better in the aftermath of a local option vote. In this city, we only had to have a recount but at the neighboring town down Elizabeth way, they have to have the whole thing over again because somebody forgot to let the soldier boys express their opinion on abolishing the only licensed place in the community. Maybe in the future, the Rosellites, like the Kaiser, will understand that the American soldier boy is "some pumpkins."

Another reason why "Sammy" is obpectionable as a name for our soldiers is the poets can find so little use for it. They could do better with plain "Sam," since that at least rhymes with blam, slam, ram, jam, ham, lam and damn—words that are always serviceable during war time.

Scotch Plains' Famous "Umbrella" Walnut To End Its Existence for Patriotic Purpose

Scotch Plains' famous "umbrella" walnut tree, which for more than half a century has graced the spacious residential grounds of Henry C. Meyer at Front street and Park avenue, that village, is soon to give up its duties as a shade furnisher for a more worthy cause.

Prying Government eyes possessed by a lieutenant in the forestry division have discovered that the tree is of the much needed black walnut variety, now very scare in America, and capable of producing many thousands of feet of finished wood used in making stocks for gun barrels. The lieutenant notified the owner that the Government would appropriate the tree in a short time, paying the regulation price for the material secured after the big walnut had been cut down. From a sentimental point of view, the tree is held priceless by Mr. Meyer and as an obstruction for the hot sun in summer, it provides comforts for the occupants of the Meyer home that cannot be replaced for many years. However, the family recognizes that the country's needs are greater than those of individuals and is ready to stand their loss willingly.

The tree in question was planted more than fifty years ago by the late John Marsh, a widely known Scotch Plains resident who owned the property now occupied by Mr. Meyer. It stands on the west side of the Meyer lawn and rises to a height more than thirty feet before a branch protrudes. It was trained in this manner by Mr. Marsh at the request of his children, all of whom are now grown up and living in other parts, and gradually assumed a shape like an open umbrella. For this reason it become known as the "Umbrella Walnut" and the idea is easily verified as one gazes at the three from any angle of Scotch Plains' principal corner. Branches drooped gracefully over the Meyer residence, not only making the lawn below a much sought after place in the warm months but also adding a dignified stateliness to the grounds.

The tree, in addition to being admired by the adults of the village, has also been popular with the children as it gives forth an abundant crop of walnuts every season. Mr. Meyer has always permitted them to be gathered by the youngsters of the neighborhood but they also are willing to stand their loss for the successful continuance of rifle manufacturing. It is estimated that the tree will supply enough of the precious black walnut wood to make at least several hundred stocks for the guns used by American soldiers.

Picture Features At the Plainfield

The attractiveness of the picture program at the Plainfield Theatre has been drawing large crowds to the Second street playhouse all week and the announcements of next week's bill indicates a continuance of this patronage.

For today and tomorrow, Manager Shannon offers the Dolly Sisters in the Metro feature film of six acts entitled, "The Million Dollar Dollies." Everywhere it has been shown it has made a great impression.

The program for next week will be as follows: Monday and Tuesday, Smiling George Walsh in "Brave and Bold," a special Fox feature, in which the athletic thunderbolt stops at nothing to best his business rival to an enormous war order. Wednesday and Thursday, Tyrone Power in the "Planter," and Friday and Saturday, Gladys Brockwell in "The Devil's Wheel."

Mr. Freligh Longs For the Old Town

Although he is enjoying the ocean waves and balmy breezes at Arverne, Charles P. Freligh, of this city, longs for Plainfield. His yearnings for the old town are set forth in the following poem, received by the Record today:

"Home Sweet Home."

During all the winter
You'll sit all day and pine;
Wishing for the summer,
And old vacation time.

You'll go to the seashore,
You'll wander up and down:
During all your travels
You think of your home town.

You see smiling faces,
While trav'ling here and there;
That's the time you wonder
If with home they compare.

Life, it seems all rosy,
You've nothing but all play;
Take me back to Plainfield,
I'd rather work all day.

SILAS M. SEELEY DIES IN 45TH YEAR.

Silas M. Seeley, aged forty-five years, died last night at his home at 227 West Front street. He had been ill for the past two years. Mr. Seeley was a chemist and had been employed at various times at Woodbridge, Rahway and other places. His last position was at Stroudsburg, Pa. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Ida Van Boskerck, of this city; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Seeley, of Milford, Pa., and a brother and a sister.

The funeral will be held at the late home, Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and burial will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Military Training For American Youths

A direct step toward universal training—both military and vocational—of the Nation's young manhood is contemplated in the great man power bill which will be presented to Congress by the War Department in September.

The tentative plan, which will be a part of the general measure changing the draft ages, provide that youths of 18, 19 and 20 shall be trained both in military and industrial lines until they are 21, at which age they may be drawn into the military establishment.

As reported recently by the United Press, President Wilson is understood to favor careful training of young men for all emergencies even after peace has come. That he and Secretary Baker are about to urge such training as an actual war measure also, was stated by members of the House and Senate Military Committees this week.

The reason the President and Baker urged postponement of the proposed legislation to increase the draft ages now is understood to have had its basis in their desires to get a carefully worked out plan whereby both now and after the war the Nation's man power may be trained and best trained and utilized. The bill, it is said, will make it possible to turn to war work or fighting every man between the ages of 21 and 50 years.

Praise for Wilson From Senator Runyon

The Sunday-school room of Westminster church, Elizabeth, was crowded Sunday morning, when State Senator William N. Runyon, of this city, addressed a big Sunday-school gathering.

The Senator chose for his theme the topic, "The Choice," and went on to explain that by that he meant the choice of right and wrong; democracy as opposed to autocracy. He pointed out that the history of the country shows that the United States has always fought for democracy and that her sons have always been brave and gallant in war.

He said that it was a Christian war which the allied nations are fighting. The Kaiser and his colleagues have openly defied God and that in the end they will suffer for it.

In conclusion the Senator said that he was proud of the way the present admininstration has handled itself regarding the war. He pointed out the fact that while a great many thought some time back that war should have been declared before it was, that past events have proved that we entered the war at exactly the right time. The Senator's praise not only was heaped upon the administration as a collective body, but he also paid a fine tribute to President Wilson, Secretary Baker and General Pershing.

"Charlie" Butt, Plainfield's "Mark Twain" Demonstrates Toronto Has Not Dulled His Wit

Still as lively and chipper as ever, and even more profuse with the philosophical witticisms that earned him the title of "the Mark Twain" of Plainfield, when he was a well-known local resident, Charles E. Butt, of Toronto, Ont., came into town the past week for a few days' visit. He was very busy renewing acquaintances he had not seen since his last trip to Plainfield ten years ago and did not get away until Wednesday. He then left for New York where he is spending a short time with a relative, intending to start back for Canada tomorrow.

Mr. Butt, or "Charlie" as everybody knows him ,was a fesident of Plainfield for twenty-six years. He came here first in 1880 and was employed as machinist during his long stay at the Potter, Scott and Pond shops. At the death of his father, in 1906, he fell heir to a large share of the former's estate and returned to his native city of Toronto to look after his financial affairs. Because of his advanced age, now being seventy-seven years, "Charlie" has lived a retired life up to the present and now because of the shortage of men in the gallant dominion, he is back in the harness but not at his old trade. His brother, R. H. Butt, a prominent real estate and insurance man in Toronto, dropped dead recently and "Charlie" is assisting the deceased's son in conducting the business. His home is at 248 Huron street, Toronto, and his office at 12 and 14 Wellington street, the same city. To all his Plainfield friends he extends an invitation to drop in and see him if they happen to be in Toronto. Those who know him can appreciate the statement that he will show them what a Canadian imbued with twenty-six years of American living can do in the way of hospitality for the boys from Yankee land.

During the bicycle craze of twenty years ago, there was no more enthusiastic wheelman in New Jersey than "Charlie" Butt. He was in the saddle almost constantly when not at work and young fellows half his age were unable to keep up with him when he started for a trip across country. He frequently took part in fifty and seventy-mile runs and on several occasions made his "century," as a record of 100 miles in one day was called.

It was not as a "bike" rider, however, that "Charlie" Butt made his reputation in town although he became familiar to everyone in his conventional knickerbockers of the day. It was as a purveyor of extemporaneous wit that his name became a byward and the newspapers at the time continually referfed to him as "The Mark Twain of Plainfield."

"Charlie" was always bubbling over with infectious humor and the original answers he gave to people asking him about topics of the day made his appearance welcome at any gathering. It was tradition at the Potter shop, where "Charlie" worked most of the time during his twenty-six years here, that no one had ever caught him napping, even though three of four fellow machinists hurled carefully prepared interrogations at him one after the other. Time and again his philosophical views and remarks were published in the local dailies and his peculiar gift was the envy of the community.

It was deeply regretted by everyone when "Charlie" left Plainfield, and it was accordingly a pleasant surprise when he came back for the present visit. He seems to have aged but little and he is still as originally humorous as ever and not the least bit "stuck up" because he stepped from the machine shop to a comfortable fortune. Although he intended to stay at the Queen City Hotel during his visit, he received so many invitations to "break bread" at the home of friends that he was kept on the go all the time. He brought down from Toronto a fund of good stories and anecdotes that were told in his original way and made his listeners think of the old days when he had a witticism for every other minute.

One of "Charlie's" visits before he left the city Wednesday was to the old Potter plant where he was employed off and on most of his time in town. Although it is now the Wood Printing Machinery Company, and new officials are in charge, he was given the freedom of all the departments to roam about at will and shake hands with those of the old crowd remaining. These include "Billie" Mosher, "Joe" Brown, "Jim" Paterson, "Bill" Fairbank, and many others. They all gave "Charlie" a hearty hand-shake and while expressing satisfaction that he was getting along so well voiced the wish that he was back with them as no one had ever entered the shop who could take his place.

On leaving town Wednesday, "Charlie" said it came hard to say good-bye but he declared that if the good Lord spare him his life and finances, he would not allow another ten years to pass by before he came back for another session in good old Plainfield.

Hears How Son Fought Four in Air; Killed One

Councilman Marion S. Ackerman, of this city, this week learned how his son, James H. Ackerman, of the American aviation forces now on duty in France, came by the yound from which he is recovering in a hospital over there. Young Ackerman, according to a letter his father received from a "flight lieutenant, whose signature was deleter, attacked four German aeroplanes singlehanded, killed one enemy aviator and fought on until a bullet shattered an arm.

The lieutenant, who described himself as "Jim's pal," explained that he wanted to write to tell of the "brave scrap" young Ackerman put up.

"We chaps are here," wrote the lieutenant, "all envy him and wish we had a Blighty like Jim's."

The letter, dated June 14, did not give the date of young Ackerman's flight, but the writer said he supposed the father "by this time had heard" of his son's wound. Mr. Ackerman received word several weeks ago. Ackerman was up with a companion, a South African member of a British flying squadron, but they became separated, and Ackerman found himself suddenly confronted with four German machines—"Fokker biplanes," explained the lieutenant, "the fastest the Huns have got."

Young Ackerman flew at them, wrote the lieutenant, who related that he had witnessed the flight. His buzzing machine gun got one, which was seen to wobble and then drop, plummet straight, to a crash. But the other three came on, and, the lieutenant wrote, "Jim was putting up a good scrap when he was wounded."

With his wound Ackerman was barely able to fly and operating his gun was out of the question. His companion was by this time streaking to his aid, but two of the three Germans were "sitting on Jim's tail," wrote the lieutenant. Things were looking drown for Ackerman, but the South African came up in time. He sent one of the three down out of control and then maneuvered the other away from the danger point.

While the Britisher was handling the three Germans, Ackerman managed to make a safe landing, just within the French first lines. He was helped out of his machine, and in short order was in an American base hospital where, to quote the lieutenant, "he is doing splendidly."

The lieutenant closed his letter with an offer to do anything in his power for Jim or his father. But Mr. Ackerman, due to the censor's elision of the lieutenant's name, is powerless to write his thanks for the letter.

Chancery Court Finds "Cinderella" Wears Her Slipper Worthily in Spite of Protests from Her Brothers

The story of a modern Cinderella, quietly told, deftly wove threads of gold into the drab fabric of property litigation in Chancery Court at Newark, Monday. Cinderella herself took the stand and unfolded the tale of her woes and her reward. She pictured the big fourteen-room house of her mother, standing in the middle of three acres of ground, with barn and chicken house nearby.

Her mother kept no maid, said this Cinderella, although an elderly woman acted as companion. She did all the cooking, this new Cinderella; she toiled all through those fourteen rooms, keeping them clean and orderly; she washed clothes daily; she tended the furnace and shoveled thirty tons of coal last winter and put ashes on the sidewalks. When spring came she mowed the lawn, and cared for the garden and horses.

Her mother was very frugal. Waste to her mind was extravagance. Meat once a week was quite enough, and so they fell back on eggs from their own small flock of poultry. The vice chancellor smiled when she told of one faithful old hen that had helped to keep the family supplied with eggs almost ever since her mother had owned the place—a matter of about eighteen years—and besides had raised a new brook of chicks every year.

Life for this Cinderella held little but days of unrewarded toil and nights of exhaustion. A ray of sunshine cut into the gloom last Christmas. Her mother gave her $50. The big reward came a little later. Now let her be known as Miss Clara Blume. Her reward was the fourteen-room house and is surroundings, which are 625 West Front street, this city, deeded to her by her mother, Mrs. Johanna M. C. Giebelhouse, and, by her mother's will, $60,000 additional.

Louis G. Blume, of New York, a brother, with two other brothers, a nephew and a niece object to this gift. Their shares in the estate failed to satisfy, and that is why Cinderella's story was unfolded before Vice Chancellor Foster, Monday. Technically, the proceedings comprised an effort by the brothers to set aside the deed to the house. Their attack upon the $6,000 bequest is pending in the Union County Orphans' Court.

After hearing Cinderella's story, the vice chancellor turned to Ralph E. Lum, attorney for the brothers and other relatives, and heard his side of the case. Then he informed him that he didn't have a case. The vice chancellor expressed the opinion that Mrs. Giebelhouse was a capable, intelligent, hard-headed woman who thoroughly understood the nature of the deed she had made; that her act was voluntary and not the product of undue influence, nor induced by fraud, as charged in the bill of complaint.

Miss Blume testified that February 8 her brother, George, one of the complainants, came to the house and learned from his mother that she had left him and his brothers and two grandchildren only the incom of their respective shares of the residue of her estate, with the proviso that they were to get the principal after ten years.

On the following day Louis, another brother, and also a complainant, came to the house and upbraided his mother for having by her will left the shares of himself, his brothers and the grandchildren in trust for ten years. After Louis left, Miss Blume testified, her mother told her that Louis had threatened to "burn down the house" if she didn't agree to change her will, and at her mother's behest she called up police headquarters and reported Louis' threat. Her mother, Miss Blume further told the court, suspected that George had told Louis about the will, and four days after she deeded the homestead to her and the next day she deeded a farm on Valley road, Watchung, to her son August. This latter deed is also being contested in another Chancery suit.

Again testifying as to her mother's words concerning her sons just before her death, Miss Blume said:

"Mother told me: 'I want you to stand by the front door and say 'You shall not come in—this is my home!' "

All but one of her brother so Miss Blume and others testified, were considered "disappointments" by their mother. Mrs. Giebelhouse said she had given them every chance—good educations, too,—and that they had made nothing of their opportunities. This, said Miss Blume, was always a source of brief to her mother.

Shortly before her death Mrs. Giebelhouse came to tell, Miss Blume related, that it had been a hard life for her—working always.

"She implored me," said Miss Blume. " 'Promise me you'll never cook any more; promise me you will never wash any more. I want you to sit at your piano and look at my picture and think of me. I want you to have the same garden and the same old flowers. I deeded this place to you because you have been so good to me for all these years.' "

In giving it as his conclusion that the deed to Miss Blume should be sustained, the vice chancellor remarked that she was not getting any more than she had earned by her faithful services to her mother throughout all the years that they had lived together.

The vice chancellor's finding in favor of Clara Blume has increased interest in the action to set aside the deed of the farm to August. This latter suit, however, will not be tried until fall, if ever. The two bills of complaint were alike in that each charged both undue influence and lack of competency to make the conveyance. In the suit just tried the vice chancellor has held that it was established to his entire satisfaction that Mrs. Giebelhouse was a woman of strong mentality and fully capable of transacting her own business, and that she was not under the domination of any one.

While Miss Blume had been for years a member of her mother's household, it got on the record that August, who lives at Bay Shore Long Island, came to his mother's home only four days before she executed the deed for the farm to him, and that Miss Blume, at her mother's request, sent for him after Louis made the alleged threat to burn down the house.

Because it was suggested by Mr. Lum that an appraisal of the estate left by Mrs. Giebelhouse, who died February 25 last, might show that she did not have sufficient property over and above what her first husband left her at his death in 1887 to make the contested gift to her daughter, the vice chancellor said that he would withhold the advising of a decree until July 22, to afford the complainants a chance to put in such appraisal.

Clarence E. Case, of Somerville, who defended Miss Blume, did not show any concern over the point raised by Mr. Lum. Mrs. Giebelhouse, he said, died possessed of a large independent estate, having owned a number of properties in New York in her own right at the time of her first husband's death, besides surplus income added to her estate from her own income and her husband's estate throughout all the intervening years.

An authentic estimate places the value of Mrs. Giebelhouse's estate at about $250,000. The West Front street property deeded to the daughter is said to be worth $25,000, and the Watchung farm about $14,000. Hearing in the contention of the sons that the will should not be admitted to probate was to have been continued before Judge Pierce on July 15 but on that date it is probable that both sides will ask for an adjournment.

Standard Incendiary Held in $15,000 Bail

Joseph Kip, taken into custody last week by the county authorities and turned over to United States District Attorney Lynch at Newark, accused of starting a $30,000 fire at the plant of the Standard Aircraft Corporation at Bayway, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Matthews, Wednesday, so that his bail might be reduced from $25,000 to $15,000. Efforts are being made to raise the funds to secure his release.

Former Assistant Prosecutor Martin P. O'Connor, of Roselle, who is to be the youth's counsel, had a conference with District Attorney Lynch, Tuesday afternoon and succeeded in convincing him that Kip had no German motives in setting the fire. He will not be turned over to the county at least until after the facts have been presented to the Federal Grand Jury some time this month. If he is not indicted he will be handed over to Prosecutor Hetfield.

Kip, whose home is in Elizabeth, was arrested last Friday after he had confessed to County Detective John Galatian that he had started the fire in the Standard plant on Wednesday night, July 3, for the purpose of "discovering" it himself and adding to his reputation as a watchful fireman.

Do You Know Where Any Black Walnut Trees Are Located?

Another appeal for assistance in locating black walnut trees, needed by the government for the manufacture of gun stocks and aeroplane propellers, has been issued by the State Department of Conservation and Development. Boy Scouts are already at work searching for and reporting the location of walnut trees.

The department requests that persons familiar with the whereabouts of walnut trees report to the State forester at Trenton, giving the name and address of the owner and the size of each tree. The government is not buying the walnut timber direct, but is locating it for firms manufacturing war products. Logs, rather than sawn lumber, are desired. Lists of firms holding government contracts and further information upon the subject is obtainable upon request of the State forester at Trenton.

SIGNAL SECTION MEN HOME ON A VISIT.

Herbert Schillinger, of Watchung avenue, and James Ellis, of Arlington avenue, who have been stationed at Camp Dodge, Des Moines, since last fall, were visitors in town the forepart of the week. They are members of the telegraph and telephone section of the signal corps organized immediately after war was declared and which was recently brought East to Camp Mills.

Both Mr. Schillinger and Mr. Ellis are practical telephone and telegraph men and have been assigned to very important work. They expect to go overseas in the near future.

Wilson Numbered Among Officials Extending Congratulations After Successful Flight of Handley-Paige

As a result of the successful flight of the Handley-Paige super-machine at the Bayway aviation field of the Standard Aircraft Corporation, Saturday afternoon, President Harry B. Mingle has been receiving congratulations from every quarter The War Department has taken official notice of the event through a congratulatory telegram sent by Secretary Baker, and even President Wilson has let it be known by way of unofficial channels that he is highly pleased.

The Standard company has now started on the manufacturing of that type of plane on a quantity basis. It will not be long before the huge planes will be circling over Union county in test flights. The first craft to be completed and which was turned over to the military authorities Saturday will be taken away from the plant within the next day or so and put in service.

The aviation field of the company was the gathering place Saturday afternoon of leaders of the flying art in both this country and England. Government officials and between 15,000 and 20,000 employes of the concern and others, when the first Handley-Paige to be constructed in America was christened and sent away on its first official flight. The event was characterized by Assistantn Secretary of War Benedict M. Crowell and others present as marking on epoch in the world's air history.

Officials of England and America hailed it as a sign that this country has reached a stage of quantity production that will insure the future ascendancy of the Allies in the air fighting field and it was also declared to be a vindication of the Liberty motor. The assurance of increased production of planes, the success of the frequently criticised motor and the co-operation of men and women are the three things that now make certain victory in the air.

Assistant Secretary of War Crowell, John D. Ryan, director of the Aircraft Production Board. United States Senators Joseph Frelinghuysen and Charles P. Thomas, Major General William Kenely, chief director of military aeronautics, and others voiced their confidence in the success of the air program and joined in lauding the Liberty motor and American built machines.

Both on its first flight and the second time when it was sent aloft, the Langely, as it was christened, was successful, but one mishop to Colonel William Simpell, of the British Air Board, as he was descending from a flight in a small training machine nearly caused a fatal ending to the afternoon's program. After piloting the Langely when it first went up, he went up in the smaller plane for a spin but in coming down alighted on soft ground, due to his unfamiliarity with the field. The machine turned over on him but before aid reached him he had extricated himself and jested with those about him over his experience.

Mrs. Harry B. Mingle acted as sponsor for the huge Handley-Paige and christened it the "Langely" after the late Professor Langely, a pioneer in the flying art. Neither she nor Mr. Mingle, president of the Standard, was able to break the champagne bottle tnd it was then tht Colonel Sempill cracked it over one of the formidable looking machine guns that rimmed the front end. The name of the craft was chosen by Secretary of War Newton Baker, who intended to be present but found it impossible at the last moment.

The machine was trundled from the hangar especially constructed for it, as the throng gathered around the field cheered and the company's band played "The Star Spangled Banner." Hiding American and British flags painted on the front of the fuselage below the name of the machine, a large American flag was draped over the machine guns and observer's seat. The plane was made ready for the flight and then moved up to the speaker's stand for the christening.

Before speaking of the plane, Assistant Secretary Crowell, the first person brought to the platform by Harry B. Mingle, who presided, spoke of the war as a whole. He declared that the United States is preparing for 1921, but that the war was not expected to continue nearly as long.

"I think we have reached a position today of great confidence in the ability of the country to go through the war. We are in it to stay and while we are preparing for it to last until 1921, we hope it will be over before then," he declared.

"But no matter how long it lasts, we are going to stick. The war is not going to be won alone by the men at the front but by the men behind the machine together with the women and children."

Confidence in the outcome was also expressed by John D. Ryan, director of the Aircraft Production Board. He let down the bars of secrecy around the air program to some extent and penetrated the wall of criticism to show that there is no cause for alarm. In the months of May and June, said Mr. Ryan, the production of Liberty motors in America was greater than the entire output of airplane engines in England during 1915, and he said that was not belittling Great Britain's efforts either. Continuing, he said:

"This Handley-Paige is of British design but American manufacture and is of American material. It is one of the most formidable ships of war ever produced and is an example of what America will do toward carrying out the air program. It is one of the machines that will follow the Hun back of his lines and destroy the things that make it possible for him to wage his wars.

"This is the first of thousands that are already under way. There has been much criticism of our air program. I can speak of it because for four months I have been studying the causes of delay I want to say that no act of mine can have been effective in so short a time. What has been done is due to my predecessors and I can claim no part in it.

"The Liberty motor is one of the most powerful ever built," continued Mr. Ryman. "We are furnishing them too few I will admit. but still in good quantities. All of our allies are now calling upon us for that engine. It is the limiting factor in our program. Planes we can furnish in sufficient quantities, but our ability to produce the engines for them is the deciding factor."

General William Branker, of the British Aid Board, gave the Liberty engine what was probably the strongest endorsement when he told of how England had realized nine months ago the qualities of the motor and had since then put it in her planes exclusively. He said that at the time he had a cable message in his pocket asking him to hurry shipments as fast as possible.

"We stand prepared and fight and fly all the machines that are turned over to us," declared Major General Kenely, after Harry B. Mingle had officially turned the plane over to him.

Sir Henry Fowler, a member of the British War Mission, was another Englishman to speak in the highest terms of the machine and said that it served as an example of how America is to help in gaining supremacy in the air.

The occasion was termed as the happiest day of his life by W. A. Workman, director of the Handley-Paige company in America, when he made a few remarks. He has been in close contact with the Standard plant since the machine was started.

Senator Frelinghuysen, New Jersey's senior representative in the United States Senate, was wildly cheered when he made his appearance on the platform. He denounced Germany bitterly and said that we are fighting to protect our women and children from their ravages. He reiterated that we are engaged in combat against the entire German people and not the government alone. Senator Charles F. Thomas, his colleague from Colorado, also made a brief address, and Samuel P. Langely, the nearest surviving male relative of Professor Langley, told of his uncle's experiments and failures.

Senator Frelinghuysen and his party came near missing the event because Mrs. Frelinghuysen had forgotten to provide herself with a suitable pass. One of the numerous guards declined to allow them on the field, but a plant official rescued them. The Elizabeth Home Guard helped maintain order.

The launching of the Langley created great enthusiasm. It took two men to start each of the two motors and the wind raised by the whirring propellers nearly swept away the dozen men holding the back end of the fuselage to the ground. The machine was pushed to one end of the field and then started off with a mighty rush and cleared the ground in the first 500 feet.

At the first flight Colonel Sempill occupied the pilot's seat and Captain E. T. Waller, of Toronto, acted as observer. Young T. Dawkins, a director of the Hanley-Paige company, and General Kenely were the passengers, with two moving picture men.

The plane took the air at 4:25, circled over Staten Island and Elizabeth and even soared over a part of Manhattan. When it was brought to earth again Colonel Sempill climbed out and declared delightedly that it was fine. He said he had gone up 8,500 feet and attained a speed of ninety miles an hour without the slightest trouble. He was up half an hour. Captain Waller was the pilot when it went up a short time later with equal success.

The machine is of the 1915 type of Handley-Paige and weighs four and one-half tons. It is capable of carrying twenty passengers and a ton and a half of explosives. The wings have a spread of 100 feet over all. It is equipped with two Liberty motors, each of which can propel the craft alone if necessary. The length of the fuselage, or body part, is sixty-three feet.

Upon Colonel Sempill's return from the flight he was presented with a large boquet of American beauty roses by Miss Muriel Straub in behalf of the Standard plant. Mr. Workman and L. C. Stone, who directed the construction of the Langley, were also presented with bouquets. The men who worked on it will all receive souvenirs.

Just after the ceremonies attendant upon the christening had gotten under way two Curtis airplanes appeared in the sky to the East and after maneuvering overhead came to earth. They were piloted by Captain Harvey and Captain Reinhart. General Branker was a passenger with the former, and after staying to witness the flight returned to Mineola.

All during the flight Overton Bounds, the company's aviator, had the crowd on edge with his antics. He flew from Mineola in time for the affair and followed the Langely aloft. In his speedy little craft he dipped and turned and went into a "tail" spin and then an "Immerman drop." He also executed a series of loop the loops when only a few hundred feet from the earth.

Aproximately 20,000 persons directly around the field witnessed the flight. Besides the hundreds of invited guests, including city and county officials as well as the members of the government, there were nearly all of the employes of both the Elizabeth and Plainfield plants. Thousands of others were gathered around the fringes of the field and kept back by guards. On a number of occasions cameras were confiscated. The films in a camera belonging to Wolcott Calkins, son of Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city, were taken by an enlisted man, despite his protests that important prints for the Union County Mosquito Commission were on them.

The invited guests were met at the railroad stations and taken to the plant in autos. After a banquet they were shown about the plant and then were escorted to a large grandstand erected at a vantage point on the field.

Among those present as guests of the company were: Colonel Arnold, Colonel Deeds, Colonel Walden, Lieutenant Colonel Hosmer, General Cormack, head of the British Art Mission in the United States, Captain Hugo D'Annunzio, Lieutenant Colonel Carberry and many other military and naval men, besides civilians prominent throughout the country.

Liberty Bond Holders Warned Against Trading for Stock Issues

Owners of Liberty bonds were warned again by the Treasury Department in a statement last night against agents with alluring offers for the exchange of the bonds for stocks alleged to yield higher returns.

"One of the most flagrant recent cases is that of a man signing himsel fas 'Sanford Holmes, 67 Wall street, New York,' " the department's statement said. "Mr. Holmes, through a circular letter, sought the co-operation of bankers in inducing Liberty bond owners to trade their government securities for a well-known stock. Such an exchange, he said, would greatly increase the returns to the investor, but he ignored the fact that execution of his plans would yield him an enormous profit and place in the hands of the owner of Liberty bonds another investment of very much less value.

"The alluring 'book value' of the stock which Mr. Holmes aimed to exchanged was the book upon which he attempted to catch holders of Liberty bonds. In a circular letter sent broadcast to banks, Mr. Holmes offered twenty-one shares of stock, 'book value' $3,486, for $3,000 in Liberty bonds of any issue. Figuring on the basis of an annual ten per cent. return on the stock and four per cent. on Liberty bonds. Mr. Holmes declared the holder of twenty-one shares of the stock would receive $90 more a year than the holder of $3,000 in Liberty bonds.

"One very important thing that Mr. Holmes failed to state was that on the closing day of his offer, twenty-one shares o fthe stock he mentioned were worth, including brokerage, $2,354.63 on the New York Stock Exchange, while the amount of Liberty bonds for which he proposed to trade this number of shares of stock could have been sold for not less than $2,850."

"He also neglected to point out that his profit by such a deal as he proposed would be $495.37 while the regular commission on a reputable stock exchange for such a transaction would be $3.23.

"Mr. Holmes generously offered a commission of $100 to bankers on each such transaction which they helped him to put through. Patriotic bankers, however, who were co-operting with the Treasury Department in seeking to induce persons to hold their bonds, not only declined to aid Hr. Holmes in his scheme, but notified the Treasury Department of it.

"Owners of Liberty bonds are warned to deal only with reliable persons in transactions of any kind in which their bonds are concerned."

Kean Not Seeking Political Honors

Hamilton Kean will not enter the race this fall against either Governor Edge for the U. S. Senatorial Republican nomination, or Ernest R. Ackerman for the Congressional nomination, it became known yesterday on good authority. The fact that he will not seek political honors is said to have been advanced at the gathering of politicians from all over this State at Sea Girt, Tuesday.

Mr. Kean's name has been connected with the nomination for Congressman more or less ever since the death of Congressman John H. Capstick. He declined to announce what his position was in the matter, but when former State Senator Ackerman officially announced his entry into the field, Mr. Kean let it be understood that he would not oppose him.

Since the withdrawal of Austen Colgate as an aspirant for the Senatorial nomination, the Elizabeth man has been mentioned as a possible opponent of Governor Edge, an avowed candidate. He was not at Camp Edge but is understood to have consented to the declaration that he will not run.

How Camp Dix Is Helping Out by Tabooing Waste

Reports checked in this week at cantonment headquarters revealed the high pitch of efficiency attained by the new camp department of conservation and reclamation at Camp Dix, heretofore realized only by a few officers associated in the work. The department saves everything from scrap lumber to shoelace eyelets. Its motto is "Thrift."

Thus far, exact figures on the amount of money saved to the government, and that means to the nation's taxpaying citizens, have not been prepared. In the old days, and not so very old days at that, worn equipment that is now refurbished and restored to use would have made material only for bonfires. These days, under orders issued by Major General Scott, it has become a cardinal military sin to throw away anything. In fact, there is no such thing as throwing away at Camp Dix; discarded materials, be they worn boots or egg crates, go to the conservation department.

The scene of military thrift at Dix is the former Davis farm, now the "junk shop." Here men of every trade, barred from overseas service because of minor physical shortcomings, do their bit to good effect. The materials that come their way comprise the following: Waste paper, garbage, tin cans, scrap lumber (including boxes, barrels and crates), scrap leather, scrap iron, old wire, empty bags, burlap, leadfoil, tinfoil, old brass, old copper, wornout clothing, horse hair clippers, dead horses, old rope, old rubber, bottles and broken glass.

The garbage is burned in an incinerator. Other materials are sorted as to kind and degree of wear. Leggings are a large item in the list of discarded clothing, for it has been found that they wear out quicker than any other part of the soldier's uniform. Leggings beyond repair are shunted through specialty squads. Thus good strips of canvas or leather are saved by one group, buckles by another and hooks and eyes by another.

On most of the salvage work the government makes a profit and on the rest just about breaks even. In the larger aspect, however, the nation is reaping untold profit, for the many thousands of young men in army life are learning thrift.

Another department in which officers feel the civilian public has yet to learn the true state of affairs is the religious side of life at camp. Home preachers, the chaplains declare, would soon cease to lament the spiritual effects of army life if they could but witness a typical camp religious meeting such as was held a few days ago in "Y" Hut No. 1 by Chaplain Howard Davis, of the Fifty-ninth Pioneers. More than 1,000 men, some of them Easterners, the remainder men of the Eighty-seventh Division, renewed pledges to maintain the Christian standard of life.

"One of the greatest problems of the home church," commented Chaplain Davis, who preached the sermon, "is that it shall keep step with the religious fervor and sincerity of the army. The minds of soldiers are open to convictions about religious matters and there is a straightforward sincerity that is refreshing. The religious ideals that the soldiers will carry back into civil life with them at the close of this war will have a revolutionary influence upon every phase of church work."

$961,000 Needed by State For Upkeep of Much Needed Roads

Pointing out that New Jersey will look after its State highway system, but that it must have help for the other highways of military importance in this State, which are not included in the State system, the State Highway Commission this week estimated that the sum of $961.000 will be needed for the upkeep of these routes and announced its intention to use every effort to persuade the Federal Government to provide the money. The Commission pointed out that there are at present in New Jersey over twenty reservations of the Government in which are located camps, aero stations, forts, arsenals, radio stations, embarkation ports and hospitals.

Spreading out from these centers of war activity are many miles of highways over which a never ending and ever-swelling stream of vehicles is carrying an enormous tonnage of freight. The result is the destruction of roads at a rate far beyond the power of the State, county and local officials to maintain and finance them. Already the sum of $150,000 has been spent by the State Highway Commission to maintain these arteries of travel, soce of them being of high importance. This was done in a patriotic effort to keep them serviceable for the transportation needs of the War Department. In addition, the State has insisted that the counties devote a large share of their allotments of State aid money from the motor vehicle fund for the same purpose. In spite of all this, conditions on the highways are becoming worse, and it is predicted that with the coming of winter they will be impassable unless something is done immediately to place them and keep them in proper shape.

With this end in view, the Highway Commission is urging Federal aid. Watson G. Clark, chairman of the Executive Committee, has been entrusted with the task of bringing the matter to the attention of the proper authorities and of securing the Federal assistance so vitally needed.

The Highway Commission enumerates eight counties in which the estimated $961,000 should be spent to keep highways vitally essential to the war program in proper shape for transportation. The counties are Atlantic, Bergen, Burlington, Cape May, Hudson, Middlesex, Monmouth and Salem.

In Middlesex county the stretch mentioned is St. Georges avenue, Rahway, to Base Hospital at Colonia, 2½ miles, present surface waterbound macadam, condition poor; should be rebuilt. Estimated cost, $65.000.

The State Highway Commission while admitting that some local communities may have benefited from the nearness of cantonments or other war activity centers in the State, points out that it is doubtful if the returns are commensurate with the vast outlays shown to be necessary for highway work.

New Program Will Permit Only Trained Men to Go Overseas

Only seasoned men, trained for at least six months on American soil, are to be sent to Frances under a new program being worked out by the War Department. Enlargement of several cantonments to accommodate thousands of additional men is part of this program. The present practice of rushing troops across with only three weeks or mor training is to be abolished now that a fighting force of considerable strength has been placed in the Allied lines.

Until the first million men were landed this Government wanted speed above everything, and men were hurried across as soon as they had been fitted out with uniforms and equipment. No unseasoned men were placed in the fighting line, however. Military officials worked on the theory that men can be trained faster within the fighting zone than at home.

With over a million in France, facilities there are becoming more burdened and there is little room for untrained troops. Under the new policy, draftees will be put through an intensive six months' training course, the unfit weeded out and the remaining fighting men sent across for a short finishing off behind the lines.

This would permit sending Americans into action almost as soon as they have landed in France. At present less than half of the million abroad are on the fighting line, many of them being still in training.

CHARLES C. COYLE GETS ARMY APPOINTMENT.

Charles C. Coyle, of East Seventh street, formerly of Waynewood park, returned this week from New Britain, Conn., where he has been located for the past six months as inspector of supplies for the Standard Aero Corporation.

Mr. Coyle's application for industrial work in the army service has been accepted and he resigned his place at New Britain in order to report at Washington today. He has been given an appointment to the construction department of the Quartermasters' Corps, and will do duty in various parts of the country. Mr. Coyle, who is familiarly known as "Cormack," is the son of John H. Coyle, superintendent of the Levgar plant at West Dunellen and a brother of Sergeant William Coyle, of the Medical Corps, now overseas.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. WILLIAM W. WARNOCK.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Caroline Warnock, wife of William W. Warnock, whose death occurred at her home on Craig place, the borough, yesterday morning, will be held at the late residence, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. B. H. McCoy, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate and he will be assisted by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, formerly of the First Methodist church, but now stationed at Passaic. Several of the deceased's favorite hymns will be rendered by Senator William N. Runyon, a close friend of the family for many years, and a delegation from Lydia Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, to which Mrs. Warnock belonged, will be in attendance. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

The death of Mrs. Warnock came as a distinct shock to her hundreds of friends but brought the end of a long and tedious illness which commenced in March, 1916. At that time she suffered a paralytic stroke which threatened to terminate fatally for several weeks after. Eventually she recovered partially, so much so that she was aboue to get about the house and occasionally enjoy an automobile ride but at no time did she regain the full use of her limbs. Through all this ordeal she made no complaint and it was a great comfort to her family and friends to note the Spartan-like courage and cheerfulness she maintained even when a second stroke came five weeks ago yesterday. This rendered her absolutely helpless but she retained consciousness almost until the final summons came. She passed away at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, while her immediate relatives were at her bedside, it having been seen by the physician that the end was not far away.

Mrs. Warnock was born at Cornwall, N. Y., near West Point, in 1871. Her girlhood was spent in that town but by the time she reached a mature age, her family removed to Englewood. She came from that city to Plainfield in 1896 and had made her home in either the city or borough ever since, sixteen years of the time being spent on Craig place.

Mrs. Warnock was possessed of unusual business ability and her help and advice had much to do with the building up of the extensive confectionery and bakery establishment which her husband conducted on West Front street for many years. This he disposed of in 1916, since which time he has been manager for the Zeek company's down town store. Although she had hosts of acquaintances, Mrs. Warnock was devoted to her home affairs, taking little or not part in social events beyond those of the First Methodist church and Lydia Chapter, of which she had been a member for a long time. She was an ideal wife and mother, a true friend to those who knew her best and always possessed of a smile and cheerful word for her acquaintances. Her death at so untimely an age terminated a bright and useful life and removed from the community a woman beloved and respected by all.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Warnock is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William C. Begg, of Mountain View terrace, Dunellen, and Miss Anna W. Warnock, residing at the parental home; a grandson, Wallace Begg, two months old. Mrs. Warnock's mother, Mrs. M. A. Furman, of Craig place, also survives her, together with two sisters, Mrs. Vincent W. Nash, Jr., of Martine avenue, and Mrs. S. H. Lawrence, of Brooklyn.

WILLIAM EDMUNDSON.

The funeral of William Edmundson, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Edmundson, of West Fourth street, who died last Saturday after a brief illness, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Father Holsters and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following boys acting as pall-bearers, William Boland, Edwin Mottley, Charles Kling, Cornelius Regan, Richard Tobin and Edsal Case.

The little fellow died from an attack of dysentery and a little sister about two and a half years old fell ill with the same complaint at the same time. The latter was in a precarious condition for a day or two but has since recovered. It was rumored in the neighborhood that the illness of the two children resulted from their eating green grapes but this could not be verified.

MRS. JAMES S. BELLIS.

A number of relatives and friends from this city went to Flemington, Wednesday, for the purpose of attending the interment service for Mrs. James S. Bellis, a former well known Plainfield resident, who died Sunday night at her home in Jenkintown, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. Burial was made in the family plot in the Flemington cemetery, although the formal service was held at Jenkintown.

Mrs. Bellis was a native of Hunterdon county, but had made her home in Plainfield or North Plainfield for a long time, coming here shortly after her marriage. The family resided for a number of years on Vine street, the borough, but at the time of their removal to Jenkintown, ten years ago, occupied an apartment in the Manning building on West Front street.

Mr. Bellis, who is a blacksmith by trade, was employed for many years by the New Jersey Central but resigned his position to conduct a hotel at Jenkintown, which was bequeathed him by a relative. Members of the family, however, made frequent trips to Plainfield to keep in touch with friends and acquaintances.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Bellis is survived by two sons, Willard Bellis, a coppersmith, whose home is on East Fifth street, this city, and Edwin Bellis, of Jenkintown. The last named was employed for some time as drug clerk by the late A. D. Mallinson and later held a responsible position with a New York bank. At the present time he is a member of the Pennsylvania Railroad's freight soliciting force, occupying offices in Philadelphia.

LEO PHILLIPS.

The funeral of Leo Phillips, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Phillips, whose death occurred at the Phillips homestead in Washington Valley, Monday morning, was held in St. Joseph's church, the borough, Wednesday morning. Rev. Father P. J. Hart offered the requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends. Interment was in the family plot in Cavalry cemetery, Brooklyn, Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Phillips was born at the homestead and lived there all his life. He had been in poor health from the time he was a boy and in recent years had been an invalid. His father was the well known Edwin Phillips, who under the stage name of "Edwin Varney" was a leading figure in American dramatic for nearly half a century. Most of his theatrical career was devoted to the support of Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Rivals." His death occurred at the Washington Valley home at the west end of Watchung a few years ago.

Leo Phillips is surived by five sisters and three brothers. The brothers are: Henry S. Phillips, of Duer street, the borough; Lieutenant Arthur R. Phillips, of George street, this city, now in service overseas, and Gilbert P. Phillips, of Fanwood.

SARAH M. MILLWATER.

Sarah M. Millwater, the three-year-old daughter of Philip H. and Edna M. Millwater, died yesterday. The funeral will be held at the parents' home at 735 South avenue, this afternoon, at 2 o'clock and will be conducted by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, ofr the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

President's Action May Bulk Proposed Trolley Fare Plan

President Wilson is opposed to taking over the street railway systems of the country, for the purposes of fare fixing, according to reports current this week. Consequently it is considered improbable that he will heed the appeal of the traction companies that he take upon himself the authority and duty of raising fares —at this time anyhow. The President is reported as believing that local and State remedies should be exhausted before the Executive should be asked to intervene.

The question is not formally before the President as yet. The War Labor Board, headed by former President Taft and Frank P. Walsh, which recently heard argument by the attorneys for the traction companies on the power of the President to take over local lines in war time, decided that a case for federal intervention had been established, and voted to present a recommendation to the President. This recommendation, in substance, would be that, in order to equalize prospective increases in wages, the Federal Government, through an administrator to be named by the President, should raise the rates of fare in proportion as increased wages and other war-time requirements demanded additional revenue. That was the argument put up by the street car companies, and it was indorsed by the attorneys representing the employes. They joined with the company in asking the government to increase fares so as to meet wage demands.

Both the employers and the employes united in the contention that the war powers vested in the President under the constitution and by recurring legislative grants authorized the President to intervene, to name a federal street car administrator and to fix rates for the duration of the war.

The recommendation was to have gone to the President this week. However, it has not yet been forwarded. Information about it is refused at the War Labor Board. The only statement vouchsafe is that "nothing can be said about it at this time." At the White House it is declared that nothing has been received bearing on the subject. It is likely there has been informal communication between the President and the board, and this leads to a belief that the board has been acquainted with the President's feelings and had taken time to reflect.

There is, of course, no authoritative version of the President's opinion. This probably will be reserved for the answer that the President will make to the labor board, but those who are interested in the problem declare that Mr. Wilson informally takes the attitude that street car fares are essentially a local issue, to be settled by the local and State authorities, and that so long as instrumentalities such as utility boards exist, for the avowed purpose of handling such cases on their merits, it would be an unjustifiable and an unnecessary denial of local self government for the Washington authorities to attempt to step in, even conceding that such power is lodged in the President.

This amounts to saying that in the case of the Public Service Railway Company of New Jersey, the question whether it shall charge increased fares is for the determination of the State Utilities Board which has been taking testimony on the company's application for a raise.

There are two classes of cases, as to revenue and increased fares, before the War Labor Board. The first class includes companies such as the Public Service, which operate in territories where the are utility boards that have control over fares. The second class comprises cities such as Cleveland and Detroit, which, as municipalities, have absolute control over their traction companies, under home rule clauses in their charters, and States which have no utility boards.

If the President follows his reported disposition the companies in each class will be left to their local remedies. This is highly unsatisfactory to the companies, because it is asserted for them that in these circumstances they are made the victims of local politics. It is complained that local authorities have been tardy in deciding rate cases, because they feared to take the responsibility and to face the political consequences that might follow in the wake of their decision. Therefore, the companies contend, the only way and the most expeditious way to preserve the wartime efficiency of the roads, is to have the Federal Government step in with a uniform adjustment.

On this phase of the issue it is said the President takes the view that the local authorities must not be permitted either to abdicate their authority or o evade their reponsibility, and that he does not purpose to encourage the tendency to pass the burden on to him.

In the recent hearing before the Labor Board President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Company, speaking for all the companies, prophesied that unless the Federal Government imposed increased fares along with increased wages, the companies would be driven into the hands of receivers.

OFF TO ATLANTIC CITY.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hand, of Watchung avenue, left Wednesday for Atlantic City, where they propose to remain until the first week in September. Mr. Hand will return to Plainfield for the first few days in August to attend to some business matters.

Trolley Men Ask Sixty Cents An Hour

Members of the Brotherhood of Street Railway and Railroad Workers New Jersey have increased their wage demand on the Public Service Railway Company from forty-five to sixty cents an hour, and from sixty cents to ninety cents an hour for overtime. The new schedule is reported to have been filed with the War Labor Board at Washington and will be considered by President Wilson in determining what course is to be pursued in adjusting wages controversies between street railways and their employes throughout the country.

The adoption of the new demands by the executive committe was announced this week by William Wepner, president of the brotherhood. It is a complete change in the plan of action determined upon by himself and Henry Carless, counsel to the organization, before the War Labor oBard in Washington last Tuesday. Mr. Carless at that time obtained permission to amend his wage increase petition, but, when he learned that President Thomas N. McCarter and other representatives of the Public Service might deem any change in the demands sufficient ground for withdrawing from the agreement to the arbitration of the board, it was decided to allow the scale presented at the time of the trolley strike to stand.

The advance in the demands puts the Public Service men on a par with the demands of other trolley men now before the War Labor Board. Mr. Wepner said the change was telegraphed to Washington immediately upon its adoption by the committee.

The committee decided to extend a formal invitation to the women conductors and shop and car house employes of the Public Service to join the organization, and it is hoped within a short time to have practically every operating employe of the company affiliated. A design for a button to be worn by all the members of the brotherhood has been adopted and it is expected that these will be ready for distribution this week.

Formal decision to affiliate with the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Trolley Employes, the Essex Trades Council and the State Federation of Labor was reached following brief addresses by P. T. O'Brien, vice president of the Amalgamated, and Henry F. Hilfers, secretary of the trades council.

Action on the recent discharge by the company of men affiliated with the brotherhood will be delayed until after meetings have been held by the locals at the various car houses at which permanent officers and members of the executive committee will be chosen.

After the division locals complete this work the present temporary executive committee will disband and the new committee will take over the management of the organization. Representations to the company on the situation created by the dismissals of men is expected to follow immediately.

At Friday night's meeting there were assertions that the company had made offers to refund to members of the brotherhood their dollar initiation fee if they would quit the organization, and it was also stated that "Loyalty League" and "Transportation Clubs" are being formed in some of the car houses with the company's sanction among men who did not join in the wage increase fight.

The men in the Camden division have affiliated with the Philadelphia brotherhood, which is not connected with the Amalgamated.

American "Jackies" In Need of Books

Libraries are maintained on all craft belonging to the navy, including submarines, submarine chasers, transports, receiving ships and warships. On the warships the chaplain has supevision of the libraries. From the U. S. S. Iowa comes the following:

"Do you ask if the boys appreciate the books from the library? There would be no question in your mind if you had the privilege some afternoon of standing on our berth deck shortly after 'knock off.' They come from all parts of the ship. They read everything, from biography and science to the technical books of trade, from the textbooks of college to the latest popular fiction, and they are at it all the time.

"Anywhere, after working hours, you can find men perched near any light plugging away the lonely hours with a fascinating novel of adventure. Nearly every man not standing a watch can be found poring over a book somewhere on the decks."

Five females are classed as moderately advanced, eight as far advanced and twenty as pre-tubercular. One hundred and eight of the pateints present on June 1 were males tnd sixty-six females.

The local boards throughout the State are to notify him by wire, no later than July 15, the number of volunteers of each type of men they have secured. Volunteers for this service shall not be released to the Navy or Marine Corps or to withdraw their application prior to August 1.

Following are the types of men desired: Auto repairmen, axmen, blacksmiths, boatmen, bridge carpenters, cabinet makers, caulkers, concrete foremen, concrete workers, construction foremen, cooks, draftsmen, electricians, gas engine men, stationary enginemen, farriers, horseshoers, lithographers, machinists, buglers, photographers, plumbers, powdermen, quarrymen, riggers, saddlers, shoemakers, surveyors, tailors, teamsters, telephone operators, timbermen and typographers.

National Party to Have A Congress Candidate

The recently organized National party is planning to run a man for Congress in the Fifth district at the coming fall elections, it was learned yesteday at the same time A. H. Hopkins, of Morristown, announced that Dr. Grafton E. Dey, of Collinswood had been offered the backing of the party in his fight for U. S. Senator. The South Jersey man has already acceped the prohibition nomination.

Just whom the Nationals will select to pit against the Democratic and Republican nominees is hard to say, although rumor has it that none other than Hopkins would be glad to take upon himself the burden of a campaign. The party does not hold any primary election but nominates by petition.

Besides backing a candidate for the Senate and placing a man in the field for Fifth District Congressional honors, it is planned to place a man in the Eighth District. A committee will likely be chosen within a short time to pick the candidates to make the run in both districts.

BUILDING PERMITS GRANTED BY INSPECTOR DOANE.

Another permit has been granted Emile Beys, of Leland avenue, for the erection of a small house on Columbia avenue, costing $1,800. Mr. Beys will do the work himself.

Crops In Jersey Reflects Weather

Cool, wet weather and a poor stand in some sections of the State are responsible for the low conditions of corn, says the monthly crop report of the Bureau of Statistics and Inspection, of the State Department of Agriculture, issued at Trenton this week. Hail and rain storms during June did some local damage throughout the State, and in some sections considerable blight has appeared on apple and pear trees. The June drop is responsible for the lowered condition of apples and peaches, the report continues, and white potato condition, especially in the Southern counties, is below normal. The condition of the tomato crop is good, it is reported, and indications are that the acreage of late tomatoes has been increased 20 per cent., most of which has been in the Southern counties.

During the middle of June the seventeen-year locust appeared over a small area along the coast in Monmouth county. Brood ten of this insect is due in fourteen counties of the State next year. The Agricultural Department will issue detailed information concerning this brood next month.

The forecast of July 1 of this year shows that there will be 2,700 less bushels of wheat grown in New Jersey this year than in 1917, the total estimate being 2,656,000 bushels. An escrease of 26,000, bushels of rye is forecasted; while the total bushels of oats forecasted for 1918 is 2,366,000, just 158,000 more bushels than in 1917. A falling off of 880,000 bushels of corn is expected, it being estimated that New Jersey will produce but 11,000,000 bushels this years. An increase of 18,000 bushels of hay is expected, while a decrease of 976,000 bushels of white potatoes is being looked forward to, there being an estimate that 9,288,000 bushels of white potatoes will be produced in the State this year.

The condition July 1, forecasts the production of 2,529,000 bushels of apples, 816,000 bushels of peaches, and 670,000 bushels of pears. The egg production for June in commercial plants was but forty-four per cent. One hundred per cent. equals one egg a day a hen during the period reported for.

Trolley Car and Autos In a Crash

In the rush of traffic which followed the departure of the audience at Madam Hope's lecture in Hartridge Auditorium, Tuesday night, a trolley car-automobile crash occurred which caused considerable excitement and blocked Arlington avenue for some time. Two machines were damaged but no one was injured.

Arlington trolley No. 778, in charge of Motorman E. H. Baker and Conductor J. Hahn, was bound in town just as the numerous automobiles began to pick up their passengers following the lecture. A machine owned by former Mayor William L. Saunders, of the borough, in charge of Edwin James, the driver, started across the street as the trolley reached the spot and a crash occurred. The Saunders car was jammed against another one standing near the curb and belonging to C. B. Wigton, of Watchung avenue, but unoccupied. All three vehicles were wedged together and it required considerable maneuvering to get them separated.

The trolley car escaped damage but both automobiles were more or less smashed up. The blame for the crash was disputed by both sides.

Final Decree Rules Out All But One Local Firm In Sharing Exner Money

A final decree in the long drawn-out litigation between creditors of the Paul J. Exner Company and the Plainfield Board of Education was handed down this week by Vice Chancellor Stevenson in Chancery chambers at Jersey City. Only one Plainfield concern, the Plainfield Trap Rock Company, is allowed its claim out of the $14,099.55 held by the school officials as a balance after the defaulted Exner contract had been completed by John S. Dahl. As a result, there is talk of an appeal, but this was not confirmed by any of the interested lawyers interviewed by a Record man today.

The primary facts in the Exner case are well known to Plainfielders as they followed the failure of the contracting company to complete the big addition to the city high school. The Board of Education found it necessary to turn the work over to John Dahl, and when the latter finished it there remained the sum of $14,099.-555, which technically belonged to the Exner concern. This firm, however, had failed to pay its sub-contractors and material men and liens were filed against the money. The failure occurred in March, 1914, and the matter has since been awaiting the final disposition which came a few days ago.

In a preliminary decree several weeks ago Vice Chancellor Stevenson awarded the Plainfield Board of Education $2,500 as damages against the Exner company for its failure to complete the contract on time and also allowed the following claims amounting in all to $5,033.37:

Legal expenses of School Board, $418.85; architect's fees, $560.00; amount paid the City National Bank, $1,554.52.

The primary suit was brought by the New Jersey Terra Cotta Company against the Board of Education and after the $5,033.37 had been deducted from the $14,099.55, and interest of $1,138.51 added, the complaining firm was allowed its claim out of the balance, the amount being $2,176.87, together with interest of $272.64, counsel fees of $200.00 and taxed costs. The Plainfield Trap Rock Company was allowed its claim of $421.14, interest of $51.18, counsel fees of $100.00 and taxed costs. Beside these, the only claims allowed by the Vice Chancellor are those of the Gypsum Fireproofing Company, $2,344.02; Building Improvement Company, $2,659.93, and H. J. Hoerner & Sons, $2,556.00, with interest, counsel fees and taxed costs in each instance.

Among the local claims not allowed in the final decree are those of the A. M. Griffen Company, the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, Albert Rajotte, E. J. Bebout, Levering & Garrigues Company, Conroy Brothers and G. C. Randolph Company. There are also a numbere of out of town firms not permitted to share in the balance. Plainfield lawyers who appeared in the proceedings in behalf of creditors include: Isaac P. Runyon, Winfield S. Angleman, Carlos C. Gallup, Swackhamer & Bird, Codington & Blatz, Harry C. Runyon and William A. Coddington.

Jenkinson Says Relief Is in Sight

At a conference between State Fuel Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson and a delegation of Plainfield officials and coal dealers, headed by Mayor Leighton Calkins, at Newark, Wednesday afternoon, assurance was given by the State Executive that every effort would be made to speed up coal shipments into this city and thereby relieve the situation that has rapidly been getting serious.

Beside Mayor Calkins, those in the Plainfield party included Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, Marion S. Ackerman and Chauncey L. Hight, of the Public Affairs Committee, and Arthur T. Goodenough and Fred J. Harris, representing the coal dealers.

Mr. Jenkinson said he appreciated that Plainfield had not been receiving a sufficient quantity of coal but asserted that the delinquency was due to the national administration diverting shipments to New England. These, he said, were now about completed and New Jersey, in common with the other Middle Atlantic States, is now being centered upon for hurry up orders. He also explained that the national and state administrations are meeting with numerous difficulties ni living up to the program mapped out last spring but it had to be strictly adhered to and if one section fell behind there was no direct way of bringing it back to center again. However, Mr. Jenkinson added, he saw that conditions were nas as they should be in Plainfield and he would make it a personal matter to see that of the new shipments now coming this way, the city would be given a generous portion in order to let dealers fill their first one-third orders.

Mayor Calkins and former Senator Reed expressed themselves today as being pleased with the manner in which Mr. Jenkinson listened to their statements and the assurances he gave them of possible relief. The Public Affairs Committee, however will keep in close touch with the situation and will consult Mr. Jenkinson again at an early date.

Bullet in Head No Bar to Boy Called to Court

With one eye missing and a bullet buried somewhere inside his head, James Anderson, the sixteen-year-old colored boy shot three times several weeks ago by his companion, Fortunato Sweeney, appeared in the city court this morning in preparation for the trial of his assailant.

The case has been called before Judge Pierce at Elizabeth, this afternoon, and Anderson, only recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, will tell how Sweeney attempted to take his life because he would not run away with him. The first two bullets fired at Anderson flattened against his skull but the other went directly through the right eye and imbedded itself somewhere in behind. The physicians at the hospital took the eye out but were unable to probe for the bullet because of threatened serious consequences.

Sweeney, whose home is on Plainfield avenue, was formerly an inmate of the Jamesburg Reform School, and it is probable that he will be returned to that institution.

Corporal Peck Plans Drive for Army Recruits

Determined to keep up the interest in enlisting and thereby continue the splendid record for local enrollments, Corporal E. D. Peck has arranged for a recruiting drive to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Beginning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, one, and perhaps, two automobiles will leave the postoffice building on Watchung avenue, bound for important corners in sections of the city. The leading machine, decorated with service flags, will carry Sergeant Borders, of Newark, who will sound bugle calls, and also Senator William N. Runyon and Martin A. Korff, announced as the principal speakers. Senator Runyon and Mr. Korff have made military matters a close study and they will tell the young men who gather to hear them just why they should delay no longer but enter the service as soon as possible. Corporal Peck and his assistant officer, Private Harry Derflinger, will distribute circular matter among the audiences to enlighten possible recruits on the merits of the various divisions of the army in need of men.

The stopping places of the recruiting party will include Madison avenue and Front street, West Third and Liberty streets, East Third and Richmond streets, the Italian section in the East Eand and other points to be designated later. In the evening, the members of the party will visit all the local theatres for the purpose of addressing tthe audiences.

Uncle Sam is in need of young men for practically all of his army departments and urges young Americans to enlist now while the opportunities are better than they will be later on. It seems certain that in the very near future the draft age will be changed to include all men between 19 and 45 years, consequently, it is pointed out, the enlisted men will have the advantage in getting promotions and commissions when the conscription is made. Corporal Peck and Private Derflinger are at the postoffice building up to 9 o'clock each night and will gladly give all the information necessary to those desiring to enlist.

First Call For Limited Service Men

An order received by Secretary Freeman, at the local Exemption Board this morning, makes the first call for accepted registrants placed on the limited service list.

The message came from the Adjutant General's office, and instructs Mr. Freeman to pick out four men from the limited class for military police and patrol duty at Syracuse, N. Y. They will entrain on Monday, July 29. Owing to the fact that Mr. Freeman was busy today checking up the fifteen colored men starting out at noon for Camp Dix, he was unable to give out the names of the four men to fill this order.

Some time ago the local Exemption Board designated eighty-nine men to appear at the Evergreen Avenue School next Monday afternoon for physical examination. They are the remainder of the 189 new registrants secured on June 5, as nearly 100 others have applied to the State Board for exemption on industrial or other grounds. Of the eighty-nine scheduled for examination there are now only about seventy left as the others have been entering the naval service since they were placed in Class 1-A.

The Board announced yesterday that these re-classified men had passed the physical test and wert put in 1-A: Bernard J. Kline, Carl E. Johnson, Earl C. Huff, Joseph H. Miner, Edward Conklin and Louis Abramson. Miner has already enlisted in the engineers corps, resigning his position in the city fire department to respond to a government call for volunteers. At the same time he enlisted, three others from Plainfield, also entered the same corps. They are: A. J. Aquado, Clarence D. Tilley and Evad D. Peterson.

The names of Morris Gold, of St. Louis, and Steve Kerehoff, of Caanan, Conn., have been added to the list of seventeen white men from the Plainfield district who are to go to Camp Dix next Thursday morning. These two registered in their home town but as they are working in this city, they are being inducted here at the request of their local boards.

The Citizens' Committee is completing arrangements for a farewell demonstration to be given these nineteen white men next Wednesday night. It will be on the order of the previous affairs, with a dinner and speeches forming the principal part of the program. On Thursday morning the men will parade from Exemption Board headquarters in the Babcock building to the North avenue station headed by a band and city officials. Exclusive of Morris Gold and Steve Kerehoff the men who are to depart next Thursday morning are the following:

James J. McNamee, William C. Ryder, Joseph P. Venezia, Michael Panillo, Michael Nearfine, Charles H. Betzenberger, J. J. Fox, Charles V. Cullen, Dennis O'Sullivan, Frank W. Binsky, Millard K. McAfee, David B. Huston, Sammy Valentine, Fred Burton, Stanley Maczyn, Anthony Russo, James B. Carter and J. J. Hanning.

Hood Property Sold to New Yorker for $100,000

Five Acre Show Place at Stelle and Plainfield Avenues Becomes Property of Harry P. Schedd, Eastern Manager for Marshall Field Co.--Largest Residential Deal Made in Local Realty Annals

Richard Hayden Hood's beautiful residential place at Stelle and Plainfield avenues, considered one of the finest residential properties in Plainfield, was yesterday sold to Harry P. Schedd, of New York city, eastern manager for the Marshall Field dry goods company of Chicago. While those connected with the transaction would give no figure, it is stated by others in a position to know that the purchase price was about $100,000.

Harvey R. Linbarger, of 197 North avenue, conducted the negotiations that led to the deal, which is said to be the largest residential realty transaction that has ever taken place in Plainfield. There have been numerous exchanges of property ownership in the business section that have gone far beyond the $100,000 figure but the investment has always led the way to a new business building or some commercial transaction. Mr. Schedd came to Plainfield on several occasions and on making tours of the city by automobile became impressed with its advantages as a suburban community. He eventually decided to remove here and his determination led to the purchase of the Hood property.

The residence, which has the address of 541 Stelle avenue, is at present occupied by Mr. Hood himself. It is possible that he will not vacate before September 1 and the new owner will take possession about two weeks later. The coming of the latter will make a distinct addition to Plainfield's roster of successful business men with offices in New York, as Mr. Schedd is one of the best known department store and dry goods managers in the country.

The Hood residence was originally built about twenty years ago by Philip V. R. Van Wyck, a relative of former Mayor Van Wyck, of New York. About twelve years ago he sold it to Mr. Hood, a successful contractor, who was also attracted to Plainfield by its high standard of dwellings and general advantages for metropolitan business men. After acquiring the Van Wyck place, Mr. Hood immediately began making improvements. He continued to add new parcels of ground to his original purchase until finally he had the entire block on Plainfield avenue, two hundred and fifty feet on Stelle avenue and three hundred and sixty-four feet at the rear end on Randolph road, extending to Field avenue. One of the purchases included what was known as Stelle's Woods and this was so improved as to make the corner one of the show places of the city. Mr. Hood installed a small lake, innumerable fountains, rare plants and flowers and otherwise beautified the grounds. He is especially fond of roses and had many varieties growing about the place at all times, transplanting them from large green-houses which grew them in great confusion. Through the profuseness of these flowers the property was designated as "The Rose Roses," a name by which it has been familiar to practically all Plainfield.

George W. Fraker, of West Eighth street, who is president of the Carolina Cotton Woolen Mills, was instrumental in bringing Mr. Schedd to Plainfield. He has been a close personal friend of the latter for many years and is himself enthusiastic over Plainfield. Through the Linbarger agency, Mr. Fraker recently purchased the Albert H. Atterbury property at Seventh street and Central avenue and is to occupy the premises shortly. Mr. Atterbury is planning to build a new home on Hillside avenue.

Jersey Central Will Go Ahead With Bay Bridge

Confirmation that the New Jersey Central intends to go ahead with its proposed seven million dollar bridge over Newark Bay, between Elizabethport and Bayonne, was made at the meeting of the State Board of Commerce and Navigation at Trenton, on Tuesday.

On that occasion the State Board gave the railroad the desired permission to erect the structure, subject to the approval of the War Department at Washington, which has the final word in matters of this kind. Officials of the State Board will also appear before army engineers at a meeting to be held in Newark on Monday morning, July 29, at which time the subject of changing the channel line and other matters concerning Newark Bay will be discussed. All are of importance to the construction of the bridge but as the army department has previously gone over the plans and ordered certain changes it is believed that full sanction will be given for the railroad's work.

The erection of a new bridge over Newark Bay has been a dream of the New Jersey Central for many years and the wish of thousands of commuters from Plainfield and points all along the line. Nearly ten years ago, the New Jersey Central directed its chief engineer, the late Joseph O. Osgood, whose home was on Willow avenue, North Plainfield, to prepare plans for an up-to-date structure that would do away with the present wooden span that is alike costly and unsatisfactory. Mr. Osgood was enthusiastic over the proposition and designs he submitted just before his death were highly satisfactory to the railroad officials and subjected to only slight criticism on the part of the Government. The latter about three years ago ordered certain changes to conform with war regulations that Mr. Osgood completed a short time before his death. It is these revised plans that have been considered by the State Board of Commerce and Navigation and accepted and which the War Department will undoubtedly accept at the meeting in Newark.

With the advanced cost of materials and the scarcity of labor the impression has prevailed recently that the Central would not go ahead with the bridge. This doubt was cleared away when the State Board acted on the application Tuesday. The old bridge is inadequate to take care of the tremendous traffic and it has become imperative that the new structure be put in position as soon as possible.

Plans submitted by the railroad provide for a four-track bridge, the steel girders of which will rest upon concrete columns one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. There are to be two draw spans of two hundred feet each. The design of the bridge, it is believed, will be of material assistance to navigation, especially when there is ice in the bay. It is proposed to construct two tracks adjacent to the present structure. Traffic then will be carried over there tracks during the construction of the other two. The new bridge will be considerably higher than the present one and the tracks in Elizabethport have already been raised a portion of the distance in order to conform with the new grade. The present bridge is not only so low that it impedes the flow of ice in the breaking-up after the extreme weather of winter but the pilings have to be renewed at regular intervals, thus keeping a big gang of men at work almost all the time. In addition the structure is not considered any too safe and the uninitiated passenger rides over it with more than a little trepidation.

At the meeting Tuesday, the Board of Commerce reorganized for the year by unanimously re-electing J. Spencer Smith, of Tenafly, president, and Richard C. Jenkinson, of Newark, as vice president.

First of National Service Meetings At the Scott Plant

An enthusiastic gathering of 700 employes of the Walter Scott Company listened with rapt attention to addresses given at a patriotic meeting held in the shop during the noon hour Tuesday.

The principal speakers were Major A. E. Lancaster, one of the first 100,000 British to oppose the Germans in the initial drive into Belgium, and Dr. A. P. Campbell, both of whom have been sent on tour by the National Service section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. In addition to these two men, Rev. Dr. E. Vicar Stevenson, of this city, also spoke, and Mrs. A. J. Laing, who was accompanied by her husband, sang two solos.

The addresses of both Major Lancaster and Dr. Campbell were brief, but the former took occasion to warn the men of the Scott plant not to place any reliance in the word of a Hun. He related several instances to show their treachery and at the same time off-set German propaganda that has been spread among the workmen of the country.

This was the first meeting conducted by the National Service section at the Scott plant, and because of the great enthusiasm manifested by the men, others will probably be held in the near future. This concern is turning out government munitions and the administration realizes that it is highly essential that the expert mechanics be shown in no uncertain manner how much their services and their product are needed for the country's welfare. The speakers who are sent out are men of experience and ability, and their words of advice have always proven highly beneficial.

A special collection for the benefit of the local Red Cross chapter will be taken at St. Mary's church next Sunday morning. Members of St. Mary's auxiliary to the Red Cross will be stationed in the vestibules after each mass and will receive the offe[illegible] from the parishioners.

Colored Selectives Leave for Camp Dix

A contingent of fifteen colored men, fourteen of them from this district and one other inducted for a local board at Buffalo, N. Y., left at noon today for Camp Dix. Their departure on the 12:39 train from the North avenue station was witnessed by a large crowd of relatives and friends who added enthusiastic cheers to the last fond farewells.

Previous to appearing at the station, the selectives assembled at the local draft board office in the Babcock building for final instruction. From there they marched through the streets behind a fife and drum corps and all along the route they were given an ovation.

Last night the contingent of fifteen was entertained by the Citizens' Committee at an affair taking place in the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street. Itb egan at 9 o'clock with the serving of a chicken supper prepared by volunteer colored women, while otheers acted as waitresses. The menu was complete from the first to the last detail and it was plainly apparent to the observers that the boys enjoyed every bit of it. After the last course had been served, John J. Varley, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, began a program of speech making by extending kindly advice to the selectives and afterward introducing speakers of the evening. These included Senator William N. Runyon, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, Rev. Frederick L. Imes, Rev. Arthur D. Jones, Rev. D. Y. Campbell and others. Members of the Mt. Olive church and other volunteers gave vocal and instrumental selections.

Paul Levi Robertson, of Buffalo, N. Y., is the additional man going with today's contingent of fourteen. He registered in Buffalo but has been working in Plainfield and was inducted at the request of the officials in his home town. The fourteen Plainfielders include Joseph Parsons, the well known taxicab driver who enlisted in the Fifteenth Regiment in New York last fall and was afterward discharged because of a slight physical defect. It also includes Fred Vaughn, the organizer and leading member of De Lisle's orchestra, which has played for many social affairs in Plainfield for the past two years. The other twelve colored men leaving today are as follows:

Charles W. Barnes, Herbert S. Vaughn, Luther B. Brinkley, George W. Saunders, Clyde Lovell, Dillon Goddard, Fred J. Dungy, Houston L. Ravis, John W. Gillan, Elijah McIntyre, Willias Harris and Charles H. Carmon.

Harry Kirch, of Somerset street, and Joseph Wherry, of Vine street, have enlisted in the U. S. navy. Mr. George Kirch.

Disorderly House Inmates Lodged in County Jail

Frank Winston, colored, proprietor of a disorderly house at 815 Richmond street, was this morning taken to the county jail to serve a sentence of sixty days imposed by Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday. He was given his choice of serving the time or paying a twenty-dollar fine, but though he made several attempts to get the money from friends, he was finally forced to take a vacation at the expense of the county.

With Winston, when he was escorted to Elizabeth, were also Estelle Stuart, of Bloomfield; Florence Jackson and Grace Washington, of Newark, who will spend twenty days in jail, not being able to pay fines of ten dollars each. They were caught in the raid on Winston's place as were also Walter Carr, Harry White, Dilion Goddard and Arnold Fee. Sentence was suspended on Fee but the others paid fines of ten dollars each.

The raid was made early Wednesday night by Sergeants Flynn and O'Keefe and Patrolman Muir.

Frank Symons, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Stuart Symons, of Watchung avenue, who is stationed at Fort Zachary Taylor, has been commissioned a first lieutenant.

Children of Israel To Raise Flag at Synagogue Sunday

Arrangements have been completed for the raising of a service flag, containing twenty-five stars, at the New street synagogue at 6:30 on Sunday next. The committee in charge has succeeded in procuring quite a number of speakers. Mayor Calkins will make a patriotic address. Among others will be Rev. J. Y. Broek, ex-Senator James E. Martine, Judge DeMeza and several other city officials.

The Liberty Band has been engaged to play National anthems, appropriate to the occasion. The committee has also been successful in procuring Rabbi S. Pessin, of Springfield, Mass., who comes highly recommended as a Jewish scholar and noted orator, who is about to be engaged by the local congregation, and will address the gathering. A large crowd is expected and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

FIREMEN TRANSFERRED.

Fireman William Jaeger, who has been stationed at No. 3 house on West Fourth street for the past six years, was today transferred to headquarters. His place in the West End is to be taken by Fireman Jens Claasseen, who was stationed at No. 3 for a long time but who for the past three years has been at headquarters. No reason has been assigned for the change.

MADE FIRST LIEUTENANT.

Walter H. Freeman, chief clerk of the Plainfield Exemption Board, received word yesterday that his son, Stuart F. Freeman, of the field artillery, has been commissioned a first lieutenant. He is stationed at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky. Mr. Freeman also has two other sons in the service.

Public Service to Withhold Appeal

It is considered certain that the Public Service Railway Company will accept the verdict of the Public Utilities Commission limiting the fare increase to a cent raise in transfers, and that President Thomas N. McCarter will write such acceptance before July 24. The failure of the directors of the company to authorize any certiorari proceedings at the meeting Tuesday confirms this view.

The company sought much more generous treatment. The way is still open for an appeal to the Supreme Court, but will probably not be taken. Accepting the verdict for the present, the Public Service is expected to institute proceedings looking to a complete readjustment of rates immediately on the conclusion of the war. Acceptance of the fare decision carries with it an agreement to submit a zoning plan before January 1, 1919, and adoption of this plan would bring about a readjustment without the expense of an appraisal of the property, which would amount to $150,000.

Two Plainfielders Promoted to Corporal

Rapid promotion has come to Harry Goeller, of New street, who went out of Plainfield with a selective contingent on July 5. This week he was made corporal in the 3d Company, Fifth Regiment Engineers, stationed at Camp Humphrey, Va.

Corporal Goeller, who is the son of the late William Goeller, employed for many years at the Potter Pres Works, is a mason by trade and has been assigned to this class of work in the engineering department. Several Plainfield boys are in the same company with him.

Another Plainfielder to be promoted to the rank of corporal this week is Benjamin Harris, of 726 Clinton avenue, who has been stationed at Camp Dix for the past five months. He was a member of the Scout Masters' Association when selected for service and his knowledge of military tactics gained through this association qualified him for advancement. He was originally a member of the 307th Field Artillery, but when that contingent went overseas was transferred to a brigade headquarters company for special drill work. Corporal Harris is a brother to Albert Harris, the well-known local insurance man.

Miss Mary Kennedy, of West Fourth street, will leave tomorrow for New Haven, Conn., to spend a two weeks' vacation with relatives.

Death Again Enters The Edmundson Home

For the second time within two weeks, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Edmundson, of 840 West Fourth street, Wednesday noon, and claimed their seven-month old daughter, Mary. The child was a victim of a summer complaint, which on Saturday, July 6, caused the demise of her four-year-old brother, William. A third child in the family, Catherine, aged two and a half years, is ill at the present time from the same cause and on several occasions has been in a critical condition.

It was stated at the time that William died that the complaint had resulted from the children eating green grapes. The Drs. Hedges and Dr. William H. Anthony, who were called into the case, could find no verification. Their diagnosis fixed the trouble as a form of summer complaint similar to dysentery. The physicians are exerting every effort to save the third and only child but at the present time it is not yet out of danger.

The funeral of little Mary will take place this afternoon at the parents' home, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Final Decree Rules Out All But One Local Firm In Sharing Exner Money

A final decree in the long drawn-out litigation between creditors of the Paul J. Exner Company and the Plainfield Board of Education was handed down this week by Vice Chancellor Stevenson in Chancery chambers at Jersey City. Only one Plainfield concern, the Plainfield Trap Rock Company, is allowed its claim out of the $14,099.55 held by the school officials as a balance after the defaulted Exner contract had been completed by John S. Dahl. As a result, there is talk of an appeal, but this was not confirmed by any of the interested lawyers interviewed by a Record man today.

The primary facts in the Exner case are well known to Plainfielders as they followed the failure of the contracting company to complete the big addition to the city high school. The Board of Education found it necessary to turn the work over to John Dahl, and when the latter finished it there remained the sum of $14,099.555, which technically belonged to the Exner concern. This firm, however, had failed to pay its sub-contractors and material men and liens were filed against the money. The failure occurred in March, 1914, and the matter has since been awaiting the final disposition which came a few days ago.

In a preliminary decree several weeks ago Vice Chancellor Stevenson awarded the Plainfield Board of Education $2,500 as damages against the Exner company for its failure to complete the contract on time and also allowed the following claims amounting in all to $5,033.37:

Legal expenses of School Board, $418.85; architect's fees, $560.00; amount paid the City National Bank, $1,554.52.

The primary suit was brought by the New Jersey Terra Cotta Company against the Board of Education and after the $5,033.37 had been deducted from the $14,099.55, and interest of $1,138.51 added, the complaining firm was allowed its claim out of the balance, the amount being $2,176.87, together with interest of $272.64, counsel fees of $200.00 and taxed costs. The Plainfield Trap Rock Company was allowed its claim of $421.14, interest of $51.18, counsel fees of $100.00 and taxed costs. Beside these, the only claims allowed by the Vice Chancellor are those of the Gypsum Fireproofing Company, $2,344.02; Building Improvement Company, $2,659.93, and H. J. Hoerner & Sons, $2,556.00, with interest, counsel fees and taxed costs in each instance.

Among the local claims not allowed in the final decree are those of the A. M. Griffen Company, the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, Albert Rajotte, E. J. Bebout, Levering & Garrigues Company, Conroy Brothers and C. C. Randolph Company. There are also a numbere of out of town firms not permitted to share in the balance. Plainfield lawyers who appeared in the proceedings in behalf of creditors include: Isaac P. Runyon, Winfield S. Angleman, Carlos C. Gallup, Swackhamer & Bird, Codington & Blatz, Harry C. Runyon and William A. Coddington.

Jenkinson Says Relief Is in Sight

At a conference between State Fuel Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson and a delegation of Plainfield officials and coal dealers, headed by Mayor Leighton Calkins, at Newark, Wednesday afternoon, assurance was given by the State Executive that every effort would be made to speed up coal shipments into this city and thereby relieve the situation that has rapidly been getting serious.

Beside Mayor Calkins, those in the Plainfield party included Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, Marion S. Ackerman and Chauncey L. Hight, of the Public Affairs Committee, and Arthur T. Goodenough and Fred J. Harris, representing the coal dealers.

Mr. Jenkinson said he appreciated that Plainfield had not been receiving a sufficient quantity of coal but asserted that the delinquency was due to the national administration diverting shipments to New England. These, he said, were now about completed and New Jersey, in common with the other Middle Atlantic States, is now being centered upon for hurry up orders. He also explained that the national and state administrations are meeting with numerous difficulties ni living up to the program mapped out last spring but it had to be strictly adhered to and if one section fell behind there was no direct way of bringing it back to center again. However, Mr. Jenkinson added, he saw that conditions were nas as they should be in Plainfield and he would make it a personal matter to see that of the new shipments now coming this way, the city would be given a generous portion in order to let dealers fill their first one-third orders.

Mayor Calkins and former Senator Reed expressed themselves today as being pleased with the manner in which Mr. Jenkinson listened to their statements and the assurances he gave them of possible relief. The Public Affairs Committee, however, will keep in close touch with the situation and will consult Mr. Jenkinson again at an early date.

Bullet in Head No Bar to Boy Called to Court

With one eye missing and a bullet buried somewhere inside his head, James Anderson, the sixteen-year-old colored boy shot three times several weeks ago by his companion, Fortunato Sweeney, appeared in the city court this morning in preparation for the trial of his assailant.

The case has been called before Judge Pierce at Elizabeth, this afternoon, and Anderson, only recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, will tell how Sweeney attempted to take his life because he would not run away with him. The first two bullets fired at Anderson flattened against his skull but the other went directly through the right eye and imbedded itself somewhere in behind. The physicians at the hospital took the eye out but were unable to probe for the bullet because of threatened serious consequences.

Sweeney, whose home is on Plainfield avenue, was formerly an inmate of the Jamesburg Reform School, and it is probable that he will be returned to that institution.

Corporal Peck Plans Drive for Army Recruits

Determined to keep up the interest in enlisting and thereby continue the splendid record for local enrollments, Corporal E. D. Peck has arranged for a recruiting drive to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Beginning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, one, and perhaps, two automobiles will leave the postoffice building on Watchung avenue, bound for important corners in sections of the city. The leading machine, decorated with service flags, will carry Sergeant Borders, of Newark, who will sound bugle calls, and also Senator William N. Runyon and Martin A. Korff, announced as the principal speakers. Senator Runyon and Mr. Korff have made military matters a close study and they will tell the young men who gather to hear them just why they should delay no longer but enter the service as soon as possible. Corporal Peck and his assistant officer, Private Harry Derflinger, will distribute circular matter among the audiences to enlighten possible recruits on the merits of the various divisions of the army in need of men.

The stopping places of the recruiting party will include Madison avenue and Front street, West Third and Liberty streets, East Third and Richmond streets, the Italian section in the East Eand, and other points to be designated later. In the evening, the members of the party will visit all the local theatres for the purpose of addressing tthe audiences.

Uncle Sam is in need of young men for practically all of his army departments and urges young Americans to enlist now while the opportunities are better than they will be later on. It seems certain that in the very near future the draft age will be changed to include all men between 19 and 45 years, consequently, it is pointed out, the enlisted men will have the advantage in getting promotions and commissions when the conscription is made. Corporal Peck and Private Derflinger are at the postoffice building up to 9 o'clock each night and will gladly give all the information necessary to those desiring to enlist.

First Call For Limited Service Men

An order received by Secretary Freeman, at the local Exemption Board this morning, makes the first call for accepted registrants placed on the limited service list.

The message came from the Adjutant General's office, and instructs Mr. Freeman to pick out four men from the limited class for military police and patrol duty at Syracuse, N. Y. They will entrain on Monday, July 29. Owing to the fact that Mr. Freeman was busy today checking up the fifteen colored men starting out at noon for Camp Dix, he was unable to give out the names of the four men to fill this order.

Some time ago the local Exemption Board designated eighty-nine men to appear at the Evergreen Avenue School next Monday afternoon for physical examination. They are the remainder of the 189 new registrants secured on June 5, as nearly 100 others have applied to the State Board for exemption on industrial or other grounds. Of the eighty-nine scheduled for examination there are now only about seventy left as the others have been entering the naval service since they were placed in Class 1-A.

The Board announced yesterday that these re-classified men had passed the physical test and wert put in 1-A: Bernard J. Kline, Carl E. Johnson, Earl C. Huff, Joseph H. Miner, Edward Conklin and Louis Abramson. Miner has already enlisted in the engineers corps, resigning his position in the city fire department to respond to a government call for volunteers. At the same time he enlisted, three others from Plainfield, also entered the same corps. They are: A. J. Aquado, Clarence D. Tilley and Evad D. Peterson.

The names of Morris Gold, of St. Louis, and Steve Kerehoff, of Canaan, Conn., have been added to the list of seventeen white men from the Plainfield district who are to go to Camp Dix next Thursday morning. These two registered in their home town but as they are working in this city, they are being inducted here at the request of their local boards.

The Citizens' Committee is completing arrangements for a farewell demonstration to be given these nineteen white men next Wednesday night. It will be on the order of the previous affairs, with a dinner and speeches forming the principal part of the program. On Thursday morning the men will parade from Exemption Board headquarters in the Babcock building to the North avenue station headed by a band and city officials. Exclusive of Morris Gold and Steve Kerehoff the men who are to depart next Thursday morning are the following:

Hood Property Sold to New Yorker for $100,000

Five Acre Show Place at Stelle and Plainfield Avenues Becomes Property of Harry P. Schedd, Eastern Manager for Marshall Field Co.--Largest Residential Deal Made in Local Realty Annals

Richard Hayden Hood's beautiful residential place at Stelle and Plainfield avenues, considered one of the finest residential properties in Plainfield, was yesterday sold to Harry P. Schedd, of New York city, eastern manager for the Marshall Field dry goods company of Chicago. While those connected with the transaction would give no figure, it is stated by others in a position to know that the purchase price was about $100,000.

Harvey R. Linbarger, of 197 North avenue, conducted the negotiations that led to the deal, which is said to be the largest residential realty transaction that has ever taken place in Plainfield. There have been numerous exchanges of property ownership in the business section that have gone far beyond the $100,000 figure but the investment has always led the way to a new business building or some commercial transaction. Mr. Schedd came to Plainfield on several occasions and on making tours of the city by automobile became impressed with its advantages as a suburban community. He eventually decided to remove here and his determination led to the purchase of the Hood property.

The residence, which has the address of 541 Stelle avenue, is at present occupied by Mr. Hood himself. It is possible that he will not vacate before September 1 and the new owner will take possession about two weeks later. The coming of the latter will make a distinct addition to Plainfield's roster of successful business men with offices in New York, as Mr. Schedd is one of the best known department store and dry goods managers in the country.

The Hood residence was originally built about twenty years ago by Philip V. R. Van Wyck, a relative of former Mayor Van Wyck, of New York. About twelve years ago he sold it to Mr. Hood, a successful contractor, who was also attracted to Plainfield by its high standard of dwellings and general advantages for metropolitan business men. After acquiring the Van Wyck place, Mr. Hood immediately began making improvements. He continued to add new parcels of ground to his original purchase until finally he had the entire block on Plainfield avenue, two hundred and fifty feet on Stelle avenue and three hundred and sixty-four feet at the rear end on Randolph road, extending to Field avenue. One of the purchases included what was known as Stelle's Woods and this was so improved as to make the corner one of the show places of the city. Mr. Hood installed a small lake, innumerable fountains, rare plants and flowers and otherwise beautified the grounds. He is especially fond of roses and had many varieties growing about the place at all times, transplanting them from large green-houses which grew them in great confusion. Through the profuseness of these flowers the property was designated as "The Red Roses," a name by which it has been familiar to practically all Plainfield.

George W. Fraker, of West Eighth street, who is president of the Carolina Cotton Woolen Mills, was instrumental in bringing Mr. Schedd to Plainfield. He has been a close personal friend of the latter for many years and is himself enthusiastic over Plainfield. Through the Linbarger agency, Mr. Fraker recently purchased the Albert H. Atterbury property at Seventh street and Central avenue and is to occupy the premises shortly. Mr. Atterbury is planning to build a new home on Hillside avenue.

Jersey Central Will Go Ahead With Bay Bridge

Confirmation that the New Jersey Central intends to go ahead with its proposed seven million dollar bridge over Newark Bay, between Elizabethport and Bayonne, was made at the meeting of the State Board of Commerce and Navigation at Trenton, on Tuesday.

On that occasion the State Board gave the railroad the desired permission to erect the structure, subject to the approval of the War Department at Washington, which has the final word in matters of this kind. Officials of the State Board will also appear before army engineers at a meeting to be held in Newark on Monday morning, July 29, at which time the subject of changing the channel line and other matters concerning Newark Bay will be discussed. All are of importance to the construction of the bridge but as the army department has previously gone over the plans and ordered certain changes it is believed that full sanction will be given for the railroad's work.

The erection of a new bridge over Newark Bay has been a dream of the New Jersey Central for many years and the wish of thousands of commuters from Plainfield and points all along the line. Nearly ten years ago, the New Jersey Central directed its chief engineer, the late Joseph O. Osgood, whose home was on Willow avenue, North Plainfield, to prepare plans for an up-to-date structure that would do away with the present wooden span that is alike costly and unsatisfactory. Mr. Osgood was enthusiastic over the proposition and designs he submitted just before his death were highly satisfactory to the railroad officials and subjected to only slight criticism on the part of the Government. The latter about three years ago ordered certain changes to conform with war regulations that Mr. Osgood completed a short time before his death. It is these revised plans that have been considered by the State Board of Commerce and Navigation and accepted and which the War Department will undoubtedly accept at the meeting in Newark.

With the advanced cost of materials and the scarcity of labor the impression has prevailed recently that the Central would not go ahead with the bridge. This doubt was cleared away when the State Board acted on the application Tuesday. The old bridge is inadequate to take care of the tremendous traffic and it has become imperative that the new structure be put in position as soon as possible.

Plans submitted by the railroad provide for a four-track bridge, the steel girders of which will rest upon concrete columns one hundred and twenty-five feet apart. There are to be two draw spans of two hundred feet each. The design of the bridge, it is believed, will be of material assistance to navigation, especially when there is ice in the bay. It is proposed to construct two tracks adjacent to the present structure. Traffic then will be carried over there tracks during the construction of the other two. The new bridge will be considerably higher than the present one and the tracks in Elizabethport have already been raised a portion of the distance in order to conform with the new grade. The present bridge is not only so low that it impedes the flow of ice in the breaking-up after the extreme weather of winter but the pilings have to be renewed at regular intervals, thus keeping a big gang of men at work almost all the time. In addition the structure is not considered any too safe and the uninitiated passenger rides over it with more than a little trepidation.

At the meeting Tuesday, the Board of Commerce reorganized for the year by unanimously re-electing J. Spencer Smith, of Tenafly, president, and Richard C. Jenkinson, of Newark, as vice president.

First of National Service Meetings At the Scott Plant

An enthusiastic gathering of 700 employes of the Walter Scott Company listened with rapt attention to addresses given at a patriotic meeting held in the shop during the noon hour Tuesday.

The principal speakers were Major A. E. Lancaster, one of the first 100,000 British to oppose the Germans in the initial drive into Belgium, and Dr. A. P. Campbell, both of whom have been sent on tour by the National Service section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. In addition to these two men, Rev. Dr. E. Vicar Stevenson, of this city, also spoke, and Mrs. A. J. Laing, who was accompanied by her husband, sang two solos.

The addresses of both Major Lancaster and Dr. Campbell were brief, but the former took occasion to warn the men of the Scott plant not to place any reliance in the word of a Hun. He related several instances to show their treachery and at the same time off-set German propaganda that has been spread among the workmen of the country.

This was the first meeting conducted by the National Service section at the Scott plant, and because of the great enthusiasm manifested by the men, others will probably be held in the near future. This concern is turning out government munitions and the administration realizes that it is highly essential that the expert mechanics be shown in no uncertain manner how much their services and their product are needed for the country's welfare. The speakers who are sent out are men of experience and ability, and their words of advice have always proven highly beneficial.

PASTOR LEAVES FOR OHIO.

Rev. A. F. Desterhaft, who has been pastor of the Christian and Missionary Alliance church, Wednesday left for Mansfield, O., where he will spend a few weeks before going to South China to engage in mission work.

RED CROSS COLLECTION.

A special collection for the benefit of the local Red Cross chapter will be taken at St. Mary's church next Sunday morning. Members of St. Mary's auxiliary to the Red Cross will be stationed in the vestibules after each mass and will receive the offering from the parishioners.

Colored Selectives Leave for Camp Dix

A contingent of fifteen colored men, fourteen of them from this district and one other inducted for a local board at Buffalo, N. Y., left at noon today for Camp Dix. Their departure on the 12:39 train from the North avenue station was witnessed by a large crowd of relatives and friends who added enthusiastic cheers to the last fond farewells.

Previous to appearing at the station, the selectives assembled at the local draft board office in the Babcock building for final instruction. From there they marched through the streets behind a fife and drum corps and all along the route they were given an ovation.

Last night the contingent of fifteen was entertained by the Citizens' Committee at an affair taking place in the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street. Itb egan at 9 o'clock with the serving of a chicken supper prepared by volunteer colored women, while otheers acted as waitresses. The menu was complete from the first to the last detail and it was plainly apparent to the observers that the boys enjoyed every bit of it. After the last course had been served, John J. Varley, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, began a program of speech making by extending kindly advice to the selectives and afterward introducing speakers of the evening. These included Senator William N. Runyon, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, Rev. Frederick L. Imes, Rev. Arthur D. Jones, Rev. D. Y. Campbell and others. Members of the Mt. Olive church and other volunteers gave vocal and instrumental selections.

Paul Levi Robertson, of Buffalo, N. Y., is the additional man going with today's contingent of fourteen. He registered in Buffalo but has been working in Plainfield and was inducted at the request of the officials in his home town. The fourteen Plainfielders include Joseph Parsons, the well known taxicab driver who enlisted in the Fifteenth Regiment in New York last fall and was afterward discharged because of a slight physical defect. It also includes Fred Vaughn, the organizer and leading member of De Lisle's orchestra, which has played for many social affairs in Plainfield for the past two years. The other twelve colored men leaving today are as follows:

Charles W. Barnes, Herbert S. Vaughn, Luther B. Brinkley, George W. Saunders, Clyde Lovell, Dillon Goddard, Fred J. Dungy, Houston L. Ravis, John W. Gillan, Elijah McIntyre, Willias Harris and Charles H. Carmon.

Harry Kirch, of Somerset street, and Joseph Wherry, of Vine street, have enlisted in the U. S. navy. Mr. George Kirch.

Disorderly House Inmates Lodged in County Jail

Frank Winston, colored, proprietor of a disorderly house at 813 Richmond street, was this morning taken to the county jail to serve a sentence of sixty days imposed by Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday. He was given his choice of serving the time or paying a twenty-dollar fine, but though he made several attempts to get the money from friends, he was finally forced to take a vacation at the expense of the county.

With Winston, when he was escorted to Elizabeth, were also Estelle Stuart, of Bloomfield; Florence Jackson and Grace Washington, of Newark, who will spend twenty days in jail, not being able to pay fines of ten dollars each. They were caught in the raid on Winston's place as were also Walter Carr, Harry White, Dillon Goddard and Arnold Fee. Sentence was suspended on Fee but the others paid fines of ten dollars each.

The raid was made early Wednesday night by Sergeants Flynn and O'Keefe and Patrolman Muir.

Frank Symons, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Stuart Symons, of Watchung avenue, who is stationed at Fort Zachary Taylor, has been commissioned a first lieutenant.

Children of Israel To Raise Flag at Synagogue Sunday

Arrangements have been completed for the raising of a service flag, containing twenty-five stars, at the New street synagogue at 6:30 on Sunday next. The committee in charge has succeeded in procuring quite a number of speakers. Mayor Calkins will make a patriotic address. Among others will be Rev. J. Y. Broek, ex-Senator James E. Martine, Judge DeMeza and several other city officials.

The Liberty Band has been engaged to play National anthems, appropriate to the occasion. The committee has also been successful in procuring Rabbi S. Pessin, of Springfield, Mass., who comes highly recommended as a Jewish scholar and noted orator, who is about to be engaged by the local congregation, and will address the gathering. A large crowd is expected and all interested are cordially invited to attend.

FIREMEN TRANSFERRED.

Fireman William Jaeger, who has been stationed at No. 3 house on West Fourth street for the past six years, was today transferred to headquarters. His place in the West End is to be taken by Fireman Jens Claasseen, who was stationed at No. 3 for a long time but who for the past three years has been at headquarters. No reason has been assigned for the change.

MADE FIRST LIEUTENANT.

Walter H. Freeman, chief clerk of the Plainfield Exemption Board, received word yesterday that his son, Stuart F. Freeman, of the field artillery, has been commissioned a first lieutenant. He is stationed at Camp Zachary Taylor, Ky. Mr. Freeman also has two other sons in the service.

Public Service to Withhold Appeal

It is considered certain that the Public Service Railway Company will accept the verdict of the Public Utilities Commission limiting the fare increase to a cent raise in transfers, and that President Thomas N. McCarter will write such acceptance before July 24. The failure of the directors of the company to authorize any certiorari proceedings at the meeting Tuesday confirms this view.

The company sought much more generous treatment. The way is still open for an appeal to the Supreme Court, but will probably not be taken. Accepting the verdict for the present, the Public Service is expected to institute proceedings looking to a complete readjustment of rates immediately on the conclusion of the war. Acceptance of the fare decision carries with it an agreement to submit a zoning plan before January 1, 1919, and adoption of this plan would bring about a readjustment without the expense of an appraisal of the property, which would amount to $150,000.

Two Plainfielders Promoted to Corporal

Rapid promotion has come to Harry Goeller, of New street, who went out of Plainfield with a selective contingent on July 5. This week he was made corporal in the 3d Company, Fifth Regiment Engineers, stationed at Camp Humphrey, Va.

Corporal Goeller, who is the son of the late William Goeller, employed for many years at the Potter Pres Works, is a mason by trade and has been assigned to this class of work in the engineering department. Several Plainfield boys are in the same company with him.

Another Plainfielder to be promoted to the rank of corporal this week is Benjamin Harris, of 736 Clinton avenue, who has been stationed at Camp Dix for the past five months. He was a member of the Scout Masters' Association when selected for service and his knowledge of military tactics gained through this association qualified him for advancement. He was originally a member of the 307th Field Artillery, but when that contingent went overseas was transferred to a brigade headquarters company for special drill work. Corporal Harris is a brother to Albert Harris, the well-known local insurance man.

Miss Mary Kennedy, of West Fourth street, will leave tomorrow for New Haven, Conn., to spend a two weeks' vacation with relatives.

Death Again Enters The Edmundson Home

For the second time within two weeks, death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Edmundson, of 840 West Fourth street, Wednesday noon, and claimed their seven-month old daughter, Mary. The child was a victim of a summer complaint, which on Saturday, July 6, caused the demise of her four-year-old brother, William. A third child in the family, Catherine, aged two and a half years, is ill at the present time from the same cause and on several occasions has been in a critical condition.

It was stated at the time that William died that the complaint had resulted from the children eating green grapes. The Drs. Hedges and Dr. William H. Anthony, who were called into the case, could find no verification. Their diagnosis fixed the trouble as a form of summer complaint similar to dysentery. The physicians are exerting every effort to save the third and only child but at the present time it is not yet out of danger.

The funeral of little Mary will take place this afternoon at the parents' home, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Dudley Miller Burned Fighting Alcohol Flames

Dudley Miller, the Park avenue druggist was severely burned about the hands in fighting a blaze at his pharmacy at 11:10 yesterday morning.

A gallon bottle of alcohol which Mr. Miller placed on a table broke from msome unknown cause and allowed the liquid contents to run near a lighted gas stove. They became ignited and in a moment flames spread to a closet where many bottles of alcohol were stored and these broke in half after becoming overheated, thus adding more fuel to the fire.

Mr. Miller was alone at the time but forgot personal dangers in throwing the remainder of the alcohol bottles, still holding a portion of their blazing contents, out the back door. He was still at work at this task when the fire department arrived in response to a telephone alarm sent in by someone in the druggist called. It was necessary for Mr. Miller to have his burns dressed by a physician. The loss occasioned by the fire will amount to about twenty-five dollars.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

There is a possibility that Hope chapel may not be able to conduct its annual excursion owing to the failure of the committee to secure a suitable date. The Hope excursion has always gone on Saturday and this date is wanted again but the Jersey Central officials have asserted that this is impossible this year. As many of those who always patronize the outing work in the local shops and do not want to lose a full day it is believed that another date outside of a Saturday would result in a great falling off of ticket sales. However, the Chapel committee is making one more effort to induce the railroad to arrange some method of getting a Saturday date, and if this fails there will be no Hope excursion.

George J. Bayer, agent at the Clinton avenue station of the Jersey Central, recently received a letter from his son, Private George J. Bayer, Jr., who was wounded two months ago in the fighting at Contigny. The young man does not state anything about the manner in which he received his injuries or their extent, but he writes as follows: "I had a German belt and pistol I wanted to send home, but it is gone now; I don't know what became of it, but I will get another one some time again, if the Hun don't get me first. Well, I'm not afraid of him getting me first, anyhow." Young Bayer was conducting a farm near Califon when he was called into service last September and was among one of the first New Jersey contingents to leave Camp Dix for foreign service. He has been overseas since January of the present year.

Joseph Janello, the Westfield Italian who was shot by a fellow countryman during a quarrel they had on South avenue, Fanwood, on June 13, was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday. When first taken to the institution, it was thought that the two bullet wounds he received would prove fatal but he has since fully recovered. Janello was taken to police headquarters after leaving the hospital and Judge DeMeza held him in $500 bail to appear against his assailant, John Mattiano, when the latter is tried at Elizabeth.

Abram Gordon, who lieves at West Fourth and Liberty streets, was arraigned in the city court, Tuesday morning, charged by Patrolman O'Keefe with throwing garbage into the street from a milk wagon he was driving. Judge DeMeza fined the defendant five dollars.

Rev. Gabriel R. Maguire, former pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, but for several years pastor of the Ruggles Memorial church at Rosbury, Mass., will occupy his former pulpit here next Sunday, both morning and evening. His daughter, Miss Ruth Maguire will sing solos at both services. In the morning, Dr. Maguire's subject will be: "The Signs of the Times," and in the evening, "The World's Greatest Tragedy."

The New York Telephone Company this week began the work of putting out its latest telephone directory. The distributing is being done by Daniel Kelderling, who makes a request of subscribers to have their old books in readiness for return.

Dr. R. F. Y. Pierce, of Lennox avenue, this city, who is pastor of the Eleventh Street Baptist church in New York, has been granted a leave of absence by his congregation to accept a government appointment as major and chaplain of the New York reserve regiment, stationed at Bush terminal, Brooklyn. He will be in charge of the naval branch of the Y. M. C. A. for the maritime section of New York.

Rev. J. W. Flynn, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, who was recently commissioned a captain in the army after his enlistment as a chaplain, left today for Camp Devens, Mass., where he has been assigned to duty. Following the weekly prayer meeting Wednesday night, the congregation accorded Mr. Flynn a reception, during which he was presented with a number of gifts useful in life at camp. A social hour with an informal program of music was enjoyed by the gathering.

The contracting firm of J. S. Pollock & Comany, of New York, on Monday began the work of excavating for the new $100,000 Tepper building to be erected on West Front street, where the McCutchen building formerly stood. The old structure rested on party walls and as soon as new walls are put up, the construction will be pushed rapidly in order to have everything in readiness by early fall, at which time Tepper Brothers plan a grand opening. According to the plans prepared by Elder & White, the New York architectural firm, the building will be strictly up-to-date and as nearly fireproof as is possible, through a complete system of sprinklers and the use of steel and concrete.

Beginning with August 1, the Plainfield banks will close each day at 2 o'clock in the afternoon instead of 3 o'clock, as has been the custom for many years. The change has been made necessary because of the great amount of additional work resulting from war activities and which has kept the clerical force at their desks on many occasions until late in the evening.

Carl Anderson, of this city, was fined five dollars in the Elizabeth police court, Monday, on a charge of running his automobile beyond the speed limit.

Admitting that she had solicited funds for the Children's Home without authority from the board of managers, Gertrude Sabine, a member of the Pillar of Fire sect stationed at Zerepath, near Bound Brook, was fined twenty dollars in the city police court, Monday. Judge DeMeza gave her the preference of sixty days in jail if the money was not forthcoming, but the amount was procured from other Pillar of Fire members, who attended the hearing.

The city fire department was called out at 5:30 Monday morning, for a blaze in the attic at the home of Rev. D. Y. Campbell, at 610 West Third street. In the belief of Chief Jennings, the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. The members of the family were asleep at the time and the flames ate their way to the outside of the house and were working along the cornice when discovered by neighbors. Two lines of hose had to be used before the fire was put out. The damage to the building is estimated at $500, covered by insurance, and to the conents, $300, on which there is no insurance. The house was formerly the Higgins homestead and was moved to its present location from the corner lot at Third street and Plainfield avenue.

Outlook for Aircraft Is Much Better

The production of aircraft in the United States has reached a stage of real encouragement and the outlook for the future is exceedingly bright. That was learned today from the Aircraft Investigation Committee of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, after it has practically completed the task for which it was appointed. Its report will be submitted to the Senate in the near future and then for the first time the public will learn what has been found.

The cause for optimism has become apparent within the last few months and more noticeably so since the investigating committee started on its tour of the various aircraft plants about the country, it is understood. The final establishing of the Liberty motor as an engine capable of accomplishing a large part of what claimed for it it is at least partly responsible for the favorable turn in affairs. The performance of the Handley-Paige machine equipped with a Liberty motor at the aviation field of the Standard Aircraft Corporation at Bayway two weeks ago had much to do with the decision and it was further helped by the performance of the Caproni, another local built machine, at Minelo when the same engine was used for motive power.

The committee's report will not be entirely favorable, it is practically certain. Sharp criticism is likely to be made of the methods employed and the mistakes of varying degree that have been made. The one important feature probably will be, however, that the committee has found signs that the airplane manufacturers have "found themselves" and are prepared to go ahead.

The work, both past and present, at the plants of the Standard Aircraft Corporation will take up a considerable part of the report, it is predicted. The committee, during its visit of inspection at Plainfield and Elizabeth, spent more time than at any other point during the trip through the country and after a tour of the workshops had been completed an optimistic attitude was assumed. The local company has been burdened with the responsibility of working out a large part of the aircraft program and its activities are being especially observed at Washington.

The production of one type of heavy plane, the committee had allowed it to be known, has now reached the satisfactory total of seventy-five a week and by the forepart of September it is expected to reach a total of 100. While that rate of production is still far short of the expectations of the war department, the committee regards it as promising for the future.

Light planes are not to be manufactured in America hereafter, according to the revised aircraft program, it is understood. Until the present that is the type that has almost exclusively been turned out by the Standard, but now work has been turned to the construction of the heavier types, such as the Handley-Paige and Caproni. The building of the smaller craft has been left to England and France.

GUY EMPEY GETS A CAPTAIN'S COMMISSION.

Guy Empey, author of "Over the Top," and known the country over as a lecturer on the war, has been commissioned a captain in the adjutant general's department of the United States army. Captain Empey has been ordered to Camp Freeman, Cal.

Mrs. Edward L. Suffern, of Sycamore avenue, is spending the summer at Craigville, Mass.

Claims Black Tom Explosion Drove His Wife Insane

Alleging that the shock of the Black Tom explosion caused his wife, Thora, to go insane, permanently injured both of them, and destroed their furniture, Louis Ellefsen, of Jersey City, has commenced action in the Supreme Court at Trenton to obtain from the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company $61,000 damages.

At the time of the explosion, July 30, 1916, Ellefsen was employed by the New York Central Railroad Company as captain of the barge Alexander, which belonged to the company, and his wife lived with him on the barge, which contained their household furniture and a cargo of bales of hides consigned to the National Storage Company. The barge was located at Black Tom Island, tied to the bulkhead between piers 6 and 7 of the island.

He contends that the explosion caused the barge to violently toss about, upset the cargo, broke and wrecked the craft, and violently threw the couple from the bed in which they were sleeping to the floor of the barge. His wife was committed to the Morris Plains Hospital on August 7, 1916, where she is still confined. Ellefsen contends that he has been forced to spend in the neighborhood of $2,000 for treatment to his wife and also went through great pain and agony with his own injuries. The barge finally burned to the water's edge, destroying all of his furniture, for which he demands the sum of $1,000.

On a second count, in which he claims that it was the duty of the defendant company to exercise a high degree of care to prevent the occurrences of fires, shocks, etc., which the munitions might cause, and to use a high degree of care to safeguard the explosives, the buildings, piers, etc., and charges the company with negligence in not having proper means of communication with the Jersey City Fire Department, Ellefsen demands $50,000 for the insanity of his wife and $10,000 for her injuries and the loss of her society, but does not sue for his own personal injuries, which he alleges to have sustained.

After War Priority Board May Control All Raw Materials

An international priority board to control the distribution of raw materials after the war, probably will be sanctioned by the Allies.

Whether Germany shall be permitted to enter this and other international agencies already formed or contemplated, depends entirely upon what is the outcome of the war. Until the Teutons change their present tactics in enforcing economic burdens on nationalities coming under their domination, and until her policies of deceit and intrigue are abandoned, Germany cannot be admitted to the civilized union, officials declare.

The purposes of this priority board as outlined recently by the United Press—and already sanctioned this week by British Minister of Blockade Lord Robert Cecil—is to combine the resources of all civilized nations to the end that suffrage nations may be assisted in the work of reconstruction and restored to prosperity.

Under the plan, Belgium, Serbia, Northern France, Italy and others would receive priority in supplies of raw materials for upbuilding.

It is a development of the "Square Deal After the War Trade Policy" which this Government is known to favor in the wake of Allied victory. The United States Tariff Commission and other agencies have been working for months investigating trade treaties and secret agreements of all nations. Definite policies have been formulated and reviewed by President Wilson to meet any exigency. If Germany threatens to "break over again" after peace comes, the machinery for a boycott is ready to be set in motion.

America is in a osition to play a great part in the proposed international economic directorate. Already leading officials and financiers are advocating a great raw materials reserve in this country, so that America may have the foundation to support her "after the war trade policy."

Fourth of July Causes Decrease in Coal Output

Observance of the Fourth of July by miners caused bituminous coal production for the week of July 6 to decrease 2,081,000 tons, or approximately 17 per cent., according to preliminary reports furnished by the United States Fuel Administration by the Geological Survey. The total output, including lignite and coal made into coke, is estimated at 10,259,000 net tons, as against 12,340,000 net tons, the revised estimates for the preceding week.

The daily average production, based upon a five-day week, is estimated at 2,052,000 net tons, which average is but slightly under that of the previous week.

Dr. H. V. Hubbard, of Central avenue, who recently enlisted in the medical reserve corps, received notice by telegram from Washington late Monday night, that he had been commissioned a captain. He was instructed to hold himself in readiness for a call for active duty at any time.

Crowder Made Study of Draft

When the call came to Provost General Enoch Crowder to handle Uncle Sam's big selective draft, he was ready because he had spent his entire army career in preparation.

Representative Green of Vermont, who, as member of the House Military Affairs Committee, has come into intimate contact with General Crowder, tells how the latter spent a lifetime studying for the big job he now holds.

"When General Crowder was a junior lieutenant at an obscure army post in Texas he chanced upon a copy of old civil war draft regulations," Greene said.

"He read them over, first out of curiosity. Then he began to think how those rules could have been made more just and equitable.

"Gradually he evolved his ideas of how a draft should be run and with the idea came the conviction that some day in this country there would be the need of a great army and that his army would be raised, not from volunteers but a process of selection from the total man-power of the country.

"Meanwhile Crowder was advancing in the army step by step.

"When the United States entered the war General Crowder was the one man in the army who was ready to go before Congress with a concrete suggestion for the framing of a selective draft law."

Other members of the military committee say Crowder's suggestions were written into the bill almost without change.

Gallant Irish Lad Tells of Admiration For Yankee Soldiers

Genuine admiration for the Yankee soldier boys and a sincere tribute to them, is expressed by Peter Rogers, a young calavryman, serving at the front with an English division since the war began, in a letter written to his sisters, Mrs. Charles Curran, of Arlington avenue.

Although Private Rogers has been over the top time and again and has seen many gallant comrades go down to death, he has so far passed through the ordeal of the western front with only a few minor wounds. Before hostilities against Germany were declared, the young cavalryman had been a member of the British army and was discharged just as England began sending troops to France. He immediately re-enlisted and the experiences he has gone through add weight to his words when he declares that "next to being an Irishman, I would like to be a Yankee soldier." This is the way Private Rogers writes of the Yankee boys and his admiration for them.

"It is hard to part with those we love, but there is something better than love of self and that is love of country. I would be very proud to be an American soldier fighting for my country. I would love nothing better and believe me, your chaps are rare fellows. I have met them lately in the field fighting and along the roads, going back wound, and they are all jolly and cheerful, with plenty of fight for another day.

"I only wish Charles was out, he would be proud of his countrymen, but it would not do for everyone to come into this hell on earth as it is at prsent. As for myself, you know I am a devil-may-care soldier of fortune. We have not an Irish army, so I joined the nearest one to me. Ah, well, no matter if I live to see this lot through, I would like next to being an Irishman, to be a Yankee soldier."

Plainfield Car Men In Trolley Union Formed at Elizabeth

All the trolleymen in Plainfield were included in the organization of a local union for the Central New Jersey district at Elizabeth, this week. This step follows the formation of a union among the men of the northern division at Newark and is the aftermath of the strike of several weeks ago when the platform employes of the Public Service Corporation went out for more money.

The organization of the Central division took place in Forester's Hall, Elizabeth, and the following officers were installed by Thomas F. Shine, tenth vice president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America:

Anthony Padden, president; John Sheppard, vice president; Irving Eisner, recording secretary; Samuel Heller, financial secretary; William Lloyd, treasurer; William Ready and Michael Canty, of Elizabeth, and M. Finster and J. Smith, of Dunellen, members of executive board; John Finley, delegate to the State Board; William O'Brien, conductor; Herbert Eggers, warden, and Michael Canty, sentinel.

The organization has 250 members and more are expected. It was decided to allow the conductorettes to join as long as the war lasts. Further decision on this phase will be made at the end of the war.

The men want sixty cents an hour straight time and ninety cents an hour overtime, this claim now being before the war labor board. They will abide by the decision of that body. Buttons showing their affiliation with the Amalgamated Association were distributed. The buttons give the name of the division of which the men are members.

Crack Aviators at Standard Plant for Over-Ocean Flight

The plants of the Standard Aircraft Corporation at Elizabeth have become the headquarters for the movement in favor of a trans-Atlantic flight by airplane. Forty young aviation officers who have declared their willingness to make the attempt arrived today to undergo a period of instruction in the operating of the Handley-Paige, the type of plane with which the attempt is most likely to be made.

The men, members of the first provisional wing, have been stationed heretofore at Mineola, but yesterday they all signed a petition to pilot the first craft that heads out over the Atlantic. It was received by Major C. K. Reinhart, who a week ago Saturday flew over from Mineola to witness the flight of the Langley at the Standard field in Bayway. At that time he was enthusiastic over the prospects of a trip and yesterday granted permission for the aviators, crack pilots all, to come to the Standard plant of instruction. They arrived under the command of Lieutenant Willis A. Boggs and immediately started on their tasks.

Confidence in the ability of the huge type of plane such as the Langley to cross the ocean to Europe is growing daily. Officials of the Standard plant are certain that the machine is capable of the performance and army and navy officials are also convinced that the trip can be made. There is a movement at present in Washington to sanction such an effort.

The man who does succeed in piloting an airplane over the ocean will receive $110,000 in prizes. The London Daily Mail has offered $50,000, the Aero Club of America $10,000, and there is at present a bill in Congress favoring the appropriating of another $50,000 on behalf of the United States.

Plainfield Letters Will Be Censored By Kingdon Gould

"Censored, Kingdon Gould, 1st Lieut. N. A." Hundreds of cards and letters received by parents of Plainfield boys, members of the National Army, will bear this inscription, written in a small, irregular hand. The multi-millionaire soldier, who gained considerable notoriety by twice refusing to go up for commission in Camp Dix schools, is now a censorship officer in the Intelligence Department of the National Army, and in that capacity will peruse hundreds of letters which will be forthcoming in the next month from the boys of the 311th Regiment.

Lieutenant Gingdon Gould, who resided in Lakewood, went to Camp Dix a private last September. For a time he was stationed with Company D, 311th Regiment, where the Lakewood selectives were trained. Then he was transferred to the headquarter's company and placed on duty in the intelligence office in charge of Major Rice. Gould is a linguist of no mean ability: He speaks French, Italian and German in addition to his native tongue. He proved valuable to the department for that reason.

Newspaper men who were called upon daily to attend conferences of Divisional Headquarters saw the multi-millionaire selective delving through papers and correspondence at a small desk, along with three or four other clerks. The democratic principles of the army had thrown this scion of one of the Nation's first families with the ordinary layman. He was at that time a sergeant, but before that he had hobnobbed with bricklayers, shoemakers and whatnot in the preliminary training in soldiery he got during the first months of his existence at Dix.

The intelligence office duty showed Gould to be a valuable man. A quiet personfi of a retiring demeanor, he worked faithfully at the little desk, handling problems that came before the intelligence office, day in and day out. Finally he was recommended for a commission. He refused to accept. He continued to work in the little office, with the non-commissioned rank of sergeant. "How is Gould getting along?" the intelligence officer was asked frequently. "Very well," was the brief, but always the same reply. Once later he was recommended for a training course to receive a commission, and again declined, satisfied to continue on his status as sergeant.

From overseas now come the regulation cards sent by soldiers upon first arriving in the field for service. A list of printed services is on one side. Those which are not suggested by the information the soldier desires to send, are crossed out. The card may read, after having certain sentences deleted: "I am well. Letter follows at first opportunity. I have received no letter from you."

On the reverse side, bearing the address, is the censorship's stamp signed. "Kingdon Gould, First Lieutenant, N. A." Gould accepted the commission offered to him a short time ago.

Sergeant William W. Lawrence, a former Plainfielder, now stationed at the Watervleit Arsenal as a member of the Ordnance Corps, left for the latter place Monday, after a stay in Plainfield through the death of his aunt, Mrs. W. W. Warnock, of Craig place. Sergeant Lawrence's home is now in Brooklyn.

Final Warning Is Given Sugar Users

Former State Senator Ernest R. Capstick, has established headquarters at North and Watchung avenues. John H. Nicol, who was secretary to Congressman Capstick up to the time of the latter's death, is now associated with Mr. Ackerman and will have charge of the latter's campaign.

Mr. Ackerman believes that with his experience in Washington affairs Mr. Nicol will prove a valuable aid to him.

PERCENTAGES IN ADVANCE COST OF FOOD.

Boiling beef increased 32 per cent during the year, cornmeal 30 per cent., milk 26 per cent., and pork chops 20 per cent.

For the five days ended May 15 last there was an average increase of 63 per cent in the price of food, according to the bureau's statistics.

Berkeley Heights Plant Badly Damaged by Fire

Before the embers were cold Tuesday afternoon on the site of the burned-out "color fire stick" shop at the Essex Specialty Company's fireworks plant at Berkeley Heights, orders were sent out for materials with which to build another structure. The fire, which was confined to the one shop, did about $800 damage. Other buildings at the plant, because of wide spacing, were never in any serious danger.

Firemen from New Providence and Stirling received the thanks of company officials for their work. Chief Otto F. Adams, of the New Providence company, entered the building when the fire was well under way, and brought out two ten-gallon tanks of alcohol to prevent an explosion.

Much of the corrugated iron used in the burned building will be used over again, company officials said, in the construction of the new building. The walls of the new structure will be of hollow tile.

WHY NOT PLAINFIELD

Sending Troops Home Papers

William Boyce Thompson, of 1 Madison avenue, is making an effort to enlarge his Home Paper Service for men at the front. He has issued a request that persons interested in this plan of keeping our soldiers abroad in touch with every-day affairs in their home towns should write him and he will be glad to use his organization to look after the work if others will supply the papers.

Mr. Thompson is sending about 3,500 Westchester County papers to men at the front, and he expects to increase the number until every man from that county will be receiving his home paper. He believes the idea should be carried out all over the country, and he wants others to join him.

SPLENDID RESULTS ALREADY.

"Such splendid results have followed the inauguration of this service in sustaining the morale of the men in the service, as well as their friends at home, that I will gladly do anything I can to assist in furthering this," said Mr. Thompson. "If there should be any one who desires to interest himself by contributing to sending papers to the men of any section I shall be glad to add to my organization and take up the correspondence in connection with this work for other counties, to furnish information, and by co-operation assist any movement to make the service either State-wide or Nation-wide. No doubt there are individuals who would gladly respond and meet the expenses in their counties and the war chest cities might find it easy to respond."

ANSWERS LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS.

In his work in Westchester County Mr. Thompson asks the men to write him freely, and if there is anything they wish to communicate to their friends through the "home paper" he will see that it is arranged. Every letter received from the soldiers is answered by Mr. Thompson personally or by some one selected in the home locality of the soldier.

"I regret that I cannot send a 'home paper' to every soldier in the war," said Mr. Thompson. "The sending of the Westchester County papers only is a considerable undertaking, and I trust that men in other communities will see the merit of forwarding their 'home paper' to their boys in the war."—Reprinted from N. MAKING WAY FOR THE WAR CHEST PLAN.

It was plainly evident at the conference called by Mayor Calkins on Thursday of last week that Plainfield societies welcome the suggestion of the War Chest plan for local relief. This newest of methods in the collection and distribution of moneys has been tried in Rochester, N. Y.; Columbus, O., and other large cities and has been found to work with general satisfaction.

The primary purpose of Mayor Calkins in putting the question up to Plainfielders is to do away with the concatenation of tag days or relief drives that have been in progress since the war began. First there would be a campaign for the Y. M. C. A., then one of the Knights of Columbus, after these another for the hospital and then again one more for the Red Cross. Worked in between would be the Government's canvass for the sale of Liberty Bonds, Thrift Stamps, War Saving Certificates and other forms of investment. The local public has been at times generous to full and yet it seemed as though such a continuation of soliciting was somewhat of an imposition. No one has ever denied the worthiness of each request for money but it is fate that everything has a limit and the city's chief executive was one of the first to detect the subdued murmur of impatience.

It was for this reason that Mayor Calkins called the conference. There was a gratifying response to his invitation to talk the matter over as fully seventy-five persons took part in the discussion. They represented city departments and city organizations. From the outset, it was seen that there was almost a unanimity of thought on the topic in question and that was that the centralization of all charitable finances should take the place of the present individual method. This means that at one time an attempt would be made to secure all the money necessary for Y. M. C. A. and Knights of Columbus quotas, Red Cross amounts and donations for Muhlenberg Hospital, the Charity Organization Society, the Children's Home and other worthy institutions. Thus the workers would only have to undergo one session of soliciting, the citizens would be called upon for one general contribution and not for a year would they again be asked to give of their world's goods for the benefit of less fortunate mankind.

In issuing his invitation for the conference Mayor Calkins wrote: "I am calling this conference because I feel that the matter is one which ought now to be considered seriously, though with entire open-mindedness. We must admit the waste effort involved in the conduct of innumerable separate campaigns, one after another, whether considered from the standpoint of the workers or of the people who are solicited to give. The question for us is whether in a community of the size and character of our own it would be practicable, and better than the methods we have so far used. But if the War Chest plan is to be adopted in Plainfield, I think it should be a pre-requisite that it have the support of the more important relief agencies of the city, including all denominations and nationalities."

It would seem that the organizations are to give the necessary support and from citizens speaking as individuals the War Chest method should be given a trial, at least. It will decide whether or not the plan is feasible in Plainfield and anything that will do away with the continuous button-holing will be appreciated by the willing but harassed citizenry.

THE ONE-CENT TRANSFER RULING.

One thing is certain in the decision of the Public Utilities Commission to allow the Public Service Corporation to charge one cent for all transfers issued. That is, that the State organization does not intend to be bulldozed by the traction magnates nor allow its representatives "to put anything over on it.". It was apparent at the outset of the hearings in Newark and Trenton that the Public Service is seeking to use the war's consequences as a means of pulling itself out of financial difficulties, but every statement that an additional three million dollars was needed was not substantiated by the physical facts and the company should count itself lucky in securing the permission even to get an extra penny on each fare where a change of cars is made.

Plainfielders will not be greatly affected by the Utility Board's ruling but all the same there seems to be no reason why one set of individuals should be assessed more for riding a certain distance than those of another. One man can ride all the way from Dunellen to Scotch Plains for five cents but if another gets on a Fourth street car at Liberty street and rides only to the Plainfield High School, he must pay six cents, simply because he transferred from one line to another. In several parts of the State where the one-cent transfer is to become effective, there is a growing agitation for the zone system which charges for mileage covered, much the same as the Government charges for parcels post. It would be more equitable and at the same time make a uniform charge for everyone.

Later on a complication may arise which might act as a boomerang to the Public Service in its petition to raise the price of a car ride in utter disregard of its agreements when seeking franchises. This concern has always been bitterly opposed to the limited franchise and invoked legislation to give it a permanent right to use highways belonging to the people for its private tracks. It is pointed out by the Newark News and other leading newspapers of the State, that if the Public Service can ignore one clause in its agreements and yet seek to uphold others, when it comes to an argument with the municipalities, what is the sense of anyone living up to franchise? What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander and one of these fine days the traction folks may discover that they made a great mistake in trying to make the people pay for something that they should not.

THE NATIONAL PARTY AND ITS CANDIDATE.

The political pot is boiling. We don't mean the large pots but the little pots which make steam quickly and exhaust themselves rapidly. Recently we gave a full statement of the platform of the National Party and what kind of a candidate they proposed to run for Congress in the Fifth District. On the latter, Mr. Hopkins points out that "the voters of the district demand a candidate of a different type than the usual candidate of either the older parties"—well he would have to be to swallow the dose proposed. Apparently this new style candidate is to be a very young man, not over 21, for "these voters want a man with a record free from partisanship." How could any man over voting age not have been a partisan? Our Government is one of parties and in some party a voter must find an expression of his own opinions, but perhaps this "partisanship" may refer to a man who has had some political experience and made a record of public service in the interest of the people. If that type is not wanted only of course a green-horn will suit them better and make a more able Congressman.

Briefly as we can we will discuss the platform. Prohibition is now out of the hands of Congress and its fate rests in the State Legislatures. Prohibition as a war measure has been put in the hands of the President with all his other grave responsibilities and it should be properly left there. Many of the items have already been enacted into laws: Postal Savings Banks, Parcel Post, Federal Farm Loans. The Child Labor law was enacted but held up by the U. S. Supreme Court. So they are no novelties. Some of the others are debatable and men depend for their solution on events which cannot be foreseen and it is foolish to attempt to decide them with our present knowledge. As for the balance, most are the paternal variety and attempt to make a "Utopia" by law. Many of them are distinctly class legislation for the benefit of only a portion of our citizens. The whole theory of this platform is to make the Federal Government supreme, and to take advantage of the situation arising out of the war which has of necessity produced an abnormal condition to kill individualism and the rights of States. It is State Socialism mixed with many of the non-partisan ideas from the northwest—a flavor of populism and a dash of Bryanism. Perhaps, New Jersey is ready for this unbaked, indigestible mixture but we doubt it.

Woman suffrage will probably be no longer an issue when the new congressman takes his seat. Any way the National Party has no monopoly on this, as doubtless all candidates will favor it.

Early this week, W. H. C. Clark, of Mountain Lakes, announced that he will be the National Party's Congressional candidate in the Fifth District. He may measure up to the requirements of the party for which he is to be the standard-bearer but not having a personal knowledge of the gentleman from Morris, we are afraid that he will fall short in many particulars. At any rate, it is his privilege to try for the honor and we await his coming with feverish anxiety.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When the original site of the Pond Tool Works was Frank Cowan's apple orchard?

When you had to ascend three or four steps and cross a small porch to enter any of Front street's leading stores?

When they rang a bell at the North avenue station to announce the approach of a passenger train and half the village turned out to see the cars?

When the installation of a telephone in your home lifted you into the "bloated bond-holder" class?

When hardly a day passed without the local newspapers reporting a runaway and at least once a week telling of "Denny" Kane's latest capture of a "maddened team?"

When you refused to count the number of carriages in a funeral procession because of the popular belief not confined to children alone that it would cause a death in your own family?

When more news was to be had in Pat Marron's shoe-shop than could be gleaned from the columns of the New York World?

"Nathaniel Lyon, Union commander, was killed in the Battle of Wilson's Creek, at Ashford, Conn., on July 14, 1818."

The Courier-News, in its issue of July 15, printed the above paragraph. It indicates that the historical editor is off on a vacation for in the four lines there are only three misstatements. Nathaniel Lyon was killed early in the Civil War, Wilson's Creek is not in Ashford, Conn., and Lyon's death was not on July 14, 1818. His burial was in Ashford, Conn., about 1862, where his family lived. The subscribers to the Courier-News, in Ashford, will have trouble in locating Wilson's Creek, unless some visitors from Missouri are spending the summer in the Nutmeg State.

First Steps Taken Toward Widening Out Watchung Avenue

The first step in the long contemplated widening of Watchung avenue, between Greenbrook and East Second street, was taken at Monday night's meeting of the Common Council, when an ordinance calling for this improvement was passed on its first and second reading. Following a public hearing on August 5 the proposition will be submitted for further consideration and will undoubtedly be carried without a dissenting vote.

Action toward the widening was brought about through the continued request of Charles H. Hand and other property owners who appreciate the need of the improvement and also the establishment of a proper building line. As conditions are at present there is no legal restriction of the desire of anyone to extend the front of a structure far out beyond the line maintained by other property owners. When the widening was first suggested it was intended to have it done only in the block between Front and Second streets, but an investigation showed that it could be carried to Greenbrook with only very little additional expense.

By the terms of the ordinance, the sidewalk on the westerly side of the avenue will be cut off for a distance of three feet and on the easterly side a distance of seven feet, giving the improved thoroughfare a total width of sixty-three feet. The work can be done with practically no disturbance of buildings except to one or two on the easterly side.

The Council also adopted on first reading Monday night an ordinance providing for an extension of the sewer system to Clinton place. Residents of this street petitioned for sewers some time ago, but the street had not been accepted as a public thoroughfare up to that time.

Foster Milliken, executor of the estate of the late Samuel Milliken, petitioned the Council to vacate an unused and unaccepted street known as West Ninth street, which is located northwest of Central avenue, having been laid out sixty-five years ago by F. B. Stillman and others.

An ordinance providing that this street be vacated was passed on first and second reading. A public hearing on these ordinances will be held on August 5.

Mayor Calkins appointed Dennis Dillon a special policeman. The appointment was confirmed. James Trainor, who resides in the West End, sent a communication to the Council in which he asked that he be compensated for eleven Belgian hares which were killed by stray dogs. His communication was referred to the public affairs committee.

An extension of time was given to the Weldon Contracting Company which has the contract for treating South avenue with asphalt dressing. The concern advised the Council that it had not been able to secure materials owing to the great demands of the Government.

The clerk of the district court reported receipts of $146.59.

The Council adopted a resolution directing the city clerk to advertise for proposals for furnishing coal for public buildings. These include the City Hall, fire houses and Industrial Home.

Coal Officials to Study Fuel Needs of All War Plants

That the war industries may be kept up to the maximum of production, unhampered by any difficulties in the distribution of coal, the distribution division of the United States Fuel Administration is requesting industrial consumers of coal to make weekly reports to the administration. These reports are to show the coal situation in industrial plants, and will be made in duplicate, one copy going to Washington and the other to the local office of the Fuel Administration.

Reports made out promptly and accurately and filed with the administrators will, of course, receive first attention, and in cases where the firms need assistance those whose reports are in proper form will be attended to first. The entire country will be covered by inspectors who will submit to the administration reports as to the consumers' method of operation, the amount of coal on hand, and other details pertinent to the situation.

From the mine owners comes the report that the production of anthracite coal for the three months ending July 1 has fallen off 1,226,000 tons. Unless labor power is obtained the output cannot be increased. There are only 144,000 mine workers in the anthracite industry, 33,000 less than before the war. If there is not a decided increase in the output, it is declared, that it will be necessary to cut down on the allotments of domestic anthracite to the New England and Atlantic States, to which increased tonnages of coal have been allowed.

What Three Towns Got for Forgetting The Boys at War

Chief Justice Gummere, of the Supreme Court, at Newark, Wednesday, sustained the contentions made by Judge David, of Elizabeth, that the failure of the Secretary of State to mail ballots to soldiers and sailors so they could vote in the license election held in Montclair, East Orange and Caldwell borough, and declared the recent election result void. In all cases the municipalities had voted "dry" by fair majorities, but Justice Gummere held that the failure to reach the soldier and sailor vote, as prescribed by the "Soldier Act," passed by the last New Jersey General Assembly, disfranchised the men in the service and therefore the mandatory provisions of the act had been violated and the elections were illegal.

In taking the position he has, Justice Gummere upholds the recent decision of Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen in the Roselle case. Justice Bergen ruled that the "dry" victory in Roselle was illegal, as the soldiers and sailors were not sent ballots in time to cast them. Judge David also successfully argued the Roselle action.

Assemblyman George S. Hobart, who with Essex County Prosecutor J. Henry Harrison and Benjamin F. Jones represented the "drys," argued that the State secretary did all in his power to reach all the soldiers, and that there was no intention of depriving them of their rights.

In his decision the chief justice said:

"It is claimed that the soldiers were not entitled to vote on these abstract questions because there were no candidates for office. If they were entitled to vote on one they were entitled to vote on the other. I am called upon to decide: Can a special election, called for the purpose of obtaining the expression of the voters on a sociological question, rather than a Governmental, be valid without giving a certain class an opportunity to express its rights?

"Whether Montclair continues or abolishes the sale of liquor, the Government will remain intact. It doesn't affect the machinery of the municipality. It would be a bold court that would undertake to say that the election would be invalid where the result would destroy the Government entirely and vacate the executive and judicial offices. So that in a situation of that kind a judge would have to disregard many things if the decision was to result in Governmental chaos.

"Therefore, the determination of the question before me has bearing on what the results might be. In the Caldwell case there was no attempt to give the soldiers an opportunity which the Constitution gave them. These men were deprived of their right of suffrage. This right is one of the greatest privileges of the American people, and it was not exercised in this case. The elections are held to be void."

When Mr. Hobart asked for a writ of certiorari to carry the case up to the Court of Errors and Appeals he was informed that he would have to show reason for so doing.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Dahl, of East Seventh street, are the parents of a daughter, born to them a few days ago.

Auto Manufacturers Threaten Retaliation

A bitter fight is developing between the automobile industries and the War Industries Board as a result of the Government's determination to curtail steel supplies to these manufacturers.

Officials today declared that representatives of the automobile industry threatened panic and disaster if the conservation plans wert put into effect. They also declared the auto men threatened to make a campaign issue of the question and predicted dire political consequences.

Officials say the auto industry was warned a year ago and should have prepared by this time for the output reduction now inevitable.

Manufacturers of passenger automobiles have been asked by the War Industries Board to furnish in the next week or ten days a statement to the amount of steel on hand.

Manufacturers last fall agreed voluntarily to reduce output thirty per cent., and make no plans for the year after August 1. Possession of inventories will enable the Government to assure itself there has been no evasio not this agreement.

Fuel Administrator Garfield, on August 1, is to put into effect an order to curtail fuel to the industry 75 per cent., announced recently. Manufacturers say more factories operate on purchased power and may be able in this way to avoid full effect of the order.

Active Campaign by the State B. and L. League for Members

With more than 225 association members on its rolls, the New Jersey State League of Building and Loan Associations is making a vigorous campaign to increase its membership in substantial fashion before the holding in Newark late this month of the annual convention of the United States League of Building and Loan Associations. During the last two or three years the State League has come up from scarcely more than half a hundred members to its present standing. Most of the increases have been during the last few months, owing to the energy put forth to persuade associations in all parts of the State that hey should become league members, and that to such membership there attaches important benefits for the individual organizations and for the building and loan movement of the State as a whole.

In the list of State Leagues of the United States New Jersey now stands second. The league officers and others actively concerned in the building and loan welfare of New Jersey want to send it into first place as a State league organization, and they want to do it, if possible, in time to have its position recorded at the United States League meeting. To do this it will be necessary for more than 150 additional associations to join the State League within the next two weeks. This word is being sent to associations in every section of the State, under the direction of Secretary Howard R. Heydno, and quick and numerus responses are desired and expected.

New Jersey has approximately eight hundred building and loan associations. Every one of them should be in the State League. It New York State there is a total of a few more than 200 associations and the State League has a membership of 175, and is growing all the time. In several Western States the proportion of league members to the whole number of associations is much greater than it is in New Jersey. Building and loan leaders in Plainfield are agreed that the State League should embrace not less than 80 per cent. of the whole number of associations in the State in order for the associations and their more than three hundred thousand members to get the greatest possible benefits from organization and concentration of effort for the good of the building and loan movement. the possibilities of which are declared to have been scarcely more than scratched.

Affiliation with the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce has provided an opportunity for the State Building and Loan League to be a bigger and stronger factor in all the affairs of New Jersey than ever before. During the last session of the New Jersey legislature the merit of organized effort was made apparent through the prevention of legislation that would have been inimical to the best interests of building and loan associations generally. Individual efforts could not have stopped the proposed measures from becoming laws. The State League, in close association with the Essex county and Hudson county leagues, took the matter up and the result was elimination of all matters that were not approved by the best building and loan thought of the State. This demonstration of the needs and the possibilities of the building and loan movements of the State has since resulted in many new members being recorded by the State League, and the county leagues have also been strengthened in their memberships.

League membership entails an expense of only $5 a year to each member association. In return for this all associations receive the benefits of the efficient resources of the State Chamber of Commerce, as well as of the Building and Loan League, that is one of the important divisions of that body. Officers of building and loan associations from one end of the State to the other that are not yet State League members are urged to take the matter up at once and communicate with Secretary Heydon. Becoming a member of the State League means joining hands with and for the whole building and loan movement of New Jersey.

THE AWAKENING.

I'll tell you why I've come here, Sarge,
I've had a funny dream,
And tho' I know it wasn't real,
I've been feeling awful mean.
I dreamt the war was over, Sarge,
I was in a great big hall,
And from the stage a man read names,
Men answered to his call.

"John Jones," he'd read from his roll,
A man would answer "Here."
"John Jones," he'd say, "You done your bit,"
And then the crowd would cheer.
He kept on reading off the names,
Of lots of men I knew,
Who'd fought in France for Uncle Sam,
For the old Red, White and Blue.

Then someone shouted out my name,
I trembled then with fear,
For all around were eyes of scorn,
I faintly answered "Here."
And then the man, Old Uncle Sam,
Asked me what I had done
While other men had risked their lives
Until the war was won.

Then someone shouted from the crowd,
"Don't ask him, let me tell,
He stayed behind and let us fight.
He ought to be in Hell,
He was just a bit past thirty-one,
And was one of my pals.
They couldn't make that coward fight,
He stayed home with the gals."

The hall was like a Bedlam then,
The crowd began to jeer.
"He wouldn't fight, he stayed behind,
He ducked it by a year."
That woke me up and since that time
I just sit round and think
If the dream I had should be proved true,
I'd never sleep a wink.

Now, Sarge, I know what my pal said,
Tho' only in a dream,
Was really true in every way,
That's why I feel so mean.
So, Sarge, just let me sign my name
And prove that I'm a man,
For tho' I'm over thirty-one,
I'll fight for Uncle Sam.

FIRST EXCURSION IS OFF FOR THE SHORE.

The first excursion of the season to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove pulled out of the North avenue station at 8 o'clock this morning, carrying the members of the First Methodist, Grace Methodist and Monroe Avenue Sunday-schools.

Thirty cars were required to carry the happy excursioners who numbered in all about 1,500. The cars were divided in two sections. This is one of the largest excursions ever conducted by the local Methodists and the increased patronage is probably due to the fact that other Sunday-schools have been unable to secure dates for their outings.

The second excursion from Plainfield is set for next Thursday, when the Episcopal and other churches will conduct their annual outing.

CASE CONTINUED.

The case of Elias Southard, of Scotch Plains, arrested on the complaint of his employer, P. A. McVoy, of East Front street, that he had stolen a quantity of lead from his plumbing shop, was continued until tomorrow morning by Judge DeMeza when the defendant was arraigned in the city court yesterday morning. Southard, who is seventy years old, is accused of selling the lead to an North Plainfield junk dealer who is also to appear in court.

Therefore, I have manufactured and put upon the market the Old Fashioned Soda Water, made from the purest and best sugar and extracts obtainable.

One trial will convince you of its quality, and the merits of the goods will be its only salesman.

Crowder's Searchlight Ready to Shine on Ship Yard Shirkers

Two highly important problems concerning the effect of selective service upon industrial efficiency are under intimate investigation by the office of the provost marshal general. The first relates to the labor supply in the anthracite and bituminous mining field, more particularly in the anthracite field, and the second one is the application of the "work or fight" policy to young men of service age who are using ship yard exemptions to duck military service.

In the Pennsylvania hard coal field there is considerable complaint that the exemption boards are taking miners away in such numbers as seriously to imperil coal production and in a way to make more acute the shortage that threatens next winter. This complaint is growing in volume and is naturally being echoed in New ersey and other Northeastern states, which will be the ones to suffer if the anthracite supply runs short during the cold weather.

It is asked, with considerable force, why in the name of efficiency is not "some drastic action taken to prevent the shortage of household fuel being any shorter than it has promised to be, because a little coordination of effort between the proper government boards ought to make it impossible for the mines to be more crippled than they are." Which is to say that the anthracite industry should be exempted from the operation of the selective service act.

A newspaper man took this proposition to the office of Provost Marshal General Crowder and plumped it at the authorities there. Why, it was asked, does the army insist on taking men from the mining regions in the fact of a prospective fuel shortage. The answer was, "Because we have to have an army to lick the Kaiser."

"But this is an essential industry, and the selective service act is supposed to operate so as to keep essential industries going."

"That's true and this industry is going to keep going.. We are going to protect it just as much as our military requirements will allow. Every industry has got to suffer some; every industry has got to take its just and proportionate share of the war burden. You can say to the public that the draft is touching each industry only according to the military necessities as we measure them after we have surveyed the whole, broad situation from this central vantage point.

"You say: 'Exempt the coal miners because we must have coal so that we can keep warm next winter.' Where will that policy bring us up, once we adopt it? Let us stop and examine the situation in its entirety —the man who judges the questions just from the viewpoint of keeping warm next winter, doesn't get the whole picture.

"First, bear in mind that our fundamental job is to raise an army to beat the Kaiser. Are we going to get this army if we institute a broad policy of exemptions such as you would have us do in the case of the coal miners? We are not.

"It is not exempting coal winers, of itself, that will stop raising an army. It is the precedent and the policy. Once you exempt coal miners, per se, you have got to exempt the copper miner, the iron miners, the farm worker and so on down the line until you have an accumulation of exemptions that very seriously drains your man-power for the army.

"There is just as much reason, perhaps more, for exempting miners in the copper mines as there is for exempting coal miners in the anthracite field. We must have copper bands for our shells and lots of other purposes. The army needs copper more than it needs coal. They don't think of coal or a warm bed over there. Why should we get all excited if we do have less coal and if we do have a chilly house next winter? It's war and the people at home have got to pay part of the price. A lot of you people who come here to claim exemptions seem to forget that."

The provost marshal general has no desire to strip the anthracite field or any other field of labor, and they will not be stripped. But there are bound to be withdrawals of men and some disturbance. Whether the situation is as bad as is predicted in the complaints is not certain. Because of this an investigation is under way. One of the majors on General Crowder's staff will be in the anthracite region in a few days. He will have orders to confer fully with the Governor of Pennsylvania, and the adjutant general in charge of the State selective service machinery, and to make an intimate inquiry into the conditions at the various mines.

The information so gathered will be analyzed by the industrial experts, or rather the man-power experts on the provost marshal's staff. They will study it from the viewpoint of the service call's effect on the anthracite field itself and in its relation to the general industrial problem. If relief can be granted without impairing the workings of the service law and without inflicting inequalities, it will be forthcoming. General Crowder may be relied upon to do exact justice. If one is disposed to think that General Crowder and his staff do not know the anthracite situation, they are in error. Anthracite, however, is only part of the picture that is constantly before them.

Bearing on this general situation as to labor, it is the mature judgment of those who know the man-power resources of this country that if the labor which has been left at home—with three meals a day and a warm bed at night as against the catch-as-catch-can living of the land of trenches—if the labor that has been left at home will work five or ten per cent. overtime, it will more than make up the shortage caused by the withdrawal of men who are now in France working, working without stint or complaint, day and night.

A material cause for labor shortage in the coal fields, aside from withdrawals from the army, is the luring of miners to the higher paid jobs in munitions plants—another example of the evil of labor-snatching that has wrought tremendous harm to industrial efficiency in the last year. The government has been tardy in reaching out after this evil. However, plans of the federal employment service for centralizing all labor employment requirements in their hands, with the undoubted power of the government over industrial plants making war goods, promises to eliminate labor-snatching and ruinous competition for labor.

In regard to the investigation concerning men of selective service are getting slackers' jobs in ship yards, it is probable that, as a result of the provost marshal's inquiry, more drastice regulations will soon be promulgated and the administration of the exemption policy for ship yards taken over more completely by the provost marshal. The ship yards as a refuge for peacefully inclined shirkers will soon be very uncomfortable.

Indeed, at the present moment, the provost marshal has his inspectors abroad, looking over the young men in the shipbuilding industry and ascertaining if they are really working or only holding d job that a woman or an older man could occupy. Men of fighting ages are being "tapped" on the back by these inspectors and if they haven't dirty hands and grimy faces they have to explain and to prove what they are doing to warrant their exemption.

There has been looseness in administering the ship yards exemptions. The provost marshal has taken the word of the exemption division of the Emergency Fleet Corporation and thtter has taken the word of the responsible officials of the ship yards; that is to say, when a man of service age would bet a ship yard job, the ship yard management was supposed to certify whether or not he was essential. That certification came through to the fleet corporation and, after indorsement, was passed on to the exemptiion boards. This system of dual control provided loopholes and opportunities for evasion and also it provided opportunities for the application of conflicting standards as to what constituted an essential worker.

The result has been that in some yards, including the plants at Newark, able-bodied men of service age have been working as file clerks, time keepers and the like. All these lads would better get themselves into overalls, because one can never tell when one of Crowder's inspectors is liable to walk up from the rear and give him the tap. There is to be a combing out of this class and a tightening up on the exemptions that are given to ship yard workers. Crowder won't stand for any more shenanigans.

There is another species of shiy yard worker that General Crowder is going after. That is the lad who is so patriotic that he lays off on Monday and Thursday and then works on Sunday, when the double-time pay gives him as much as if he had worked the other two days. This practice, of course, is not confined to men of service age. The matter of age has nothing to do with these workmen, who are profiteering, or soldiering, on the job. But the men of service age, being under government control, are gettable, and "them as don't want to work" on Mondays and Thursdays, but like to labor on the Sabbath, will soon have the alternative of wading around a front line trench with a gun.

There are other inequalities in the operation of selective service machinery that the authorities are aware of. Experience has disclosed many things and taught many lessons since the service act was instituted and every effort has been made to adjust administration according to experience. It takes time; th average man has no conception of the number or magniture of the problems that have been encountered in devising and applying the service law. No man is competent to sit in judgment on the workings of the act unless he can go to Washington, where the viewpoint necessarily is national and not sectional.

General Crowder does not ask for a single thing from the public except patience and time to work out the job that has been put up to him—to raise an army that will lick the Kaiser.

Civilian Tobacco Users Likely to Go on Rations

The soldier' demand for his cigarette may lead to the rationing of tobacco among civilians, the War Industries Board announced.

Investigations are now under way to determine the amount of tobacco that must be conserved in this country to supply the needs of the soldiers.

Comparisons have been made of the rations issued by Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium.

The estimate of the amount available for 1918 in the United States from the 1917 crop is 850,000,000 pounds.

Saving Tin Cans As a Means of Beating Germany

Jade carvings, lacquered shrines and carved wood jewel boxes will not help win the war, in the opinion of the American Government, but tin cans and garbage will.

In its steady progress toward elimination of the great American waste, the Government has put the three former items on the restricted imports list. The latter items are being looked after by other departments of the Government.

Tennis rackets, tennis, golf, base, ping-pong and bowling balls; almond flour used in cosmetics; metal vases and similar luxuries also are on a newly-issued restricted imports list.

The Department of Agriculture announces that if you do not throw away your tin cans, but save them to can the Kaiser, you may make some money. If you can gather 7,000 or 8,000 of them, free from rust, you may get $12 for them, according to quotations furnished by a smelter.

So worried has the Government become about the sinful waste of beautiful garbage in this country, that the Food Administration has issued an appeal to the housekeeper, saying:

"One ton of garbage contains:

"Sufficient glycerine for fourteen seventy-five millimeter shells.

"Sufficient fatty acid for manufacture of 100 twelve-ounce cakes of soap; sufficient fertilizer elements to grow eight bushels of wheat; a score of other materials valuable in munitions making.

"If used as hog feed it will produce:

"One hundred pounds of good, firm, first-quality pork.

"Can you afford to destroy these valuable products when your Government needs them to help win the war?

"Put less in your garbage pail and take more out. But what must go in should be kept separate from other household refuse so it can be used.

"Remember! Garbage is valuable. Keep it clean!"

County Tax Board Awaits Court Decree

County Tax Commissioners Thompson and Collins reported at the meeting of the County Tax Board, Wednesday morning, that as a result of the meeting Tuesday in Trenton a decision will soon be reached by the State Tax Board in relation to the opinion of the attorney general on the constitutionality of the law allowing firemen, soldiers and sailors an exemption of $500 on personal property taxation.

The matter of the application of this law was brought to the attention of the attorney general's office some time ago by the Union county officials, who asked for an opinion. Some years ago a similar law had been passed and was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. During 1917 the State Legislature again enacted the law, copying verbatim the act which had previously been declared unconstitutional.

It has been the contention of other county boards that in making up their assessments for the coming year they should proceed according to the late enactment, but the Union county board felt that if the law was once declared invalid, the case should again be brought to the attention of the Supreme Court before confusion was created by the possibility of a contest after the coming year's bills had been made out. To avoid this confusion, the State Board called Tuesday's meeting, and it is announced that a decision will be forthcoming in very short order.

Wednesday the Union County Tax Board reviewed the complaints in regard to the unequal assessments on personal property, and it discussed ways and means to be followed in securing a uniform personal taxation plan throughout the county.

French Money Disliked By American Soldiers

Forgetting how to figure in "regular money" and learning how to calculate in "this dog-gone stuff" is one of the first worries of the American soldier in France.

"Regular money" is good old dollars and cents, nickels, dimes and quarters.

"This dog-gone stuff" is the name applied to French francs, usually paper money, often as low as single francs, or twenty cents, for most small cities have issued local small change currency.

The Americans do not like French paper money. They say it is trash, and tears, and is hard to count.

On the other hand the French are shocked when an American crumples French paper up and shoves it in his pocket the "way they do back home." French money is to be handled in big pocketbooks, and not crumpled.

"Look at some real money once," a doughboy told a merchant, and flashed a bright new silver certificate. When he crumpled it up in his fist to show how "real money" can be used," the Frenchman almost fainted.

The Americans are paid almost entirely in French money and they are getting used to francs, though they all agree "a franc's so small it slips through your fingers like water."

New Bill Will Tax Hats, Shoes and Even Canes

Continuing its preparations for the new war revenue tax bill, the House Ways and Means Committee has gone through a big list of luxuries and necessary commodities and in the case of the former has nearly doubled the tax in many instances. So far as possible the necessities of life have been left alone but the rough draft of the bill is to be gone over again later and what will be the ultimate decision on these is only conjecture at this time.

The last revenue bill returned something over $4,000,000; the new measure must produce $8,000,000,000. Some of the taxes it will be impossible to double. Income and excess profits taxes running up to 60 per cent. and higher obviously cannot be doubled. They will be radically increased, however.

Luxury taxes will be levied to make up the amounts lost on commodities whose present taxes cannot well be increased. The luxury list sent by the treasury department to the committee probably will be disregarded, members said today. Some of the suggestions it contained were already in the minds of some committeemen, however, and they will be followed.

The committee has reached few definite conclusions in specific problems today. It had decided:

That taxes on tobacco must at least be doubled;

That no taxes shall be levied on oil or sugar;

That taxes ranking from 10 to 20 per cent. on the purchase price of automobile must be set.

Clothing for both men and women costing more than $40 probably will be taxed up to 20 per cent. Coats at more than $30 will be taxed on the same scale. Taxes on jewelry probably will range up to 50 per cent., with perhaps 500 per cent. tax on the platinum sorts.

The committee has not yet considered wheat, cotton or lumber as possible sources of revenue. These will come in for consideration later.

The recommendations suggesting a retail sale tax and a tax on manufacturer and producer are as follows:

Fifty per cent. on the retail price of jewelry, including watches and clocks, except those sold to army officers.

Twenty per cent. on automobiles, trailers and truck units, motorcycles, bicycles, automobile, motorcycle, and bicycle tires and musical instruments.

A tax on all men's suits selling for more than $20, hats over $4, shirts over $2, pajamas over $2, hosiery over 35 cents, shoes over $5, gloves over $2, underwear over $3 and all neckwear and canes.

On women's suits over $40, coats over $30, ready-made dresses over 35, skirts over $15, hats over $10, hoes over $6, lingerie over $5, corsets over $5. Dress goods—Silk over $1.50 a square yard; cotton over 50 cents a square yard, and wool over $2 per square yard. All furs, boas, nd fans.

On children's clothing—On children's suits over $15, cotton dresses over $3, linen dresses over $5, silk and wool dresses over $2. hats $5, shoes $4, and gloves.

On housefurnishings, all ornamental lamps and fixtures, all table linen, cutlery and silverware, china and cut glass; all furniture in sets for which $5 or more is paid for each piece; on curtains over $2 per yard, and on tapestries, rugs, and carpets over $5 per square yarrd

On all purses, pocketbooks, handbags, brushes, combs, and toilet articles and all mirrors over $2

Ten per cent. on the collections from the sales of vending machines.

Ten per cent. on all hotel bills amounting to more than $2.50 per person per day. Also the present tax on cabaret bills is made to apply to the entire restaurant or cafe bill (the present tax is 10 per cent).

Ten cents a gallon on all gasoline to be paid by the wholesale dealer.

Ten per cent. tax on wire leases.

The following taxes on soft drinks are suggested: Those now paying 5 cents a gallon, to pay 20 cents; those paying 8 cents, to pay 30 cents; those paying 10 cents, to pay 40 cents; and those paying 20 cents, to pay 80 cents Mineral water now taxed 1 cent a gallon, to pay 16 cents. Chewing gum now taxed 2 per cent. of the selling price, to pay 1 cent on each 5-cent package.

Motion picture shows and films: Abolish the foot tax of ¼ and ½ cent a foot and substitute a tax of 5 per cent. on the rentals received by the producer, and double the tax on admissions.

Double the present taxes on alcoholic beverages, viz.:

Distilled spirits, now $3.20 per gallon, proposed $6.40.

Fermented, $3 per gallon, proposed $6.

Wine, 8 cents per gallon, to be 16 cents.

Tobacco and cigarette taxes are doubled.

Automobiles—A license tax on passenger automobiles graduated according to horsepower:

23 horsepower or less, $15.
24 to 30 horsepower, $25.
31 to 40 horsepower, $40.
Over 40 horsepower, $50.

Double club membership dues.

Household servants, male, 25 per cent. of the wages of one servant up to 100 per cent. of the combined wage of four or more.

Female servants, each family exempted from tax on one servant.

All additional servants, (female), from 10 to 100 per cent. on all over four

The theatre tax is now 10 per cent. on all admissions except those under 5 cents. If the recommendations of the Treasury Department are accepted the tax will be 20 per cent.

All club dues over $12 a year now pay a tax of 10 per cent. It is suggested that this should be doubled.

At present there is no Federal tax on the users of automobiles. The proposed licensing would hit every user of an automobile in the country, compelling him to pay a Federal license tax as well as a State tax.

Candidates Will Face "Acid Tests"

Charles F. McDonald, Democratic State chairman, speaking of the policy on which the Democratic party will base itself in the coming United States Senatorial fight, said yesterday that the contest is to be conducted without partisanship or rancor.

The candidates of the party are to be known supporters of the administration, to have always been in favor of stern and relentless waging of war and no cessation until Kaiserism and autocracy are suppressed, he declared further. No lip service or provocation of loyalty, such as "I stand with the President," etc., is to be a qualification of a candidate. The acid test is to be, who is the man and where has he stood regarding the acts and purposes of the administration.

"No man is entitled to the confidence of the people at this time who makes so-called constructive criticism," the Democratic chairman went on to say, "the cloak to cover public and sinister attacks upon the President and his administration.

"I propose carrying on this campaign with the aid and co-operation of not only the State Committee and the Auxiliary Committee, but with the assistance of the county committees and their chairman," Mr. McDonald continued.

The campaign is to be opened shortly and will continue until election night, according to the chairman.

In concluding, Mr. McDonald said that he felt that Democracy has stood the test of a great political party whose aim and achievement have been in the cause of human liberty and constructive government, and that the perpetuation of the Government of, by and for the people is secure and assured under the rules of the party.

State Spends $150,000 Yearly On Abnormals

New Jersey is expending fully $150,000 annually along with local districts in training subnormal children, and there were 2,220 such pupils enrolled in classes in the State during 1916 and 1917, according to a pamphlet issued by the State Department of Education this week dealing with the teaching of children mentally three years or more below the normal. It is further stated that the expense for the maintenance of these classes is not to be measured by the number of subnormal children enrolled in them, as the withdrawal or elimination of such children from the regular classes relieves the teacher of those classes of a large burden. The presence in regular classes of subnormal children is a great tax upon the energy and time of the teacher and often greatly retards the progress of normal children, it is said.

"It is fitting for several reasons that New Jersey should be first to set up standards for teaching these children in its public schools," it is stated in the pamphlet. "New Jersey was the first State to make the establishment of these schools compulsory. In the operation of these schools it has experience to draw on covering a period of more than five years. More significant still, it has among its teachers and citizens men and women who are widely recognized as experts in the study and treatment of this class of children."

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MARY W. ANDERSON.

In the presence of many relatives and friends, the funeral of Miss Mary Willis Anderson, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Willis Anderson, who died at her parents' home in Greenwich, Conn., from frightful burns received last Friday, was held Monday afternoon in this city at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Ramsey Blair, of Park avenue. Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, to which Miss Anderson belonged when living here, was the officiating clergyman. The flowers were numerous and beautiful, representing the deep grief felt by those shocked by the girl's terrible death. Burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Dr. and Mrs. Anderson were Plainfield residents for many years up to 1914, at which time they removed to Portchester, N. Y. The change was made because Dr. Anderson resigned as treasurer in the J. P. Morgan banking house in New York to become treasurer of the Ernest Simons Manufacturing Company at Portchester. Two months ago the family moved to Greenwich and it was at their home on Milbank avenue, that city, that the fatal accident occurred last Friday.

Miss Anderson, who was a pupil at the Rosemary school in Greenwich, was helping her mother do some canning. Mrs. Anderson found it necessary to go to another part of the house and shortly afterward Miss Mary attempted to take a pan of liquid paraffine from the stove. In some way the inflammable stuff became ignited, sending up a flare of flame that reached out to the girl's clothes. In a moment, her attire was blazing from head to foot, and as she could, she was unable to stay their progress. Her screams brought her mother and two young men from the neighborhood but she was beyond aid when they reached her side.

In a vain hope of saving their daughter's life, Dr. and Mrs. Anderson summoned Dr. W. L. Griswold and Dr. Z. W. Hitchkins, chief of surgeons in the Roosevelt Hospital, New York, and also the girl's uncle, Dr. Thomas B. Blair, of this city. Their efforts were of no avail as death came at 1 o'clock Saturday morning.

Miss Anderson had a host of acquaintances in Plainfield and her untimely fate came as a distinct shock to all. Dr. and Mrs. Anderson, the latter having been Miss Agnes Blair, sister of James R. and Adam C. Blair and Mrs. David Boice, also have a wide acquaintance here, and the sympathy of the entire community is extended in their hours of bereavement.

DR. CHARLES P. BULL, JR.

Friends in this city received word on Wednesday of the death at Terlingua, Texas, of Dr. Charles P. Bull, Jr., a former well known Plainfield resident. The information came from a brother of the deceased, Major E. Llewelyn Bull, of the U. S. infantry stationed at West Point, one of the only two surviving members of the family. The other is another brother, William Bull, residing at Yonkers, N. Y.

In letters sent to local friends, Major Bull gave no details beyond stating that Dr. Bull passed away on June 28 and that he was in his forty-fourth year. The deceased was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Bull, whose home for a long time was on East Ninth street, nearly opposite Third place. The residence is still owned by the estate, although the family removed from here about eighteen years ago. Dr. Bull for a long time had been affected by a malignant growth in the neck which on several occasions threatened his life. He underwent several operations in New York, which were partially successful but specialists informed the patient that the trouble would re-occur if he continued to live in the North. For this reason, Dr. Bull went to Texas to live and he was residing at Terlingua when the old trouble brought about his end.

Dr. Bull and his surviving brothers are well remembered by Plainfield people. The former and Llewelyn were especially prominent in athletics and other activities at the Plainfield High School, from which they were graduated. Llewelyn entered West Point later and has since been in the United States army, holding the rank of major at the present time.

MRS. WARNOCK'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary C. Warnock, wife of William W. Warnock, whose death occurred after a long illness, was held at the late home at 22 Craig place, the borough, Sunday afternoon. The residence was filled with relatives and friends, many of whom came from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Passaic and other places.

Rev. B. H. McCoy, pastor of the First M. E. church, to which Mrs. Warnock belonged, was the officating clergyman. He preached from no text after reading scripture passages, but instead spoke in a most feeling manner of the last few weeks of Mrs. Warnock's life and what a loss it was to those she had left behind. The pastor declared that although her death had been untimely and had terminated a bright and useful career, it had not been in vain and that the Christian fortitude she displayed during her hours of pain and suffering would ever stand as a lesson to others not so richly endowed with so lovable a character. To the bereaved husband, daughters, mother and sisters, he extended words of comfort in the declaration that she had died in the full possession of her Master's love and that she would await their coming in the home beyond.

During the service, two of Mrs. Warnock's favorite hymns, "Jesus, Love rof My Soul" and "Nearer My God to Thee," were sung by Senator William N. Runyon.

A great mass of floral tributes, so numerous as to form a large bank and almost hide the casket from view attested to the love and sympathy of friends. The array included set pieces from Lydia Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, and the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, of which Mrs. Warnock was a member; Plainfield Lodge of Elks, Anchor Lodge of Masons; Armour & Company, the Zeek Baking Company, with which Mr. Warnock is associated and also a beautiful contribution from the neighbors to the Warnock home.

Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Anderw Wilson, James H. Lane, Senator William N. Runyon, Alfred K. Willett, Elias H. Bird and Lewis M. French.

MRS. MARY PETRICELLI.

Mrs. Mary Petricelli, aged forty-three years, died suddenly at her home at 86 Manning avenue, Wednesday morning. She seemed to be in her usual health when her husband departed for his work at the Saurer plant, after breakfast, but later in the day she complained of feeling ill. She went to her room and failing to appear for preparation of the noon-day meal, her young son started to learn what was the trouble. He found his mother dead in bed.

The Petricelli family has lived in Plainfield a long time but only recently purchased the property on Manning avenue. Beside her husband and son, Mrs. Petricelli leaves two daughters.

The funeral was held in St. Joseph's church this morning, when mass was offered by Rev. Father Campbell. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Secretary Randolph Mails Check for Bat and Ball Fund

Secretary Dan Randolph, of the Plainfield City Baseball League, this week sent to Clark C. Griffith, a check for seventy-five dollars and twenty cents for the Ball and Bat Fund for the American boys in France. This amount represents the proceeds of the exhibition game held two weeks ago and is the second "piece of change" that has been donated by the League for war benefit purposes.

Last year, the League gave an exhibition game which netted about one hundred and twenty-five dollars. Half of this was given the local naval league at the time it was preparing articles for Company K exclusively, and the other half was turned over to the Company K Veterans' Association, then in charge of relief work for the families of Company K men.

The financial result of both games was a source of great satisfaction to the City League members and has made them feel that they have turned their baseball talents to good advantage. It is possible that they may attempt something bigger yet before the present season closes. Much credit for the preparation and carrying out of plans for the exhibition games is due Secretary Randalph, as he cheerfully bore the burden of publicity work and handling of all details outside of the actual playing on the diamond. This is the letter which he sent to Clark Griffith in company with the check for seventy-five dollars and twenty cents:

July 16th, 1918.

Clark C. Griffith Ball and Bat Fund.
Washington, D. C.

Gentlemen:

At the suggestion of Walter Firstbrook, a former local newspaper man now in the service, an exhibition game was played by two all star teams picked from the four clubs of the Plainfield City Baseball League, for the benefit of your Ball and Bat Fund.

It affords us great pleasure to enclose check to your order in the sum of seventy-five dollars and twenty cents ($75.20), which represents the proceeds.

We thank you for the opportunity of helping in a small way our boys "over there" to enjoy the great American sport.

Very truly yours,

Fare Rate Decision Knocks Props From Record's Argument

In a statement made at Trenton on the Public Utility Commission's decision in the Public Service trolley fare fight, State Senator Thomas F. McCran, of Passaic, presiding officer of the Upper House of the Legislature, declared that the effect of the decision politically is to knock all prop from under the platform of George L. Record and to explode his propaganda completely. He said that by appealing to prejudice and manufacturing a "principal issue," which has collapsed months in advance of the primaries, Record has literally talked himself out of the contest, and without the Governor finding it necessary to discuss, much less to meet the campaign sophistry.

"For many weeks, Mr. Record and his publicity promoters had harped on the trolley fare situation as the only issue apparently which would be trumped up against the Edge campaign; night after night, without absolutely no consideration for the fact that evidence presented to the Utility Commission might justify an increase, they had spoken irresponsibly of the gift of several million dollars which the 'Governor's Utility Commission' was to hand over to the trolley crowd," Mr. McCrarn asserted in his statement. "In letters and newspaper statement, they had held up to public scorn the Utility Commission, heedless of the moral effect of shaking public confidence in a responsible judicial body, and presumptiously anticipated a dishonest, arbitrary fare increase. In the midst of this demagoguery the Court of Errors and Appeals came along with its great popular decision in the Bradley Beach case, upholding the right of the Utility Commission to oblige the trolley company to give additional transfers despite the fact that it was not required to do so in its franchise agreement with the municipality.

"And by the way," added the president of the Senate, "I have not heard a word from Mr. Record concerning the reduction in rates of telephone companies by order of the Utility Commission, resulting in a saving of approximately $800,000 to the consumers of the State. This is a permanent reduction, not based upon an emergency like the trolley rate, and therefore not apt to be disturbed. It is a source of satisfaction to learn that the people can trust the Utility Board in rates," concluded Mr. McCran.

Corporation Formed to Sell German Properties

Announcement is made by A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, of the formation of a corporation which, under the trading with the enemy act, will control and sell the German-owned corporations taken over by the custodian. It is stated that there now are 140 German-owned corporations, valued at about $250,000,000, in the hands of the custodian, and that forty of these concerns with a capitalization of more than $100,000,000 are ready for sale.

The selling organization will consist of a committee, located at Washington and headed by Mr. Palmer; an advisory committee in New York, representatives of the alien property custodian in charge of each property to be sold, and attorneys representing the custodian in respect to each property to be sold. There also will be a sales manager in New York, and to this position Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, has been appointed.

It is said that sales will be made at public auction whenever it is possible to do so. Mr. Palmer says:

"Under no circumstances will any person in the employ, or connected with the organization, of the alien property custodian be permitted to bid for or purchase any property, or be interested directly or indirectly in any such purchase, or in any corporation or syndicate interested therein. This provision also applies to local representatives and local attorneys in the sales of properties in respect of which they have represented or acted for the alien property custodian.

"The expenses of each sale, which shall include al expenses and costs of every kind, shall be paid out of the funds of the specific property sold, or out of the purchase money received from such sale, or deducted from the purchase price."

Unskilled Labor to be Drafted For War Work

Definite plans for putting into effect the centralization of unskilled labor recruiting for war industries under the United States employment service after August 1, have been determined upon at a three-day conference just closed, between employment managers, State employment agents and officials of the employment service.

All plants engaged upon war work have been instructed to notify immediately the agent of the United Etates Employment Service in their State of their approximate requirements in unskilled labor. An agent of the federal service will then be assigned to co-operate with the plant in securing its labor. The instructions state that "vigorous efforts will be made in every community to secure the alloted quota of competent industries or from the farms. So far as possible recruiting for your plant will be centered in certain definite states and localities.

Plants which now have a field force for recruiting labor may continue to employ that force under the direction of the United States Employment Service.

Make Your Letters Cheerful and Write Whenever You Can

If you really want to help the soldier from home write him letters—not grumpy, sob letters about your trials with the latest cook, or the unpleasant neighbors who moved in next door; but funny, interesting letters with the latest news from home that will keep him from worry and cheer him up for days. This, in effect, is the advice of the War Department.

A glance at the mail of any one of our large cantonments would indicate that this advice is scarcely needed, for approximately 150,000 letters are sent and received a day at each of the division camp postoffices. Besides this heavy correspondence, from ten to fifteen tons of packages are handled in a day in one of these camps. The total for a camp of about 40,000 men is equal to the business of the postoffice in Pittsburgh or Baltimore, cities of nearly 600,000 population.

In spite of this proof that our soldiers are not being forgotten, friends and relatives are constantly being urged by the Postoffice and War Departments, by officers and correspondents abroad to keep in touch with the enlisted man, especially when he leaves for France.

One of our generals at the front says, "Nothing keeps the boys in good spirits like letters from home. If every boy could get two letters a week, the army discipline question would be settled."

There is a report in circulation that soldiers abroad can mail only one letter a week. This statement is unfounded. A soldier abroad can write home as often as he will. The Q. M. C. A. makes writing home as easy as possible for the man in service. Paper, pen, ink—everything except ideas are furnished in the "Y" huts which follow the soldier to the firing line.

The most important factor about a letter or package to a soldier is the address. The full name, company and regiment of the man addressed should always be given, followed by the name and location of his camp or the words "American Expeditionary Forces," as the case may demand. American Expeditionary Forces should always be spelled in full, as A. E. F. may be taken to mean Australian Expeditionary Forces. The sender is also advised to avoid other abbreviations and initials in the address, to write clearly and in ink, and to place his own full name and address in the upper left-hand corner of the envelope. Envelopes and wrapping paper of good quality should be used, especially if the mail is going overseas, as cheap paper tears easily and does not retain the address so clearly.

All these instructions have been printed many times and posted in conspicuous places. Yet thousands of letters incompletely addressed are sent out trustfully to the soldiers every day. Some of these finally reach the addresses after much trouble and delay to the Government. Those not deliverable which bear the sender's address are returned. But many unfortunate epistles and gifts can neither be sent on nor returned, and these find lodging in the dead letter office. Some of the lost packages have been turned over to the Red Cross or military hospitals for use by ill and wounded soldiers and sailors.

The bulk of mail properly addressed reaches the soldier in this country without delay, and an immense part of overseas mail gets to France for delivery in seventeen days after leaving Chicago or New York. Thirty days shoul, however, be allowed as the approximate time needed to send a letter to a soldier abroad. Delays in delivery abroad may be due to any of a number of possible causes. Mail is dispatched once or twice a week, according to sailings. Thus a letter may be held up from three to seven days in waiting for a steamer or transport. Then it may be sent on a steamer taking twenty-one days to cross instead of one taking twelve days, or a French liner taking only ten days. When it reaches port it may be carried immediately or it may be held several days before cars can be released to handle mail.

It costs the Government $100,000, a month to maintain the postal service for soldiers in France alone. It is expected and desired that friends and relatives write to the men abroad, but the generosity and lavishness of America made the problem of gifts for soldiers overseas a desperate one. Thousands of tons of packages loaded down the transports and crowded out guns, soldiers and rations. At Christmas time no limitations were attempted. The Postoffice Department accepted cheerfully the responsibility of ninety-four cargoes of presents and delivered ninety of the ninety-four on Christmas Eve and Christmas morning. But after the Christmas rush, when sympathetic friends insisted on sending chewing gum and candy across in the delusion that France did not produce such articles, the War Department requested the Postoffice Department to ask the public to retrench.

Chewing gum, cake, candy, and cigarettes can easily be obtained in French stores and at Y. M. C. A. canin this country. It is suggested that persons wishing to provide these things for soldiers abroad can send money orders which can be cashed at any army postoffice.

No limitations, excepting weight, have been set by the United States on packages sent to soldiers and sailors in this country, but moderation and forethought are urged upon the public. Fruit and perishable food of all sorts should not be entrusted to the mails. In proof of the wisdom of this advice are statistics showing that thousands of packages are destroyed by military authorities rather than deliver spoilt articles to the soldiers. This is particularly true in southern camps where a wave of hot weather reduces even the hardest biscuits to a soggy mass after their sojourn in postoffice and mail trains.

Senator Baird Hit Hard by New Senate Aspirant

"I don't believe the Democrats of the State ought to present a gentlemen with a record like that of Mr. Baird with a free pass to the United States Senate, even for a period of four months, and I believe that is the opinion of the progressive voters of the State, without regard to party," declared former State Senator Charles O'Connor Hennessy, of Bergen county, Wednesday, and he forthwith announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the short term at Washington to fill the unexpired term of the late William Hughes, of Paterson. Mr. Hennessy is also in the Democratic race for the long-term nomination.

"Mr. Baird now holds his seat in the United States Senate," continued the former Bergen legislator, "not by the choice of the people of the State, but as a result of what I believe is generally recognized as a questionable political deal designed to make easier the attainment of the Senatorial ambition of Governor Edge. That deal cannot be defended on any ground of public interest or propriety, and the Democrats of the State ought to give the electorate an opportunity to pass judgment upon the Senatorial fitness of Mr. Baird and upon his record at Washington, where he has played true to his ancient form as a reactionary politician.

"As I also intend to be a candidate in the primaries for the nomination for the full Senatorial term, beginning March 4 next, some people apprehend possible damage to my candidacy for the latter honor through the disposition of unthinking voters to ascribe to me an anxiety to obtain two offices at he same time. This may be the motive that has actuated other Senatorial aspirants in failing to contend for the short-term nomination. I have no fear, however, but that the true nature of the situation will be made plain before primary day in such manner as will satisfy every intelligent voter who might desire to see me succeed to the seat of Senator Hughes, both for the short balance of his term remaining, and for the full term succeeding."

That John R. Hardin, of Newark, a leading member of the bar of the State and of the law firm of Pitney, Hardin & Skinner, will become the candidate of the Democratic State organization at the coming party primary for the Senatorial nomination is generally predicted at Trenton, following the incident of Wednesday, which brought Mr. Hardin, State Chairman McDonald, Attorney-General Wescott and Secretary of State Martin together at the State House. If Hardin enters the race, and it seems now that he will, it means that at least four contestants will go to the wire in the Democratic primary, namely, Simpson, of Hudson; Hennessy, of Bergen; McDermit, Essex, and Hardin, also of Essex. A short time ago there was a noticeable dearth of Democratic candidates, but the political woods are getting crowded with them.

Frank M. McDermit was at Trenton, Wednesday, with the announcement tht he intends to make a test of that feature of the election law which prohibits a defeated candidate at a primary from running independently at the general election. He wants to test it as it applies to the unusual long and short term situation in the Senatorial race. He desires to be a candidate for the short term at Washington, from November to March, and has already filed his petition, with 1,400 signers, as a candidate for the long term Democratic nomination. Unlike Mr. Hennessy, he has some fear that his name on the primary ballot twice would have a bad effect upon the mind of the voter.

"The voters might think I was hogging it," said McDermit.

In this situation he believes he has the right to file a nominating petition as an independent short term candidate at the November general election, contending that the election provision about defeated primary candidates does not relate to a situation where there are candidates for two distinctive terms of office, as in the present Senatorial situation. He intends to file this petition, with a thousand signatures, so that the Secretary of State's office may rule upon it with the advice of the Attorney-General's department. In the event it is accepted, McDermit, if defeated for the long term nomination at the primary, would still have his name on the November ballots as a short term candidate.

Fourth Liberty Loan Dates Soon To Be Announced

Announcement of the date and length of campaign for the fourth Liberty Loan may be expected soon, it is believed, as a result of a conference at Washington, this week, of Liberty Loan publicity managers from the twelve federal reserve districts and smaller financial areas. Secretary McAdoo has announced that the fourth loan will total $6,000,000,000 or more and that the interest rate will probably be four and one-quarter per cent.

Suggestions were made at the conference that the campaign for the fourth loan be started September 28. Treasury Department officials are said to favor a campaign lasting only three weeks with more intensified effort rather than the four-week campaign followed in raising the previous three loans.

No More Releases for Entrance To Either Navy or Marine Corps

Announcement came from Secretary Walter Freeman at the local exemption board office today that no more releases would be granted either 1917 or 1918 registrants for enlistments in the navy or marine corps.

Mr. Freeman's statement followed an order from the adjutant general's office declarjng that releases were not to be allowed in any part of the country. It was explained that conflction had occurred between the two branches of service, the army and navy, and that in order for the former to maintain its supply of men the releases would have to be stopped.

Many of the Plainfield young men who registered on June 5 last have been seeking to enter the navy or marine corps but cannot be given the needed credentials from now on. It means that only certain branches of army service are open to them if they choose to enlist before being called as selectives.

Secretary Freeman received word this morning that the four limited service men ordered sent to the training camp at Syracuse, N. Y., must leave Plainfield next Tuesday morning on the 8:06 train for Newark. There they are to board a special train on the Lackawanna Railroad and in company with many other limited service men from Newark, Elizabeth, Bayonne and other places, proceed to Syracuse, reaching the latter city about 6 o'clock in the evening. The four men who have been selected are Kenneth L. Thompson, of Mountainside; Charles Drake, John J. Day and James J. Nash, all of Plainfield. They are to be numbered among several hundred limited service men who are wanted for police and fire duty at camps and cantonments.

The latest call for men received at the Plainfield office came in on Wednesday and gave notification that thirty-seven colored men should be sent out from this district during the five-day period beginning August 1. This will leave only twelve colored men in Plainfield's original class 1-A. Those who are to go on or about August 1 will be inducted into the colored infantry regiments. Thirteen of them are to go to Camp Upton at Yaphank, L. I., and the other twenty-four are to go to Camp Dix.

These are the twenty-four men who are to go to Camp Dix:

Examination of New Registrants Nets Forty-six 1-A Men

As a result of the first examination of 1918 registrants held at the Evergreen Avenue School, Monday afternoon, forty-six men have been placed on the waiting list of the Plainfield district for selective service. These men were included in the total of 189 youths reaching the age of twenty-one years since une 5, 1917.

Appeals to the number of seventy have been made to the district board at Newark and the local board has no jurisdiction in these cases until the Newark board has given a return. Of the eighty-nine who were called for examination Monday, seven failed to appear and are now being looked up by the draft board agents. Dr. William H. Murray acted as chairman of the board of examining physician and in addition to the forty-six accepted men gave this detailed report: Placed in limited service class, nine; placed on deferred list for six months, to overcome minor defects, nine; rejected entirely, six; referred to Union county advisory board, three; placed in remedial class, two.

The forty-six men accepted for general military service were the following:

Alex Eggleston, Michael Pendolino, Ernest M. Pelligrim, Norman Jeeter, Frederick W. Green, John J. C. Roach, Harry N. Freedman, Joseph A. McEvoy, George Boynton, Jr., Gabriel Groletto, Paul Heteji, Angelo Di Cuallo, John. D. Williams, Ray Trimmer. Thomas J. Gleason, James M. McCarty, Thomas E. Ford, Julius Smith, George W. Evans, Harold L. Van Alstyne, Edward Coleman, George L. Kingslow, Cyril W. Coad, August Meyer, Alinton Walker, James Heron, Jr., Dominick Mangino, Vernal J. Williams. Lloyd E. Orser, Antonio Carovillano, Harry C. Davenport, Clifford Upsuhr, Wilbert Freeman, James C. Fleming, John E. Bush, Edward A. Hayden, Alfred H. Luthman, Edward J. Shillinger, Ray W. Shearer, Joseph J. Mutnick, Melvin Halsey, Joseph S. Barbara, Bernard T. Miller, Anthony Wormser, Antonio Viola and Thomas Reddick.

The nine men placed in the limited service class are Albert T. Mason. Adam Povolack, Harold G. Davis, Vincent Stebor, Percy Howell, Emil J. Bernardenelli, Arthur Hammond, Edward M. Van Buren and Joseph Stein.

The nine placed in the deferred class for six months were Martin R. Roth, John McGauley, Roy MacIntyre, Russell Washington, Clayton H. Ballantyne, Edmund B. Teel, Joseph A. Sutton and David French.

Those rejected were Edward L. Roberson, James L. Moulton, Morris Aitken, Hyman D. Shrager. William H. Mitchell and Elwood Carter.

Harry F. Suydam was the one registrant placed in the remedial class, and Antonio Ricci and Harry Huff were referred to the county advisory board for final disposition.

Big Sendoff for Twenty-two More Selected Men

One of the most successful sendoffs yet given a Plainfield contingent of selectives was that accorded the twenty-two men who left on the 9:38 train from Camp Dix yesterday.

The program in their behalf commenced Wednesday night, when they were the guests of honor at a dinner given in Columbus Hall as arranged by the Citizens' Committee. The big auditorium was attractively decorated and the menu prepared by Mrs. E. R. Banks and a committee of assisting women was all that could be desired. Chairman John J. Vasey, of the Citizens' Committee, was in charge of the ceremonies and beside making a neat address himself introduced Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church. Rev. Dr. Carroll, rector of St. Stephen's church, and Mayor Leighton Gaskins, each of whom spoke feelingly of the duty the young men were taking up and what it meant to the community. The address by Father Bogan was especially stirring, patriotism overflowing every part of it and presented in such a way that he was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause. The program was commenced at 6 o'clock and ended two hours later in order to allow the selectives to spend the rest of the evening at home with their families.

The comfort kits, prepared by the local chapter of the Red Cross, were presented as the young men took their departure. When the customary parade from exemption board headquarters to the North avenue station took place there was a very evident display of enthusiasm all along the line of march. The procession differed from many of its predecessors in that there was an abundance of music for the number of marchers. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps led the way, and beside the patriotic airs discoursed by this popular organization. Stirring marches were rendered at the far end of the line by the Liberty Band. The presence of the latter was specially in honor of one of its members, Millard K. McAfee, who forsook his customary place as bass soloist in the band to become one of the twenty-two selectives. The parade also included a squad of police, a detachment of Home Guards and city officials.

At the North avenue station the crowd of relatives and friends numbered more than a thousand. As the 9:38 train pulled in. It already had on board the complement of men from Somerset county, which included the North Plainfield contingent, and these were accorded three rousing cheers as they presented themselves through the car windows. After the Plainfield lads had gotten into their places and the train went ahead, the music of the band and fife and drum corps mingled with shouts of "good-bye" and "good luck" from every one on the platform.

Although the number of men to leave in yesterday's delegation was put at eighteen, the number actually going was twenty-two. The Plainfield contingent was increased from eighteen to nineteen and three others were inducted for outside boards. These were Morris Gold, of St. Louis; Steve Kerrekoff, of Canaan, Conn., and Diega Garcia, of San Antonio, Texas. Garcia is a Mexican who has been working in this city. James J. McNamee, the former local newspaper man and correspondent for the Twenty-ninth Division during its long stay at Anniston, Ala., was one of the Plainfielders, but did not depart from this city. He has recently been living at Elizabeth and was given permission to join the contingent at the Pennsylvania railroad station in thta city.

Beside the four men mentioned above, those leaving in yesterday's complement were as follows:

William C. Ryder, Joseph D. Venezia, Michael Panillo, Michael Marfino, Charles H. Betzenberg, J. J. Fox, Charles V. Cullen, Dennis O'Sullivan, Frank W. Binsky, Millard K. McAfee, David B. Huston, Sammy V. Valentine, Fred Burton, Stanley Maczyn, Anthony Russo, J. Hanning, Michael Potento and Fred Reichart.

Police Put an End To Hooper's Income

Henry Hooper, colored, employed as porter at the Queen City Hotel, was held in $500 bail in the city court, this morning, on a charge of selling liquor illegally. The case will probably be heard tomorrow.

While working at the hotel, the police say, Hooper had been appropriating "half pints." He passed the word to his friends that he had them and when they felt in need of a little stimulent on Sunday, he woud provide the necessary liquor. It is said that he was getting a dollar a half pint and rapidly becoming rich when the police nabbed him.

Here's a Soldier Who Can't Find Out Where He Belongs

"When is a soldier not a soldier", is a problem that is puzzling Edmund Walter, twenty-two years old, of 348 East Second street, who wears Uncle Sam's army uniform but who has been told by numerous departments of the service that he does not belong to them and try as he will he can't get into the ranks from which many other fellows are trying to escape.

Private Dalter, if the term can be used, went out of Plainfield on March 5, with a contingent of local selectives bound for Camp Greenleaf, Georgia. He was duly entered up on the records, according to Hoyle, and was just as much of a soldier as anyone else. A few weeks after reaching Greenleaf, Walter volunteered for immediate service in France as chauffeur in an overseas casualty division. This was scheduled to be organized at Camp Mills and he was sent to that point. The night before his detachment was to embark on a steamer, he was taken down with measles and was sent to the hospital at Camp Upton. When he recovered, the camp commander told him he had no official record of any such man as he described himself to be, and although he had every appearance of being a sure enough soldier there was no way in which he could be put in service without word from Washington.

In response to a message sent to the National Capitol, a wire came back to Upton that nobody knew anything about Edmund Walter, but he could stick around if he wanted to and perhaps it might be learned later that he was real flesh and blood and not a myth. Walter "stuck around" until July 11, at which time he left the camp and come to Plainfield. Since then, he has learned that his identification papers either became lost entirely or went abroad with the detachment that he was scheduled to accompany overseas. If they can be located over there it is barely possible that he might eventually get back into line, otherwise, he may have to go through the whole routine of induction.

In the meantime Walter is receiving no pay from the Government; he can take no position because of being in uniform, which, if discarded, might result in his being picked up as a deserter, and taken all in all, he is in quite a mix-up. His only hope is that Uncle Sam will soon get the tangle straightened out and allow him to be in with the old crowd at the big finish of the Hun divisions.

Previous to going away on March 5, Walter was employed as driver by C. O. Smith, the Liberty street grocer. He is a brother-in-law to "Jack" Townley, of the local fire department.

Judge Coult Denounces "Ambulance Chasing"

Public Service Lawyer Appears in District Court Here to Show How Accident Victim Is Being Asked to Give Up Half of Twenty-five Hundred Dollar Settlement

Charges of "ambulance chasing" after the bad trolley-jitney-bus accident on West Front street, last September, were made during a trial in the District Court, Wednesday, by Judge Joseph Coult, of Newark, of counsel for the Public Service Corporation.

The case which brought Judge Coult to Plainfield was a small one but was a side issue of a Supreme Court matter growing out the trolley accident. It was a contract case brought by Dr. George L. Lack, of Bound Brook, against Andrew Marienscheck, of Evona avenue, this city, for services rendered. The amount asked was fifty dollars. Dr. Lack was represented by Grover Kipsey, of Bound Brook, while Judge Coult appeared for the defendant. The case was held by Judge Abe J. David, of Elizabeth, sitting for Judge J. Henry Crane, and he returned a verdict of no cause for action.

It was brought out during the trial that Marienscheck and his wife had been injured in the accident and that while they were at Muhlenberg Hospital, they received a circular from a New York "protective" concern which offered to take care of their interest in securing a money settlement with the railroad. Marienscheck is unable to read English but asked for a consultation with the company's representative. Ignazio Leves, of Bound Brook, father-in-law of Dr. Lack, appeared. After he had talked with the accident victim, an agreement was drawn up whereby Leves was to take care of all medical bills and lawyers' fees, in return for which he was to receive one-half of the amount paid the Marienschecks by the Public Service. When Marienscheck left the hospital, Leves insisted on his being attended by Dr. Lack and it was for his visits that suit was brought in the District Court.

In the meantime, after the consultation, the Charity Organization Society, which was looking, after the Marienscheck children while the parents were in the hospital, asked its counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, to care for the interests of the two victims. As a result the Marienschecks signed off all claim against the Public Service on receiving $2,500. This was done without any knowledge of Leves and the Supreme Court action has been brought by him to secure the fifty per cent. named in his agreement. Dr. Lack also brought the District Court suit to recover fifty dollars for medical service.

Judge Coult, in conducting the case for Marienscheck, declared in part tht counsel for the Public Service would not bother itself with the fifty-dollar suit if it were not for the fact hat it meant more. He openly charged Leves with "ambulance chasing" and declared that the Public Service intends to break up the practice which has gotten to be quite extensive in New Jersey. He asserted thta the very people who claimed to "protest" people in securing damages are the very ones from whom they should be protected. At times Judge Coult was bitter in his denunciation of legal practitioners as it had cost accident victims many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Completion of Three Fine Sweaters Places Fireman McDonough in Class 1-A Knitters

James McDonough, a member of the local fire department stationed at headquarters, has demonstrated that a man can knit a sock or a sweater as good, if not better, than many women who have taken up the helpful task since the war began. Already he has turned out three fine naval sweaters that have excited great admiration from members of the local Red Cross chapter, while inuumerable socks that have been turned out by his needles have been specified as "faultless." It is quite possible that the garments and the foot covering may be exhibited in one of the business centres of town to show what a fellow can do if he really puts his mind on it.

Fireman McDonugh became interested in knitting through seeing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Richard Burke, of East Fifth street, deftly turn balls of wool into warm jackets for the boys of the army and navy. In a bantering way he remarked that he could do the same thing if he had a few lessons and Mrs. Burke took him up. Either she was a capable teacher or the son-in-law was a quick pupil for at any rate he soon proved to be a first class knitter. Thereafter whenever he found himself with a little spare time on his hands at headquarters he got busy with the needles. After he had gotten to be a past-master on socks, he turned to the more difficult task of making sweaters and his work showed no lessening of skill in the more difficult task. Mr. McDonough, of course, had to stand the gibes of his colleagues, but he parried the remarks without "dropping a sitch," and when he held up the result of his work, it was to excite genuine admiration instead of ridicule.

Now they have a perfect mania for knitting over at fire headquarters. Harry Wierenga was the second to take up the gentle art and he now has a sweater two-thirds done. His teacher has been Mrs. Robert Woodhouse, of East Seventh street, who is also guilding Georeg Leland and Timothy Carrol through the mazes of their first sock. As soon as this class has become proficient enough to go on by itself, there is a long line of waiting smoke-eaters eager to take up knitting. Mr. McDonough, the pioneer, is very modest about his accomplishment but the Red Cross chapter has learned all about him and there is talk of his being presented with a reward of merit badge for what he has done.

"It was little hard to stand for all all the joshing I got at first," he said to an interested observed, as he plied the needles in front of the fire house yesterday, "but as soon as I had one sweater finished and realized what it would mean to some poor fellow over there' next winter, I forgot all the animosity I had stored up for the kidders. I intend to keep on knitting during all my spare time while the war lasts and I am happy to say that the whole department is with me to a man."

John Deike Tells of Letter Carriers He Sees in France

Having been a member of the carrier staff at the Plainfield post office previous to his entering the army, it was only natural that Private John Deike, of East Fifth street, this city, should have paid attention to postal facilities on his arriving in France.

In an interesting letter, received from Private Deike by the Record this week, he describes how the business communication and sweethearts' epistles are carried by old postmen, so very old that they have to carry a cane to help themselves along. This, of course, is very much different from the sprightly men who deliver mail in America, and those of us here know the reason. The four years of war have made vast inroads on France's manhood and the places of the younger men are being filled by their elders and boys.

Private Deike also tells a number of other interesting things as he observed them in France. His letter was written on June 23, and reached this city exactly a month later. In full, apart from the personalities and the company and number of his regiment, deleted by the censor, it is as follows:

Somewhere in France,
June 23. 1918.

Dear Friends:

Well, here I am, somewhere in France, a long, long way from home, well and in good spirits.

This morning (Sunday) we had some more rain, which usually lasts here for ten or fifteen days. The climate is very cool compared with home. It gets dark about 10 o'clock at night and gets daylight about 3:30 in the morning.

The country here is very pretty for its scenery and there are a great many hills and hollows. Most every strip of land is cultivated by the women and old men and it is quite a place for raising cattle and horses. The horses are much larger than we see at home but they pull much lighter loads and the wagons are much smaller. They are usually driven by a boy or an old man. Autos, jitneys and Fords are scarce here, although there may be many in "Paris" and the large cities.

The mail carriers are old men with canes wearing dark blue uniforms. They carry light pack compared with those at home. They don't carry parcels or packages through this section.

The houses and barns are built of mud with thatched straw roofs and they stand for a great length of time. Many are in good condition that have stood for one hundred years or more.

Haven't received any mail in over two months and hope to hear from home soon. My address is Inf., U. S. A. Am... Forces, via New York. ...ards to all the boys at ...

...erely yours,
... W. DEIKE.

Plainfield Theatre Closes for Season

The Plainfield Theatre will close its doors for the season tomorrow night. After a thorough renovation the hause will be re-opened with a program of vaudeville and pictures on Saturday, August 17. The first regular attraction will be the Bon Ton Burlesquers, which are booked for Tuesday, August 20. The Plainfield Airdome, which is owned by Messrs. Counihan and Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre, will be opened for the summer season next Monday night, under the personal direction of Mrs. Florence Neighbor Smith, chief of ushers at the Second street playhouse. She has contracted with one of the largest film agencies for the best run of pictures and will make daily changes in the program.

Relatives in Army No Bar to Nurses

The Atlantic Division of the Red Cross took occasion this week to set at rest erroneous reports that women having near relatives serving in the army or navy abroad may not themselves go to France as military nurses. The only prohibition against serving in France, the Red Cross announcement explained, concerns those who, having relatives in the army or navy, are themselves engaged in special service and not under direct military control.

"The nursing bureau has learned," the statement said, "that many nurses who are anxious to serve with the Army Nurse Corps have not made application for enrolment through the Red Cross because of the prevailing idea that they are barred from service because they have brothers or other near relatives serving in France. The Red Cross wishes to make clear that all of these nurses are eligible for enrolment and that they are eligible to serve abroad in the Army Nurse Corus."

Those who can speak French, even though they may not have had hospital experience, it was explained, may be sent to France very soon. The classes now being formed, it was stated, are for the purpose of teaching women who may be used at home, so that nurses competent to serve abroad may be released for that work when they are needed.

FOREMAN PRESENTED WITH A WRIST WATCH.

William C. Ryder, of Grant avenue, one of the selected men going to Camp Dix yesterday, was given a farewell reception, Tuesday night, by the members of the metal division of the machine department at the Standard Aero Corporation's Elizabeth plant. Mr. Ryder has been foreman of this division for several months and was held in high esteem by his men.

During the reception the Plainfielder was presented with an up-to-date wrist watch, suitably engraved. The presentation was made by James Coleman, of Elizabeth, who read an original poem addressed to Mr. Ryder. The latter extended his appreciation in a very apt speech. Mr. Ryder was at one time a member of the local fire department, but resigned to enter the employ of the Standard and was making rapid progress when called to the colors.

Mayor Fills Vacancy in Home Guard Commission

Mayor Calkins announced this week the appointment of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., as a member of the Home Defense League Commission to take the place of Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, who recently sent his resignation to the Mayor on account of having offered his services to the Government. Dr. Lufburrow has been very active in the work of the Home Defense League from the beginning and his retirement is greatly regretted by the Mayor and Commissioners.

Mr. Hetfield showed a great interest in the work of the League and was one of the members of the first unit of fifty men whose names were sent to the Common Counsil by the Mayor for appointment as special police in March. 1917. On April 6, 1917, the day war was declared, Mayor Calkins issued a call at 8 o'clock in the evening for Captain Ransome to detail eight men for police patrol at the water works, and Mr. Hetfield served on this first patrol detachment.

Mr. Hetfield also attended many of the early meetings of the Commission, advising the Commission regarding equipment and also in the selection of candidates for admission for membership. He is familiar with the work of the League and the appointment is gratifying to the other members of the Commission.

OLGA HERMANN.

Olga Hermann, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hermann, of 1500 Willever street, died last night. The funeral will be held at the parents' home Sunday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Dr. Skellenger and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. HELENA NELSON.

Mrs. Helena Nelson, widow of Anton Nelson, died yesterday afternoon at her home in Jackson avenue, the borough. The funeral will be held at the late home tonight at 8 o'clock and burial will be at Binghamton.

AN AUTO TRIP VACATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Zimmerman, of Sachar place, will leave tomorrow for a two weeks' automobile trip through the Adirondacks. Mr. Zimmerman is advertising manager for Tepper Brothers.

NEIGHBORS PROTEST AGAINST REPORTED ACTION.

Residents in the vicinity of East Fifth and Washington streets are up in arms over the reported intention of the Crescent Avenue church trustees to purchase the Messrs. Smith property on Washington street for the purpose of making it a parsonage for the colored pastor of Bethel chapel.

A petition is being circulated through the neighborhood with the idea of having the Crescent Avenue church desist in their reported action. The neighborhood is exclusively a white one, although the congregation of Bethel chapel is colored. There are no colored residences anywheer near the Messrs. Smith properties and the adjoining property-holders feel that it would be detrimental to their interest to have any change in the locale.

Francis Patchel, of New York city, returned Sunday after a few days' visit at the home of his cousin, Miss Nora Regan, of Lee place.

ST. MARY'S AUXILIARY GIVES CHECK FOR $230.

The neat sum of $230 was turned over to the local chapter of the Red Cross this morning by St. Mary's Auxiliary, the amount of a collection taken at St. Mary's church last Sunday morning. Members of the auxiliary stationed themselves in the vestibules at each mass and the $230 was raised by voluntary contributions from the parishioners. This is one of the largest sums turned in from any auxiliary through this manner and the officers of the chapter have extended sincere congratulations to the St. Mary workers.

The St. Mary Auxiliary now has about 100 active workers who have been busy all winter turning out supplies. Meetings are held every Thursday afternoon and evening, and anyone desirous of joining is given a cordial invitation.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MISS EMMA A. ECKNER.

After an illness of only three hours, supposedly from a summer complaint, Emma A. Eckner, eleven years old, died last night, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eckner, of 223 Grove street. She is survived by three sisters, Olga, Ella and Ida, and one brother, Alfred.

The funeral will be held in the German Lutheran church on Grove street, Sunday afternoon at 2:30, in charge of Rev. Godfrey Dauble. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

Wants Boards to Hurry Examinations

Provost Marshal General Crowder has notified all the local boards of the country to hurry physical examinations, that the drafted men may be available for August calls.

These calls will be exceptionally heavy. The large troop movement overseas during the last sixty days has depopulated some of the largest camps, so as soon as the Class 1 men selected from the new registration of twenty-one-year-old men are available they will be called to the colors.

The Provost Marshal General called on all local boards to report at once the number of registrants added to Class 1 by reclassifying work, in progress for some weeks. This is expected to materially augment the class which is the principal reservoir from which the men are called to the training camps.

Another ruling provides that men who are furloughed as agricultural experts or needed for the cultivation of crops must not be released to the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the Merchant Marine, the navy or the Marine Corps.

A decision was handed down this week by General Crowder which classifies operators of motion picture machines, photographers in the same business and orchestra players of the movie houses as engaged in legitimate concert playin. and not subject to the "work or fight" order. Government agents in the States may appeal from this ruling in individual cases coming under their observation.

Representatives of the motion picture interests presented their case in a light that brought the favorable decision. They pointed out that the classing of their employes as nonproductive would force the closing down of a large number of houses, if not all of them.

This would cut off a form of entertainment that is not harmful, but which they contend, is of especial value in war times. It is one of the main channels through which patriotic propaganda is transmitted.

Steps have been taken to prevent the depletion of the corps of State Department representatives serving as Consular Agents. These men, who are in Class 3-1 under a presidential certificate, saying they are engaged in essential Government work, will not be called, even where the deferred classes are invaded by local boards. The State Department has given up a great many employes for military service and there are only 110 allotted to the Consular work. These, it is stated, are indispensable at this time.

Plainfield, N. J., Friday, July 26, 1918.

NOT AN HONEST EXPRESSION.

Although our esteemed contemporary on Park avenue would have the community believe otherwise, the get-together in V. W. Nash, Jr.'s office, Tuesday night, when the proposition of placing Mayor Calkins at the head of the local G. O. P. ticket was discussed, was far from harmonious. There were only nine at the gathering and of these four were not in favor of nominating the present occupant of the mayoralty chair for a third term. Their remarks were based on statements made by citizens with whom they had conversed on the subject and who they believe represented a large percentage of the voters.

City Clerk John J. Carroll, Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Tax Collector William R Townsend, City Committee Chairman E. R. Banks and Frank Power were the five men of the nine at the meeting who favored Mayor Calkins and claimed to be speaking for hundred of constituents. City Judge William G. DeMeza, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., Thaddeus O. Doane, Jr., and Edward Hughes spoke against the nomination and asserted that sentiment as far as they had come in contact with it appeared to be in favor of another mayoralty candidate other than Mr. Calkins. When it came down to an absolute expression of opinion, the gathering had to side-step as the corrupt practice act forbids any city committee from endorsing a candidate.

The men at Tuesday night's gathering will tell you, of course, that this was not a city committee affair. Legally it may not have been but the camouflage is so thin that anyone with half an eye can see through the old line party paint. Practically every man engaged in the discussion is a city committeeman or so near to it that no one but an expert can tell the difference. After the meeting was over the story was given out to the gullible Courier-News that it was "only a gathering of citizens" and that the consensus of opinion was that Mayor Calkins should be continued in the chief executive's chair. The leaders couldn't say otherwise, because this is what Chapter 184, Paragraph 20 of the Amended Corrupt Practices Act passed by the Legislature in March of this year prohibits a city committee from endorsing a candidate.

"It shall be unlawful for any State, county or city committee or organization of any political party prior to any primary election to endorse the candidacy of any candidate for a party nomination or position."

It might be said before going any further that Mayor Calkins has been too faithful an official to have a certain few trying to tell him that the opinion in his behalf is unanimous when it is not. Mayor Calkins himself would be one of the first to decline a third nomination if he entertained any idea that even a minority of citizens were opposed to his candidacy. It would not be at all a fair thing to have him nominated in the belief that everything was as serene and calm as the proverbial mill pond and then find afterward that he launched his bark on a turbulent sea. Such a proceeding would call for a rebuke to the persons who had so deceived.

There is no gainsaying the fact that Mayor Calkins has made every effort to give Plainfield a faithful and efficient administration. He has given up many hours of his valuable time to discharge the duties of the office that invites so much criticism that few care to seek it and if there have been any mistakes in executive direction it cannot be said that they are due to him. The councilmanic body has just as much, if not more, to do with city legislation, but because the Mayor has the final word in civic law-making, he generally bears the brunt of the curbstone attacks.

The meeting of Tuesday night was not a fair expression of opinion, although the five men mentioned would have the citizens believe so through the medium of the Courier-News. With four others opposing the candidacy it would seem that a better form of expression should be used and that with every sense of right and justice to Mayor Calkins there should be a better demonstration than that produced at the gathering of nine if he is to come before the people for a third term as mayor.

A DISCREPANCY IN PURCHASE PRICE AND ASSESSMENT.

If the reported price of $100,000 is what was paid for the Hood property at Stelle and Plainfield avenues, it is one of the most convincing arguments yet advanced for the employment of an expert to assess real and personal property in Union county.

The city tax show that this well known show place, one of the most attractive in Plainfield, is assessed at only $41,000. Comparing this with what it cost Mr. Harry Shedd to become the owner of the attractive grounds, it seems out of all proportion. It also seems out of all proportion with the assessments levied on the homes of honest hard-working mechanics and others who never hesitate to tell the assessori exactly what their little place costs them and stand for a four-fifths or seven-eighths assessment without a murmur. There are dozens of instances in the East and West Ends where a working-man's home has been assessed within a couple of hundred dollars of what it cost him. It is frequently contented that it is impossible to tax a man's "hobby" such as a show place would be, as the law only calls for an assessment equivalent to what the property would bring at a forced sale. It might be interesting for our own local assessors to find out if the Hood deal was a forced sale and whether or not $41,0000 of an asssessment is justice to the small property owner bearing the big burden of the city's taxation.

A WAY TO STRIKE AT THE GASOLINE HOGS.

The price of gasoline in Plainfield went up one cent on Wednesday and likely big "boobs" that we are we will have to pay it. Futhermore there are rumors of other advances of two cents and maybe three or four cents in the very near future and we will have to pay that too because we have no alternative if we are to keep on using cars.

Out in the Middle West, where they know better than we here in Jersey do about how much it does cost to produce gasoline, they are beginning an agitation to get back at John D. Rockafellow and the Standard Oil Company for their continual advance in the price of motor fuel. Would that they could but just what method is to be adopted has not been announced. Perhaps a suggestion made yesterday by a Plainfield woman who realizes the imposition of which the big trust is guilty, might be a good thing to try and show the gasoline kings that the American people are not to be bled out of every last living penny. The idea is this:

Thousands of people use their cars every day, both pleasure and commercial vehicles. Since it has been shown by the Food Commission, the Fuel Commission and other legislative bodies that we can do without certain things at certain times, why is it not possible to do without a car for at least one day a week. This would cut down the consumption of gasoline and the subsequent decrease in sales would eventually lessen the profits for the Standard Oil heads. Being ordinarily human, these same heads feel a sore spot somewhere about their fifth rib when the semi-annual dividends are declared.

The argument maybe offered that it is all right to lay up pleasure vehicles for a day but it is impossible to forego the commercial cars. No such thing. By making arrangements the day before, all deliveries or necessary trucking can be cared for. We all have to eat but yet the butcher and grocer close up Wednesday afternoons and no one has offered any objection that is worth consideration.

Anyway, this suggestion of letting the auto stand in the garage for a day a week is not half bad. If tried out and found to work successfully, it might lead to other means of showing the monopoly hogs that the American people are getting tired of this continual price pension under the plea of war necessity.

ANOTHER KIND OF SLACKER.

There are many kind of slackers and while it is not our purpose to deal with all classes at this time, what might be said of one class might be equally well applied to all brands.

As most commonly used today, that term applies to that vast army of robust young men, who mesmerize themselves into the belief that they can avoid the draft by entering the employ of some corporation that is engaged on government work. Their presence in such plants in large numbers, in some cases, leads to the suspicion that some of them are so patriotic that they pay a bonus to get in and thereby get away from army and navy service.

Now as a matter of psychology it can be said that, once a slacker, always a slacker. In other words, a man of draft age who is physically fit to fight in this hour of stress, and who has no dependents and evades service by means of employment in the war industries, is still a slacker. He loafs on his job and cheats his employer by inefficient service just as he cheats his government in avoiding the draft.

At heart he is either a coward or a traitor and there should be no place in this country, at this time or any future day, for such a person.

People who have sent their sons into service and know of some neighbor whose son is a slacker should make a report of it. If he cannot be driven into service ,then ostracize him. Make him an outcast among honest men until such times as he redeems himself and proves that he is once more fit to live in a patriotic community.

THINGS WE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW!

If Harry Marshall has secured a chairman for his committee?

Why it is that Front street looks so disreputable Sunday mornings just at a time when sight-seeing autoists are passing through the town?

If the Courier-News calls a conference of nine persons a "large gothering of citizens" what would it term a mass meeing of two or three hundred citizens?

Why it is that every time the food commission wants to try out a new scheme of conservation it picks on the poor guys who have to get their meals in a hotel or restaurant, the "no beef" rule recently countermanded being an example.

Why it is that so many Plainfielders shout and applause when the selectives march down the street but develop an attack of heart failure if John J. Varley or Bill Townsend asks them for a contribution to the "Send them off with a smile fund?"

Why it is that nobody gives Mike Shannon full credit for his patriqtism in refusing to have the roof of the birdome painted while the shortage of help is on?"

TINTINNABULATIONS OF A CINCH BUG.

The gentle art of spending money requires neither a school or correspondence course nor an instructor.

When life begins to get dull and dreary, then along comes Fred Bird with another article on municipal prodigalism.

Nineteen more of our lads went on their way yesterday. And say, weren't they as fine a lot as has yet stepped aboard the 9:38?

According to the latest definition, a soda fountain is a device located in the front of a drug store and used to produce customers for the patent medicines and prescription departments located further in the rear.

"One of the advantages of suffering from insomnia is the opportunity," remarked Link Martin, as he put his head through the front door and lighted up the place with a scintillating smile, "to hear the bed ticking in the silent watches of the night."

The more candidates we have in the congressional field the more we are reminded that a statesman is a man more often out of a job than a politician.

A correspondent who noticed the caption on our paragraph column last week inquires of us what we mean by "Quofogus." We are surprised to learn that his education in ornithology has been so sadly neglected. A Quofogus is a small fish which swims backward so the water won't get in its eyes.

Over at fire headquarters, the gallant boys in blue have taken up knitting as a pastime and are making excellent progress in turning out socks and sweaters for the boys "over there." Their example might be followed by a lot of guys who are more expert in using the "hammer" instead of the needles. You can find them on any corner engaged in the non-essential job of "knocking" instead of "knitting."

Over in Newark the other day they arrested another one of these fellows who ignored the high prices at the grocer yand married two wives. Simply another case of a "man who loves not wisely but too often."

Big Wheat Acreages Is Aim of Department

A great Liberty wheat harvest in 1919 is asked of American farmers in a national growing program issued this week by Secretary Houston, after full consideration of the increasing needs for this essential food at home and in the Allied nations.

Not less than 45,000,000 acres of winter wheat is called for in the fall's sowing, and Secretary Houston suggests that approximately 47,500,000 acres could be sown if conditions are especially favorable. The larger acreage, it was pointed out, would better meet the estimated needs of the Allied nations and the population at home.

From the minimum acreage called for, which is only about the average of the five years, 1913 to 1917, it is estimated 636,000,000 bushels of winter wheat might be expected, and from the suggested larger acreage, approximately 667,000,000 bushels should be harvested. These production estimates are based upon an average yield of 15.7 bushels an acre and an abandonment of ten per cent. in the area sown on account of winter kills.

Definite acreages, both minimum and maximum, for each State have been worked out, and a campaign will be launched immediately by the Department of Agriculture, state agricultural colleges and leading farmers throughout the country to have the farmers make good their State quotas. Recommendations for the 1919 acreage of spring wheat and other spring crops and regarding live stock will be issued later by the Department of Agriculture.

King of England's Letter Present To Plainfield Lads

When the Plainfield boys who stop in England on their way to France return to America after the war, one of their most cherished possessions will be a fac-simile letter written by King George to the U. S. troops and presented by him to the various divisions just before they cross the English channels for actual participation in freedom's fight.

Last month scores of Plainfielders were included in an American contingent encamped near the famous shore cliffs of Folkstone. It was while they were here that the British ruler visited the division and witnessed several drills of artillery and infantry ordered by the officers to show what American lads taken from private life could adapt themselves to military requirements. The King was immensely pleased and beside extending his congratulations to the fine body of men, presented them with his original letter of felicitation and best wishes.

Each fac-simile bears the Windsor Castle emblem and is printed on expensive paper that will endure the ravages of time, thus making certain that it can be kept for future generations. Many of the Plainfield boys have sent their letters home in order that they might be safely kept and they have been sources of pride for many a mother who has given a son to the cause. The communication as it is addressed to the American soldier is as follows:

"Soldiers of the United States. the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the armies of many nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.

"The Allies will gain new heart and spirit in your company. I wish that I could shake hands with each one of you and bid you God speed on your mission.

"GEORGE R. I."

INVITED TO INITIATION.

Members of Court Watchung, Daughters of Isabella, have been given an invitation to attend an initiation to be conducted by Court Loretta, of New Brunswick, in Columbia Hall, on Somerset street, that city, next Sunday afternoon. It is believed that a large delegation of the Plainfielders will be present.

Gregory Assails Hardin's Record

Following up the lead of Robert A. Sibbald, campaign manager for Charles O'Connor Hennessy, of Bergen county, who on Saturday declared that "machine leaders" were atmpeting to line up Democrats of the State behind a hand-picked Newark candidate in the person of John R. Hardin, former Mayor Julian A. Gregory, of East Orange, leader of the Wilson anti-Nugent forces in Essex county, this week issued a statement attacking the selection of Hardin, both from a political standpoint and on the latter's personal record.

Gregory agrees with the Hennessy managers that President Wilson will hardly stand for Hardin, and the former Mayor calls attention to the Newark man's record as a member of the Legislature during the days of the so-called coal combine in 1892.

"Mr. Hardin is a man of great ability, no doubt," continued Mr. Gregory in his statement, "and will, like every other candidate on every possible ticket, be an ardent supporter of the President in his war policies, but when he realizes that the war will probably be over long before the term of the next United States Senator expires, and when we recall that the President is asking Democrats of New Jersey to arise to their great opportunities and select forwardlooking men, I am unable to credit the sanction of the leaders of the Democratic party in this State, much less that of the President.

"I have no desire to resurrect his long record when he was a member of the Legislature, but if those interested in the welfare of the Democratic party don't, Mr. Hardin's enemies will," declared the former Mayor. "So I must say tthis is not time to bring forward one of the men who stood sponsor for the nefarious coal combine of 1892, which was responsible, beyond all else, for besmirching the name of the State, with the result that it took eighteen years and a Wilson to restore the party in the confidence of the people.

"Progressive Democrats in Essex county will never forget that during the battles that were waged to divorce the party from commercialized politics, there was no support given them by John R. ardin, nor did he answer the call, ever under Wilson's leadership," the leader of the Wilson and anti-Nugent forces went on to say.

"At the same time it is a matter of record that he represented the leader of the discredited faction which opposed President Wilson during his entire term as Governor, even to the extent of trying to silence the views of progressive democracy through court proceedings.

"I can understand that the President has not time to seriously weigh matters of State politics, and I would be indeed sorry to believe the report that he is sympathetic with the candidacy of Mr. Hardin, for that would be to assume that he has allowed himself to be misinformed and misled about the well-known facts of the present political situation in New Jersey," asserted Mr. Gregory in concluding his statement.

First Conferences Held On Standardizing Wages

Preliminary conferences with representatives of the various trades are being held by the War Labor Policies Board preparatory to standardizing wages throughout the country as a war measure. The board is being assisted by John R. Alpine, vice president of the American Federation of Labor; Hugh Frayne, labor representative on the War Industries Board, and Herbert F. Perkins, vice president of the International Harvester Company.

Felix Frankfurter, chairman of the board, announced that conferences already have been held with representatives of the metal and building trades, and that the board is proceeding "as rapidly as the importance of the matter makes possible toward the determination of standards."

"In seeking standardization," said Mr. Frankfurtter's statement, "the precedents of unionized industry are being followed. Wages have, of course, long been standardized by agreements of employers and employes in many industries."

Big Delegations of New Selected Men Reaching Camp Dix

Every train arriving at Dix is bringing in hundreds of new selectives, who are to become part of the Nation Army units in training. New York, Delaware and New Jersey have sent some of their quotas and yesterday the Plainfield boys, together with the Essex county men and others from North Jersey arrived at Dix. Owing to the fact that Dix at the present time is housing one of its largest populations there is very little room, and Captain Noble, who has charge of the incoming men, will not assign them until a few hours before train time.

Every morning the different unit commanders notify the captain of the number of men that they can handle, and his department makes up the assignment lists.

Despite the fact that Dix at times houses over 50,000 men from all parts of the United States, and that assembled in Uncle Sam's army there are men from every walk in life, including many from the slums of the bigger citiesñ yet the big cantonment has established a record that equals that of any city of the same population. In fact, it even excels any city record, for the camp population is a roving one and the men come and go so quickly that it is almost impossible for any one to line-up possible "bad actors."

According to the report submitted by Major John P. LeFevre, the camp judge advocate, on the work of his department for the year ending July 1, the General Court Martial Board thied and convicted one officer and four enlisted men, while the summary courts convicted 410 enlisted men and acquitted two, while the special courts convicted six and acquitted one.

During June last two officers and four enlisted men were tried and convicted by the general court, 358 enlisted men convicted in the summary court and three acquitted, while four were convicted in the special court and one acquitted.

Sixteen charges were received during the month with recommendations for trial by general court martial, and fifteen of them were referred for trial. The offenses reported during the past month were as follows: Unauthorized absences, 320; offenses against superiors, 42; breach of arrest, 28; offenses committed with intoxicants, 2; desertions, 1; larceny, 11, and miscellaneous, 12.

Food Board Warns Beef Rule Dodgers

The Federal Food Board gave warning Monday that it will proceed against proprietors of hotels and restaurants who do not print on their menus daily the hours during which beef will be served.

The last modified beef regulations, which went into effect on July 5, provided ". . . and these hours will be at the option of the manager . . . and shall be explicitly and prominently stated on each copy of each day's current bill of fare, and if instead of a bill of fare changed each day there be used a set bill of fare this shall contain a statement of the hours for each day of the period for which this set bill is to be used."

It was announced Monday that the special Food Administration regulations governing and handling of cold storage butter, issued on June 19, 1918, and amended July 12, 1918, as to the maximum margins of profit that dealers may take have been extended to cover fresh butter.

"The rules applying to handlers of cold storage butter, which from now on also apply to handlers of fresh butter," the Federal Food says, "provide that dealers may add to the cost price 1¼ cents on lots between 7,000 pounds and a carload; 1¾ cents on sales of 700 to 7,000 pounds, and not more than 2¾ cents on sales under 700 pounds.

"The dealer in figuring cost can not include anything except the purchase price, transportation charges, if any, insurance charges, storage charges, if any, and interest during the storage period and the cost of making prints if the butter is put into this form."

FRENCH WAR BAND RETURNS TO CAMP DIX.

Under the auspices of the War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., the French military band has returned to Dix for a three-day stay and gave a concert Monday evening in the Y. M. Auditorium. Tuesday they played on the stage of the outdoor stadium, near the 10th Battalion area.

The central dental infirmary under Colonel George L. Mason, of Boston, camp dental surgeon, is showing restuls, according to reports filed this week at cantonment headquarters. From 3,000 to 5,000 dental cases are handled each month at the central station, it was reported. The rule that Uncle Sam's fighters must also be "good biters" has become a camp slogan.

Of the men who reach camp, ninety per cent. are found in need of dental attention. Most of these cases require but a short time in the chair, so that the regimental dentists are enabled to handle a majority of these cases.

In the dental infirmary, which is a two-story building near camp headquarters, with working room for about twenty-five dentists, the more serious cases are handled. Each case must pass final, rigid examination before the patient is discharged.

Pays a Tribute to "Beloved Belgium"

Paul Jarvis, of Crescent avenue, this city, is the author of a series of forceful tributes to America's allies in the war which has been appearing in featured positions in the New York Herald. They have excited widespread attention and are being copied by the leading papers of the country. Their worthiness is all the more striking from the fact that the writer does not pose as an author or newspaper man, being engaged as a banker in one of New York's oldest financial institutions.

Mr. Jarvis' latest eulogy was published last Sunday in the Herald under the caption, "Belgium the Beloved," and was as follows:

You, who by glorious example taught us to measure our men in terms of valor and to estimate our women in terms of sacrifice, aye, and how to die in holy cause, we salute you on this the natal day whence the clarion call of freedom sounded o'er your glad domain and echoed through the ages.

The destiny of a world whose life blood pulsed in the balance hung suspended when you accepted the gage of battle and brave Albert, like Leonidas with his little band of Spartans at Thermopylae, held the pass the while La Belle France and sturdy Britain gathered strength against the onrushing horde.

You who knew that from joy ecstatic to bitter pain of martyrdom was the price to pay if you disdained the proffered hand in which lurked the assassin's knife sharpened for a sister's vitals; yet, true as the dial to the sun, with imperishable soul of honor, you kept your plighted word.

Then did the Pontius Pilate of feudalism's last stronghold condemn you to the Moloch and his spiked helmeted minions with the lust of blood and ravishment gleaming in their besotted eyes. They spat upon you, they scourged you, they made you drink of vinegar and gall, they crucified you; but, Christ-like, you kept the faith; you have laid hold upon Eternal Life. And your resurrection will be the Easter morn of a new birth of freedom for an embattled world.

You, who have knelt in dark Gethsemane and with crown of thorns have borne the cross up Calvary's hill in pure immortal sacrifice; you, whose Eli, Eli, Lama Sabachthani, reverberates around the world, shall wear the Asphodels of Paradise.

Beloved Belgium! As Rachel weeping for her children, your cry has come to us across the mighty deep; and by the grace of the Living God, you, who stood fast and saved the world from the tyrant's heel, will never know the word "forsaken."

And with hand over heart, as token of our fidelity, we pledge you, Belgium of fame immortal, our troth and comradeship everlasting.

Physical Tests For Army Unified

Physical requirements for every branch of the military forces of the United States have been unified. They cover the Regular Army, National Guard and National Army. Standards which men must attain to enter the army have been mailed to all local medical advisory boards. Announcement to this effect was made this week by Surgeon General Gorgas.

Adoption of this policy is expected to prove a welcome change from existing conditions. Hundreds of applications for entrance to officers' training camps have been refused, on physical grounds, and the same has happened to thousands who have tried to enlist and been refused, only to be accepted later by their draft boards.

The statement issued by the Surgeon General briefs the new standards thus:

"The rule for all three armies is that to make a good soldier a man must be able to see well, have comparatively good hearing, his heart must be able to stand the stress of physical exertion, he must be intelligent enough to understand and execute military manoeuvres, obey commands and protect himself, and must be able to transport himself by walking as the exigencies of military life may demand."

Exceptions to this general rule are only for men accepted for special or limited military service.

State Forester Still Seeking Walnut Trees

The New Jersey Department of Conservation and Development has organized within the State a search for black walnut trees needed by the Government for the manufacture of gunstocks and airplane propellers. Boy Scouts are already at work searching for and reporting upon walnut trees, and everybody is asked to help in this matter.

Those knowing of black walnut trees are asked to report to the State Forester, Trenton, the name and address of the owner and the size of each tree. Reports should be complete, covering all the points mentioned above. The Government is not buying the walnut direct, but is locating it for firms manufacturing war products. Logs are desired rather than sawn lumber, and should be shipped in carload lots direct to the manufacturer.

Lists of firms holding Government contracts and further information will be sent upon request to the State Forester, Trenton.

New Rules Issued For Observance by Camp Dix Visitors

The lack of information by the general public as to the exact conditions at Camp Dix has given great concern to the officials in charge of this cantonment. During the summer months an increasing number of visitors have been coming to camp without proper information concerning regulations governing their presence there. The agencies representing the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities have been called upon to co-operate with the Camp Headquarters to improve the situation. To this end they have given out the following statement of the regulations governing all visitors to this camp:

"Camp Dix is one of the busiest of the training camps. The soldier's day begins at 5:45 in the morning, and is completely filled with military duties until 5:30 p. m., with schools for many of the men several evenings a week. The only holidays allowed are Saturday afternoons and Sundays. The occasions are the only times when visitors should plan to visit the camp, except for some vitally important reason. To come at any other time is to run the risk of not seeing the soldier, as he is sure to be busy, or should be. On Saturday afternoons and Sundays visitors who are relatives or close friends of the soldiers are welcomed to the camp, but it is expected that casual acquaintances will not avail themselves of this opportunity to crowd the transportation, which is always taxed to capacity.

"As most of the visitors are women, the work of assisting them in finding relatives falls largely to the Travelers' Aid of the War Camp Community Service and to the Y. W. C. A., which conducts the Hostess House. Here are pleasant parlors where visiting is possible, and the cafeteria service provides excellent meals for all. But there are positively no sleeping accommodations to be had at the Hostess House. In fact, there are no available accommodations anywhere in or near the camp for visitors except by previous arrangement.

"Many people do not understand that Camp Dix and Wrightstown are two entirely different places with different railway stations. The camp covers an area of about eight square miles, while the reservation includes thirty-six square miles of surrounding country. Wrightstown is a small country village two miles from the main part of camp and difficult to reach on account of inadequate jitney service. There is no hotel at Wrightstown. Rooms at private houses are invariably rented weeks in advance. No one should come to Camp Dix expecting to be accommodated over night at the villages in the vicinity. Visitors can rarely find accommodations nearer than Trenton, eighteen miles distant; Mount Holly, twelve miles away, or Philadelphia, one hour and a half's ride by train.

"Visits should be arranged to terminate at 6 o'clock. There is a camp regulation, strictly enforced, requiring all visitors to leave the camp before 8:30 in the evening.

"To those who come to camp desirous of complying with the regulations, the most heary welcome is accorded and every facility is placed at their disposal. Of those who bring box lunches, it is expected and required that at the conclusion of the meal all debris in the shape of papers, boxes, bottles and unconsumed food will be cleared away and not left scattered around the picnic site. It is expected that patriotic citizens anticipating a trip to Camp Dix will acquaint themselves with these regulations and co-operate in every way to relieve the present situation, as visitors are often seriously embarrased and the men visited are distressed by the limitations of camp hospitality.

"Remember: Visitors cannot be accommodated over night either at the Hostess House in camp, or at any nearby villages.

"Visiting time is Saturday afternoon and Sundays.

"All visitors must leave the camp before 8:30 p. m.

"Plan your trip ahead of time. Don't attempt to 'surprise him.' He may be busy or out of camp."

CIVIL SERVICE OFFERS GOOD PAYING POSITIONS.

The Civil Service Commission, in issuing the schedule of examinations for August called attention to the fact that there are many opportunities for employment in good paying, permanent positions in the State, county and municipal services. The demand for clerks, typists, stenographers, the skilled trades, and in fact, nearly every line of public employment equals or exceeds the supply, and there are unusual opportunities for competent persons desiring to enter public employment as a career.

An examination for the position of traveling auditor, clerical service of the State, with a salary ranging from $180 to $225 a month, will be held on Wednesday, August 7. There is at the present time a vacancy in the Department of Municipal Accounts with an annual salary of $2,300. This examination is open to male residents of the State. On the same day another examination for head housekeeping officer, Guard and Correction Officer Service, will be held. The salary is $50 to $65 a month with maintenance. This is open to female residents of the State.

HOW WOMEN SHOULD SALUTE.

Women unable ordinarily to remove their hats as mark of respect to the Flag or when the national anthem is played are to stand at attention when the flag is passing or "The Star Spangled Banner" is rendered.

A resolution making this the official mark of respect for American women has been adopted by the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Corporals Helen Edgar, Eleanor Roberts and Alice Dunhan and Private Melvina Miller, of the Rahway organization of the Motor Corps of America, were in this city Tuesday and Wednesday seeking recruits. They report having had considerable success and prospects for a local corps are very good.

The first of a series of noon-day entertainments at the International Motor Company's plant in this city took place Wednesday, with Alfred A. Farland, of East Second street, as the entertainer. Mr. Farland is a banjoist of national reputation and has only just returned to Plainfield after a long tour of Pennsylvania and other States. The plan of entertainment at noon was originally started bq the Emergency Fleet Corporation and has been found very beneficial to men working hard and at a high pitch. James Hallard is chairman of the committee at the local plant and states that he has a number of good programs in preparation. The Saurer shop is now employing about 700 men and this number will shortly be increased by fully 300 as the new addition to the plant, costing $175,000, is ready for occupancy. A portion of the office staff has already removed to commodious quarters in the new building and the old offices, at the easterly end of the old plant, as soon as fully vacated, are to be given over to a restaurant capable of taking care of several hundred diners at noontime.

Millard McAfee, who has been a member of the Liberty Band since its organization four years ago, was given a farewell reception by his associate players, Tuesday night, as he was included in the contingent of selected men leaving the city for Camp Dix yesterday. Following the serving of a dinner, Arthur B. Cole, president of the band association, acted as toastmaster in conducting a period of speech-making. Beside Mr. Cole and Mr. McAfee, those who spoke were Rev. John Y. Broek and C. Elmer Volk. The latter presented Mr. McAfee with a sweater similar to those presented to five other members of the band who are in service.

The "lightless nights" plan similar to that put in effect by the Federal authorities last winter, became effective again this week on an order issued by State Fuel Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson, of Newark. According to his order, no advertising displays or lights not used absolutely for street illumination or bona fide roof gardens and open-air theatres must not be turned on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. The order has made very little change in Plainfield as the business men and others have been very sparing in their use of light since last winter. The Federal authorities believe that half a million tons of coal can be saved by this proposition each year.

The North Plainfield Home Defense Band held another of its weekly concerts at the triangle at Myrtle and Willow avenues, last night. It was heard by a large and enthusiastic audience. A splendid program, comprising many national anthems and popular patriotic marches, were given under the leadership of Ralph D. Matthews.

The Elizabeth police on Sunday night raided a house at 17 Crane street, that city, and captured the proprietor, James Shepherd, together with two white men and eight colored men, four of the latter being from Plainfield. They were Harry Bowser, Eugene Hill, Harry Smith and Hencewood Pollard. Each of these was fined $25 each by Judge Mahon in the Elizabeth police court Monday.

Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow is completing arrangements to leave for Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., next Tuesday, where he is to report for active military service in the Medical Corps. Dr. Lufburrow was one of several Plainfield doctors who enlisted two months ago and has since been commissioned as captains. The other physicians awaiting call are Dr. Norman W. Currite, Dr. Norman H. Probasco and Dr. H. B. Hubbard.

In the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth, Monday, Judge Carlton B. Pierce ruled that the heirs of the late Benjamin S. Braider, of this city, were entitled to compensation from Harold Bowman, the West Front street grocer, under the Employers' Liability Act. Judge Pierce, however, reserved decision as to the amount. The plaintiffs alleged that Mr. Braider's death resulted from an accident when he was driving one of the defendant's delivery rigs. The vehicle turned over with him on the Anderson place in Watchung and that before he could be extricated he had been dragged by the horse and permanently injured. He died some time later. It was contended by the defendant's counsel that Mr. Braider hahd been in failing health before the accident occurred and that the affair was in no way responsible for the demise.

An employe at the Mountain Inn at Somerset street and Greenbrook road, was using gasoline for cleaning purposes, Tuesday morning. In some way the fumes became ignited and set fire to a bed in the room. The borough fire department was called and extinguished the blaze before it had made any great headway. The damage is placed at about twenty-five dollars.

Theodore Stevens, of New York, has been appointed secretary and treasurer of the State Trust Company, this city, to succeed C. B. Veghte, who recently left the local concern for a position with the State banking department. Mr. Stevens has been a junior officer in the Guaranty Trust Company and the Columbia Trust Company and comes to Plainfield with a broad experience that will prove beneficial to the Trust Company's patrons.

In the city court, Monday morning, fines of ten dollars each were imposed upon Joseph Perrie, of 112 North avenue, and Theodore Lane, of West Third street. The men were arrested at different times Saturday night. Hersh and Jacob Burakoff and Morris Perenik, three Brooklyn boys, found loitering on East Third street, Monday afternoon, by Captain John J. Flynn, were arraigned in court on a technical charge of disorderly conduct, but were discharged when the father of the Burakoffs appeared to take them home.

At the annual convention of the State Association of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in Perth Amboy last Saturday, James Mahoney, of John street, this city, defeated A. W. Clayton, of Newark, for the association's treasurership. Four thousand Eagles attending the convention, many of whom were from Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, took part in a big street parade which was reviewed by Governor Edge.

Plainfield Lodge, Independent Order of Beth Abraham, installed the following officers at its last regular meeting: President, Joseph Rothstein; vice president, S. Gilbergth financial secretary, N. Berger; recording secretary, F. Binn; treasurer, S. Berkowitz; inside guard, R. Goodfriend; chapltain, J. S. Fass, and conductor, M. Rosenthall; trustees, Dr. Campus, J. N. Levine and R. Luria.

MILK CHARGES SET FOR TWO MONTHS.

Milk prices for August and September were announced by the Federal Milk Commission, Monday, through the Federal Food Board. The increase to the consumer is practically the same as the increase to the producer, it was stated. The prices apply in the Middle Atlantic States.

Grade A bottled milk is to retail for 16 cents a quart and 9 cents a pint; Grade B, 14 cents a quart and 8 cents a point. Grade B will be sold to stores for 12½ cents a quart in August and 13 cents in September, and 7 cents a pint in both months. Stores will sell Grade B milk for 13 cents a quart in August, 14 cents in September, and 8 cents a point in both months.

Stores will pay 9¼ cents a quart for loose milk in August and a cent more the following month. They will charge 10 and 11 cents respectively for this grade.

Grade B loose milk will be sold to restaurants, hotels, ice cream parlors and clubs at 9½ cents a quart in August and 10½ cents in September, provided the order amounts to ten gallons or over. The price in orders of less than ten gallons will be 10 and 10½ cents for the respective months.

Cantonments, hospitals, settlements, rest rooms and canteens come under the same category as stores.

Private William McClinton, of Pond place, enjoyed a five-day furlough the past week. He is stationed at Maryland, and expects to go overseas within a short time.

"THE YOUTH OF 19."

I was sitting in the office,
Reading the "Morning Sun,"
How the FRENCH and AMERICANS
Had the GERMANS on the run.

I heard the hall door open,
And looking up to my surprise,
I saw a youth of about nineteen,
A lad of pretty good size.

I said, "Good morning, young man,
What can I do for you?"
He said, "I've thought it over,
And decided to enlist too."

He took the examination,
And passed "A" number one.
He made the remark, "I'm ready
To go over and fight the 'HUN.'"

The young man left the office,
I gave him a comfort kit,
And said, "Good luck, God bless you,
You're going to do your bit."

No doubt, today, this young man
Is far across the sea,
In the thickest of the battle
Fighting for Liberty.

When this scrap is over,
And wars shall be no more,
And peace shall reign forever,
Upon each and every shore.

I hope to meet this young lad
And take him by the hand,
And say to him, "God bless you,
You fought for 'UNCLE SAM.'"

War May Cost $24,000,000,000 In Coming Year

The next twelve months of the war are expected to cost the United States in actual cast expenditures $24,000,000,000. Contracts to be paid in later years will amount to nearly $5,500,000,000 more. These figures were made public at Washington this week by Chairman Sherley, of the House Appropriations Committee. Discussing his statement showing total appropriations and authorizations made by Congress, Mr. Sherley said:

"It should be borne in mind that while the statement shows appropriations and authorizations for a sum little short of $30,000,000,000 the amount of expenditures in the next fiscal year will not necessarily reach any such total. In point of fact the probability is that such xpenditures will be at least five or six billions less than that amount."

In support of his contention that actual cash expenditures for the next fiscal year would be in the neighborhood of $24,000,000,000 instead of $30,000,000,000 Mr. Sherley referred to figures for the fiscal year which closed Juen 30. Figures he has compiled show that while the total appropriations for that fiscal year totalled $18,892,027,501 the actual expenditures, inclusive of loans to the Allies, were only $13,581,702,471, leaving a balance of appropriations for the last fiscal year still unexpended of $5,310,636,809.

Total revenue under existing laws Mr. Sherley estimated at $18,161,636,809. This includes revenue from existing tax laws, bond issues, sales of war savings stamps and postal aevenues. The present tax laws will raise about $4,097,715,000, according to Mr. Sherley's estimate, the postal revenue will be $349,800,000, war savings stamps yet to be issued amount to $1,962,907,609 and bonds authorized but not yet issued amount to $12,021,214,000.

Mr. Sherley did not speculate on what the next tax law will raise, but from his figures on revenue and his estimates of the expenditures which will be made it would appear that an additional $5,838,000,000 in revenue from some source is needed instead of only $4,000,000,000 more, as the Ways and Means Committee is figuring.

If the figures estimated by Mr. Sherley are correct, the Government will still be short about $2,000,000,000 in revenue for the fiscal year. The tax bill being prepared is to supply only $4,000,000,000 additional at the most. This would make the nation's revenue only $22,000,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning now and Mr. Sherley's own estimate of the expenditure is $24,000,000,000, while the forecast of the cost of the antion's business, war and everything else, for the next year is close to $30,000,000,000.

Mr. Sherley submitted the following figures:

Plainfield Concerns Named in Two Suits

Papers in a suit in which George C. Taylor, William Van Zoyl and John S. Fargo, of 65 Broadway, New York, trading as the American Express Company, are the plaintiffs, and the Standard Aircraft Corporation, of Elizabeth and Plainfield is the defendant, have been filed with Z. K. Norman, deputy county clerk, at the courthouse in Elizabeth. The action has been started to recover $4,256.88 alleged to be due on shipping charges and war taxes and will be tried before Judge George S. Silzer at the October term of the Circuit Court.

The complainants set forth in the papers filed, that the amount being sued for represents charges imposed for handling shipments made by the Standard Company between May 6 and June 2. The full amount was for $5,281.28, but the payment of $1,465.27 by the government and $59.63 by the defendants reduces the figure to the total sued for. It represents accounts incurred by both the Elizabeth and Plainfield plants. Frank A. Long, of Newark, filed the papers as attorney for the plaintiffs.

Suit has also been started in the same court by the New York Machinery Exchange Company, which has filed papers announcing its intention of asking for damages of $18,000 from Isabelle and David J. Scott, of Plainfield, as executors of the estate of Walter Scott, founder of the Scott Printing Works. The amount is alleged to be due on the sale of two twenty-four-inch heav type of Hollingswort triple gear crank shapers.

They were sold to the Scott Company on April 19 of this year with the provision, it is alleged, that they be paid for within thirty days.

M'Carter Makes An Apology To The Utilties Board

President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Railway Company, on Wednesday read a statement to the members of the Board of Public Utilities Commission in session at Newark, in which he retracted his assertions made about the commission and at the same time reiterated what he had previously said in regard to the decision recently made denying the application for an increase in fares.

Mr. McCarter's statement follows:

"On Friday morning of last week I had a casual conversation with two newspaper reporters of the city of Newark in the office and in the presence of my assistant, John L. O'Toole. This conversation was the latest of a series of talks that I have had with these same gentlemen on various topics from time to time during the spring months, which informal chats have been freely participated in by all those present, and hitherto nothing that was said had been published. As I did not intend to speak for publication, I talked more freely than was discreet. It is not good judgment or good manners, however, to call names, whether or not one is speaking for publication. Where, as in this case, I have committed an error, I am always willing to correct it to the best of my ability, and I therefore withdraw the characterization of the commission made use of by me upon that occasion, which has been so widely published, and express my regret at its use.

"In frankly saying this, however, which is due to the commission and to myself, I must not be misunderstood as withdrawing any criticism that I may have made upon the merits of the decision itself, which, in my opinion, is fraught with the gravest consequence to the war program of the nation, to the people of the State, and to the railway company and its securities."

To Delaware Water Gap a Fine Trip for Plainfield Automobilists

While the following attractive automobile tour to Delaware Water Gap and Mount Pocono is planned with New York city as the starting point, it is considered worth while to reprint in full for the benefit of motorists looking for a two or three-day trip. The trip can be taken in full or picked up at various points and shortened to suit the motorist.

Through fair New Jersey country, the Ramapo Valley and Rockland and Orange counties to Port Jervis, the route outlined below by the Bureau of Tours of the Automobile Club of America traverses on its way to the Delaware Valley some of the most pleasing regions in the vicinity of New York city west of the Hudson River. Broadway is followed to 129th street, and the 130th street ferry is taken to Edgewater, N. J. The shore road up Fort Lee hill leads to Fort Lee, which is passed through to Leonia, Bogota, and Hackensack, where a right turn is made into Main street, crossing railroad at station, and just beyond a left turn is made into Passaic street, which is followed through Arcola, then along the Paramus road and northward through Hohokus, Allendale, and Mahwah to Suffern, just across the New York State line, thirty miles from New York city.

The scenic Ramapo Valley is traversed from this point through Ramapo village and Sloatsburg to Tuxedo, in the foothills of the Ramapo Mountains. Northward through Southfield, where an excellent new road for Bear Mountain branches off, the route proceeds through Arden to Harriman's wooded valley and on to Monroe, Chester and Goshen. From there on the Slate Hill road is followed, which is fair going to Port Jervis. On reaching the summit of Slate Hill the Delaware Valley can be seen for thirty miles.

Crossing the beautiful Delaware River, the motorist enters Pennsylvania at Matamoras, where a left turn is made, and the scenic river road is followed south through Pike county and Monroe county to Shawnee and the Delaware Water Gap, 122 miles from New York city.

The section of the route between Port Jervis and the water gap traversing the Delaware Valley is deservedly famous. A fine road runs along the river at the foot of towering verdure-clad bluffs, amid scenery that is in many respects unique. Numerous picturesque falls and gorges are formed by rivulets descending to the Delaware from the foothills of the Alleghenies, here known as the Pocono Mountains. At Milford, a lovely old-fashioned village near the mouth of the Sawkills, Milford Falls, a waterfall of exceptional beauty, may be visited, while from the 800-foot eminence of Otters Cliff, just south of the village, fine views of the valley are obtained, with the Kittatinny Mountains rising sharply to the southwest. Dingman's Ferry, a picturesque and interesting spot, is passed for Egypt Mills, which has long been a famous haunt of fishermen; while Bushkill, located at the curious bend of the river known as Wallpack Bend, or "Fiddler's Elbow," possesses on the little Bushkill Creek the most beautiful waterfall in the district.

Just below Bushkill the road branches to the left, running through Shawnee, the site of the famous course of the Shawnee Golf Club, which lies in a valley of remarkable beauty, cradled beneath the sheltering highlands of the tree-clad Kittatinnies, then on to the Delaware Water Gap, where the river forces its way through the Kittatinny, or Blue Mountains, is a narrow gorge about two miles long, with rocky sides fifteen hundred feet high, so narrow as to leave barely room for the river and the road. Two bold bluffs, Mount Tammany in New Jersey and Mount Miusi in the Keystone State, stand like giant sentinels guarding the gateway through the hills and command extensive views of the superb scenery of the valley and adjacent mountains.

From Delaware Water Gap all of the attractive beauty spots in the Pocono region may be reached with excellent roads, there being a choice of two routes to Mount Pocono—one from Stroudsburg through Bartonsville, Tannersville, Scot Run, and Swiftwater, the other by way of East Stroudsburg through Analomink, Henryville, and Paradise Valley. From Mount Pocono runs what is known as the General Sullivan trail, leading to Pocono Summit, Naomi Pines, Pocono Lake, Blakeslee, and Stoddartville.

If the tourist desires to reach Scranton he should proceed by way to Tobyhanafi Daleville, Moscow, and Elmhurst. Old Forge is easily reached from Scranton. There is also a route to Buck Hill Falls, which branches off the main route at Mount Pocono and goes by way of Cresco, Mountainhome, and Canadensis.

The return from the gap may be varied by running south through Portland to the new iron bridge which crosses the Delaware River to the little town of Delaware. From there to Bridgeville, a distance of five miles, the road is quite rough and worn. On reaching Bridgeville a good macadam road is followed through Buttzville to Hackettstown.

On leaving Hackettstown, the Schooley Mountain is crossed, which is in fair condition to Chester. From there on the balance of the tour traverses a good macadam road through Mendham, Morristown, Madison, and Chatham to Springfield, returning via Springfield avenue through Newark and the Plank road and Hudson County Boulevard to New York.

Aliens to Learn English at Dix

Under the direction of the general staff of the army, a school for alien soldiers was started on Monday, who can neither speak, read or write the English language, and who, at the present time are members of various companies at Dix, and of on use to the unit commanders. For some months past the army officials have been wrestling with the problem of taking care of these men, hundreds of whom are located in the varirous camps of the country. A few days ago Colonel Morrow, of the general staff, held a conference at Camp Dix with Lieutenant Colonel George H. White, chief of staff at the camp, Colonel Lindsay, of the Depot Brigade and H. A. Townsend, educational director of the Y. M. C. A., and out of that meeting came the plan which started at Dix for the first time Monday. In about a month three members of the general staff will pay a visit to the school, and on their report will rest the decision as to whether the same course of study will be installed in every cantonment.

At the present time there are 629 men at Dix who do not understand English, and these soldiers have been detailed to attend the English classes, which will be held in every Y. M. hut daily from 7:30 to 3:30 o'clock. The pupils will be given no other work, and the course will last four months, or, in case of necessity, six months.

Brigadier General Richard P. Davis, commander of the 167th Field Artillery Brigade, was the speaker Sunday at the popular Sunday evening service at the Y. M. auditorium.

Three hundred men from Camp Dix were initiated into the mysteries of the thirty-second degree of Masonry, Monday, at Bloomsburg, Pa., under the direction of the Caldwell Consistory. The men returned Tuesday. Arrangements for the trip were made by H. A. Townsend, of the Y. M. C. and Sergeant Dennis, of the base hospital.

"The Over-There Theatre League," of New York, sent a number of entertainers to Dix on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and they gave programs in the various Y. M. huts. The French military band gave concerts Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Y. M. auditorium, and Tuesday evening in the stadium in the tented arena.

Philadelphia artists presented programs Monday evening in huts 7 and 9, and Tuesday night they appeared at hut 3 and tent C.

A women's quartet from Newark, under the direction of Mrs. Petri, entertained Monday evening at huts 5 and 6, and Mrs. Hunsicker, of New York, gave programs at huts 2 and 8.

"A SOLDIER'S APPEAL."

We have been sent here to your city
On a mission for UNCLE SAM;
Our duty is this, to get you to enlist,
And prove yourself a man.

The young men we are after
Are between 18 and 21.
Now is your chance to go to FRANCE,
And help clean up the "HUN."

Just call around at the office,
There is always someone there.
Give us your name, don't be ashamed,
To enlist and do your share.

There are various branches of service,
In which your can volunteer.
Now is the time to get in line,
It will save you many a jeer.

Maybe you will like the "doughboys"
Who fight so gallantly.
You will have to "hike," also fight
In the "U. S. INFANTRY."

If you are fond of horses,
In the saddle you would like to be.
It's a lively branch, take a chance,
And join the "CAVALRY."

Here is a branch of the Army
That always appealed to me,
There is lots of fun maning the guns
In the "COAST ARTILLERY."

If you are not fond of fighting,
And in the service you would like to be,
You still have a chance to get in a branch,
Such as "ORDNANCE," or "Q. M. C."

This branch I'm about to mention
Is one that in every war,
If you are physically fit, you can do your bit,
By enlisting in the "MEDICAL CORPS."

Young men, remember your duty,
Don't delay, linger or wait.
Take warning, enlist before morning,
Tomorrow may be too late.

(Composed by Corporal E. D. Peck of the Recruiting Party in Plainfield.)

K. of C. Extends Its War Work

The Knights of Columbus will have 1,000 secretaries in Europe before September 15 and another thousand before the end of the year.

The order will raise and spend $50,000,000 in the development of war work here and abroad in the next twelve months. Last year the Knights raised $12,000,000 and expended more than $7,500,000. The order now has 200 buildings in American training camps managed by 325 Knights of Columbus secretaries. Huts are being erected in France and wherever American soldiers are engaged. Secretaries are being sent abroad as rapidly as shipping space can be obtained.

William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus Committee of War Work Activities, who has returned from an inspection of the order's work along the western front in France, made public these statements:

The Knights began their war work activities by erecting a chain of service buildings in New Mexico, Arizona and Texas during the mobilization of American troops on the Mexican border.

But even before the Mexican trouble—back during the Spanish-American War—the order commenced its career as an agency of war relief by voting money to assist returning veterans of the war at Montauck Point.

When the Knights volunteered at the beginning of the present war, to enter the vast field of army relief work, the Government, well aware of the effectiveness of the order's undertaking at the Mexican border, promptly accepted the offer.

The Knights appointed a committee on war activities, an office was opened in Washington and the supreme board of directors of the order voted a per capita tax of $2 on each member, excepting those under foreign jurisdiction. The directors had previously decided to maintain the insurance in the order of any member called to the service, provided he had been insured prior to April 16, 1917.

With the membership tax as a nucleus, the movement to secure a large fund was inaugurated. At first it was thought that $3,000,000 should be the aim, but the rapidly swelling numbers of the army and navy and the popularity of the K. of C. work made it clear that this sum would be quite inadequate to meet the needs.

Buildings were erected in camps simultaneously with the construction of the camps, and as the increase of the fund warranted, more buildings were added. Secretaries were assigned by the score, and dozens of zealous priests volunteered to serve as Knights of Columbus chaplains in the great cantonments and encampments. Just as quickly as materials and labor could be secured and the necessary personnel enlisted, the K. of C. work was extended.

From the outset the Knights adopted as their slogan the cordial "Everybody Welcome and Everything Free," and the hit this made with soldiers and sailors of all denominations and of none, is amptly evidenced by the crowds that throng the K. of C. buildings during recreation hours. The K. of C. buildings are used all the time by all the men.

Notable in the excellent work for the fund was the achievement of John McCormack, the celebrated tenor, who, in five concerts given for the benefit of the fund, raised $57,700.

Chairman William J. Mulligan, of the K. of C. Committee on War Activities, and Supreme Chaplain Rev. P. J. McGivney, recently, during a three months' tour in France, spent more than $2,000,000 to secure K. of C. huts, a chain of forty-five being in operation. Others are to be added as quickly as circumstances permit.

One hundred and seventy-five secretaries were appointed and assigned to duty in France and forty chaplains went over to work in K. of C. uniforms. Three of those K. of C. chaplains have won the Cross of Honor for singular bravery on the battlefield. A K. of C. headquarters building is now open at 16 Rue de la Madeleine, Paris, and at other large French cities, notably at the embarkation ports, fully equipped K. of C. buildings are in operation.

The French Government, recognizing the value of the Knights of Columbus war work and impressed by the splendid welcome accorded by Knights of Cardinals Amete and Adrieu, the one Archbishop of Paris and the other Archbishop of Bordeaux, and the French Hierarchy, clergy and people in general, have assisted the Knights greatly by assigning 150 English-pskeag soldier priests from the French army to work with the K. of C. chaplains.

Surveys are now being made in France and Italy by Supreme Physician E. W. Bulkley and Supreme Director James J. McGraw, of the K. of C., with a view to a further extention of the work. A survey is also under way in Great Britain, where the needs of the thousands of American soldiers in training there will be met as rapidly as conditions permit.

The New York office of the K. of C. Committee on War Activities handles all foreign affairs, in so far as shipping is concerned. The entire seventh floor of the Wahnetah Building, Fourth avenue and 31st street is used for this purpose, William P. Larkin, a supreme director of the order, being in charge. From this office the parties of chaplains and secretaries proceed overseas and thence go the large shipments of athletic and recreational and religious equipment which the Knights supply to the men abroad. Lawrence O. Murray, former comptroller of the currency, recently arrived in France, where he acts as deputy K. of C. overseas commissioner, and Johnn Evers, famous major league baseball star, has gone as a K. of C. secretary to aid in the development of the athletic side of the relief work.

And while the Knights are devoting special attention to their work abroad, the growth at home is proceeding rapidly. Two hundred Knights of Columbus buildings are in operation in American home camps, with 350 secretaries in charge, and many K. of C. chaplains serving the boys.

In addition to the vast chain of K. of C. building now open to the men at home, 100 others are under way, and many portable buildings have been secured for the camps at home and abroad. The personnel to manage these buildings is being rapidly enlisted, the Knights insisting upon the highest grade of help. No fewer than 1,500 men between 40 and 50 years of age, in all parts of the country, volunteered for service with the Knights and many hundreds have applied for appointments as secretaries at home camps.

Monsignor Patrick J. Hayes, auxiliary bishop of New York, and bishop of the American Military and Naval Forces, is in charge of the chaplaincy division of the work. The K. of C. chaplains are immensely popular with the men because of the help they render the soldiers, not only in religious matters, but in social and recreational affairs. Bishop Hayes will soon leave for France to survey the field for religious work among the men there.

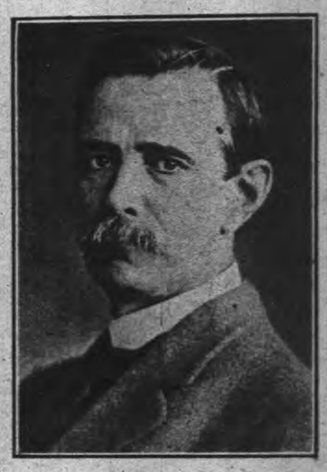
Richard E. Clement Issues Statement as Congress Aspirant

Petitions of nomination endorsing Richard E. Clement, of Elizabeth, as Democratic candidate for the office of member of the House of Representatives of the United States from the Fifth Congressional District of the State of New Jersey, for the term beginning March 4, 1919, were filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton yesterday, two months prior to the primary election to be held on Tuesday, September 24 next. Mr. Clement named himself as campaign manager and the Union County Trust Company as the depository of campaign funds.

In accepting the nomination Mr. Clement chose the designation Democrat.

In a statement for the press he declared that the people of the district are entitled to the best service of which any man is capable and to the undivided time of any one chosen to represent them in the great and responsible office of Congressman.



Richard E. Clement
Democratic Candidate for the Congressional Nomination in the Fifth District.

He promises that, if elected, he will dedicate himself to the people's service and to the exclusion of professional, of business, or of other personal interests.

He offers his record in the service of the people of Union county, extending as it does over a long period of years, as a practical guarantee that the people of the district may trust him to serve them faithfully if chosen as their Representative in Congress.

In announcing his candidacy to the people of the district Mr. Clement makes his position clear in the following statement:

Voters of Union and or Morris counties:

In the primary election to be held September 24 next, my name will appear on the ballots of the Democratic party as a candidate for the office of member of the House of Representatives, for the term beginning March 4, 1919.

If nominated and elected to represent you in the Congress of the United States I pledge myself:

1. To support during the continuance of the war, a policy of force to the limit of America's power and endurance until an American peace, a conclusive peace is won.

2. To favor legislation intended to support and to reward the men and the women directly engaged in the war service of the United States, more particularly the men who arms in hand, shall have won by force an American peace.

3. To support President Wilson and his policies.

4. To apply to every legislative program of action and to every measure in every program, President Wilson's test:

"Is it just, is it for the benefit of the average man, without influence or privilege; does it embody in real fact, the highest conception of social justice and of right dealing, without respect of person or class or particular interest?"

Only those measures, and those measures only, which satisfy affirmatively this high test shall have my support.

I seek opportunity to serve you and ask that with your votes you give me the privilege of doing so.

Sincerely yours,
RICHARD E. CLEMENT.

Richard E. Clement was born at Lancaster, New Hampshire, January 2, 1861, of American colonial and revolutionary ancestry. He is married, has three daughters, and lives at 356 Grier avenue, Elizabeth. He is a Mason, a Universalist in religious belief, and has always been a Democrat, as were his forbears.

He has never been a candidate for political office, though for ten years he served as a member of the Union County Democratic Committee.

Mr. Clement was principal of the public school in Roselle, 1882-1886; principal and supervising principal of Cranford schools, 1886-1900, and principal of School No. 3, High street, Elizabeth, 1900-1907. He was elected superintendent of public schools of the city of Elizabeth for a seven-year term, July 2, 1907; re-elected July, 1914, his present term expiring on July 1, 1921.

He has resigned the superintendency in order to be free to serve the people of the district as candidate and, if elected, as representative.

Final Warning Is Given Sugar Users

Ernest R. Ackerman, county food administartor, this week issued another warning to manufacturers using sugar, restaurant and hotel proprietors and boarding-house keepers, reminding them that the time for filing reports with the State administrator at Newark expires at midnight. Those that fail to heed the notice stand a chance of not being able to purchase any of the commodity hereafter.

The order affects all those except individual householders that use sugar. They are expected to state the amount that is ordinarily consumed in their household each week. The necessary blanks may be obtained by applying at the office in the Marsh building, Park avenue and Second street.

Mr. Ackerman has issued an order regarding the safe of beef that goes into immediate effect. It follows:

"Beef regulations effective in New Jersey at 1 a. m., July 15: Hereafter all hotels, restaurants and other public eating places may serve beef during one meal of not more than four consecutive hours on each day of the week. These hours will be at option of the management of each such establishment.

"All beef served is to be eaten on the premises. Bakories and delicatessen stores come within the provisions of the regulation. This regulation does not, however, apply to beef by-products, such as livers, searls, kidneys, tongues, tripe, and tail, nor to barreled beef trimmings taken from beef as unsuitable to the main use of the cut from which it is trimmed or canned product beef, all of which may be used at any meal on any day."

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Higgins, of West Front street, are the proud parents of a son, who came to their home a few days ago. Mrs. Higgins was formerly Miss Catherine Regan, of Spooner avenue.

All Walks of Life Pay Tribute to Memory of Andrew McCardell At Service in St. Mary's Church

City, county and State officials and men prominent in local business and manufacturing circles were included in the large gathering of mourners in St. Mary's church yesterday morning, when the last sad rites were held over the body of Andrew McCardell, Plainfield's widely known and popular citizen who died at his home on West Front street, Tuesday afternoon, from the effects of a self-inflicted bullet wound, the shot having been fired while he was temporarily deranged from an acute attack of meloncholia.

In his career of thirty years as an active figure in this community, Mr. McCardell had won hundreds of acquaintances who deeply regretted his untimely demise and the outpouring at yesterday's requiem service showed in what high esteem he was held. The hour of beginning the mass was set for 9 o'clock and at that time the edifice was filled to its capacity. Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, rector of the church, was the celebrant and after the prayers had been said for the repose of his soul, the priest took occasion to speak of the deceased as he had known him. He emphasized the fact that Mr. McCardell's generosity was a predominant characteristic, that his activities in the city had accomplished much good and that there was a special need of sympathy for family and relatives in the circumstances leading up to the sudden casting off of his life.

The profusion of floral tributes represented the expression of friends of the deceased from every walk of life. They came from bankers, brokers, shop-keepers, mechanics and even boys who at some time or other he departed had given a helping hand. One of the largest pieces came from the Union County Board of Elections, of which Mr. McCardell had been a member fofr the past four years. Another came from the "Get-Together Club," which he helped to organize and which had much to do with the city's political affairs for more than a decade. Others came from the employes of the Pond Tool Works, where he was superintendent of the foundry for thirty years; from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias and city and county officials.

A delegation of fifty employes of the Pond shop attended the funeral service in a body and afterward acted as an escort from the church to St. Mary's cemetery, where burial was made. The Union County Board of Elections was represented by Fred Zior and Frank Pfaff, of Elizabeth, and each of the fraternal organizations had special delegations present.

The pall-bearers were all men with whom Mr. McCardell had been in close friendship for many years and with one exception each was an official or office-holder. They were State Banking Commissioner Frank H. Smith, former Mayor James F. Buckle, Freeholder Elias H. Bird, County Attorney Francis J. Blatz, Police Chief Patrick S. Kiely and Joseph Harrigan, all of Plainfield.

Mr. McCardell's tragic end came at about 4:20 Tuesday afternoon and was the culmination of a fit of despondency that had been upon him for a month or more. His close friends realized that he was not the same "Andie" as of old and when the news of the suicide spread about the city it was no hard task for many of them to understand what had prompted his action. From the first day that he resigned his position as superintendent at Pond's foundry, the middle of last March, he seemed to be living a different life and although there were splendid opportunities for him to continue his active life, he declined all offers of positions. Several big firms in Detroit and in New England sought his services and though on one occasion he accepted, he afterward changed his mind and continued to brood about real or fancied troubles.

This condition of things gradually grew worse until last week, when what was left of the old time energy and spirit seemed to leave him. He became a complete wreck, his mind distorted by mental and physical pain, from which he could find no relief. He was especially racked last Tuesday and frequently told his wife that his head was in "bad shape." Late in the afternoon he seemed to become somewhat easier as he reclined on his bed and Mrs. McCardell went downstairs for a brief respite from caring for him. She had left the room only a few minutes when she was startled by the crack of a pistol shot and hurrying back to her husband's side found him breathing his last. He had placed the muzzle of the weapon in his mouth and fired the fatal shot.

Dr. Albert Pittis was summoned, but life was extinct when the physician arrived. The usual legal formalities were proceeded with directly after Dr. Pittis had pronounced Mr. McCardell dead. County Physician Dr. F. W. Wescott appeared later in the day and issued the necessary burial permit after he had satisfied himself as to the circumstances. Mrs. McCardell was almost prostrated by the dreadful happening and was herself in need of medical attention after the first of the ordeal had passed. She was still in such a high nervous state yesterday that she was unable to attend the funeral service at St. Mary's church.

Andrew McCardell was a native of Belfast, Ireland, where he was born in 1855. He came to America when only a lad and located at first in Boston. Sometime afterward he went to Worcester, Mass., where he learned the trade of moulder and was foreman in a big shop when the Pond Tool Machine Company removed its plant from that city to Plainfield in 1888. Mr. McCardell was induced to cast his lot with the latter concern and he made his first appearance in this city as superintendent of the foundry department. He held this position until last March, when, because of certain differences with new members of the executive staff of what is now the giant corporation of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company, he resigned his duties.

Mr. McCardell was every inch a mechanic and the thorough manner in which he discharged the position of foundry superintendent had much to do with his success of the Pond shop. Some of the largest "pouring" ever made in an American foundry were successfully accomplished under his supervision, and the method of having every branch of foundry work carried on under a separate foreman, now in vogue in many big industrial plants was one of his originations. He was held in the highest esteem by the men directly under him as well as by those of the machine shop and other branches of Pond's working force.

It was in another sphere, however, that Mr. McCardell gained prominence and had a chance to play a game that he liked. This was in politics. He began his career as a member of the city committee, advanced to county committeeman and eventually as a factor in city, county and State political affairs. He never sought public office himself but was always helping in the selection of suitable candidates for the Republican party, with which he was affiliated, and conducting campaigns that brought success to the G. O. P. forces. Mr. McCardell's closest associate and confident in this work was James T. MacMurray, formerly manager of the Pond shop and now superintendent of the Meade-Morrison works at Easton Boston, Mass. For nearly twenty years the two "Macs," as they were referred to, had the last say in Plainfield's Republican slate and no important move was made in the county unless the two Plainfielders were consulted. In the height of their prime, Mr. McCardell and Mr. MacMurray were called into the "star chamber" proceedings of the State political directorate, where their advice and suggestions were received with sincere appreciation. The only political reward Mr. MacMurray received was that of city clerk while that of Mr. McCardell was a three-year term as State factory inspector, the duties being discharged while still remaining as foundry superintendent at Pond's, and his appoinemtn as a member of the County Board of Elections in 1914.

The "Get-Together Club" was organized by Mr McCardell much on the same line as the famous "Amen Club" of other days in New York, which held out at the old Fifth avenue hotel. The "Get-Together Club" held its meetings at Henry Windham's Waldorf Hotel on East Front street, where the local political situation each year was looked over and campaign plans made. Here the club held its social sessions, calling together scores of prominent citizens to do honor to victorious candidates or to extend farewells to thers leaving the city. At the old quarters only a few months ago, Mr. McCardell was called before a big gathering of his old shop-mates who believed he would soon go to Detroit for another position, and after expressing their good-will toward him, made him a present of a purse of gold. The same feeling was held toward him by practically every adult in Plainfield and when the unfortunate circumstance of Tuesday occurred the wave of sympathy that swept over the city was absolutely genuine.

Outside of the "Get-Together Club," Mr. McCardell's only social affiliations were those of the Elks' Club and the Knights of Pythias. He was one of the oldest members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., and as a member of Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., was active for many years.

Beside his widow, who was Miss Louise Regan, of this city, Mr. McCardell's only near surviving relatives are one sister, Miss Mary McCardell, of Central Falls, R. I. There are also four nieces, the daughters of a deceased brother, who live in New England.

GETS SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

Arraigned in court this morning on a charge that he had stolen chickens from his brother and solicited money

Miss Elizabeth Brown, of Plainfield avenue, returned Sunday, after spending two weeks at Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard.

"Eagle Eye" of Attorney Blatz Aids Taxpayers

Through the watchfulness of Attorney Francis J. Blatz, of this city, Union county is to have returned to it the sum of $2,100 which has been paid the State for the care of George A. Ferris, committed from Elizabeth to the Morris Plains asylum in 1900 as an indigent patient.

The order for Ferris' commitment was issued by the late Judge Vail and at the time it was declared that the man had no property or source of income. About six months ago, Ferris' father died, leaving a considerable estate, of which $2,700 was designated as a share for the son in the State hospital. The Commercial Trust Company of Jersey City was named as executor for the will and in publishing the legal advertisement, calling for the appointment of a guardian for Ferris, Mr. Blatz became acquainted with the facts of the bequest. He accordingly applied to Judge Carlton B. Pierce for a writ to vacate the original commitment and issue a new one, making the insane man a non-indigent patient. The request was complied with and the Commercial Trust Company must now pay over $2,100 out of the father's bequest of $2,700.

The Commercial Trust Company, through its counsel, offered vigorous objection to the vacating of the original order, but Judge Pierce ruled that County Attorney Blatz was correct in his declaration that Union county taxpayers should not be made to pay for Ferris' keep for eighteen years when there was money of his own to meet the bill.

Charged With Falsifying His Questionnaire

After a hearing before United States Commissioner Matthews at Newark yesterday morning, on a charge of making a false statement in his questionnaire the bail of $500 of Arthur Klausner, of 637 East Second street, was continued pending grand jury action.

In his questionnaire he said he had been with the government department of plant protection for more than a year, whereas it was shown he had not been in the service for that period of time.

Klausner took the stand that, as he had been with the Burns Detective Agency, he regarded himself as an operative and therefore justified in stating he had been in the business for more than a year.

Klausner came to Plainfield the pas winter at the time there was a rumor that the Standard Aero plant was to be blown up by Germans. The Burns Agency was requested to hurry out a force of men and Klausner was one of them. He afterward remained a member of the Standard's private force of guards. He was arrested at his home on East Second street by Secret Service men last Tuesday morning.

Time For Entering Garden Competition Extended by N. R. A.

The interest exhibited by the young people of the Netherwood section in the Home Gardens competition as conducted by the above association, is very gratifying to the committee in charge, consisting of Messrs. George S. Ccott, and Lewis J. Geary. Entries have been coming in good shape, and it is expected that last year's list of 27 gardens worked by the neighborhood young people of 17 and under will be exceeded.

This year, aside from cash prizes or $3.00 for first and $2.00 for second best garden in the unassisted class, and $2.00 for first and $1.00 for second in the assisted class, there are the association's beautiful ribbons printed in gilt, and eight handsome prize cups to be won, for the most productive and best ordered home gardens.

The date of the closing of entries for the gardens competition has been extended to Saturday, August 10, in order to give the young people who have been away a little more latitude and time to enter their gardens.

The officers of the association are: A. C. Wilmerding, president; Chas. S. Langdon, vice president; Wm. A. DeLong, secretary, with whom entries are to be made, and Hamilton B. Wilmerding, treasurer.

For those who have not received them, entry blanks may be had from any of the above officers.

PLAINFIELDER WOUNDED.

William Wood Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Wilson, of 902 Watchung avenue, was reported on yesterday's Canadian casualty list as being slightly wounded.

Corporal Peck "Nearly Gets" A New Recruit

Corporal Ernest D. Peck, in charge of the local army recruiting station, nearly had a new man yesterday. He came into the office with every intnetion of joining Uncle Sam's divisions and the physical examination showed that he was eligible. He was accompanied by a friend who also seemed "fit" and when the Corporal finished the measurements, he started on the usual questions.

Everything was all right until the Corporal asked the stereotyped quizz:

"In case of an emergency, with whom do you wish to have the Government communicate?"

The candidate turned green, then white and then every other color in the rainbow. All of a sudden he excused himself, saying he felt a sudden rush of blood to the head and started for the outside to get a little air. He has not yet returned and that is why Corporal Peck says he "nearly had a candidate."

Even though this one young man is not the kind Uncle Sam wants there seemed to be plenty of others in Plainfield that answer his purpose. In the past four months Corporal Peck has secured a total of 115 enlistments and of these only thirteen have been rejected for causes unknown to him. This is a splendid record when it is considered how thoroughly the city has been combed for young men by the draft board and other agencies.

Corporal Peck still urges men between the ages of 18 and 21 and 31 and 41 to enlist now while the chances are good. The draft age is sure to be lowered from 21 and raised above 31 a little later on and the accepted men have practically no preference. At the present time the artillery is greatly in need of good recruits and Corporal Peck will tell all about this branch if called upon.

Private Harry Derflinger, assistant recruiting officer in Plainfield, went to Flemington yesterday to look over the field there. He will return this afternoon and tomorrow will spend the day at Somerville to talk to the young men of that town.

Corporal Peck announced the following four enlistments this week: Harold Bamford, Somerville, Field Artillery; Andrew V. Fellows, Somerville, Infantry; Veron S. Rolph, Somerville, Infantry, and William R. Pond, 139 East Front street, Medical Corps.

How War Removes Religious Barriers

The New York Sun, in its issue of yesterday, featured a special cablegram story fro mthe front, telling of incidents occurring to Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, former pastor of the Crescent Avenue church in this city, who is doing Y. M. C. A. work in the French field. The dispatch was as follows:

"The Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, of Plainfield, N. J., is a Red Cross chaplain and of the Presbyterian faith. A few days ago, when he was near Chateau Thierry, he wanted to hold religious services, and as the Catholic chapel near there was unoccupied, with nobody with authority around, he decided to hold services there. Several Red Cross nurses and some soldiers and orderlies took seats, and as the services proceeded some French soldiers entered. After the service, as he was going around to put out the candles, one of these approached and, smiling, said he was a priest and told him he had been preaching in his chapel. 'This instance shows how war breaks down all barriers between religious denominations,' the pastor said, relating the incident.

"The clergyman also told of finding a lad in the hospital ward from Lawreneeville, N. J., who had been wounded in the abdomen and whom he had baptized some years before and whose parents were members of his congregation."

A search of the records fails to show who the young man from Lawreneeville might have been. It is possible that he is included in a number of wounded men whose names have not yet appeared in a casualty list.

CALL ISSUED FOR REGISTERED MECHANICS.

Secretary Freeman, of the Exemption Board, announces today that the Government wants registrants to volunteer as electricians, carpenters, blacksmiths and machinists. Only those physically fit and having at least four years of grammar schooling will be eligible.

Plainfield registrants answering this call must report to the local office before August 6 and if accepted will be sent to the Penn State College for a two months' training course in these trades.

in Netherwood, Fred Benner received a suspended sentence from Judge DeMeza on his promise that he would take the pledge.

Barrett Company Removes Last of Old Standpipe

The firm of Barrett & Company, the big New York wrecking and contracting concern, this week completed the razing of the Plainfield-Union Water Company's stand pipe at Netherwood, which for more than twenty-five years has been a lanmark in that section of the city.

When the Water Company decided to draw all its supply from the big nine million gallon reservoir on Jerusalem road, Fanwood township, it had no further use for the tall "tank" which rose to a sheer height of 142 feet. Barrett & Company, who make a specialty of building gas and water stand-pipes, purchased the tower and personally took it apart. The big iron plates were kept intact, being taken down one by one and were shipped direct to New York by automobile. They were found to be in a good state of preservation and will be used at some future time for the same purpose for which they were originally made.

The old stand-pipe was built in 1892 for the Plainfield Water Supply Company by Tippett & Wood, a Phillipsburg firm of contractors. Its height of 142 feet and diameter of twenty-four feet made it one of the largest city water containers in this part of the country. It had a capacity of 500,000 gallons, furnishing a pressure of seventy pounds in nearly all parts of the city, the original Netherwood section being one of the few exceptions on account of its elevation.

The new reservoir is of solid concrete and while not very high, gives a uniform pressure of seventy-five pounds because of its great area and the high position of the ground on which it is built. Its capacity of nine million gallons will maintain this pressure at all times, whereas with the old stand-pipe if heavy drain was made upon it by the fire department, the pressure became lessened unless the company's pumps were put on at full force. The water in the new reservoir will come from the Netherwood wells as before, the only difference being a new system of "air-lift" pumping which carries the water to the new storage place.

Captain Reed Receives Major's Commission

Captain Thomas W. Reed, who has been located in Plainfield since last October as inspector of ordnance at the Walter Scott plant, has been wearing a broad smile the past few days. It has been induced by the welcome news from Washington that he has been promoted to the rank of major in recognition of his valuable services to the Government. The commission was unsought and coming unexpectedly as it did proved a welcomed surprise to the popular officer.

Captain Reed, or Major Reed as it should be from now on, lived in Philadelphia previous to America's entrance to the war but after his assignment to Plainfield, he removed his family here and is now living on Leland avenue. Beside being in charge of ordnance inspection at the Walter Scott plant, he also has charge of all Government inspection at the Singer plant in Elizabeth. Since coming to Plainfield, he has made a host of friends and the latter are almost as happy as he himself at the new commission he has received.

The executive staff and big corps of workers at the Scott factory are working night and day turning out Government ordnance and the fact that this plant was the first in the country to deliver a finished gun mount, has brought it into special consideration by the army department. Major Reed's hustling ability was no small factor in the rapid output and it is probable that this fact was taken into consideration when his promotion was ordered.

Navy Opens Office Here for Recruits

In its effort to secure 200,000 more men within a few weeks, the Navy Department has instituted a recruit drive that includes Plainfield and for that purpose Petty Officer "Ben" Corrigan, of this city, has been sent here to take charge locally. He has established the quarters at the postoffice building on Watchung avenue and will be pleased to give all information to young men desirous of helping Uncle Sam on the sea.

All branches of the navy are open to enlistments but the department is especially anxious to secure the colored lads for mess attendants. Officer Corrigan secured one of these today. He is George Gilbert, of West Third street, and he will leave for a training station romorrow. George Gould, also of Plainfield, enlisted today as a seaman and will leave for the Brooklyn Navy Yard this afternoon.

All men between the ages of 18 and 21 years and 31 to 41 years are acceptable for enlistment. Men in the draft age cannot be taken as all releases have been stopped.

Latest Order Cuts Into Last June's Registrants

Forty-one of Latest 1-A Selectives Will Be Sent to Camp Greenleaf Next Week, Leaving But 20 Eligibles--Colored Contingent for Camp Dix Given Big Send-Off Today

By the latest call coming to the Plainfield Draft Board from Washington, forty-one white selectives will leave the city sometime during the five-day period beginning August 5. This will take nearly all of the Class 1-A men secured from the registration of last June as only forty-seven was secured after the physical examinations were over. To these must be added the names of those whose appeals to the Newark Board were turned down but all in all it will not be more than twenty white selectives ready for instant call.

Secretary Freeman has not yet announced the names of the forty-one who are to leave next week and he will not do so until the exact date of departure is given. The intention is to go to Camp Greenleaf, Ga., and is the second one from Plainfield to go to that place.

Three more men from the limited class will be sent to Syracuse, N. Y., next Monday, where they will go in training for military police and fire duty. Those selected are: Clarence Giles, who was once sent to Camp Dix but later returned; Fred Burkhardt and James G. Monroe. Twenty-seven colored selectives left on the 9:38 train this morning for Camp Dix. They were led to the North avenue station by Bolan's Band and followed by an escort of fully 1,000 men and women friends. A squad of police, a detachment of Home Guards and city officials were also in line.

Last night the selectives were given a farewell demonstration at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, which was largely attended. The program was in charge of Fitz M. Cox and beside addresses by colored clergymen, solos were rendered by Seymour Van Blake, Henry Van Blake and William Dempsey. The corps of women from the colored churches served the supper.

On Monday next, another contingent of fifteen colored selectives will leave for Camp Upton on the 10:58 train. They will be given a farewell at the Mt. Olive church tomorrow night. The original list of twelve men has been published in the Record and the three added since are Frank Brooks, Melvin aVn Doren and Richard Carter.

Alimony "Slacker" Is Warned by Court

In court Wednesday for the fourth time on a charge of failure to pay alimony to Mrs. Florence V. Lederer, of New York, who obtained a divorce from him in 1914, Albert Lederer, of this city, was adjudged in contempt. If within one week he shall have paid arrearages amounting to $180, which have accrued from January 28 last to July 18, the date of the order which brought him before Vice Chancellor Lane at Newark, plus a fine of $50, and the costs of the present proceeding, he will escape a jail penalty. It transpired that in 1916, he paid up the alimony after two days in jail, and that on each occasion that he was prodded into paying by Chancery's potent arm he owed from $100 to $200.

It did look for a time as if Lederer would be made to go from court direct to jail, but Arthur Lovell, of this city, succeeded in gaining the week's respite. However, the vice chancellor warned Lederer that if he should come before him again for the same cause it would be a case of imprisonment for a definite period.

Mrs. Lederer, who was represented by William Newcorn, gets only $7.50 from her husband—when he pays—for the support of herself and their own daughters, fourteen and fifteen years old.

"Half Pints" Banned By Order Emanating From Washington

The latest order coming from Washington in an effort to keep the liquor away from soldiers and sailors puts the "taboo" on the time honored "half pint" bottle of rum and asks wholesalers to make every effort to see that orders sent out by them are not intended for someone else other than the one giving the order.

Notice to this effect was served on all the liquor dealers of the city by Chief Kiely yesterday. While the order on the "half pint" is not compulsory practically every saloon man has agreed to stop all sales of this kind. It has been the easiest method of getting liquor for a man in uniform as the purchaser could slip the bottle into his pocket and pass it over unseen to the soldier or sailor anxious for a drink.

The order as it affects the wholesalers is being made absolute as the wholesalers themselves are making every effort to aid the Government to keep liquor away from men in the service. It has developed that orders would be given for cases of beer or bottles of liquor that were handed over somewhere else after the delivery had been made to the person paying the bill. Hereafter, no orders will be taken except those given on the store premises or over the 'phone when the party at the other end of the wire is absolutely known to the dealer. The Plainfield wholesaler urge patrons to help them live up to the Government requirements by giving their orders on the premises and refraining from transferring any beers, wines or liquors to anyone else.

Chief Kiely has received assurance that the hearty co-operation of the saloon keepers will be forthcoming even though the suspension of "half pint" sales means a big loss in business.

Training of Younger Men when Draft Limit Is Lowered

While the administration will ask when Congress convenes that the draft age be lowered, members of the military affairs committees of both Houses were allowed to understand that the present plans do not contemplate the use of men in actual fighting until they have reached the age of 21. In the meantime the men would undergo rigorous training in this country.

This was universally interpreted, even by opponents, as a direct step towards universal military training. It would, in fact, be universal training for the period of the war. Committee members believed, however, that before the new policy had been in effect six months, the administration would back a move to make it permanent.

In order that the government may have a free hand in dealing with any situation that shall arise, it may be that no provision will be contained in Secretary Baker's new man-power bill that would prevent sending men under 21 to the trenches, members of the Senate committee pointed out. However, if the demand for such a provision grew to large proportions, it was indicated that the administration would accept amendments from the floor to this end, and, indeed, might sponsor such amendments.

This would remove a great deal of the opposition that now exists to setting the draft age as low as 19, in the present situation 20 years would be very much more acceptable to Congress as the lower limit. The fact that the issue of universal military training is involved is not expected to arouse any considerable opposition. Congress is being rapidly converted to the system, although it is not yet ready to accept it as a permanent policy.

Drastic Plan For Labor Control Is Now in Effect

"Beginning yesterday the supplying of war industries with common labor was centralized in the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor, and all independent recruiting of common labor by manufacturers having a pay-roll of more than 100 men will now be diverted to the United States Employment Service. This is in accordance with the decision of the War Labor Policies Board and approved by the President on June 17. The War Labor Policies Board is composed of representatives of the War, Navy and Agricultural Departments, the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation, the War Industries Board, and the Food, Fuel and Railroad Administrations. Its chairman is Felix Frankfurter, assistant to the Secretary of Labor.

"The above action was found necessary to overcome a perilous shortage of unskilled labor in war industries. This shortage was aggravated by an almost universal practice of labor stealing and poaching.

"While the restrictions against the private employment of labor apply only to common labor at the present time, these restrictions will, as soon as possible, be extended to include skilled labor. In the meantime, recruiting of skilled labor for war production will be subject to Federal regulations now being prepared.

"This drastic change in the Nation's labor program has been found necessary in order to protect the employer and the employed, to conserve the labor supply of the communities and to cut down unnecessary and expensive labor turn-over (which, in some cases, is as high as 100 per cent. a week), and to increase the production of essentials.

"While non-essential industries will be drawn upon to supply the necessary labor for war work, the withdrawal will be conducted on an equitable basis in order to protect the individual employer as much as possible.

"Under the operating methods adopted, the country has been divided into thirteen Federal districts, each district in charge of a superintendent of the United States Employment Service. The States within each district are in turn in charge of a State director, who has full control of the service within his State.

"In each community there is being formed a local community labor board, consisting of a representative of the United States Employment Service, a representative of employers and a representative of the employed. This board will have jurisdiction over recruiting and distributing labor in its locality.

"A survey of the labor requirements is being made, and in order that each community may be fully protected, rulings have been issued that no labor shall be transported out of any community by the United States Employment Service without the approval of the State director; nor shall any labor be removed by the service from one State to another without the approval of the United States Employment Service at Washington. Every effort will be made to discourage any movements from community to community or State to State by any other service.

"This labor program has the approval of all producing departments of the Government, through the War Labor Policies Board.

"It must be understood that farm labor will be protected, for the industrial program distinctly includes special efforts to keep the farmer supplied with labor.

"The requirement that unskilled labor must be recruited through the sole agency of the United States Employment Service does not at present apply in the following five cases:

1. Labor which is not directly or indirectly solicited.
2. Labor for the railroads.
3. Farm labor—to be recruited in accordance with existing arrangement with Department of Agriculture.
4. Labor for non-war work.
5. Labor for establishments whose maximum force does not exceed one hundred.

"When the survey of labor requirements has been made and the aggregate demand for unskilled labor in war work is found, each State will be assigned a quota, representing the common labor to be drawn from among men engaged in non-essential industries in that State.

"These State quotas will in turn be distributed among localities. Within each locality, employers in non-war work, including those who are only partially in war work, will be asked to distribute the local quotas from time to time amongst themselves. Quotas by localities and individuals are to be accepted as readily as they are for Liberty Loan and Red Cross campaigns. This plan of labor quotas is a protection for all communities.

"The object is to keep any community from being drained of labor, and to use local supply, as far as possible, for local demand. The situation, however, is such that in certain cases some men may have to be transported over long distances."

McAdoo Tells Rail Men To Eliminate Strike

Railway employes were told this week by General Director McAdoo, in announcing details of the wage increase for more than 500,000 shopmen, that the nation expected new energy from the workers in return for pay increases and improvements in employment conditions and that strikes and other labor disturbances must be eliminated during the war.

Recreation For Federal Clerks At Washington

The wisdom of the War and Navy Departments Commissions on Training Camp Activities in creating the War Camp Community Service to provide healthy leisure time activities for all those in the service of the government has been vindicated financially in Washington as well as psychologically all over the country. The service has not only stimulated the morale of our fighting men, but it has saved money and time for the government by allaying the dissatisfaction of its clerks due to the fact that they have been unable to engage in athletic enterprises because of lack of facilities.

An organization of government employes has been effected by Washington War Camp Community Service which has made a survey of all available tennis and baseball facilities in the District of Columbia, and the service has prevailed upon the Department of Public Buildings and Grounds to permit the marking off of tennis courts on the lawns in the public parks. Many vacant lots have also been converted into playgrounds, ball diamonds and tennis courts.

Tennis and baseball leagues have been organized among the employes of the federal government stationed in Washington for the period of war emergency, and the new facilities have been put at their disposal. As a result, the office turnover, with its resultant loss of time and effectiveness, is decreasing in the government offices.

How New Jersey's Roads Have Suffered

The New Jersey State Highway Commission, which is directing the construction of a $15.000,000 highway system in various parts of the State, issued a statement this week that the tremendous vehicular traffic over the roads extending from twenty Federal reservations is destroying the surfacesand foundations of the highways at a rate far beyond the control of the State.

It is set forth that the State, with a patriotic intention, has expended $150,000 from its funds to care for these military routes, so that they would be fit for the needs of the War Department, and has insisted that the counties contribute a large proportion of their State aid money from the motor vehicle fund. But in spite of these moves, the statement asserts, the conditions on these roads are becoming worse and the highways may become impassable if they are not improved before winter.

In an effort to have the roads leading from the military centres repaired and maintained properly, the commission announced that Watson G. Clark, chairman of its executive committee, was instructed to confer with the Federal officials in Washington in regard to New Jersey obtaining enough money from the United States Government to place the highways in the condition necessary to handle the unusual traffic.

Mr. Clark has communicated with Col. Marshall, Jr., of the Construction Division of the War Department; Gen. Goethals, Federal Director of Purchase, Storage and Ttraffic and Engineer in charge of the work on the State highway, and other prominent men. He has asked an investigation of the needs of the State.

Income and Excess Taxes Show Great Variations

Wide variation in the yield of income and excess profits taxes in different states this year as compared with income tax payments last year was shown this week by tabulations of the Interna l Revenue Bureau. Eight times as much revenue was received from these sources this year as last in the entire country, the comparative figues being $2,821,000,000,000 and $359,000,000, yet the increases by states ranged from 2.6 times for Idaho, Utah and Montana to fifteen times for Mississippi, Alabama and West Virginia. New York State ranked first in the volume of income and excess profits taxes returned this year, yet the increase over last year's yield was only five and one-third times.

Tax officials, it is said, have found it impossible to draw definite conclusions concerning tax evasions from the tabulations.

Increases by other states were as follows:

South Carolina, 13 2-2 times; Kentucky, 13; Arkansas and Oregon, 12 each; Illinois, Ohio, North Carolina and Pennsylvania, 11 each; Louisiana, 10½; Nebraska, Tennessee and Wisconsin, 10 each; Maine and Minnesota, 9 each; Virginia, 8.8; Missouri, 8½; Washington, 9:4; Wyoming, Colorado and Indiana, 8 1-3; Massachusetts, 8 1-5; Connecticut and Rhode Island (jointly), Iowa and North and South Dakota, 8; California, 7½; Florida, 7 1-3; Michigan, 7; New Jersey, 6 2-3; Delaware, Maryland and District of Columbia (jointly) and New Mexico and Arizona (jointly), 6½ each; Texas, 4½, and Oklahoma, 2.7.

Seeks Accuracy In Crop Report

Dependence of a large part of the world upon American farm production has focussed public attention upon the crop reports of the U. S. Department of Agriculture—reports which the United States Government sponsors and protects from illegal use to the ultimate degree.

Just now the crop reports are reflecting the efforts of American farmers from maximum production. When small crops are reported the news serves to prepare the country and enable necessary readjustments.

The crop reports, too, have an immediate and marked effect upon the markets. Their great importance in this field has made necessary thorough safeguards against premature publication and unauthorized use. Every avenue through which information might be filtered from the locked rooms where the reports are finally prepared is closed, and remains closed until the second when the signal for release is given.

On "chop reporting day" at an hour set months in advance, newspaper and press association representatives gather in the main building of the Department of Agriculture. Each has near at hand a telephone already connected with his office, and at the other end of the line is a man equipped with a blank crop reporting form. Shortly before the moment set copies of the completed crop reports are placed on a table, face down, and each newspaper man gets his hand on one. At the signal, given by a high official of the department, the newspaper men get to their telephones, and in a very few minutes more the coveted information is being read in every large market in the United States, and the next day, at the latest, it is available in every community of the United States and in the larger markets of foreign countries.

The "release" of the crop reports follows work in which tens of thousands and sometimes hundreds of thousands of persons all over the country have participated.

Distributed over the country are forty-two salaried field agents, one in each State or group of small States. The Bureau also employs ten crop specialists, one each for cotton, rice and tobacco, who travel through the regions in which their special crops are grown. In addition there are approximately 175,000 voluntary crop reports, including county and township reporters and producers, buyers and handlers of grain and live stock.

The returns from each class of reporters are tabulated and averaged separately as a check against the others.

To prevent a total of any of the so-called speculative crops, such as corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye and cotton, from becoming known to any person prior to the time fixed in advance, even the tabulators and computers who make up the totals do not know the States to whnch they pertain. The final telegraphic reports and comments of the field agents relating to the speculative crops are kept locked in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture until crop reporting day, when they are turned over to the Crop Reporting Board, and the entire board is immediately locked in until the minute that the report is issued, guards being stationed at the doors, and all telephones disconnected.

Each member of the Crop Reporting Board prepares his own individual and independent estimate for each crop and State. These are compared, discrepancies are discussed, and explained, and a final figure is adopted by the board.

The Crop Reporting Board has before it more complete, detailed and accurate data than any other crop estimating agency in the world. Members of the board and all other department employes concerned with crop estimates are prohibited by law under severe penalties from speculating in any product "of the soil," from giving out advance information, and from knowingly compiling or issuing false statistics.

Richard E. Clement Addresses Voters of Fifth District

Richard A. Clement, of Elizabeth, who recently announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Congress, has addressed the following open letter to the voters of Union and Morris counties, which comprise the Fifth Congressional District:

"Further consideration of the Congressional situation and the almost unanimous judgment of friends convince me that the candidate for the unexpired term of Mr. Capstick, the term extending from Election Day to March 4, 1919, and for the regular term beginning March 4, 1919, should be one and the same man.

"My petitions for the Democratic nomination for the regular term are on file in Trenton.

"Petitions endorsing my candidacy for the short term—November, 1918, to March 4, 1919, will soon be filed.

"Sincerely yours,

"(Signed) RICHARD E. CLEMENT."

FIREMAN RESIGNS.

John McInerney, of East Sixth street, who was appointed to the city fire department on June 1, has tendered his resignation to take effect next Tuesday. He will return to his old trade of blacksmith at the Port Newark ship yards where, as he says, "the hours are shorter and the pay better."

Improvers Begin Move to Elect Utilities Board

A bill providing for the election of public utilities commissioners will be drafted by a special committee of the Federation of Improvement Associations as the upshot of a long discussion at the meeting of the federation Tuesday evening in Mayor Gillen's office in the city hall at Newark.

The debate was precipitated by the comment of Dr. William G. Hanrahan, of the Central Improvement Association, on the recent decision of the Public Utilities Commission in the Public Service Railway rate case. Dr. Hanrahan attacked the zone system as a basis of fare, declaring that after election Newarkers would learn "what a vicious plan the zone system was." Predicting "trouble," the speaker said that zones would be a menace to property owners in the outlying districts, as fares to these sections of the city might increase to eight and ten cents.

The proposal to indorse the action of the commission in the rate case was opposed by the speaker, who asserted that approval now would be a source of regret later, as the Uublic Service would not give up the fight until it got more from the public.

The speaker declared that the federation and the New Jersey League of Municipalities must act at once to stay the Public Service. Suburban development, he said, would be virtually throttled by an increase of fares, which he foresaw as the outcome of the zone plan.

William Tries, Jr., of the Northwestern Improvement Association, thought Dr. Hanrahan unduly alarmed and favored the federation's sending a letter to the Public Utilities Board commending it for the fair manner in which it had handled the rate case. The issue "after election," added Mr. Tries, had nothing to do with the situation now, and he asserted the federation and the State league would be awake when the question of mapping out the zones came up.

George M. Judd, of the Clinton Hill Association, wanted to know if the federation was willing to stand by and see municipal contracts with public utility corporations regarded as "scraps of paper." He declared for strict enforcement of fare contracts, saying that the one-cent transfer granted by the utility board to the Public Service was sufficient to produce plenty of return on the capital invested, but he asserted that it was not enough to take care of the "millions of dollars of water stock of the corporation."

The New Jersey courts, Dr. Hanrahan replied, had decided that rate contracts could be abrogated, while the New York courts had held that such agreements were inviolable.

"The zone system," he declared, "is only a scheme to camouflage the situation until after election. If we approve the attitude of the Utility Board, we go backward," he concluded.

The whole proceeding he characterized as "tinctured with politics." He charged that politics had been played in the federation and that if political considerations were to enter into action of the federation, he was prepared to fight.

E. Garfield Gifford, of the Branch Brook Association, deplored bringing politics into the discussion, saying perhaps it would please President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service Railway Company, if the federation agreed with him that the public utility commissioners were "a lot of political horse thieves."

Counsel that the federation withhold action until the league of municipalities had decided whether it would take the fare decision into the courts was offered by H. A. Gaffrey.

Oswald R. Routh, of the Public Welfare Association, then moved that the committee adopt a resolution urging the election of public utility commissioners.

The resolution, Dr. Hanrahan believed, should contain a clause favoring a recall of commissioners when they had failed in their duty, and he supplemented the original motion by moving that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Governor, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Assembly.

It was William J. Morgan's opinion that the whole matter should be referred to a legislative committee, which should be appointed by the President of the federation.

53,000 Men Sent Overseas Last Week

There are now 1,253,000 American fighters overseas, General Peyton C. March, chief of staff, told the Senate military affairs committee this week. Last week 53,000 were transported, and this represents a considerable falling off from the 90,000 weekly average that has been maintained recently. However, this was due to the fact, he said, that much more shipping space than usual had been given over to equipment and supplies.

While the Franco-American offensive is still being maintained, it is slowing down materially, Chief of Staff March told the members. General March outlined the general situation, saying that few outstanding features had developed in the past few days.

The War Department is still without any report on the casualties suffered by the Americans in the present drive, General March said, and no estimate could be made at this time. The general situation continues to be entirely satisfactory, he declared.

Army Medicel Men Organize One of Country's Most Remarkable Film Producing "Concerns"

A new and unique moving picture concern has recently been organized at Washington. Some of the most important men in the moving picture industry are working as its camera men; the foremost American scientists are its stars, and during the short period it has been in operation it has produced some of the most remarkable pictures ever registered on film. It is known as "Gorgas Film Company."

The surgeon general has gone into the moving picture business, and the whole army medical department has gone in with him. With the help of various officers and privates who formerly owned, operated and worked for large moving picture companies, a moving picture plant has been installed in a building near the army medical headquarters, a Government film agency has been established, and films at the rate of 158,000 feet a week are being produced for the entertainment and education of the army.

Before they are shipped to the cantonments, the films are tried out in a long, dark and badly ventilated room that has all the atmosphere of a commercial moving picture theatre. Here medical officers, the heads of Government departments, Congressional committees, and even the Secretary of War, occasionally drop in and ask to see the pictures.

OnOe of these, which was being run off the other day for the benefit of some visitors, showed an operation on a young private for the removal of a hernia. In case you have never had one, you may not know that a hernia is a part of the intestines which has become loosened and projects through one's inner lining in an annoying manner, causing a large lump to appear on the smooth surface of the abdomen.

In this Government film, which is of the "animated cartoon" kind, you are shown exactly how it happens. First, with a few broad strokes, the artist sketches an outline of the human form as it normally is. Next appears a sketch of the interior, showing the intestines, looking like coils of lead pipe, and intersected by arteries and blood vessels. Immediately one of these coils begins to slip out of place and drop down a couple of inches—the hernia has occurred. Then the intestines fade out again, and the next picture shows you how the hernia looks on the outside.

Comes now the operation. A knife suddenly floats into the picture and makes an incision about an inch above the main artery of the intestines and the larger blood vessels. The incision is swathed with some sort of an antiseptic mixture by a hand that appears in the right-hand corner of the picture, while from all four corners appear animated forces, which seize the skin about the incision and hold it firmly back. Again the hand appears, this time with a peculiar instrument resembling a nut-pick, with which the recalcitrant intestine is captured and pushed back into place. The rest of the operation is finished in a few seconds by a needle and thread, which float into the film and sew up the inner lining and the outside skin. At this point the real photograph of the private undergoing this operatin is flashed on the screen, showing him on the operating table, with the doctor and nurse bending over him, and the young man himself gdinning and giving a military salute.

The energetic condition of the patient after this operation is accounted for by the fact that it has been performed with a local anesthetic and not ether. Since the war, German patent rights are not observed in this country, and American surgeons are now using the German local anesthetic, novocaine, with gratifying results. In the middle of this operation, the young private smiled at his nurse and said, "I wonder what the folks in 'Frisco are doing now?"

While the operation for hernia is a comparatively simple one, the value of such a picture showing a difficult operation may readily be seen. Medical test-books are very good in describing the theory of an operation, but they cannot show the exact technique. To the small town doctor, for example, a moving picture of one of the Mayo brothers performing an operation for cancer would be ten times as instructive as a text-book setting forth the theory of the thing.

Indeed, according to the army medical corps, a moving picture of an operation is better than a sight of the operation itself, since the retina of the eye cannot possibly retain the numerous impressions photographed by camera; while the animated cartoon—which eliminates all unnecessary detail and focuscs the attention on the important points—is the last word in medical instruction.

The "animated cartoonist" of the army medical corps is Sergeant Paul Terry, who formerly ran the "Animated Weekly," and built the camera for Bray cartoons. When he first entered the army he had no medical knowledge whatsoever, but he attracted the attention of the medical officers by the accurate sketches he was able to make of their operations. Colonel William Owen, in charge of the army movie plant under Surgeon-General Gorgas, believing that the young man possessed unusual ability, decided to send him to Johns Hopkins University to study under Max Brodel. Now the Terry surgical cartoons are one of the most important products of the army medical corps, and so expert has the artist become that he can place his hand inside a wound and draw an accurate picture of its interior. In cases where a patient cannot be photographed under X-ray Terry is always called into consultation.

The "Gorgas Film Company" does not confine itself to surgical films, however. Many scenarios are written for the sole benefit of the soldier, and are teaching lessons that the finest vocal eloquence has failed to "get over." One of these, entitled "Fit to Fight," deals with the physiological aspects of venereal disease. Another film shows the soldier how to take care of his feet—how to avoid having flat feet and trench feet, and the correct motion in walking. It comprises, as one lieutenant put it, 2,000 feet of foot. Still another deals with the human digestion, and in this the stomach is actually shown digesting and eliminating food, this interesting process having been photographed by one of the army moving picture camera men while a patient was under X-ray.

In addition to making films for health propaganda, the moving picture division of the Army Medical Corps has been of great service to the Ordnance Department. Moving pictures of high-power guns have been taken, showing just how the shells are expelled, while the camera has proved an unerring discoverer of defective rifles. Not long ago a reel was made for the American gas division, showing a number of troops adjusting their gas masks, in which it appeared that two-thirds of them were making many superfluous motions. A picture of a soldier adjusting his mask with the least possible lost motion was then made; the men were made to study the picture, and this set of motions, which adjusts a man's gas mask in less than six seconds, is now incorporated into the regular military drill.

The moving picture camera has also proved extremely valuable in aviation tests. Since Americans have taken up flying many accidents have occurred which have never been explained. For instance, there have been cases where aviators have suddenly lost control of their machines for some inexplicable reason—where they have used the wrong foot pedals or the wrong hand motions. This mystery has now been worked out on a physiological basis, with the aid of the moving picture camera.

One test in which the camert is used is to place a man in a revolving chair, and turn him around quickly. There is a fluid that runs from the brain cell to the ear and which causes the eye to flicker. This eye-flicker is photographed, and the resultant film shows just how many flickers there were to the minute. When the flicker reaches a certain frequency, it is known that a man loses his equilibrium. The camera thus accurately measures his fitness for flying.

A final test with the camera is made of the aviator after he has graduated from the aviation school and is actually running his machine. This tset is made by Sergeant Frank Godwin, formerly president of the Godwin moving picture company, who has invented a special camera for the purpose. Strapped into the aeroplane and holding his camera up above his head he photographs the movements of the aviator as he ascends in a spiral, so that every error in his handling of the controls is surely detected.

Sergeant Godwin is only one of a military staff that was once famous in the moving picture industry. Captain Tom Evans, who is Colonel Owen's right-hand man, had his own company before entering the army, and under him is Lieutenant Robert Ross, who had many years of experience with a large western film company. The army medical corps has also captured Mary Pickford's camera man, Lucien Androy; Oliver Cromwell, who used to be with William Farnum, and many others who have picturized such famous ladies as Pauline Frederick and Mary Garden. Yet all of them are unanimous in the opinion that the army medical films have the commercial stuff beaten to a frazzle in point of live interest. They are proud of their military work, and well they may be. For by the end of this war the surgeon general is going to have a film library no less remarkable than his printed library, which is the greatest of its kind in the world.

Further Protection for Soldiers from Liquor

At the request of the National Defense Council the New Jersey State Council of Defense this week announced a ruling of President Wilson and the Secretary of War in the matter of more rigorously protecting the men in the service of the country against intoxicating liquors. The new regulations involve two important extensions beyond previous rules.

Here after the zones in which the sale of liquor is illegal are established around every military camp at which 250 men or more are stationed for at least thirty days. Furthermore, the portions of incorporated municipalities lying within the five-mile areas around camps will no longer be excluded from the zones in which the sale of liquor is preventable by Federal action, provided the municipalities in question are already dry by State or local law.

No alcoholic beverages are to be sold or given publicly or privately to any man in uniform in any place in the United States.

New Jersey is in District 2 of the Law Enforcement Division of the Commission on Training Camp Activities. In addition to New Jersey the Second district is comprised of Greater New York city and Long Island. Captain T. N. Pfeiffer, of New York, is supervisor of the district.

THE PASSING OF ANDREW McCARDELL.

The passing of Andrew McCardell calls for more than the ordinary comment accorded by newspapers in taking note of the ending of a prominent man's life. His was a type of which we have but too few and which seems to be disappearing altogether, now that changes in political procedure are the order of the day. For more than a score of years, Mr. McCardell occupied a unique position in this community and though like everyone else, there never was a time when he could satisfy everyone, it may be said that he passed out of this world possessing more genuine friendships than any two ordinary citizens.

Without going too far into the comparison, it might be said that "Andie" McCardell possessed a nature and disposition not unlike that of the late "Big Tim" Sullivan, the idol of New York's lower East Side. "Big Tim," to the people who lived under his leadership, was a bigger man than the president of the United States. His word was law because they found in him a true and tried friend and one who was always looking out for their interests no matter what his scheming in other directions. If the father of a big family was out of work and wanted a job, "Big Tim" found it for him If a widowed mother was to be ejected because of non-payment of rent, it was "Big Tim's" hand who held back the hard-hearted landlord. When winter came, with its cold weather and slush and snow, it was "Big Tim" who bought hundreds of pairs of shoes for the homeless boweryites who sought shelter in the ten-cent lodging houses. It was "Tim" Sullivan who sent the tired mothers, and pale-faced babies on the delightful summer excursions and it was "Tim" who gave these same unfortunates their warm clothing and food at Christmas time. That's why "Big Tim" Sullivan was the idol of the East Side and why that part of Manhattan was plunged in gloom when he came to an unfortunate end.

"Andie" McCardel had a heart that must have measured up as big as "Tim" Sullivans. While his own salary was never what might be called big it was never so small but what he could peel off a five or ten-dollar bill for a friend in hard luck. If the truth be known, he never knew just how many notes he endorsed or how many he was called upon to pay and no one but himself knew how many times he left his bed at night in answer to a telephone summons for help, sometimes in Plainfield, quite often in Elizabeth and every so often in New York or Philadelphia. Money or inconvenience meant nothing to him so long as the act was for a true friend and that is why "Andie" McCardell died a poor man instead of one with plenty of this world's goods. The act that laid the foundation of his despondency and subsequent determination to end his earthly troubles was brought about by his determination to stick by a man who is one of his associates and whom he believed was being wronged by others. He terminated his long and useful career in the Pond foundry because he refused to exceed to what he called an "unjust demand" and whether or not he was right in his supposition, there are none who can deny but what he brought about his end by sticking to a pal. That's one reason why we say that "Andie" McCardell was of a type that is fast disappearing. As Mark Twain said, "The friend who is a friend is the one who is around when you're down but not out."

In the days when party organizations picked the candidates for election it was "Andie" McCardell who was the big factor in naming the men. He was frequently called a "boss" but he did not deserve the term and he himself hated it. He played the game merely for the excitement it brought him. Those who knew him best know that it never added a dollar to his bank roll and neither did it give him any big offers as a reward. He was amply paid by the election of a man whom he had selected for a certain office and it can be said without jeopardizing the truth that those he designated "made good" as servants of the people. Many of them are still in office and year after year are nominated by the direct ballot, a proceeding that substantiates Mr. McCardell's ability to select the right sort of timber. If all that Andrew McCardell has done for the good of the community could be put in concrete form, the enormity of the pile would stagger even the most pernicious of his criticizers. Time and again this man who allowed himself to get into a fatal fit of meloncholia lifted back the fellow who was drifting to the same fate in store for himself and yet no one heard about it. "Andie" never bragged about it and he asked nothing more than support in a measure that was intended for the common good.

Conceding that there have been times when an action of Mr. McCardell's might have justified criticism, the words of Joaquim Miller offset the carping ones:

"In men whom men condemn as ill,
I find so much of goodness still;
In men whom men pronounce divine,
I find so much of sin and blot
I hesitate to draw a line between the two
Where God has not."

MR. FOWLER IMITATES THE LATE SAM LLOYD.

The late Samuel Lloyd, originator of many puzzles that set the whole world to thinking, was a resident of Elizabeth. It may be that he lived near former Councilman Charles Newell Fowler and at various times when concocting schemes to keep people guessing he let the former Fifth District representative into some of his secrets.

At any rate, Mr. Fowler sprung a very original puzzle on Plainfield, the rest of Union county and Morris county when he came out last Saturday with a flat-footed endorsement for Hamilton F. Kean as the successor to the late John H. Capstick. Everybody knows that the former congressman has something up his sleeve but just what it is no one has been able to figure out as yet. Maybe later on he will offer a large red apple or a Liberty Bond for the successful guessers, just as the newspapers used to do when they contracted with Sam Lloyd for the output of his crafty brain.

Mr. Kean has not yet announced his determination to enter the Congressional race and thereby oppose former Senator E. R. Ackerman, of this city, for the nomination. Neither has he said absolutely at any time that he would refuse the nomination if it were offered him. Now it may be that Mr. Fowler has ambitions of his own, something like those ambitions that landed him in the House of Congress for repeated terms until Senator William N. Runyon shoved him to one side in subsequent political oblivion in 1910. Once or twice since then the Elizabethan has tried to get back to his old stand but either the voters were indifferent or the time was not ripe. It is quite possible that he would again like to be a candidate for Congress and if that is so there would be nothing doing should Hamilton Kean continue to see-saw on the proposition.

It is just barely possible that Mr. Fowler realizes that if he is to have any show at all Mr. Kean must be gotten out of the way. That's why, perhaps, that he came out with his endorsement for his fellow townsman in the hope that it might make the latter "fish or cut bait." If Mr. Kean falls into the trap he will either say he is a candidate or he is not. That would be all that Mr. Fowler's little heart desired and his subsequent action from now on will probably be guided by the next move of Mr. Kean. The old line Republicans are all busy conning over the puzzle which Mr. Fowler has pushed in front of them. It brought them out of a pre-primary lethargy with a tremendous start and there is a bare possibility that they might not work out the gosh-derned problem in time to get any reward. There are a lot of people who think that Mr. Kean is too busy a man to get into a doubtful congressional fight and should he decline absolutely to oppose Mr. Ackerman the way is open for Mr. Fowler. The Plainfield man has a big following, not only in this end of Union but throughout Morris county, yet the Elizabeth delegation does not take kindly to this burg and there is no telling what might happen when Mr. Kean announces his intention. It was Mr. Kean who helped to yank Mr. Fowler out of Congress in 1910, a little circumstance that makes the old guard wonder more than ever why it was that Charles Newell Fowler came out with his endorsement. Taken all in all, the puzzle is better than "pigs in clover" ever dared to be and the man who gets right down to a complete and comprehensive solution will be a wise gazabo.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When horses became frantic with fear at the sight of an automobile?

When the now extinct oil cloth factory was the End End's principal industry and the "once was" Coriell hat shop held the same distinction in the Evona section?

When a landlord couldn't get a tenant to move into his house unless it was equipped fore and aft with lightning rods?

When a kid considered himself all the cream and cheese if he owned a wooden-framed tricycle, equipped with steel tired wooden wheels, straight wooden handle-bars, wooden pedals and a seat made of cotton covered with carpet set off by green fringe?

When August brought joy and comfort to Plainfield's colored population by its list of salt water days at Boynton Beach and Florida Grove?

When we earned a gallery seat in Music Hall to see "Uncle Tom's Cabin" by donning a faded red coat and leading one of Leon Washburn's miled-eyed bloodhounds in the "big free street parade?"

When baseball teams representing the Safe Works, Y. M. C. A., St. Mary's and Hope Chapel battled for the city league championship?

When "Wall" Vail had the last say in picking candidates for a local campaign?

When "Little Billy" Campbell purchased the green cotton umbrella which he still carries on both clear or cloudy days?

WAILED BY A WOMBAT IN VERY HIGH DUDGEON.

"'Know Thyself,'" says Link Martin, 'is a good motto, and most people would know more about themselves if they consulted their neighbors."

By far the best thing the Washington folks have done in many a day is the announced intention of getting after the shipyard "shirkers." Plainfield has quite a representation in this class of undesirables.

Now watch for heavy casualties in the Sunday morning church collections. The penny transfer order went into effect yesterday.

There is an old saying that the best way to prevent the world from talking behind your back is to face it. Kinda looks as though the aeroplane makers would have a chance to prove this theory before long.

Bet any money you never saw a happier crowd of selected men go out of Plainfield yet than those colored lads who left this morning. They had a 'possum party, a camp meeting and a watermelon frolic all rolled into one yesterday and as they climbed on the cars one would imagine they were bound for a minstrel show instead of a battle field. That's the kind of American spirit that is driving the Huns back toward Berlin and is going to bring this war to a finish a blame sight quicker than Daffy Bill and his henchman ever figured.

Clothes may still be bought in Berlin, according to this price list: "Men's suits, $200; shoes, $40; shirts, $9, and silk stockings, $9." As we remarked on a previous occasion, it was John Howard Payne who wrote: "There's 'No Place Like Home,'" even if there are a few Plainfielders in the selling line trying to get rich in a minute.

Our idea of a well behaved citizen is one who will stand the additional exactions the government makes upon his income without squalling like a stuck hog.

There are some men who are never decent toward any women except their own and there are others who are decent to all the women except their own.

Plainfield contractors who were frozen out when it came time to cut the Exner Company's High School melon are thinking of forming a permanent organization. No need of saying that Vice Chancellor Stevenson will not be invited to any of its gatherings.

There are men in this town who are spending on gasoline now what they ought to be spending for coal, but it will take until blizzard time for the gumps to find this out.

We suppose people will say we are sensual and gluttonous, merely because our position is that so long as we can have our choice between a twenty-five pound turkey and a half-ounce canary bird for about $10 we let our animal nature take its course.

Because it is within the five-mile zone of Picatinny Arsenal the Government is closing up the Gin Mills at Nolan's Point, Lake Hopatcong. We will now have a chance to find out whether the boys who run up to the Lake at week-ends go there for a bath or a little tonsil varnish.

Corp. "Tommie" Heron Writes The Record From Sunny France

Thinking about the old town and the old shop where he worked before hostilities began, Corporal Thomas Heron, of West Sixth street, sat down, "Somewhere in France," on July 4 last and wrote a long and newsy leter to the Editor of the Record.

Corporal Heron, or "Tommie," as he is known to everyone, learned the compositor's trade in the Daily Press composing room and was assistant foreman at the time the career of that publication came to an end. He joined the staff of the Record when it was first published and became one of the most popular men in the shop, accordingly all hands were glad to know that he had not been too busy to think about them in the midst of his military life in France.

After going to Camp Dix last February, "Tommie" soon adapted himself to camp routine and when his company went across the pond, he was made a corporal. All his friends here know that it must have been well deserved and are hoping that he keeps on advancing until he becomes a commissioned officer. He is the second member of his family to enter the service. His brother, John Heron, went out with a New England division last fall, having been living in New Britain, Conn., at the time. As a member of a machine gun company, he has been at the front since early in the year and although in the midst of hot fighting on more than one occasion has so far escaped without a scratch.

The letter, which Coporal "Tommie" wrote to the Record office, and in which he comments on local affairs, is as follows:

Editor, the Record:

Somewhere in France,
July 4, 1918.

I am spending a very pleasant Fourth of July writing letters, and I thought it would be a good time to drop you a line.

Well, if you really knew how pleasant a Fourth I am having, you would be more than surprised, as I have heard it is pretty warm around the old burg, but it is just the opposite here; it is cool and doesn't seem much like a Fourth. Of course there is a little noise, but that is a good ways from where we are located, and it can stay just as far away as it likes so far as I am concerned. It is all right to hear the noise, but it isn't healthy to get near it.

We hit Liverpool, spent the night in the habor. From there we hit for a rest camp and after sleeping on the floor for three nights we left for France. At the first stop we slept in tents, 16 to a tent. We have moved twice since then, and both times we have put up in "dog tents." In the place where we are now located it gets so cool nights that we decided to sleep three in a tent instead of two. This has proven much warmer sleeping.

The first place we stopped in France we witnessed an air raid and have also seen a few air raids from here. They certainly light up the skies when they start action.

I had better put my address in here as it isn't possible to write it at the top or bottom of a letter. This is an army regulation. Corp. Thomas Heron, Co. G, 311th Infantry, American Ex. Forces, via New York.

I see by the papers the Germans have been raising a little ruction of their own with the ships along the Jersey coast. Well, I know it won't last as Uncle Sam's boys know how to catch the boats.

They say there was a trolley strike. What is the matter? I guess the conductors must have become sore at the pay as you enter system. How are the boys making out with their strike? The jitney man is wishing they keep up all year round from what I can make out of it.

I have seen most every kind of a soldier from every country, even German prisoners. Last week there were some Algerians to arrive here.

The only place we have to watch is a small brook, with water two inches deep. We sure make good use of this. Our drinking water is carted to us in a water wagon. We even walked five miles to get a bath, and when we arrived we were allowed two and one-half minutes to take it. Now just imagine how much dirt you can take off in that time.

One big tall lad, about as fat as a match, pulled a good one this morning. He said if they keep on feeding him the same as they are now and he should get undressed and drink a bottle of red wine, he would look like a human thermometer. He also says it is all wrong when you address your letters A. E. F., and think it means "American Expeditionary Forces," for the true meaning is "Am Expecting Flowers." This is some of the rare army humor that floats around.

Taking it all in all, the life over here is a whole lot different then it was at Camp Dix. The people at Dix didn't know how to charge the same as the "Frenchies" do. Believe me, you would need to be a millionaire to keep pace with them. And the only thing that is plentiful is beer and wine. Most of the farmers in this village have turned their parlors into booze joints. That is where I got this paper.

Mr. Howard must have "knocked them all dead" when he blew into town and said he was going to France as a "Y. M." worker. Then out comes Cliff Braider and pulls the same stunt. They should make a good pair.

The old town must be pretty well cleaned out by this time, especially with registration day, June 5. I hear they caught about 200 more by this registration.

How about Jim McNamee. Has he hit for these parts? He said he thought he would be over here shortly. This was before I left Dix. If he is, he will have a whole lot to write about, especialy if he is still a newspaper correspondent.

Well, I hope you are feeling in the best of health, and give my regards to all the gang in the office. I you happen to see Searing tell him I was asking about him.

So here goes the end of a perfect day, and back to the chill field tomorrow. But still feeling fine and in good spirits, I am.

Your old friend,

TOMMY HERON.

Mrs. Herron Leaves Husband $200,000 And Italian Estate

Carrie Rand Herron, founder of the Rand School of Socialism, who died January 11, 1914, a resident of Florence, Italy, and former resident of lower Park avenue, near "Pumptown," left $3,000 in assets which are taxable in New York, according to the transfer tax appraiser's report filed in the Surrogates' Court. The assets, which the exclusive of a large estate in Italy, consist of furniture in storage.

Mrs. Herron's Italian estate is left as follows: To her husband, Professor George D. Herron, $200,000, her villa and farm, La Primola, near Florence, and a bequest of $50,000, which she considered equal in value to the farm, goes to her sons, Elbridge Rand Herron and George D. Herron, in limited trust. She provided for an annuity of $2,400 for her father-in-law, William Herron.

Another provision of the will directs that a trust fund created for her husband's children by his first marriage shall go to the American Socialist Society if they should die without issue. Any excess amount beyond the specific bequests are also willed to the socialist society, which is made contingent legatee of her sons' trust fund.

The testatrix was married to Professor Herron, who occupied the chair of social science in Iowa College, in 1901. The ceremony of itself was unusual, consisting of their statement made in the presence of the Rev. William T. Brown, of Rochester, N. Y., "We intend to live together as man and wife." The clergyman then said: "As they are united by bonds of reciprocal love I announce that they are man and wife by every law of right and truth, and I bespeak for them the fervent benediction of all true souls and the abiding gladness that dwells in the heart of God forever."

Professor Herron's first wife divorced him so he might marry Miss Rand. The couple first made their home at "Pumptown," but later moved to Italy, when Mrs. Herron purchased a villa in Florence.

Firemen's Work Keeps Down Loss At Frost Blaze

In the estimation of many citizens who watched proceedings at the Frost building blaze early Wednesday morning, the splendid work of the firemen was all that saved the Courier-News plant from temporary suspension and a much greater loss than the $2,000 estimation.

When the apparatus turned into Park avenue in response to an alarm from box 13 at 1:08, flames were shooting out of the third story windows from the offices of Contractor A. E. Smith, where they originated. Realizing what it would mean to have volumes of water pour down the stairs and into the composing and press rooms of the newspaper shop, Chief Jennings ordered his men to use no more hose lines than absolutely necessary and shut off streams at the first possible occasion. He also dispatched messengers back to headquarters for strips of heavy canvass which were placed over the linotype machines and cylinder press used in getting out the daily publication. These precautions served a splendid purpose as but very little damage was done the plant. The small amount of water finding its way downstairs could not force the canvass barrier protecting the mechanical equipment and the only harm it did was to ceilings and the wetting of a few rolls of news print paper stored in the basement.

The fight against the fire itself was of short duration. The horsemen located the seat of the blaze in Contractor Smith's blue-print room and despite the fact that it had been burning for nearly fifteen minutes before discovery had it under control in half an hour's time. Only two lines of hose were used, although more were laid in, and as the moment the last spark was out, Chief Jennings put a force at work getting the water out of the building, another preventative that saved a lot of trouble to the newspaper staff.

What caused the blaze is a mystery although there is a possibility that it was brought about by spontaneous combustion in the trimmings from blue-prints. No one had been about the office from early in the evening and all the electric wiring was of the latest fire-proof type. On his way home from the North avenue station at 1 o'clock, Charles Kane, of Grove street, saw a glare in the upper windows but not realizing it was caused by fire gave no alarm. Nearly ten minutes later, Charles Barry, a taxi-cab driver, witnessed the blaze break through the windows. He called to James Ellis, standing near O'Mahoney's lunch wagon, and the latter pulled the alarm box.

Of the loss $1,000 is placed on Contractor Smith's office furnishings and instruments and the other $1,000 on the building and Courier-News plant. Both losses are covered by insurance.

Fourth Year of War Finds America in Conflict to Win

The great war, closing its fourth bloody year, finds America rushing across the seas with her millions of men, billions of dollars and her ever increasing flotillas of war vessels—to thrash the Kaiser.

The advent of a new year in the war sees America's military forces rapidly approaching the size of England's, and destined soon to equal those of France.

With an army strength of nearly 3,000,000 men today; a navy of nearly half a million, and with hundreds of ships, tons upon tons of munitions and a vast food reserve for the Allies, this Nation's effort has amazed the Allied world and startled the German war lords.

When she entered the war America had only 213,000 officers and men, including the National Guard units trained on the Texas border. We now have over half that many officers alone. Latest official figures show the army strength to be: Officers, 160,000; men, 2,010,000. Nearly 1,000,000 men are in training at home or have just qualified for overseas duty.

The jumy in the size of the Navy is equally startling, both in enlistments and in new ship strength. When we declared war sixteen months ago, the navy's man-power was 83,000. It is now well over 475,000 and will reach the half million mark at any time soon. The United States fleet has been enlarged by over 1,275 ships since April, 1917. Nearly 800 smaller craft are under construction. This is exclusive of dreadoughts, battle cruisers and other major fighting vessels.

The new naval appropriations just granted by Congress will swell these figures tremendously, though details cannot be given, for military reasons. They will make possible one of the largest fleets afloat, it is indicated.

European waters are dotted with American craft, ranging from the monster dreadnoughts down to the tiniest submarine chasers.

New dreadnoughts are under construction which will be the largest battlerships afloat. The largest naval guns ever mounted on ships will equip these super-fighters.

Navy recruiting is speeding to man these new ships. Under stimulus from recent submarine raids on the Atlantic coast recruiting for the navy is averaging 2,000 daily, and has reached as high as 4,000 a day.

American warships are in practically all European waters—from the Russian coast to Southern Europe. They recently arrived at Venice to assist land operations of the Italians. The largest naval force consistent with safety of our own shores and maintenance of communications across the Atlantic is now on active duty on the European side. The first destroyers sailed for Europe three weeks after we declared war, and they have speeded across in increasing numbers as the war went on.

Army operations in France have ewtpa ahead of all calculations. We are months ahead of our program, and the climax has yet to be reached.

The magnitude of this task appears greater when it is remembered that the American army had to biuld its own railways, construct its own docks and loading facilities, build its own warehouses on French soil and, in effect, almost establish a new battlefront. American officers give the French and English full credit for the material assistance rendered and the valuable expert advice offered, but the job remaining for America's Expeditionary Army was a staggering one.

Nine regiments of railway engineers have been at work in France since last August—an army of nearly 50,000 men wielding the pick and the shovel.

Carpenters hammered on large warehouses to keep American supplies from the weather. Road-builders paved paths for the fleets of motor trucks which have been among the most valuable adjuncts to the expeditionary army.

Supporting this vast undertaking abroad are millions of skilled workmen at home turning out munitions, clothing, equipment and everything needed by the fighting soldier. Rifles sufficient to equip an entire division are being turned out in three days. Uniforms, shells, bombs, airplanes, shoes, are pouring to the seaboard to be moved across to France.

America is letting nothing interfere with the winning of the war. She is accepting the advice of the most experienced European leaders. The Allies are giving America all credit for what she is doing, but President Wilson, although hailed as the world's leader in statesmanship, is profiting by every failure of the Allies, and Yankee genius is taking the view that it has many things to learn. It is cocksure on only one point—that the war must be won.

Washington Takes Up Question of Camp Dix Sewage

Major-General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, has received word from Major-General March, chief of staff at Washington, to the effect that the question of proper sewage facilities at Dix is one of utmost importance and that the matter of providing the necessary equipment would be taken up at once. For over three months General Scott has sought to obtain the necessary word from the War Department to go ahead with improvements. Experts have visited the camp and the State Board of Health officials have also agreed that the sewage must be taken care of, but nevertheless the authorities have allowed the matter to stand until at last the residents of nearby towns, through Senator Frelinghuysen, have also added their protest to that of the commanding general.

It is not known when the work of improving the system will be started, but it is hoped that the work will be completed before the hot weather is over.

Captain O. P. Beem, of the Yorkshire Infantry, was a visitor in camp this week, and inspected the training work of the men at Dix.

Prompt use of the stomach pump at the base hospital saved the life of Emil J. Meisel, of Rochester, who became despondent while on his way to camp with a draft quota and swallowed two mercury tablets shortly after reaching the Dix station. An ambulance was summoned and the rookie taken to the hospital, where it is said he will recover.

A number of North Jerseymen were among those selected for transfer to the Field Artillery Central Officers' Training School, which has just been opened at Camp Taylor, Ky.

That the men of Dix do not forget the people back home is evident from the amount of letterheads and envelopes they use in a month. Both the Y. M. C. A. and Knights of Columbus keep their huts well supplied at all times with writing materials, and all the secretaries encourage the men to let their friends and relatives know how they are getting along. With the vast increase in the population of the camp the amount of paper that is sued is enormous, about 1,000,000 letterheads and 700,000 envelopes being distributed in one month alone by the Y. M. C. A.

According to figures announced by M. L. Beebe, director of the Y. M. activities at Dix, 422,000 letterheads and 1,760,000 envelopes were distributed from December 1 to May 31 last, and during that time about $3,000 worth of wrapping paper and about 2,000 balls of twine were ordered for immediate use. The fact that the rookies ship their old clothes home also resulted in 7,000 shipping tags being used in one month by the last draft increment.

Not only are the Dix men thoughtful but they are also saving. During the past winter almost $200,000 worth of evpress money orders were sold in the various Y. M. huts, the greater amount being taken right after pay day.

The big increase in the number of men at Dix has also increased the running expenses of the Y. M. headquarters, and at the present time the local organization is working on the largest capital of any camp in the Eastern department.

Why Not Celebrate Britain's Entrance To Cause of Right?

In response to an agitation commenced by New York people, it is quite probable that the fourth anniversary of Great Britain's entrance to the war to protect the rights of neutrals will be fittingly celebrated in many American cities next Sunday.

It has been suggested that Plainfield also observe the occasion as was done on Bastile day for France. This can be accomplished by reference to the anniversary in the churches or suitable programs at any of the gatherings on that day. Practically all of the neutral countries have arranged for big demonstrations to express their feelings toward Britain but so far the United States has been quite slow in its preparations. Here is the way one correspondent touches upon the matter in a communication published in the New York Times:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the newspapers of today we read that the fourth anniversary of the entrance of Great Britain into the war, on the coming August 4, will be appropriately celebrated in France, Italy, China, Japan, and other allied countries. No mention is made of America, and yet there is no country where this anniversary should be more gratefully celebrated. We have just commemorated in appropriate fashion the great day of our friend and ally, France. Entirely too little has been said recently of the immeasurable and unrepayable debt that we owe to Great Britain. No country ever went to war for more unselfish and idealistic reasons than England. It was for France and Belgium, not for herself, that she entered the war. And as for ourselves, what was there interposed, from August 4, 1914, to April 6, 1917, between the United States and Germany but the British Navy? We cannot dwell too often or too gratefully on the fact.

I hope steps will immediately be taken in the few intervening days to see that the American people suitably and adequately celebrate this historic and fateful day—one of the most memorable and inspiring in the history of the world.

The present writer is an American, not an Englishman or even an Anglo-Saxon, but proud to call himself an Anglophile.

HERMAN T. RADIN.

Plainfield coal dealers report larger shipments of anthracite during the last two weeks, but they are still of the opinion that it will be difficult to fill their orders before cold weather arrives.

Henry Hooper, the colored porter at the Queen City, who snitched half pints of liquor while working about the bar-room, and sold them to his thirsty friends on Sundays, was fined $100 when arraigned before Judge DeMeza and admitting the charge. Hughes, of West Seventh street, has enlisted in the Rockefeller Foundation's unit for tuberculosis reconstruction work in France and expects to leave for "over there" the latter part of August. In his fifteen years of practice in Plainfield, Dr. Hughes has made a special study of tubercular troubles and is peculiarly fitted for this class of work. He has been in vharge of the tubercular clinic at Muhlenberg Hospital and is a director of the State tuberculosis sanitarium at Glen Gardner.

Two Plainfield young men who have been in the service for the past ten months, have recently received promotions that have been a great source of satisfaction to their friends. One of them is Edson Woodhull, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull, of Stelle avenue, who entered the navy as yeoman, lated was advanced to chief yeoman and now has been commissioned as an ensign. He entered the Annapolis Academy this week for a two months' course of intensive training. The other Plainfielder is John F. Casey, Jr., of West Third street, who went to Camp Dix last fall and was assigned to Company A, 311th Infantry. A short time later he was transferred to Battery A, 320th Field Artillery at Camp Gordon, Pa., where he was promoted to corporal. He went overseas in May and word came to his father a few days ago that he had been made sergeant.

William Hand, son of Borough Recorder Fred W. Hand, left yesterday for Charleston, S. C., where he will begin work at one of the federal shipyards located in that section. He is the second son in the Hand family to take up war work as his brother, Harry Hand, has been a member of the infantry for several months.

Contractor J. S. Simpson, who is making the thirty-five thousand dollars worth of changes at the Joint Sewage Disposal plant at Greenbrook, was granted a thirty days' extension of time for the completion of the work by the Joint Sewer Commission at a meeting, Tuesday night. By the terms of the contract, Simpson should have finished the job yesterday, but owing to the scarcity of help and other delays occasioned by the kar, he was unable to make progress as rapidly as expected. The remainder of the commission's meeting was devoted to routine matters and the payment of claims amounting to $9,000.

Valdis Wessel,, a seven-year-old girl whose home is at 1027 West Fourth street, is suffering from injuries received a few nights ago when she was knocked down on the sidewalk near Monroe avenue by a bicycle ridden by Tony Romanaski, aged 15, of 719 South Second street. The child was rendered unconscious and remained in that condition for several hours. Romanaski was arrested but later paroled by Judge DeMeza, pending the outcome of the little girl's injuries. He will probably be arraigned in the city court tomorrow or Monday.

Secret Service men came to this city last Saturday night and arrested Karl Montanus, of 638 East Second street, presumably because he is considered a dangerous enemy alien. The prisoner was taken before Federal Judge Lynch at Newark and remanded to Governor's Island for further disposition. Montanus is forty years old and came to Plainfield about six months ago from the Burns Detective Agency in New York, which sent him out as a guard during the scare of later winter when it was rumored that an attempt was made to blow up the Standard plant on North avenue. After the flurry had passed over, Montanus was retained by the Standard officials as a member of its regular corps of guards.

Charles S. King, of West Third street, this city, was elected State treasurer for the New Jersey Association of the Loyal Order of Moose at the annual convention in Paterson. Next year's convention of the association will be held in Elizabeth.

Applegate, on East Front street, Myer Epstein and Louis Rosenthal, aged seventeen years each, were allowed to depart on suspended sentence on their promising Judge DeMeza that they would pay Mr. Applegate twenty-five dollars a piece for the articles they had taken. They are to have thirty days in which to complete the payments and are to earn the money themselves. William Coleman, of 603 West Fourth street, and Edward Connett, of 318 Plainfield avenue, who purchased hams, legs of lamb and other meats from the boy for about half their regular price, were fined twenty dollars each for receiving stolen property. Coleman and Connett both told likely stories to the effect that Epstein and Rosenthal claimed that the meats had been taken out on the delivery wagon on C. O. D. orders but as the customers refused to take them, they had to be disposed of in some way or would spoil.

For stealing several small articles, valued at about one dollar, from the Woolworth store on West Front street, Saturday morning, Lona Hoagland and Jane Silence, both of Potter Crossing, were fined $10 each in the city police court, Monday morning. Complaint against the women was made by Warren E. Munson, manager of the store.

Fighters' Meat Best in Market

The Federal inspection service which has protected the civil population of the United States from bad meat in interstate commence has extended its work to cover completely the meat and meat products supplied for the American Army and Navy. Sixty-seven inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry f the U. S. Department of Agriculture are now with the army and thirty are with the navy.

When the present war began the Secretary of War requested the Secretary of Agriculture to assign meat inspectors to the various cantonments, training camps, forts, posts and other places where large numbers of troops were in training. This followed similar service by inspectors when American troops were mobilized on the Mexican border in 1916.

The bureau men are inspecting, selecting and handling meats and fats for military consumption, and the operations are under supervision from the time the live animals are driven into the slaughtering chambers until the finished product is delivered in good condition to the mess cooks. The standards of inspection are based on the best scientific knowledg of the present day and are sustained by the unanimous views of all the great scientists of the world who are experts on the subjects involved. American regulations and practices are fully as stringent as those of any other nations, and in some cases they are even more stringent.

The army gets its meat from two sources—from the quartermaster corps and from private concerns. All meats supplied by the quartermaster corps are prepared in establishments operated under Federal inspection, and the majority of these products are further inspected in these plants by army meat inspectors assigned there for the purpose. Examinations made by inspectors at points of consumption are to detect unsoundness which may have developed after the products left the packing house and to determine whether they comply with specifications and contracts.

Inspectors also advise quartermasters with regard to proper storage and handling of meats, keep these officers informed of the supply on hand, make sure that the oldest packs are issued first, and assist in other ways to prevent loss from deterioration. Troops must purchase in the open market fresh meat and meat products, other than fresh and frozen beef and mutton, because the quartermaster corps does not carry them. Thorough and efficient inspection of these products purchased locally by troops preceding their preparation for food in the kitchens is of more importance than the inspection of the meats furnished by the quartermaster corps. The former have not been inspected for specifications prior to their preparation for troops because the army does not require that such inspection of this class of meats be made.

All meat products must be handled in a sanitary manner. Wagons or trucks used to transport meats from points of issue to kitchens must be clean and equipped with tight-fitting tops, and persons who handle meat must wear clean garments that may be easily made clean again.

For the past ten or twelve years the Bureau of Animal Industry has co-operated with the Navy Department in the reinspection of meat and meat food products. The organization of the Navy is different from that of the Army. Not as many men have to be supplied and the manner of feeding them is not the same. The Navy provides large mess halls and, unlike the Army, does not have numerous small mess halls. The organization of the Navy does not make local purchase because the supply division of the Navy Department furnishes all goods. Only "United States Inspected and Passed" meat and meat food products are purchased, and these must be inspected for specifications in the packing plants by inspectors of the Bureau of Animal Industry, except at the Chicago plants, where the Navy has its own inspectors.

The Navy Department desires the bureau's inspectors to conduct all reinspections at receiving points. Inspection for the Navy is not confined to meat and meat products, but includes other provisions, such as poultry, fish, oysters, clams, butter, eggs, cheese, fresh fruits and fresh vegetables.

Wants Air Head In the Cabinet

A new demand for an air ministry to manage the country's aircraft program bobbed up in Congress, Tuesday.

"I think the air service has come to be of such vast importance that it justifies the creation of a new Cabinet position," said Senator Reed, member of the Senate aircraft investigating committee which is soon to issue a report on the whole situation.

"Some one man should have plenary powers. He ought to be surrounded by a staff of the most skilful aeronautical engineers and the greatest practical flyers and some men who know all about manufacturing without being in the aircraft business."

While Reed emphasizes that he was speaking only for himself, other members of the committee agreed with him that the evidence before them justified the action recommended.

Reed's statement closely follows the charges that the de Havilland four plane is not a success. Although he does not refer directly to the de Haviland plane, he declares that "commissions in this separate service ought to be granted to men who have shown the greatest skill and proficiency in the service and they should not find put over them cavalry and artillery officers."

Part of the de Haviland charges, it developed Tuesday, are that non flying officers and men in charge of production insisted on continuing the turning out and shipment of de Haviland planes over the strenuous objections of the flyers themselves.

Many members of the Senate investigating committee are not yet ready to declare the de Haviland a total failure, however.

Even should it prove so, it does not mean that the whole aircraft program has gone to the scrap pile, they declare, although the de Haviland must be considered the backbone for any claims of success for the program at present.

Getting After the Shipyard Shirkers

Officials from the Emergency Fleet Corporation and various shipbuilding concerns in New Jersey have been in conference for several days past with the adjutant general's department at Trenton outlining plans for co-operation in connection with the new regulations issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder regarding the employment of selective service eligibles in ship yards.

It was stated that the employment lists are being carefully gone over for the purpose of eliminating army shirkers. Class 1 men are not being taken and those who are there are being replaced as rapidly as possible by others.

Miss Caroline Scheidecker, of New street, began a two weeks' vacation Tuesday from her duties as assistant secretary at Muhlenberg Hospital. She will spend the time at the shore.

Edge Urges State's Help In Training Of Wounded Men

Believing that New Jersey should make every preparation possible to assist maimed and disabled soldiers in preparing themselves for occupations in which they may gain a livelihood, Governor Edge has sent a letter to Chairman John E. Gill, of the education committee of the House, urging co-operation in the work of re-educating such soldiers.

Governor Edge suggested that in connection with the study and investigation of the operation of the educational system of the State, the committee undertake to formulate such legislation as may be necessary to carry on the great work that will follow the war. He urged that the State be prepared to join hands with the Federal Government in solving this problem.

The letter of the Governor follows:

"In line with the duty imposed upon your Governor Edge by the House of Assembly to make a study and report upon ways and means of improving the school laws in New Jersey, I deem it important to call to your attention the necessity of making our State school laws broad enough to permit New Jersey to take an active and patriotic part in the re-education of disabled soldiers.

"Our maimed and disabled soldiers are being returned from the front as speedily as they become convalescent. At the present time their numbers are few, but as the volume of the American forces on the battlefield increases, the number will naturally increase in proportion. Many of these men will be found to have been disabled in such a way as to make it impossible for them to return to their former trades. A mechanic, perhaps, will no longer be useful as a mechanic because of amputated limbs or other physical impediment. Some other practical means of securing a living must be provided.

"I take it that the facilities of the public schools system in the State, along with the normal schools and other educational properties owned by the State, afford an excellent opportunity of providing intensive training in commercial work for returning disabled soldiers. Such schools could be very readily located at convenient and accessible points throughout the State under the direction of competent superintendents and instructors, and they could be conducted during such hours as would not interfere with regular public school or normal school work.

"Of course, there will be need of federal co-operation in this plan which must be in full harmony with the ideas of the federal war and educational departments, but it seems to me very important that New Jersey should prepare itself in a legislative way for this big task and be fully prepared to join hands with the Federal Government in the solution of the vital problem."

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Fynn and family, of Westervelt avenue, will leave today for Lake Hopatcong, where they will spend the month at Camp Billjack, Halsey Island. Mr. Fynn is proprietor of the Van Dyke store on East Front street.

South Jersey Making Big Shipment of Tomatoes

Thirty carloads of tomatoes are being sent out daily from the Swedesboro section in South Jersey, other points in the State are beginning to ship the vegetable, while the crop never looked better and the quality of the tomatoes is excellent, it is stated in the weekly market bulletin of the Bureau of Markets, issued this week by the State Department of Agriculture. It is stated that blight is appearing in some sections. The tomatoes are bringing from $2 to $3.50 per bushel, which is at the rate of about eight to ten cents a quart, or four and a half cents a pound. It is said that retail prices would seem to be fair at twelve and a half or fifteen cents a quart and eight or ten cents a pound.

The cabbage crop is becoming plentiful and is netting the growers from five to ten cents a head, according to size, or about two to two and a half cents a pound, while five cents a pound retail should give dealers plenty of spread, the bulletin adds. The lovers of cauliflower can now easily satisfy themselves, while beans remain cheap and should be canned immediately as the bulk of the crop will soon be gone, it is stated, while in relation to this kind of vegetable it is said that five to seven cents a quart is enough for retailers to charge.

In reference to onions, the bulletin states that white and yellow onions now to be seen coming in tall bushel baskets are mostly raised in the lower part of Cumberland county and the prices at the shipping points are about $2 for yellow and $2.50 for white a bushel, this being at the rate of six and eight cents a quart, respectively.

The dairy herds of Europe have been slaughtered and this is the only country that can replenish them and the industry here must be encouraged now in order to be able to assist other countries at the end of the war, while manufactured dairy products are stored in surplus at present and the effect has manifested itself in too low prices to the producer, the bulletin says in conclusion.

Sugar Shortage in New Jersey May Be 7,000,000 Pounds

A shortage of 7,000,000 pounds of sugar in New Jersey is indicated on the gasis of a comparison between the government allotment of 13,000,000 pounds and the requirements of 20,000,000 pounds by the dealers. On the same basis it was figured that the household allowances of three pounds per person per month is being exceeded by from four to five pounds.

As the result of this computation it was stated at the State Food Administration that unless the strictest economy is practiced by housewives and manufacturers using sugar some means will be enacted to compel restriction.

The unexpectedly large shortage was revealed in compiling the statements of dealers and manufacturers on which the issuance of the July certificates was based. There is no apparent reason for believing that they have inflated their requirements, it is stated, and the administration is becoming convinced that the lack of economy lies with the households. To cover the big discrepancy, the system of rationing has been considered, but at the present time the local food officials feel that the public should be afforded an opportunity for voluntary action.

Richard Whitney, in charge of the State Administration, and F. E. Mygatt, head of the enforcement division, will leave for Washington5L ision, has left for Washington to confer with the officials of the federal administration. Sugar will be one of the subjects of consideration and it is possible that some definite plan for economical consumption may be arranged.

Rev. Cortland H. Mallery, of Clinton avenue, pastor of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, left this week for a stay at Point Pleasant.

LAGGREN & GREENE DISSOLVE PARTNERSHIP.

The firm of Laggren & Greene, decorators and dealers in carpets, mattings, awnings and shades, was dissolved this week by mutual consent. The firm was organized seven years ago and became one of the best known in this part of the city.

The business is to be continued by the two partners under separate management. A. N. Laggren will continue to do the decorating and will handle the awnings and shades, while Mr. Greene will continue to retil carpets and mattings and also carry on carpet cleaning. Mr. Laggren's business will be at 135 West Second street and Mr. Greene's at 137 West Second street, these being the addresses held by the old firm.

Mr. Laggren has securted the contract to do all the decorating for the New Jersey Association of Elks' convention at Perth Amboy on August 27, and will begin work on August 19.

Miss Elizabeth Brown, of Plainfield avenue, has returned home after spending two weeks at Cottage City, Martha's Vineyard.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

PHILIP BACH.

The funeral of Philip Bach, whose death occurred Wednesady morning at the home of his son, Francis E. Bach, of 232 Somerset street, the borough, will be held at that address this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, to which the deceased belonged, will be the officiating pastor. Burial will be in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery, six nephews will act as pallbearers.

Mr. Bach was seventy-four years old and a native of Mulhausen, Alsace-Lorraine. He came to this country when a young man, first locating near Springdale, where for many years he operated a saw mill. Later he removed to North Plainfield and he had made his home in that borough ever since, following the trade of wood-turner. He was employed for a long time by R. H. McCullough, but in the last years of his active work he was in business for himself. Failing health compelled him to retire in 1914 and since then he had been in a more or less state of invalidism. At the end, death was brought about by a complication of troubles.

Beside the German Reformed church, Mr. Bach's only affiliation was with Queen City Lodge of Odd Fellows. His acquaintanceship, however, was very wide as he was a man of pleasing personality and numbered friends by the hundreds in both the city and borough. His wife died about a year ago and his only near surviving relatives are his son, Francis, and a daughter, Miss Anna K. E. Bach, both of 232 Somerset street, and a brother, Fred Bach, of Union Hill. He also leaves four grandchildren, Sergeant Willard E. Bach and Harold F. Bach, sons of the late Fred Bach, who are both in France, and F. Earl Bach and Walter P. Bach, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Bach.

R. HARRY ROBSON.

R. Harry Robson, a former well-known resident of Plainfield, who had been making his home in Trenton for a number of years, died in St. Frances Hospital, that city, Sunday afternoon, from the effects of injuries received in a fall down stairs. The body was brought to this city and the funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of his son, George S. Robson, of 8 Whitewood avenue, the borough. Members of the Plymouth Brethren, of which he was one, were in charge of the service and a large gathering was in attendance. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, four grandsons acting as pallbearers.

Mr. Robson was a native of Scarborough, Eng., where he was born in 1852. He came to Plainfield in 1880 and followed the trade of confectioner and baking, working for many years for the late Alexander Warnock, L. L. Compton, whose place of business was at 144 West Front street, and afterward for the latter's son, C. K. Compton. Mr. Robson also worked at various times for George Wieda, who purchased the Compton business, W. W. Warnock and other local bakers.

About fifteen years ago Mr. Robson went to Bound Brook, where he conducted a bakery for a time but eventually gave this up to take a position at Trenton. Mr. Robson had a pleasing personality which served to win him many friends and news of his death brought regret to the hundreds who remembered him during his local residence.

Beside his widow and son, George, Mr. Robson is survived by four daughters. They are: Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, of Bound Brook; Mrs. Robert Walsworth, Miss Ada A. Robson, and Miss Anna L. Robson, of Trenton. He also leaves several grandchildren and two brothers, John W. and Thomas, the latter living in Scarborough, Eng.

MRS. HERMAN SCHWED.

The funeral of Mrs. Bertha Schwed, wife of Herman Schwed, whose death occurred at her home on Westervelt avenue, was held Sunday morning at the late home. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. Levy, of Easton, and many relatives and friends were present from this city and other places. The floral display was unusually large, set pieces having been contributed by business associates of Mr. Schwed, organizations to which he belongs, close friends of the family and others.

Interment was made at Easton, Pa., the following acting as pallbearers: Dr. Raphael Yood, M. Schuldenfrei, M. C. Van Arsdale, John V. Becker, J. M. Senior and Emanuel Schloss.

Mrs. Schwed was formerly Miss Bertha Hellman, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hellman, of Easton, where she resided until her marriage to Mr. Schwed in 1886. Mrs. Schwed was a woman of delightful personality and of intellectual attainments. It was always her desire to engage in activities helpful to the community but for years her health had made this impossible. She had a large circle of friends by whom she was greatly beloved and who will feel her loss severely. Besides her husband, she is survived by two brothers, Israel and Moses Hellmon, both of Somerville.

CATHERINE EDMUNDSON.

Mr. and Mrs. William Edmundson, of West Fourth street, were on Saturday last bereaved for the third time within three weeks when their little two-year-old daughter, Catherine, died from a summer complaint in the form of intestinal trouble. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, beside the bodies of the two children, who had been interred only a short time before.

All three children were taken ill about the same time and the first one to expire was William, aged four years, who passed away on July 6; eleven days later, Mary, eleven months old, passed away and the last and only surviving child in the family, Catherine, died at 7:30 last Saturday night. Several physicians were called into the case at the beginning of the illnesses and after awo of the children had succumbed, a New York specialist was called. The latter declared the ailment to be of an unknown character but did everything passible to save the life of the remaining child. His treatment seemed to be beneficial and for the brief period the little girl showed considerable improvement. It gave great hopes to the parents and physicians but they were only short-lived as the relapse came at a most unexpected moment.

Mayor Calkins Further Explains War Chest Plan of Relief Work

In the further effort to secure the full co-operation of local charitable organizations and War Relief Associations in arriving at some conclusion on the War Chest method of securing and distributing moneys, Mayor Leighton Calkins has issued a form letter in which he gives a full and comprehensive view of the plan.

One conference on the proposition has been held and the calling of a second gathering of all interested has been left to the Mayor. Before fixing a second date, the executive believes that he should save a better expression of opinion from the various organizations and also the assurance that the conference will be attended by representatives appearing for the various associations or institutions which are to be directly affected. In a statement to the newspapers, Mayor Calkins said that he wanted to reach every War Relief or charitable organization with his open letter but if there be any agency not receiving one, it should not feel that it had been overlooked. If the conference to come ends in a decision to have the War Chest plan, the smaller charities will be invited to participate.

The letter which the Mayor is sending out details the War Chest plan better than in any previous communication and in order that Plainfield citizens might have a better idea of what is proposed, it is given in full as follows:

"At a recent informal conference of citizens, and of representatives of the War Relief and local philanthropic agencies in Plainfield, the War Chest plan was the subject of discussion and it was left to me to call another conference for further consideration of the matter.

"It is important, however, that we first have definite information regarding the official attitude of the recognized War Relief Agencies, and of our principal local charitable institutions which in the past have had general public support; because without their co-operation the chief object of the War Chest, which is the elimination of separate campaigns for contributions of money, would fail of accomplishment.

"I am therefore writing to request that you take whatever action may be required by your rules to commit your organization either for or against the War Chest plan, naming one or two officials to represent you at the proposed conference with power to act for you, and advise me when this has been done.

"I hope that it will be understood that the purpose we have in mind is not to force this device on our city but to decide whether, all things considered, it is worth a trial. I can see that your decision whether or not to participate might depend on the precise nature of the plan to be apoted. For example, you probably would wish to join the movement if you could be assured in advanced that you would be allotted in the budget an amount sufficient to meet, say, your operating deficit for the year, otherwise you might be unwilling to take part.

"Unfortunately I do not see how such advance assurance can be given; yet we shall require the advance commitment of all our chief war relief and local charitable agencies before deciding to form a War Chest organization. It is a sort of vicious circle that cannot well be avoided.

"Perhaps I can facilitate a decision on your part if I outline roughly the War Chest system and indicate how it will limit independent action on your part if you participate.

"I take it that a corporation would be formed, with a board of directors consisting of at least twenty-five representative citizens, perhaps a larger number. There would of course be a smaller executive or finance committee to which would be delegated the responsibility of determining what and how many of our local charities shall be invited to join the War Chest and participate in the budget. All such would be required to accept their budget appropriations and to agree not to make any public solicitation for funds for the period of a year.

"This committee would also determine the budget appropriation to be allotted to each activity. I can only indicate my own notion of the way this will be done, based on what I know of War Chest movements elsewhere and of budget making in city affairs.

"I presume that each organization will be asked to prepare a detailed estimate of its requirements, supported by comparative statements covering pre-war, and war years. If the aggregate produces a top-heavy budget (which, from my experience, I should say is likely to occur), that is, a total amount which is felt by the committee to be beyond Plainfield's ability to support, then of course some scaling down will be necessary; to what extent it is impossible to say. This scaling down would not necessarily be pro rata, because the committee might give more favorable consideration to some activities than to others, based on its judgment as to their relative needs. In any event the decision of the commitee would be final and all member organizations would be pledged to accept the budget as determined.

"The point on which I would like positive official action from you is whether you would join the War Chest if organized as above indicated, and accept the appropriation allotted to you by the management whatever it may be. It is understood that your decision to do so would be conditional upon a like decision on the part of all the principal War Relief activities and the more important local philanthropies. The agreement of all such to participate will not preclude the War Chest Corporation, if organized, from including other activities later according to its best judgment.

"If your decision should be not to join the War Chest unless promised a budget appropriation of a fixed amount which you would be unwilling to reduce. I see no objection to your advising me to that effect.

"I have tried to state the problem as clearly as possible, so that we may make intelligent headway on this important matter. I am having prepared a digest of the arguments which are advanced both for and against the War Chest plan, which I will hope to send to you later. I shall also be glad on request to refer you to several gentlemen who strongly favor the War Chest and no doubt would be glad to meet you if you would like to question them on the subject. We are, of course, all interested that this question shall be decided wisely, and to that end we shall not act hurriedly in the matter.

"Yours very truly,

"LEIGHTON CALKINS."

W. G. Clark Named To Secure Federal Aid for State Roads

Watson G. Clark, the chairman of the executive committee of the State Highway Commission, has been named by the commission to take up with Federal authorities the matter of securing Federal aid for New Jersey military highways. At the present time there are in New Jersey over twenty reservations of the Federal government in which are located camps, aero stations, forts, arsenals, radio stations, embarkation camps and hospitals. The result has been that the roads leading to these places have been forced to carry enormous tonnage, and the surfaces have been destroyed. New Jersey has already expended over $150,000 in an attempt to keep these highways in good condition, and it has also forced the counties to expend a large share of their State allowance from the motor vehicle fund for this same purpose.

The Highway Commission, however, has reached the decision that it will be necessary to get government aid if these roads are to be kept in passable condition. Mr. Clark has been authorized to communicate with Colonel R. C. Marshall, jr., of the Construction Division of the United States War Department, General George W. Goethals, director of purchase, storage and traffic; Senator Frelinghuysen, Senator Baird, Congressman Lehlbach and others. He will urge the need of investigating this entire question at once, in order to cope with the problem before it is too late.

The estimated amounts needed for the various government reservations are as follows: Burlington county, roads to Camp Dix, $150,000; Salem county, roads to Fort Mott, $16,000; Atlantic county, roads to the Atlantic Loading Company, of Hammonton, $190,00; Cap May county, roads to Wissahickon Naval Barracks, $57,000; Middlesex county, roads to Base Hospital at Colonia, $65,000; from Bonhamton to Metuchen, $60,000; Hudson county, Newark Plank Road across Meadows, between Newark and Jersey City, past the United States Engineering Depot and Shipyards, $50,000; Monmouth county, roads to Camp Vail, $38,000; Bergen county, roads to Camp Merritt, $100,000; other contingencies, $184,000.

Army Mail Service Is Much Improved

A report from General Pershing regarding army mail service, transmitted to the Senate by Secretary Baker, recites measures being taken to improve the service and attributes delays principally to misaddressing.

On August 1 General Pershing said a new mail service involving co-operation between the American postal and army authorities and the French government will be inaugurated, by which it is hoped soldiers will get their mail much more promptly. Special postal cards will be provided to forward the mail on the railroads and information will be given the military authorities in charge of the service of contemplated troop movements. Since the army took over the soldiers' mail, General Pershing said, considerable improvement has been noted and the amount of undelivered mail matter decreased.

Yankee Fighters Get The Best of Care

"The American Army is distinguished from the French and the British by the thorough attention paid to matters of comfort and recreation. Our boys are well taken care of; every family in America can be certain of that. And do not doubt that this care and attention shows in their morale by a contagious enthusiasm and aggressive fighting spirit. I was in the fighting sector when they stormed Vaux, July 1, and I saw them at the business we trained them for. They are the finest group of men I have ever seen, and I am willing to lace up the boots of any one of them."

This tribute to the prowess of American fighting men in action was paid by Raymond B. Foswick, chairman of the War and Navy departments commissions on Training Camp Activities, who arrived at Washington this week to make an official report to Secretary Baker upon American training camp activities in France and England.

"The millions of dollars which the American people have given to the organizations that are making life liveable for our fellows 'over there,'" Mr. Fosdick said, "constitutes the nearest approach to our paying the unpayable debt which we owe them. It is hard to avoid superlatives in speaking of the way the Red Cross has handled the refugee problem, or the manner in which, with General Petain's assistance, it is giving aid to the needy families of French poilus at the front. It has filled the heart of France. The French can scarcely speak of the work without a show of emotion. Indeed, the tears rolled down the cheeks of a French divisional commander as he told me of its electrifying effect upon the morale of his men. I speak with the same enthusiasm of the Young Men's Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, and the Salvation Army, which are joining in the common program to meet the recreational and amusement needs of our army."

Rt. Rev. T. J. Walsh Installed as Bishop of Trenton Diocese

In the presence of a distinguished assemblage, including high dignitaries of the church and about 400 priests, Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Walsh, D. D., was installed as bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Trenton, at St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton, Wednesday morning. The installation was conducted by His Eminence Cardinal Farley. Archbishop Dougherty, of Philadelphia, was celebrant of the mass and the sermon was preached by Bishop Hickey, of Rochester, the former home of Bishop Walsh.

Crowds began to assemble in front of the cathedral long before 10 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremony. The throng which greeted Bishop Walsh upon his arrival in Trenton, Tuesday night, was further augmented Wednesday morning, so that when the processional from the episcopal residence to the cathodral began, there was a long line of clergymen.

Guests, including Governor Edge and his staff, arrived at the cathedral early, and were assigned to seats reserved for them. In the number, were men of prominence, not only in the church, but in many other branches of life. At 9:30 the doors of the cathedral were thrown open to the vast crowd which had thronged the streets for nearly two hours. The capacity of the cathedral was taxed to its utmost, and hundreds were unable to gain admission.

Bishop Walsh arrived in Trenton at 9 o'clock Tuesday night from Buffalo, N. Y., in the midst of a heavy downpour of rain. Sixty automobiles awaited his arrival at the Clinton Street Station, where he was greeted by a delegation of local priests and representatives of the Knights of Columbus. The safe arrival of the bishop and his party was quickly heralded throughout the city by the chiming of bells in every Catholic church.

Although the rain somewhat interfered with the outdoor ceremonies planned for the occasion and particularly with the greeting planned by the members of different parishes who had expected to line the streets from the station to the episcopal residence, a large crowd was on hand to greet Bishop Walsh. He was escorted through the rain by a band, a number of marchers of the Knights of Columbus, and the long line of automobiles.

Upon his arrival at the episcopal residence Bishop Walsh paused for a few moments on the steps to address a large gathering there. He referred to the rain as a blessing from heaven falling upon a parched country. He extended his blessing to the assembled throng and to the city.

An informal reception at the bishop's residence followed his arrival. Among those present were Cardinal Farley, Archbishop Dougherty, Bishop Hoban, of Scranton, and Bishop Hickey.

Bishop Walsh is the third bishop of Trenton. The diocese was created in July, 1881, having been cut off from Newark Diocese, which till then had included the whole State.

St. Joseph's parish in North Plainfield is in the Trenton diocese and Rev. Father P. J. Hart and Rev. Father T. —. Campbell were included in the priests witnessing the installation ceremonies.

Edge Says Stevens "Soldiered" on Job

The creation of the State Board of Fisheries by the Legislature of last winter, the appointment of Senator Lewis T. Stevens, of Cape May, as its secretary, and the subsequent request for his resignation have caused a little friction between the Senator and Governor Edge in which both are laughing at the other. Senator Stevens attempts to justify his action in resigning the secretaryship by saying that he is a lawyer and not a fisherman, and Governor Edge says that the resignation was requested because Senator Stevens was soldiering on the job.

The first public notice of the friction was when Governor Edge gave out a statement last Thursday from Sea Girt which told plainly that he was not pleased with the way things were going. Senator Stevens, in a statement this week, answers the Governor as follows:

"I read with interest the news given out last Thursday from the executive office by direction of Governor Edge, in which he incidentally criticized the new State Board of Fisheries for inaction, and generally criticized me for drawing pay as secretary, when, to his mind, nothing tangible had been accomplished by the board.

"I am neither responsible for the law creating the board, nor for its actions. As secretary I have performed every duty required of me by the board. I did not seek the position, but accepted it at the Governor's request. When the Governor was talking to me about taking the position, he told me that my business ability ought to fit me for the position of manager, provided in the act creating the board, but I then informed the Governor that I was not acquainted with the fish business; that I was a lawyer. He replied that common sense business methods could be applied, and the matter would succeed. Our interview closed then when I said that it was not the kind of a position that I felt that I could fill.

"The board, with the meager funds allowed by the State House Commission, could not go into the fish business—i. e., buying and selling fish to the public. I cannot speak for the members of the board as to their thoughts as I have heard them expressed upon the impracticability of the scheme, as authorized under the present law.

"Individually I have not had any faith in the plan, and, to my mind, it is the only measure advocated by Governor Edge which has not worked to a good advantage to the people of the State of New Jersey. Because I had no faith in the plan was the reason I was averse to being connected with the board, and I now regret that I did allow myself to accept the petty position. My resignation has been sent to President Francis for action at the meeting which is to take place next Friday.

"I have no quarrel with the Governor over the matter. He is the captain of the ship of state, and I am only a private. I have always been one of his warmest supporters in the Legislature, and have voted for many measures which he thought he wanted, and which I believed he would some time find out he did not want. He is the Republican holding the highest office in the State government, and, therefore, a leader, and I being a party adherent, I have had a habit of listening and following leaders' views at times against my own will, and have followed him. In some instances I have not, when I thought I was right.

"I trust his fish idea will work out for the good of the common people, but I am like the man 'from Missouri.'"

When Senator Stevens' statement was read over the 'phone to Governor Edge at the Little White House in Sea Girt he just laughed and said that the thing that made him laugh most was the fact that Senator Stevens took two months to send in his resignation after he had been asked for it.

Governor Edge said that Senator Stevens did not do the work expected of him. He has ability, said Governor Edge, but he is more interested in his candidacy for re-election to the Senate than anything else, and is giving all his attention to that.

Regarding the fisr business, Governor Edge said that the State does not intend to embark in the business unless the pound men charge exorbitant princes. Then the State will take up the matter and buy fish, for it has plenty of money and will not permit the people to be imposed on by the fish pound man.

"I wanted a man who would give his time and attention to the work and found that Senator Stevens was not doing this, and that is the reason why he was asked for his resignation," said the Governor in conclusion.

Plainfield Soldiers Visit in France

How the Plainfield lads located in France are visiting each other is told of by F. Otto Linke, of the 303rd Military Police, in a letter received this week by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Linke, of West Second street.

On first going overseas, Mr. Linke was detailed for a time in England but later was sent to a French port, where he is now located. Many Plainfield boys are in his immediate vicinity, and in his letter he speaks of having met Donald Sminck, son of Councilman Charles S. Sminck; Sergeant Howard Armstrong, of the 311th Infantry, and Gerald Varley, son of John J. Varley. This is the letter in which he tells about the social visits and other occurrences of interest to his Plainfield friends:

Somewhere in France,
July 11, 1918.

My Dear Parents:

Just a few lines to let you know that we are as well and feel as fine as the best of them.

Last Monday I ran into Don Sminck, and just had a couple of minutes talk with him. It certainly was good to see him and he looks fine. Hell his father so when you see him. Howard Armstrong was also with the crowd. I'll run across them again soon. Don was glad to see me but we both were in formation and we had little chance to talk. Gerald Varley came over to see me Tuesday night and again yesterday afternoon. I expect him over again tonight. He looks fine and is as fat as ever. France does not seem to be hurting him in any way. Tell his father so. He is only three miles away from where we are camped. He had a letter from Bess and was tickled with having her remember him.

There has been very little or no mail come here for the past week. I can't understand it. The people at home certainly white but it is all times before the mail arrives to the soldier. It took two weeks for a letter to get from me to George. I had a letter from George, Monday. He is very well and seems to be in a nice place. However he is a good way off from where I am. But you never can tell, we might be very near each other inside of a week. You can't tell where we will move. Just get your orders from our commanding officer, then off.

The only American cars I have seen in this part of France are Fords, a peculiar type of trucks that the English use as a sort of a steam engine automobile. The front of it looks like a railway engine. They seem to be powerful and sometimes pull three trailers behind it.

I suppose Mr. Varley is now located in his new place. Tell Bob Cormack that I'll drop him a line shortly and tell him all about it.

Well, I have written about all I can think of this time. Give my best wishes to all the friends and take good care of yourselves.

Best love.

Your loving son,

OTTO.

Tyler Explains Sugar Situation

Relative to the sugar shortage State Food Commissioner William S. Tyler, of this city, has issued the following statement.

"The situation with regard to sugar control in New Jersey is very satisfactory to the Federal Food Administration in this State; in fact, what is considered a highly commendable record has been established in securing statements from the various users and sellers, and in the issuing of certificates for July, which have amounted to approximately 15,000. The list subdivided is as follows: Grocers, 8,500; hotels, boarding houses and restaurants, 4,000; candy, ice cream and soda water manufacturers, 1,700; bakers, 1,000. The compilation covers the July period to date.

"Some of the dealers in filling out their applications apparently did not quite understand the instructions, as about 1,000 applications have been received without the addresses of the applicants; this has made it necessary to seek the co-operation of the wholesalers and county administrators to locate these dealers.

"The allotments are for the three months' period—July, August and September, but the certificates are for July only. Other certificates for August will be issued about August 1, and those for September about September 1. This announcement is made by the department to clear up a misapprehension on the part of many dealers who complained of the apportionment as set forth on their July certificates, thinking that it covered the three months' period.

"While New Jersey's allotment of sugar for July totals 13,000,000 pounds for all uses, the Food Administration sounds a note of warning to housekeepers that it will be necessary for them to very materially lessen the sugar content in canning and preserving. A suggestion is made that the housewives do their canning and preserving with much less than the usual amount of sugar, and that when winter arrives, and the fruits are being used, they be sweetened to the taste. This arrangement would greatly relieve the present situation.

"An urgent appeal is also made to the housewives that they dry some of their fruits, instead of canning them; that whenever possible fruits be canned without sugar, and also that sweet pickles and watermelon rind pickles be omitted entirely this year.

"An effort is also being made to introduce the English method of pulping fruits among housewives. This is done by placing of fruit over a gentle flame until enough moisture comes out to prevent burning; then increase the heat until the fruit boils; boil an hour, stirring constantly, and then can in a sterilized jar. With some dry fruit, such as apples, a litte water will have to be added to prevent burning. Pulp fruit can also be used for jam, stewed fruit, puddings and pies. Since we must be especially careful of sugar, it is well to make the fruit into pulp one jar at a time.

"The English housewife allows half a pint of sugar to a pint of pulp, which she says is quite sweet enough, and almost a luxury in these days."

No Immediate Need To Call Deferred Classes in Draft

Invasion of the deferred classes in the draft is not an immediate danger, members of the Senate and House committee on military affairs said this week, in spite of the fact that Class 1 is being rapidly exhausted.

Class 1, as at present constituted, includes no men of the last registration. Provost Marshal-General Crowder has given arbitary orders that at least fifty per cent of the 750,000 men who became 21 during the last year be placed in Class 1. It is confidently expected that Class 1 will be increased by nearly 450,0000 when the new registrants are classified.

The new Class 1 men together with those of the 1917 registrants placed in the first class, should give sufficient men to meet the requirements of the next two months at least, it was said. Some members of the military affairs committee believed there would be enough to fill all calls until the end of the year. Nevertheless, General Crowder has power to order quarterly registrations of men becoming 21 and may set September 5, as a new registration day if men are urgently needed.

This situation will not, however, give Congress time to daily over changing the draft ages. Three months will be required to classify the men made liable to service when the ages are raised and lowered. If the law were passed by September 1, the men would not have been classified until December 1, at the earliest and no levies of the new registrants would be possible until the beginning of the new year.

Chairman Dent, of the House military committee, said that Secretary Baker probably would appear before his committee to give detailed explanations of the policy of his new man power bill when the lower body reconvenes, August 19. No member received any definite information on the ages to be fixed. It is understood that the secretary himself has not yet reached a decision on this point.

"Beefsteak" First; "High-Ball" Second

Ice dealers have been instructed by the State Food Administration to deliver ice hereafter to butchers before saloon keepers are supplied, particularly in Newark and Jersey City. This ruling reverses conditions which have obtained, it is said, of first putting in the saloon keeper's supply and then passing on to the butcher and giving him what has been left. During the recent hot weather it was found in Newark and Jersey City that there was not enough ice to go around. Saloon keepers secured enough for their requirements, but the butchers, served later, went shy on their requirements and an outcry resulted.

Administration officials discovered that the situation was one of distribution and not of favoritism. The saloon keeper, whose dull period of business is in the morning, was ready and willing to have his supply of ice put in at that time. When it came afternoon and the time of the day when the butcher had most of his leisure moments and was ready for his ice, it was found that the quantity was insufficient to meet the needs.

Labor is short, many ice men have retired from business and it is difficult for dealers to care for all needs during hot weather. Hereafter it will be the butcher first and the saloon keeper second and the man with a highball thirst must give way to the man with a beefsteak appetite.

City's Assessed Valuation Shows Gain of $1,031,405 Over Last Year

Increase Is Mainly Due to Erection of Additions to Local Industrial Plants--Total Value of Real and Personal Property Reaches $33,553,220 as Against $32,521,815

Complete returns filed at the office of Tax Collector William R. Townsend yesterday show that Plainfield's assessed valuation has made the splendid gain of $1,031,405 in the past twelve months. It was generally believed that there would be but little increase owing to the falling off of ordinary building but the big additions to the Pond, Saurer and Scott shops rolled up the greater part of the new valuations.

The city's value, real and personal, as shown by the assessor's books in 1917, was $32,521,815. When the four wards were totaled up yesterday it showed that the value had grown to $33,553,220. The increase in the Second and Third wards was only normal, while big gains were made in the First and Fourth, where the industrial plants are located. The valuation by ward is as follows:

First ward—1917, $6,729,250; 1918, $6,874,215; increase, $144,965.

Second ward—1917, $10,234,625; 1918, $10,473,700; increase, $239,075.

Third ward—1917, $7,546,515; 1918, $7,625,205; increase, $78,690.

Fourth ward—1917, $8,011,425; 1918, $8,580,100; increase, $568,675.

The 1918 total of $33,533,220 does not include an assessment of $110,000 levied against the Postoffice building on Watchung avenue, as this is Government property on which no tax is paid. The assessors this year made a special effort to locate personal property which has been under-assessed and it is said they wer successful in scores of instances. The increase due to the erection of industrial plants has also been announced from other parts of the county and the total gain in valuation from all municipalities will be about $15,000,000, the largest that has ever been recorded in one year. The increase at Elizabeth is about $3,000,000, and there have been big gains at Linden, Rahway and other places.

Motorcycle Rider Dies of Injuries

Joseph Graniere, aged twenty years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 2 o'clock this morning, from injuries received Wednesday afternoon, when he was thrown from a motorcycle in attempting to avoid an oncoming automobile on lower South avenue.

The unfortunate young man's lung was punctured by a broken rib and he received other internal hurts that made it impossible for him to recover. In a vain hope of saving his life, Dr. P. J. Zeglio operated yesterday afternoon but the patient failed to rally. He was in a semiconscious condition from the time the accident happened until he was sent to the operating table and a full account of the accident could not be gotten from him.

Graniere was riding the motorcycle in company with James Fosbre, of Essex street, who has also been unable to give a clear account of the affair although he escaped without a scratch. In a statement he said he was driving the machine and his companion was seated behind. The automobile, ownership unknown, came toward them at a high rate of speed, and in attempting to get clear of it, he ran the motorcycle into an old roadway high with grass and weeds. An iron pipe was concealed and the undergrowth and the motorcycle struck this obstruction, turning turtle and throwing both riders in a heap. Fosbre says he scrambled to his feet in a dazed condition, but Graniere was unable to rise. Fosbre hailed a passing automobile and had the injured lad taken to the hospital but beyond this the survivor of the accident could tell nothing more.

Graniere was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Graniere, of 16 Sycamore avenue, the father being the proprietor of a shoe repairing plant at 122 East Front street. The young man was manager of his father's store, and had a promising business career. He was the oldest boy in the family and was very well liked by all who knew him. Beside his parents, re is survived by two brothers and four sisters. They are Mrs. John C. Maskell, of Grove street; the Misses Laurette, Marguerite and Veronica Graniere, and Michael and Humbert Graniere, all living at the parental home.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning at 8 o'clock and burial will be in the family plot in Springdale cemetery, Stamford, Conn.

Last Farewell For Selectives the Saddest Yet

Forty-two more selectives, one of the largest contingents that has yet gone out of Plainfield, left the city Wednesday morning with Camp adsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., as their ultimate destination.

At the North avenue station, where they boarded a train for Elizabeth, at which point they embarked on a special over the Pennsylvania Railroad, the leave-taking was the saddest that has yet been noted among the many that Plainfield has witnessed since last September. A number of the selectives were young married men who had been lifted from lower classes to 1-A and the tearful good-byes that were said by girlish wives left sorry pangs in the hearts of on-lookers. It was noted, however, that Plainfield's young womanhood is among the bravest of the brave and after the train pulled out, the separated wives turned homeward with faces grim and determined, indicating that they realized that they had given up their loved ones for a worthy cause.

The contingent was given a most enthusiastic reception at the Y. M. C. A., Tuesday night. It was in charge of Chairman John J. Varley, of the Citizens' Committee, and the program numbered one of the most distinguished list of speakers that has yet appeared at a farewell demonstration. Among them were Senator William N. Runyon, who gave an address that was cheered with an echo; Mayor William L. Smalley, of North Plainfield; Police Chief P. S. Kiely, whose son, Daniel, was one of the contingent; Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church, and Charles W. Runyon, of the Exemption Board. The supper was served by the canteen committee of the Plainfield-North Plainfield chapter of the Red Cross, with Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows acting as supervising chairman.

The customary parade from Exemption headquarters to the Eastbound railroad station, Wednesday morning ,was unusually large. The Liberty Band played "Over There" and other patriotic airs at the head of the column and in the line were a squad of police, city officials, a detachment of Home Defense men and a platoon of firemen in charge of Captain James Fitzpatrick. The firemen marched in honor of one of their number, Joseph Minor, of headquarters, who had been reclassified recently. When the depot was reached the crowd of relatives and friends numbered in the thousands and the final demonstration of goodbyes and cheers will long be remembered by the soldiers to be.

Those included in the contingent were as follows:

Daniel P. Kiely, Frank X. Krygier, Peter Colucci, John R. B. Feiring, Richard P. Lawton, Russell W. Smith, Horace H. Daniels, Thomas J. Walsh, Arthur L. Grisley, Charles . Ehlert, Evan D. Peterson, Constantine Constantinedes, William M. Darling, William D. Yussef, Carlo Riganti, Gustave Johanson, Harry Brickman, Toward W. Peck, Spyridian Vorides, Clarence E. Tilley, Daniel W. Applegate, Guiseppe Sanjuliano, Amos Dame, A. J. Aquado, John J. McGarrigle, Louis Abramson, Alphonse Condience, James B. Carter, Richard W. Schott, William Tmay, Salvatore Labino, George W. Wash, Thomas Vorius, Joseph V. Miner, George Dowser, Edward Thomas, William H. Toms, Louis Van Zandt, Harvey A. Vail. Earl S. Huff, Pelham C. Wilmerding, Charles P. Woodruff, Edward Conklin, Bernard J. Kline.

Driver Hurt As Aeroplane Scares Horse

The first instance on record of an aeroplane frightening a horse occurred yesterday morning near Weequahic Park, Waverly, with "The Baron," the valuable trotter belonging to Dr. Howard E. Winter, of West Front street, as the principal figure.

"The Baron" has been entered by Dr. Winter in the track meet at Weequahic Park tomorrow and was being taken over by Henry L. Southard, of this city, for a try-out. Just as the rig was approaching the park entrance, one of the mail service aeroplanes, plying between New York and Philadelphia, suddenly appeared over the tree-tops less than 100 feet away. "The Baron" was terror srticken and, rising on his hand legs, fell back against the light racing cart in which the driver was seated. One wheel collapsed and Southard was thrown to the ground but although he is seventy-nine years old, he held to the reins with a firm grip and was dragged several hundred feet before he manager to get the frenzied animal running around in circles. Bystanders came to his assistance and stopped the horse but not before Southard was badly injured. One arm had a big piece of flesh gouged out. His lower limbs were a mass of cuts and bruises and his clothing was torn to ribbons.

After receiving first aid treatment at the park, Southard was brought to Plainfield by Dr. Winter, who is a veterinarian, and attended by Dr. Gray, of Somerset street. He will be laid up for several weeks.

"The Baron," who is valued at $2,000, was uninjured and will take part in the 2:18 class races at Weequahic tomorrow afternoon. Trotting experts at the tract yesterday said they knew of many things that had caused horses to run away but to have one frightened by an aeroplane was a distinctly different proposition from anything they had ever encountered before.

Mayor Calkins Decides To Become a Candidate

Reconsiders His Announcement of a Month Ago and Will Go Before the People for Re-election as Plainfield's Chief Executive--Familiarity with War Activities of His Own Organization a Factor in Reasons for His Seeking Third Term

Mayor Leighton Calkins returned to this city yesterday from a week's vacation and announced his decision to stand for re-election as Plainfield's chief executive. A month ago he stated that he was not a candidate but it has been urged upon him through the petitions of a large number of people, in particular on account of his familiarity with all the local war activities which he has organized, and is organizing, and his knowledge of war problems effecting the policy of the community. Most of these matters are of a continuous character in which the thorough knowledge gained by going through them from the beginning is of value. The Mayor was undecided a week ago but now feels that his name can go before the people in case they should want him to run again. He gave out the following statement this morning:

"I have taken the week that I have been away to consider what I ought to do and I have decided to let my name go before the people for re-election. I have wanted to be relieved from the responsibilities and work involved; and although I did recognize in the war a reason which would not otherwise exist for continuance in office for another term, on account of the familiarity with many war problems affecting community policies, which can be gained only through actual experience with them, still I should not have felt this a compelling consideration had it not been presented to me as such from so many sources.

"I will not pretend to be indifferent to these petitions from the business men of the city and citizens generally, or to the expressions of confidence evidenced thereby. But I would like to say with respect to the administration of our municipal affairs that whatever I may have accomplished or done to merit this public expression of approval and confidence has been possible only with the aid and co-operation of my associates in the Common Council and the heads of departments. I have had but one aim and that was to work with them, and as one of them, so that together we might get some things done in Plainfield. Accomplishment is impossible without administrative harmony.

"If the people re-elect me for another term I shall try to do my best to deserve the kind things which recently have been said, for which I take this means of expressing my sincere thanks."

New Jersey "Suffs" Opposed to Pickets At the White House

At a meeting of the State Legislative Committee of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, held in Newark yesterday, the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association condemn the action of the Nation Woman's Party in picketing the White House and attacking President Wilson as responsible for the delay of the United States Senate in passing the Federal Amendment for Woman Suffrage. We believe that the President is doing his utmost to convince the twenty-odd southern Democrats who are opposing the measure because they do not wish colored women to vote, and Senator David Baird and a few other Republicans who are assisting them to block the Amendment, the Woman Suffrage is an essential psychological element in the conduct of the war for Democracy' and that it will have 'n important and immediate influence upon the whole atmosphere and morale of the nations engaged in the war.' The New Jersey Association deeply appreciates the sympathy and help given to the cause by the President of the United States."

Among the women present at the meeting were the State President, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of this city; the chairman of the legislative committee, Miss Bessie Pope, Jersey City; Mrs. Seymour L. Cromwell, Mendham; Mrs. Lewis S. Thompson, Red Bank; Mrs. H. Otto Wittpenn, Jersey City; Mrs. Everett Colby and Mrs. Philip McKim Garrison, West Orange; Mrs. F. H. Colvin, East Orange; Miss Cornelia E. Norris, Boonton; Mrs. Charles A. Woodruff, Trenton; Mrs. John J. White, Atlantic City; Mrs. William H. Stratton, Ridgewood; Mrs. Wells P. Eagleton, Newark; Mrs. Robert S. Huse, Elizabeth; Mrs. Joseph N. Tuttle, Madison, and Mrs. Edmund B. Osborne, Montclair.

Commenting on the above resolution, Mrs. E. F. Feickert said we are very confident that the United States Senate will heed the wishes of President Wilson in regard to the Federal Amendment and that it will pass in the near future. The reasons for its immediate passage cannot be better expressed than they were in the editorial in the Newark News on August 1, which says, "At war for the rights of humanity, we can hardly afford to take a position that might seem narrow in the view of the nations which already have suffrage, the apparent narrowness coming from the probability that extended resistance to the vote promises to be futile, anyhow, and might be taken for mere obstancy."

LOSES A TOE.

Thomas Harding, of John street, underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday, for the amputation of an overlapping toe. The removal of the member was decided upon in order that Mr. Harding might have no bar to entering military service. Dr. Anthony performed the operation and the patient will leave the hospital today.

Ackerman Has Petition Filed

The petition of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman as candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Fifth District, comprising Union and Morris counties, was filed Monday by John E. Nicol, until recently associated with Mr. Ackerman in the conduct of his campaign. The petition contains several hundred more names than the required number and has the designation "Republican."

Mr. Ackerman's committee on vacancies is comprised of State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance Frank H. Smith, of West Eighth street; former State Senator Thomas J. Hillery, of Boonton, and State Committeeman Hamilton F. Kean, of Elizabeth. The appearance of Mr. Kean's name as a member of this committee brings to an end the speculations about his intentions of being a candidate. The same is also true in the case of Mr. Hillery, who was mentioned as a possible Congressional candidate soon after the death of Mr. Capstick.

Former Senator Ackerman is out for the long term and will not be a candidate for the short term. His only opponent so far in the Republican race is Mayor Ruford Franklin, of Summit, who announced his candidacy in a statement given out last Friday.

ELKS TO ACT ON RESIGNATION.

At the mid-summer meeting of Plainfield Lodge of Elks next Wednesday night, action will be taken on the resignation of Exalted Ruler James W. Hart, who recently gave notice that he wished to withdraw from the office because of pressing business duties.

An attempt has been made to have Mr. Hart re-consider his resignation but he finds that this will be impossible. He is general manager for the Lucy Manufacturing Company, one of the largest oil well supply companies in the United States, and his work takes him to various parts of the country. Vincent W. Nash, Jr., has been prominently mentioned as a successor to Mr. Hart.

As this is the only meeting to be held since the early part of July, and no other scheduled until September, numerous important matters will be considered at next Wednesday night's

$12 Sliced Off Pay of Deputy Sheriffs

The recent action of the Board of Freeholders in standardizing the salaries of the deputy sheriffs of Sheriff Warner's staff has brought a reduction of salary for three of the deputies, Charles Fisher, of Summit; Alexander Ayres, of Plainfield, and Jacob Miller, of New Providence. These men were receiving $3 a day and mileage, avering $1,212 for the 303 working days in a year. Under the recent action of the freeholders they will now receive a flat salary of $1,200 annually, a reduction of $12 a year.

All of the other deputies received an increase, in the cases of the Elizabeth deputies the increase amounting to $300 per year.

Under the State law a deputy who resided away from the county seat was allowed mileage up to ten miles. This brought the amount the outside deputies received up to about $4 per day for every day they worked. In making the new salary the freeholders also cut off any fees the deputies now receive.

It is quite likely the three men affected by the new order of things will take some action, as under the State civil service law they feel they are protected in the amount they receive, as well as the State statutes which has made provision for their salaries.

Irving H. Brown, of Central avenue, returned this week after a

Funeral of Drowned Man This Afternoon

The funeral of George H. Latourette, who was drowned in Watchung Lake, Watchung, Tuesday night, will be held at his late home at 203 North avenue, this afternoon at 2:30. Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, will officiate and burial will be in Hillside cemetery. The pallbearers were the following six close friends: Arthur C. Backer, Howard Debele, William Backer, Edward Allen, E. K. Schomp and LeRoy Hann.

Latourette, who was twenty-three years old, and employed by the C. H. Bishop Company as salesman, was seized with cramps while attempting to swim across the lake. He called for assistance and LeRoy Hann and Edward Sprague, who were nearby, sought to save him but in vain. Sprague almost lost his own life in the attempt. The North Plainfield Home Defense League and scores of other volunteers searched for the body all night but it was not located until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, after the water in the lake had been let out.

Latouretter was a native of Whitehouse, but had lived in Plainfield practically all his life. He leaves his wife, who was Miss Mayme Mattison, of North Plainfield; two small children, one eighteen months old and the other five months; also his mother, Mrs. Brand, of Whitehouse, and one brother.

Scores of women and children who attended the Knights of Columbus excursion to Asbury Pury pesterday, failed to appear at the Park depot at the leaving of the last section, last night, and in consequence were left behind. A number of men were also among the delinquents, one of them being Motor Vehicle Agent James J. McCann. Mr. McCann did all possible to help stranded parties devoid of funds to get back home last night but many others did not return to Plainfield until this morning.

The excursion is said to be the largest that ever went out of Plainfield. It was made up of three sections, of thirteen cars each and at that there were more people than there were seats. Many had to stand all the way to the shore and back as efforts to get extra cars from the railroad met with failure. It is estimated that fully 3,000 persons attended the outing and despite this big number, there were no accidents or any detracting feature reported although young and old suffered badly from the heat.

The excursion was conducted by a committee of which Andrew Kenney was chairman and Vincent Meany and George Gutterman his immediate

Fourth Ward Shy A Representative In Common Council

The Fourth ward of the city now only has one direct representative in the Common Council as on Monday night last Charles C. Graves tendered his resignation. He did not cease to be a member of the governing body, however, as he was immediately re-elected by his confreres to fill the vacancy at large caused by the resignation of Councilman Leslie R. Fort.

Mr. Fort's withdrawal had been expected since his acceptance of a commission in the army service but it did not occur until Monday night. As soon as his resignation had been read and accepted, the proceeding took place which enabled Mr. Graves to retain his membership in the city fathers. He was elected from the Fourth ward but as he recently removed to the Third ward, it was imperative that something of the nature of Monday night's proceeding be done in order that he might continue a councilman. When his present term expires he will have to seek re-election, should he care to continue a municipal officer either as a councilman-at-large or as a Third ward aspirant.

Councilman Sminck paid a high tribute to Mr. Fort for his work in the Council and also in the motive which led him to enter the country's service. The retiring councilman left a splendid record and it is deeply regretted by the citizens that he felt it obligatory to join the staff of General March at Washington.

As the Fourth ward now lacks one of its representatives in the Council, this matter will be cared for at an early meeting. The successor to Mr. Graves will be named by the organization while as yet no hint has been given as to whom might be the man.

The only other important matter of business at the meeting Monday night was the hearing for citizens on the proposed Watchung avenue flagging. The only property owner appearing to speak on the subject was Charles P. Sebring and an explanation given him by Chairman Hylan, or the street committee, was sufficient to make him a supporter of the movement. The ordinance was accordingly adopted on third reading, although the actual work of widening from Greenbrook to East Second street will not be commenced until possibly next year. The passage of the ordinance sets a building line which prohibits property owners from encroaching on the present sidewalk.

MRS. ARABELLA YAWGER.

Mrs. Arabella Yawger, aged seventy-three years, died Wednesday night at Trenton, after a long illness. She is survived by three sons and a daughter, the latter being Mrs. Alva Porter, of 36 Codington avenue, North Plainfield. The funeral will be held at Mrs. Porter's home Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will be private. Burial will be at Somer-

Women Section Hands Appear on Jersey Central

Women section hands on the railroad are the latest step in the plan to overcome the shortage of manpower brought about by war's heavy drafts. They appeared this week on the New Jersey Central in this city and have attracted more attention than did the pioneer conductorettes.

The section crew in charge of Edward Mahon, of North avenue, this city, taking care of the stretch of track between Graceland hill and Netherwood section, has fourteen of these female laborers. The other Plainfield crew, which operates between Netherwood station and Clinton avenue, is in charge of William Reilly, of North avenue, and has two of the women but more are to be added in a short time. So far all the female workers are of Italian birth and a number of them are quite young. The homes of some are in the East End section of Plainfield, while others live in Elizabeth. The women are receiving three dollars a day for nine hours' work.

Speaking of the innovation, a local railroad man said yesterday that the Jersey Central officials did not want to come to the point of engaging women as section hands but as the men were deserting the company in large numbers there was nothing else to do. While they do not compare with the men in their ability to do the heavy work, he said, they are rapidly becoming more proficient and promise of meting every requirement within a short titme.

BUSINESS MEN ENLIST IN Y. M. C. A. UNIT.

Charles L. Ryder, Jr., of the Ryder & Graves Electric Co.; Wilbert T Bintliff and Charles Kane, of Bintliff & Kane; Edwin A. Craig, George Gaddis, all local business men, together with Joseph Whalen, Earl Winters, Frank McIntosh and several others have all enlisted in a Y. M. C. A. unit of fifteen being recruited in Plainfield for expert mechanical work overseas.

The volunteers are to take physical examinations in New York next week and if accepted will be given a two months' training course at Columbia College before being sent abroad.

FOUR MORE MEN SENT TO SYRACUSE.

Four more Plainfield young men in the limited service class were sent to the military barracks at Syracuse, N. Y., Monday, to become military police and firemen. They were Clarence Giles, John C. Mottley, Anthony Russo and Fred Burkhardt.

The local exemption board on Wednesday sent Alphonse Condina to Camp Devens for the Springfield, Mass., board, and today will send Vincent Bocian to a southern camp for a board at Pittsburg, Pa.

Miss Isabel S. Arnold, of the Plainfield Seminary, is spending her summer vacation at the Ark, Jaffrey, N. H.

LEST WE FORGET TO DO OUR PART

"They say, who have come back from Over There, that at night the troubled earth between the lines is carpeted with pain. They say that Death rides whistling in every wind, and that the very mists are charged with awful torment. They say that of all things spent and squandered them, human life is held least dear. It is not the pleasantest prospect for those of us who can yet feel upon our lips the pressure of our Mother's good-bye kiss.

"But, please God, our love of life is not so prized as love of right. In this renaissance of our Country's valor, we who will edge the wedge of her assault make calm acceptance of its hazards. For us, the steel-swept trench, the stiffening cold—weariness, hardship, worse. For you whom we go, you millions safe at home—what for you?

"We shall need food. We shall need care. We shall need clothes for our bodies and weapons for our hands. We shall need terribly and without failure supplies and equipment in a stream that is constant and never-ending. From you, who are our resource and reliance, who are the heart and hope of that humanity for which we smite and strive, must come these things."

Dix Plans Pool for Summer Swimming And Winter Skating

Through the generosity of Mrs. E. H. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia, the money needed to construct and equip a swmming pool outside the main Knights of Columbus building at Camp Dix has been furnished, and Frank Wandle, K. of C. director of activities at the camp, will take up at once the question of setting a contract.

The plans for the pool, already drawn, provide for a cement pond 20x60 feet, with a depth of four to nine feet. It will be so arranged it can be used as a skating pond in the winter. Mrs. Stotesbury also has sent to Mr. Wandle a check for $200, which will be used to busy two push balls. Another improvement soon to be started by the Knights will be the construction of three cement tennis courts so banked they can be flooded in winter for skating.

It took just thirty-eight minutes Tuesday for the 312th Engineers to build a 225-foot bridge across a creek near Cookstown, and inside of forty minutes a supply train had passed over it to test its stability. This record, too, was made with green men, and, in a pinch, with experienced engineers, this time could be cut in half. The pontoons were in the water when the men arrived and the material on the banks. During the last heavy rain three bridges were washed out and, within a short time, were replaced by the engineers, the work being entirely completed in twelve hours.

Two years at hard labor at the disciplinary barracks at Fort Jay, N. Y.. and then dishonorable discharge from the service, was the sentence that Private Nathan Saims, Brooklyn, will have to serve for his refusal to obey a command from Captain L. G. Barton to do kitchen police work.

Ten years at Fort Jay will be served by Private Abraham Fisher, of New York, for attempting to evade military duty by feigning insanity after he had absented himself from drill and had also gone to the base hospital without permission. He also used disrespectful language toward his commanding officer. For absenting himself without leave and then breaking confinement, Private Louis F. Baker, of Camden, will serve a sentence of two years and then will be dishonorably discharged from the service.

High praise was given the school for bakers and cooks at Dix by Lieutenant Colonel S. R. Coleman, head of the various schools in this country, and Dr. Jacobs, fuel administrator, who visited the camp Monday on a tour of inspection. The latter is inspecting the various camps with a view of taking up the matter of saving fuel, and, with the new plans to be enforced, it is believed large sums will be served the United States during the coming winter.

Pioneer platoons of the Eighty-seventh Division, which have been taking a three-week course at Camp Dix in the building and destruction of wire entanglements and other features of trench construction, will have a chance next week to demonstrate their ability when a series of contests will be held to determine which units have made the most progress. It is expected that Major General S. D. Sturgis, division commander, and Major General Hugh L. Scott, camp commander, will see the tests.

Another conscientious objector, who was deemed insincere by the bord appointed by the President to examine those men who sought to be freed from the fighting units on account of religious scruples, has been sent to Fort Jay, Governor's Island, for twenty years and then will be dishonorably discharged from the service. The objector is Private John Grass, of Jersey City, who refused to perform any military duty.

To hold a war savings stamp rally and then to find there were no stamps available was the experience of Wrightstown, Tuesday night. The postmaster failed to lay in an extra supply. As Miss Frances Kelly, of Jersey City, was on hand to speak, Mayor Albert Watson decided to go ahead with the program.

A reception was given Wednesday night to the Italian officers and soldiers who escaped from the Austrian army, at the "Mole Tequop" Soldiers' Club.

W. W. Ellsworth, of Atlantic City, is spending the week at Dix and every evening is giving an illustrated lecture on "The Hun," describing his origin and the growth of Prussianism. Wednesday night he was at Y. M. C. A. hut No. 1 and last night in the auditorium.

Lieutenant Joseph F. Hanley has been promoted to a captaincy and placed in command of Company 40 of the Depot Brigade. His place as adjutant of the Tenth Battalion has been taken by Lieutenant Francis Upham, Jr.

The Knights of Columbus building was the scene of two weddings recently, the contracting parties being Private Patrick J. Tierney, who is stationed at Dix, and Miss Mary A. Clarke, of Glen Ridge. The ceremony was performed by Lieutenant Benjamin Oehler, a Catholic chaplain, and the witnesses were Owen Reilly and Miss Mary Smith, both of Newark. The other ceremony also was performed by Lieutenant Oehler and the contracting parties were Private William M. Shanley and Miss Mary A. Murray, both of Newark. The witnesses were Charles A. Canfield and Miss Catherine A. Kane, of Newark.

A large number of men who came down to Dix in the recent draft quotas are being assigned to the Fifty-ninth Pioneer Regiment, which is being filled to full war strength.

Edge Tells Record He Uses Suffrage To Play Politics

Taking the position that George L. Record, who spoke in this city last Friday night, was playing politics rather than making a sincere effort to further the cause of woman suffrage when he wrote his letter of last Saturday requesting Governor Edge to use his influence with United States Senator Baird in behalf of the suffrage movement, the Governor has written a reply to Mr. Record expressing the belief that his suggestions are not worthy of serious consideration. The Governor's letter follows:

"I have your letter of the 3d instant. If your desire to help the cause of equal suffrage were as sincere as the perfectly palpable effort to play politics I would give your suggestions more consideration.

"The object of your widely-published letter is so obvious that I fear your unnecessary instrusion will do more than anything possibly could do to prevent Senator Baird voting for suffrage. I, with others, had hoped that Senator Baird might see this matter as many of the rest of us do. As far as I understand, he has not irrevocably committed himself on the issue. The Senator is only human, and bald attempts like yours to capitalize circumstances for your own personal advantage are not going to help the situation. Manifestly, you are sparring for political position, sacrificing sincerity to expediency, and of course, this is no way to convince an intelligent, thinking individual of the merits of any cause consequently, your letter is a blow to the equal suffrage cause, which I deeply regret to see you have no scrupled to use as a football in the game of politics.

"As the responsible leaders of the suffrage movement in New Jersey are fully aware, I have at various times advised Senator Baird that if I were in his position I would unhesitatingly vote for the constitutional amendment now pending. Under these circumstances, therefore, there is absolutely no novelty in your suggestion. The query might be made why, if a vote for suffrage is right, should your motives be questioned? Simply because you already know my position in the matter and your advice, if you sincerely wish results, is not calculated to impress Senator Baird, which fact is beyond discussion. Senator Baird is able to defend himself. His record in the Senate to date has shown his to be a one-hundred-per-cent supporter of the President in all measures relating to the conduct of the war.

"The recent suggestion that the President regards a vote on the woman suffrage amendment as in this particular category of war measures has been subjected to much honest question, and as one who stands ready to vote for suffrage both in Washington and New Jersey I personally would much prefer to regard equal suffrage from the standpoint of the principle of fairness which is involved, rather than from the extraneous standpoint of war expediency or woman's service in the war. American women already have conclusively demonstrated their unalloyed patriotism and readiness to sacrifice everything in the interest of Americanism. As patriots they expect no material reward, and in my judgment they are placed in an unfair and unjustified light when it is made to appear that their logalty in war is the price of a privilege which they are unquestionably entitled by birth and right.

"I repeat, it is most unfortunate thta you have seen fit to make use of a situation for personal political advantage at the expense of such an important and far-reaching sause as equal suffrage."

Baker Reports on War Scene Pictures

The story of the government's policy and activities in pictorializing the war, not only for record and information, but for morale at home and for "combating the German lie in other countries of the world," is told in a report which Secretary Baker has laid before Congress.

It is ins reply to a resolution of inquiry regarding motion and still pictures of the American Expeditionary Force and of the military preparations at home, and it shows a comprehensive system of picture activity, safeguared by a permit system devised by the Committee on Public Information and approved by the War Department.

The pictures are taken by Signal Corps units and are shown in thousands of motion picture houses under contracts on a commercial basis to help pay the committee's expenses in motion picture propoganda. "The funds received from these sources, which the put in the Treasury to the committee's credit," says the report, "do not represent profit in any sense. Every cent goes to manufacture and distribution of the enormous amount of film the committee is compelled to distribute without return in foreign countries as part of the United States educational campaign. All features and war reviews will be supplied free of charge to cantonments in the United States and to the picture shows on the firing line in France."

How Miss Curry Began the Work Which Led to the Founding of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home

Many Plainfield people who have been interested in and gave their aid to the successful establishment of the Netherwood Fresh Air Home as conducted by Miss Sara Curry, have no knowledge of the manner in which this enterprise was started.

Its beginning dates back to the founding of Miss Curry's day nursery in St. Mark's place, New York, and the development of the great work by this remarkable woman until it reached proportions that attracted attention from all New York and surrounding territory. Eventually, the need of a country recreation place where the children of the tenements could have outdoor life and healthy living in the summer time became apparent and the Netherwood place was selected. It was originally the Hand homestead and has been improved and enlarged until at the present time it is housing 300 tired mothers and children. The number changes as the visitors are restored to health and go back to New York with better prospects for life and living.

The Plainfield people have been a great help to Miss Curray and her work in this city and all are interested in her early work. For that reason, we republish the New York Sun's story, which, although containing a number of discrepancies, gives an idea of the struggle she had to reach the present wonderful degree of success, as contained in its issue of last Sunday. It is as follows:

"A plain, middle aged, undersized woman, at whom you would not look the second time, is one of the institutions of New York. As much a part of New York as is the Flatiron Building, and much more interesting.

"Sara Curry is the woman without whom a large part of the city's poor would be neglected. She is the woman who goes out to seek and find those who would otherwise be lost. She is a gleaner in the fields of misery when the scythes of the big organizations have done their harvesting.

"She is the Little Missionary. Hers it is to pick up the stitches that the organized agencies have dropped. A lost soul named her.

"It was while Miss Curry, then in girlhood, careworn beyond her years by factory work done since she was nine, was trying to rescue white women who were drug addicts in Chinatown. One of her bleached out, wandering witted charged in a lucid moment fixed eyes that had once been wide and blue and beautiful upon her, and reading Sara Curry's work and character said: 'Thank you, Little Missionary.'

"The crowd that had gathered about the point where Chinatown empties itself into the Bowery caught up the name and tossed it about derisively. But it clung to her. Seldom does one hear the formal 'Miss Curry;' often the affectionate 'Little Missionary.'

"'You never know when she's at home,' said a big boy who was a little one when she found him an orphan crying over his mother's body in Hell's Kitchen, and who has lived since at the Little Missionary's Nursery. He was four then; he's now sixteen.

"'She always answers a call. I want to go with her to take care of her, but she gets up and goes out any time she's called. And we don't hear her go. This morning she told us at breakfast she'd gone out at 1 o'clock. A woman was paralyzed. 'Little Mish' went over to see her and got her into the hospital.'

"The Little Missionary holds a single, simple tenet. She answers prayer, and because she never fails to answer one she believes that the God who seems to her so near never fails to grant a petition either. She lives sublimely by the old faith that multitudes have forgotten.

"'Many a time I have seen her take the meat off the table and say to us: 'Hope you won't mind, but there's some one at the door who needs it more than we do.'

"Through the window of the dining room the workers in the Little Missionary's Day Nursery would see a shabby, shawled, forlorn figure turn eyes of gratitude toward Sara Curry, who would come smilingly back to her meatless meal.

"A woman who had driven, fur wrapped, in her limousine from a Fifth avenue hotel to visit the house at 93 St. Mark's place that is a hive of mothers' clubs, men's clubs, girls' clubs, boys' clubs and cooking classes, waited in the plain reception room on the second floor while Miss Curry finished saying 'Good night" to the children, before they left for their homes. The little woman in the black dress drew her shoulders together in an involuntary shiver and wrung her own hands to warm them.

"'You look cold,' said the woman in sables.

"'The halls are cold, and I am worried about the children. We wrap them up in the rooms before they go through them so they will not catch cold. We haven't been able to have steam heat in the halls,' said the Little Missionary cheerily, 'but we will. God has always taken care of my work and me and He always will.'

"The woman in sables smiled. 'We'll see what will happen!' she said. Within two weeks the children ran no risk of acquiring pneumonia in the cold halls, for there were none. The Lord, with the uptown woman as instrument, Miss Curry said, hatd installed the steam heat.

"Those nearest to her say that Sara Curry's is the one soul that is never downcast.

"'I have faced a great many hard places and the Lord has taken me through them all. He will not desert me now.' With this speech she meets every difficulty and surmounts it.

"'Leaning on the Lord' and working almost unceasingly, she maintains the day nursery for 150 babies, its numerous offspring of clubs and the summer camp at Netherwood, N. J., and its 500 women and children sojourners.

"Those who watch her wor, her selfless career—and they are many, some from Fifth avenue, some from Eleventh, others from Long Island to Water street—say the Little Missionary has reverted to the first principle of ancient Christianity—personal ministrations, personal petition to her God.

"Little Sara Curray they called her when as an orphan she worked in a Utica factory. There were two younger brothers at home. That was before the phrase 'Little Mothers' was invented. She brought up the two small brothers and a sister as best she could. If ever a being had reason to believe that she 'had enough to do attending to her own affairs,' that being was Sara. But about her in the factory were girls who needed guidance. The girl who might have grown tall but who was stunted by the factory work at an early age knew their problems and tried to help them. Tired as the frail body was on Saturday nights, the whirling wheels echoing in her brain and making fitful her sleep, she was at Sunday-school at 10 next morning and in church at 11.

"'It would be selfish to work just for food and clothing and shelter,' she said. 'There's other work to do.'

"Gradually it became known that the girl from the mills was gifted with the power of rebuilding broken lives. A wealthy New Yorker who was paying a visit to a relative in Utica heard of the rescue work being done by the overworked little mother of the mills. He asked to be introduced to her. He invited her to go to New York to work in a 'larger vineyard.'

"She packed a tiny trunk with her few belongings. The sister and the boys were growing up. No longer was she necessary to them. The lowly brotehsr and sisters in New York habd greater need.

"She became a worker in the Mariners' Temple at Chatham Square and Madison street. While there she was assigned to work among the girls who had sunk to white slavery in Chinatown. Magistrate Barlow, admonishing a girl who stood before the bench at the Night Court for women, muttered the warning. 'The way is always the same. First Broadway, then Sixth avenue, then the Bowery and Chinatown, then the river and potter's field.' Miss Curry's wards had come to the last step before potter's field.

"It was after a day of ministration to such girls that her mission was revealed to Sara Curry.

"She was going home in Madison street, when a child's shrill cry of terror reached her ears. The clamor was taken up by older voices; they raised a long, hideous chorus. From a fire escape above her head a bundle fell at her feet. The cry ceased. A stain spread on the sidewalk.

"The little missionary stopped and lifted the dead baby in her arms. Led by part of the accumulating crowd, followed by the rest, she carried it up a narrow, shaky stairway and laid it on a faded patchwork quilt.

"'Its mother'll be about crazy when she gets back. She's a widow woman. She has one son, but he sells papers. She trusted the child not wakin' till she got back from cleanin' offices. She didn't want to put it in a barrel on the roof and leave it with a mug of milk like the woman next door does.'

"'Is there no one to take care of these children?' asked the Little Missionary.

"'Who's to do it? Dill you?" A woman with drink upon her asked the question.

"The Little Missionary looked long at the dead baby.

"'Yes, she answered slowly, 'God helping me, I will.'

"She began the next day. She told people the story of the baby that had fallen to its death because there was no one to care for it. But the way was not easy. Having abandoned her work in Chinatown for this new one, the Little Missionary was reduced to living on 50 cents a week. Eventually she acquired $11. The possession of that amount, she believed, justified her in opening her day nursery.

"She rented two rooms on Avenue C, bought a few tin cups and tin plates, had tables made from old store boxes, and considered herself ready. She did not lack patronage. Red handed mothers dragged crying children with them on their way to work. Sixteen babies filled the two tenement rooms the first day. There were Jews and Catholics and Protestants among them; Miss Curry was no sectarian. Nor is she now. She was somewhat taken aback when a health inspector came to see the nursery and told her it was no fit place to take care of children.

"'Then why not provide us with one?' she answered brightly, so impressing the inspector that he carried the suggestion to the Health Department and seconded it.

"He helped her to move to Tenth street. But shortly the Little Missionary was forced to move again because the march of progress was on and the old house must be torn down to make place for a new one. The Board of Health permitted the next removal, which was to a basement and one small upper room, because the Little Missionary's neatness was superior to the menace of unsanitary conditions. Thence to an empty store building, and finally to the old family residence which now houses the tiny worker and her adopted brood at 93 St. Mark's place, a minute's walk from the Eighth street station of the Second avenue L.

"The work is built upon the Little Missionary's literal belief in answer to prayer. On Tuesday evenings mothers' meetings are held in the rooms at which 300 to 500 women of the different faiths are addressed by rabbis or priests or Protestant clergymen, according to their own choice. Friday evening the men gather for religious discourse of their preference. She believes that all usefulness is built upon faith and the prayerful spirit. Therefore she begins by teaching her charges to pray.

"Follows the practical work. There are cooking places at 93 St. Mark's place. There are sewing classes too. A service flag bearing 180 stars tells the story of her inculcation of the spirit of patriotism.

"How has she done it? Miss Curry, if she broke her diffident silence, would say the Lord had answered her prayers for help. Odd forms the answers took. For instance a little girl of eleven arranged a bazaar for her little friends and their grownups on the lawn of her father's country home on the Hudson. Curiosity drew many to the juvenile undertaking.

"'Very nice, dear,' said puzzled matrons, trying not to smile. 'What is it for?'

"'For the Little Missionary's Day Nursery.'

"At the close of the day she collected the greenbacks and quarters and pennies and her elders counted them and learned that they had taken in $200. She carried the money to the Little Missionary.

"'Thank you' dear,' said the Little Missionary. 'We needed it badly, but I knew He would send it. He never fails me.'

"It was, despite the Divine aid in which she so profoundly, believes, a hard, hand to mouth campaign, until a philanthropist, dying, bequeathed a goodly sum to aid 'The work of the most unselfish woman I ever knew.' He had heard he say, 'Life may be very full of useful work if you understand how much pleasanter it is to give than to receive.'

"So is simple Sara Curry, the up-State factory girl of the company of Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton, of Frances Willard and Jane Addams, of Alice C. Smith and Lillian Wald, in the world's great Spinster Sisterhood of Service."

18 to 45 Set As Age Limit In Draft Bill

Eighteen to forty-five are the draft age limits fixed in the new man-power bill which was introduced in the Senate Monday by Senator Chamberlain. Secretary Baker later officially announced this Monday.

The bill gives the President discretion to call those below 21 for training purposes in this country or to call them last if it becomes necessary to use them overseas.

Announcement that the age limits are 18 to 45 caused much surprise, in view of the opposition in Congress to going below twenty-one. Provision that those below twenty-one are to be used only as a last resort is believed, however, to have considerable effect in mollifying those who believe that no man should be called into military service until he is at least of voting age.

The President's idea is to have those between 18 and 21 receive not only military but vocational training.

The ages fixed in the bill are those which have been favored right along by Senator Chamberlain. Secretary Baker, however, was thought to favor making the minimum 19 years, with the maximum somewhere between 35 and 40.

The fact that he was converted to the 18-45 limit is believed due in large part to the attitude of Provost Marshal General Crowder, who has strongly advocated making all men between 18 and 45 subpect to some sort of service.

If the bill is enacted as proposed it will empower Crowder to extend his work or fight order to a much broader degree than at present.

Crowder recently told the Senate committee that if he were given such a law he would guarantee there would be further shortage of labor in this country.

Big Speculators Paid Most of 1916 Income Tax

Investors and speculators bore one-third of the burden of the $173,000,000 personal income tax collected in 1916. Labor bore .086 per cent. of it and the balance was shouldered by incomes derived from business and services, embracing every calling from farmer to banker.

It is estimated that fully ninety per cent. of the total tax came from incomes in excess of $25,000 yearly with only 1.66 per cent. from incomes of $5,000 and less. The last named class made up more than one-third of the 437,000 returns.

Ten individuals paid taxes of 12.9 per cent. upon incomes in excess of $5,000,000, the total amount received being more than $13,000,000. The lowest rate returned was .28 per cent. contributed by those whose incomes were between $3,000 and $4,000.

Michael B. Kerwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kerwin, of Rock avenue, is among the latest local young men arriving in France. Mr. Kerwin went to Camp Dix as a selected man from Piscataway township, and went overseas after a short period of training.

Hitch on Revenue Waits on McAdoo

The scale of excess profits taxes tentatively agreed upon by the Ways and Means Committee and "war profits" tax to be applied only in cases where it would raise more revenue are now practically certain to be incorporated in the new revenue law. This was the consensus of the committee following another session between the committee and a representative of the Treasury Department. Thomas S. Adams, one of the Treasury excess profits advisers was before the committee most of the day.

The issue between the committee and the Treasury har narrowed down to this: The Treasury wants the low scale of excess profits taxes in the present law left undisturbed and a new war profits tax of 80 per cent. to alternate with it where it would raise more money in individual cases. The committee is willing to accept the war profits taxes as an alternate impost with the excess profits tax, but insists on a new scale of excess profits taxes which it already has drawn up. This new scale reaches 80 per cent. on all profits over 25 per cent. of the invested capital and is a much higher excess profits tax than the present.

The committee is still at a loss to understand why the Treasury Department is insisting on a program which the committee has figured out will lose the Government $200,000,000 a year. Secretary McAdoo on his return will be invited to explain this point to the committee.

"The plan suggested"—the Treasury plan—"would mean that nine-tenths of the corporations of the country would pay from 50 per cent. to 300 per cent. more than they did in 1917," said Chairman Kitchin (N. C.) following yesterday's meeting, "while the other one-tenth would pay nothing at all."

The companies which would escape with the small payments exacted under the present scale of excess profits and escape the proposed war profits tax altogether under the Treasury scheme are all "big fellows." The Ford Motor Company, Liggett-Myers, the American Tobacco Company, Standard Oil, Utah Copper and a number of others were named by members as companies which would not have to pay any war profits tax or only a very small one comparatively, while they would have to pay high percentages on their excess profits taxes favored by the committee. The reason why they would escape a war profits tax is that their profits since the war started, while large, are not greater than in the pre-war years.

300,000 MEN MAY BE CALLED IN AUGUST

Three hundred thousand more drafted men will ba called to the colors during August, according to present plans of the provost marshal-general.

Exemptions in New Draft Bill

Broader provisions for exemptions have been written into the new man power bill, now before Congress, so that the nation's war industrial fabric may not be upset by unduly large withdrawals of men over thirty-two years of age for military service.

Provost Marshal General Crowderr, appearing Tuesday before the Senate military committee, explained that he had deemed it advisable to substitute the words "occupations and employments" for the word "industries" used in the existing laws in the section affecting industrial exemptions.

This would make possible a more liberal interpretation of the law and prevent the induction into the army of many men performing essential work at home and yet not actually in industrial occupations.

Chairman Chamberlain announced after Tuesday's meeting that the committee had decided to ask Secretary Baker and General March to make statements. Secretary Baker is out of the city, but General March is expected to appear today. Senator Chamberlain said it was the purpose of the committee to investigate "the apparent change of front" on the part of the War Department officials.

"The committee desires to ascertain," said the Senator, "why they are in such a hurry now to have this draft bill passed when before they said there was no hurry."

When the question of extending the draft was before Congress in connection with consideration of the army appropriation bill, Secretary Baker and other War Department officials told congressional leaders that a change in draft ages was undesirable until an enlarged army program being worked out could be presented to Congress.

General Crowder told the committee that he did not know the reason for the haste but that he was merely carrying out orders to get the men for military service.

Senator Chamberlain said there had been no developments as to the suggestions made Tuesday on the floor that Congress should reconvene earlier than the recess program calls for in order to consider the bill. He indicated that no step in this action would be taken for the present.

As only a few members of the House military committee are in Washington, its chairman, Representative Dent, considers it unlikely that the bill will be considered by that committee until the House reassembles on August 19 after the recess.

Discussion of the bill by the Senate committee is expected to be brief, as most of the members are believed to be in accord with the War Department plan.

William Flatley, who has been suffering from a stomach ailment for the past six months, underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday. It is believed to have been successful and the patient at present is resting comfortably.

WELCOME NEWS FROM THE TAX ASSESSORS.

Just at a time yesterday when we needed some sort of comforting message to offset the intense humidity came the welcoming news that Plainfield's assessed valuation this year had made a gain over 1917 of $1,031,405. Not only did it act like a panacea for the ills of the hot spell but it also gave the lie to the predictions to the calamity howlers that we would fall way behind the increases of preceding times and consequently suffer much larger tax bills next fall. A resume of the valuation demonstrates that it is the factories that have been out life savers. If it were not for the immense additions that the Pond, the Saurer and Scott shops have made to their building equipment, the city's assessed valuation would stand approximately at what it was reported twelve months ago. As it is we have a grand total of $33,553,220, an aggregate to be proud of to say the least. In 1917 the total valuation of the city was $32,521,815.

Despite the very encouraging gain there is need, however, of conservatism in the expenditure of city moneys during the coming term. This will be fully realized when the moment arrives for the estimating of improvements and the allowance of salaries and other expenses. It is needless to say that everything the city uses, needs or wants has increased in cost and the prices are still mounting higher. The new scales of pay adopted for the police and fire departments are only beginners. The men are asking for more and should have more. Both departments are badly demoralized right now for the lack of men and unless relief in the form of good hard dollars is forthcoming, enough experienced patrolmen and fire fighters will not be left to do the work in an efficient manner.

These two departments are just one small portion of the existing difficulties facing the city fathers and they are pointed out as something that must be done. Mayor Calkins and his councilmen have adopted a policy of retrenchment and conservatism and it is well they should because there are rocks ahead for the financial ship. The assessment valuation increase will help a whole lot in preparing for next year's expenditures but even at that with the increased cost of everything it will be a hard matter to make both ends meet and it is more than fortunate for the small tax-payer that the factories have found it necessary to erect additions for carrying on their work. Next year there may not be any more big factory additions and that is the time when we are going to feel the pinch.

From other parts of the county comes word of valuation increases, especially where there are industrial plants. This is especially true of Elizabeth and the news carries no small degree of comfort, as a small taxpayer would have felt a tremendous burden had it not come about. Elizabeth's increase will help in lowering the county tax and it is not a remote possibility that Plainfield's taxes this year may remain the same as last if not a little bit lower. Is it any wonder that we say that we lost sight of the discomfort of yesterday's heat when the news spread about that our tax valuation had gone up $1,031,405 over last year. It was better than a mint julip or any of those other liquid concoctions that are supposed to bring us comfort when the sun blazes fiercely overhead.

A DETOUR FOR MR. FRANKLIN.

"My hat is in the ring!" shouts Mayor Franklin, of Summit, as he enters the fight for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Fifth district. We know that the Plainfield Republicans will accept the challenge thus thrown down and they will see to it that their own candidate, Ernest R. Ackerman's overshadowing merit and fitness for Congress will be made known to every single Republican voter in the district. The New Jersey Direct Primary law places the final decision upon the voters and it imposes upon them the duty of carefully investigating the records of the candidates who are to represent their party at the election. While we might have wished that he unnecessary expense and the waste of valuable time under present conditions might have been avoided, we believe that but one result will follow the enforced publicity campaign as to the merits alone of the two candidates and that Mr. Ackerman will be so far in the lead that Summit will be able to retain for a while longer the service of its good Mayor. Upon the political signboard is posted this notice: "The road from Summit to Washington will be closed until further notice, though the latter place may be reached by a detour via Trenton."

COLONIA OFFERS AN OPPORTUNITY.

Public interest centers very keenly about the rehabilitation hospitals being established throughout the country by the Government. There are several of them. They will become important in the last degree as institutions in which the gallant men who have faced what they must in the war and have risked life and limb will be restored as far toward a normal condition as possible when they become victims of gasing, of shell shock and of serious wounds.

They will also be taught such useful trades and occupations as they are adapted to undertake. They will be fitted as far as possible for productive tasks. They will be relieved from becoming a burden to themselves and to their country. They will be given the chance to go on living a serviceable life, made happy by the consciousness that they have overcome the great handicap put upon them by their war experience.

The hospitals should become the object of attention of all those who reside in the sections in which they are located. The one at Colonia, for instance, only six miles from Plainfield, should be considered as belonging to New Jersey and more particularly this section of New Jersey. Organized effort should be had, and is being had, to render all the help possible to make it as effective as possible.

The work that is done, of course, should be done by sanction of the Federal authorities and in co-operation with the hospital authorities. It should be practical work. The inmates of Colonia should not be made the objects of maudlin sentiment that does nothing to aid in their reconstruction. They should be helped in a strong, practical virile way to regain a place of usefulness in this world. The Government has spared no expense in making the Colonia institution one of the most complete in the country but it needs more than money or mechanics' labor to do the right thing by the brave lads who will be its patients. It calls for the right hand of fellowship from every man and woman in the country and especially from those within the shadow of the great colony of buildings. Plainfielders are within a stone's throw of this great humanizing task and they can be of wonderful help in the great task that is ahead. Why not make the Colonia hospital an objective point, you zealous patriots who decry sentimentalism and show by your works that you mean every word you say when you assert that you want to do your share in the mighty job although you cannot take a position in the front line trench? It is your opportunity and the soldiers restored to a useful place in the world will be your reward.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When they did not become angry if you called them "Maggie" or "Lizzie?"

When no one became horrified if you ignored a fork and tackled a big piece of home-made pie by grabbing it in your hands?

When tanneries were a good deal more common along Greenbrook than raisins in a boarding-house plum pudding?

When "summer boarders" were looked upon as peculiar creatures with more money, fads, foibles and fancies than common sense?

When most young Americans firmly believed that old England was chafing to avenge her rebuffs of 1776 and 1812, and all that held her back was that she was "too gol durned scared to try it on?"

When father used to take us for a ride on the "cars" and the term "train" was not yet in general use?

When "Carptown" was quite a center of population in the vicinity of Sebring's Mills, having a grocery store and many hat and clothing making factoryettes, located in private houses?

When some of the more palatial railroad coaches on many roads had gay interior decorations of wallpaper?

THE AWFUL CONSEQUENCES OF AN OVERDOSE OF WARTS.

If you should be prone to criticize our efforts this week remember that we felt the heat just as much as you did.

The only difference between the varying reports of how high the thermometer went and the correspondents' figures of the number of Germans captured is that you have the satisfaction of knowing that it was more than ordinarily warm.

There's two good things about this heat. It will put us in shape for the hot political fight next month and next winter when we crowd around the Fuel Commissioner's office for an order card we can tell our jostling friends about the time it was a 104 last August.

The Courier-News tells of an North Plainfield soldier who wrote his wife a thirty-page letter. That wasn't a letter that was a book. Nevertheless, it's too bad that more of our married men in service haven't acquired the book writing habit.

If the councilmen keep on resigning, it won't be long before the city's legislative body becomes a close corporation, limiting the membership and electing only those who promise to be good before they are allowed within the inner circle.

The fatal drawback to a five-pay day month is that within seventeen minutes after you get the first installment you are already disillusioned by the painful reflection that it must be applied on the demands of the preceding week.

By the way, did you notice that the City Hall building committee in securing bids for the painting contract had "upset" prices quoted by the contractors? So many prices on City Hall work got so badly upset, one would think the committee would have a terrible dread of paving the way for any more.

Now we are asked to go to a two-pound sugar ration a month. It will be done. We can do without long sweetening without trouble. Even in the old days we never took sugar in our'n.

Remember, girls, they are asking for student nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital to take the places of those who'll be needed for the soldier lads. If temperamentally fitted, apply now.

Wonder who the reporter on the Courier-News staff is who insists on giving the Plainfield people so much mis-information. He broke loose several times during the past week, the most notable instance being his declaration that the George A. Fuller Company, of New York, which has secured the contract for the Ford Patrol Boat factory at Kearny was the same concern which engineered the Plainfield Joint Trunk Sewer. The George A. Fuller Company is one of the largest structural steel concerns in the country and never built a sewer line during its existence. The Plainfield sewer was designed and supervised by George W. Fuller, an expert on sewage matters who steers clear of sky-scraper contracts. A little thing like that, however, does not weigh heavily on the Courier-News scribe but haven't helped the poor readers who depend upon his wanderings. This same pencil pusher evidently swung another one across recently. He rapped out a hot weather story on a certain official's probable chances for re-election and how a petition in his behalf had met with a total of 700 signatures. As a matter of fact the exact number of names on the petition just at the time the Courer-News article appeared was 120. Figure it out for yourself whether the reporter with the elaborate imagination is kidding you along or just giving himself a good time.

A friend of ours who has failed to keep pace with the march of progress, wants to know just what this "Near Beer" stuff is. All we can say is that it looks like regular beer and tastes like regular beer but it ain't got the authority.

The awful heat caused heavy casualties among the horses hauling local business rigs and thereby hangs the tale. One of these prostrations occurred at Fifth street and Park avenue in the worst part of Wednesday's "torridity," laying low a noble animal that had been hitched to a milk wagon. A veterinary was summoned and he went about the work of resuscitation by hitching a hose to a hydrant and pouring cold water on the head of the fallen horse, much to the delight of a big crowd of small-fry population. This operation lasted for fully an hour and was still going on when a perspiring citizen, sticking close to the buildings for every possible inch of shade, remarked: "It's not a question of how long before that horse recovers so much as it is as to how long the veterinary is going to stick it out without suffering a sun stroke." It surely was an honest observation but the best part of it all is, the good Samaritan went on playing his hose obvious to the criticism and had the satisfaction of putting the horse back on its feet without making himself a subject for the hospital. Somehow or other it reminds us of that wonderful spirit pervading the breast of every American man and woman in the great effort of concentration to put down forever the horror-makers of Europe. They are sacrificing every personal interest to get the fallen horse of humanity to its feet and the day will come when it is done.

Governor Edge Gives Platform

"Thick - skinned conservatism should be guarded against no less than wilde-eyed Bolshevism. Personal or party prejudices should be subordinated to public weal; private theories or pride of authorship, to practical facts and conditions."

The foregoing is an excerpt from the platform of Governor Edge, which was announced this week, in his candidacy for United States Senator. One of the most important declarations of the Executive is that he believes a man should go to the United States Senate with an open mind because the critical periods of war and reconstruction are times of great transition, requiring individual initiative. The Governor, in announcing his platform, asks the public to give it frank consideration.

Among the things the Governor declares for are the following: Unity in war making; development of our new merchant marine; establishment of a National budget system; plans for the future welfare of the Nation's defenders; universal military training; developments of ports, waterways and transportation; proper system of taxation to meet the tremendous expenses of these critical times; the granting of woman suffrage; a Federal road system; immediate Americanizing of foreigners upon their arrival in the United States.

In a personal word at the conclusion of the planks in his platform, the Executive declares that there are eminent precedents for a Governor's candidacy for United States Senator, but he prefers to justify the situation by an appeal to common sense and the American sense of fairness rather than by depending upon precedents.

After stating that there can be no criticism of personal ambitions to serve New Jersey and the Nation in the United States Senate, the Executive declares:

"A Governor takes no unfair advantage over any other candidates—can take no advantage at all unless his administration of public affairs as Governor has been successful and satisfactory. Otherwise, the fact of his Governorship would be a plitical liability rather than an asset. He is already a public servant, and as such must stand or fall on his record, not on promises. I am content to abide by the judgment of the electorate respecting the merit of such criticism."

The Governor's remark about going to the Senate with an open mind has particular reference to the question of public ownership. On this question he says:

"I realize that the views I have taken respecting all of the subjects treated in the platform will not, of course, meet with the approval of every citizen. It would be presumptuous to expect such unanimity of opinion in this day when the problems are of such perplexing character. Upon some subjects I have reached no final conclusion, for the reason that I realize the necessity of maintaining an open mind in order that the period of wonderful experience through which we are passing may be used as a guide. For any man to stand up today and arbitrarily decide the future of such problems—for instance, as Government Railroad ownership, or permanent taxation policies—is to prove that he is utterly incompetent to assume the responsibilities of business government in reconstruction times. Treatment given such matters under stress of war necessity might be wholly impractical in times of peace and probably would be.

"I feel justified," continued the Executive, "in asking the public to compare this platform and its treatment of vital National problems with the destructive appeal to prejudice and empty resort to demagoguery or personal criticism on the part of those who imagine the people will be patient with an effort to confuse State utility regulations, important as they are locally, with the far-reaching problems now before the Nation, when hundreds of thousands of our boys are in mortal combat and governments are trembling in the balance."

Accompanying the announcement of the Governor's candidacy was a pamphlet, entitled "Governor Edge's Record of Promises and Performances," which reviews his platform for Governor and his work in endeavoring to carry it out. Among the promises fulfilled are enumerated the following:

Improved roads; home rule; business-like government; tax equalization; industrial and economic reforms; institutional reform; election law reform; civil service reform, and capitalization of natural resources.

Standard Aeroplane Increases Capital

Announcement was made in financial circles in New York this week that the capital stock of the Standard Aircraft Company, of this city and Elizabth, has been increased from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000, divided into $7,000,000 preferred stock and $3,000,000 common stock, both stocks of the par value of $100. The company announces it has reserved $1,000,000 for the company's treasury, which will not be issued at this time.

The increase in capitalization, it was stated at the company's New York office in the Woolworth Building, is made necessary because of the increase in business. Although the company is but two years old, it already occupies a prominent place in the aircraft industry of the United States.

Staggering Totals In War Purchases

Purchases of wearing apparel and other supplies for American troops in training in this country and in France, reports on which were made public by the War Department, give an indication of the war program of the United States.

Since April 1, 1917, or since the United States entered the war, 55,958,000 pairs of woollen socks have been purchased. During the same period other purchases include 10,507,000 pairsr of woollen breeches, 8,069,000 woollen coats and 5,377,000 overcoats.

Spiral puttees to the number of 4,373,000 have been purchased. During the week ending July 20, overseas caps designed to replace the felt service hat to the number of 191,000 were made and delivered.

Motor trucks shipped overseas up to July 1, numbered 17,988. In addition 3,420 passenger cars have been shipped at that time and 9,860 motor ambulances purchased.

A total of 366,392 horses and mules were purchased up to July 13, the War Department reports show. Of this number 63,538 were obtained in France.

"Pershing's Crusaders" Feature of Bill at Reopening of Plainfield Theatre for Fourteenth Season

Popular Play-house Resumes Activities Next Thursday Night With Splendid Prospects For a Brilliant year—William Collier to Be the Initial Attraction of a Long List of Legitimate Bookings, Interspersing Vaudeville and Pictures.

After a three weeks' "vacation" period during which it received a thorough renovation, painting and minor improving, the Plainfield Theatre will open for its fourteenth season next Thursday night, August 15.

For this auspicious occasion, Manager Shannon has arranged to present the first of the United States Government's war films, "Pershing's Crusaders." It will be the feature attraction of a program of high class pictures to be maintained for three days. On Monday, August 19, the regular policy of "classy" vaudeville and pictudes will be introduced to remain during the entire season, except on special occasions when legitimate attractions are presented.

While the number of musical comedy and dramatic productions on the road will not be very numerous this year, Manager Shannon has secured a big share of what are to be had. As in the past two seasons, the pick of the burlesque wheels will be offered each Tuesday night. The first of these is announced for Tuesday night, August 20, when the Bon Tons, with Lester Allen as the bright particular star, will offer their newest edition of musical comedy for approval. After that, in regular succession on Tuesdays will come the 1917-18 productions of all the burlesque companies that have been delighting Plainfield audiences.

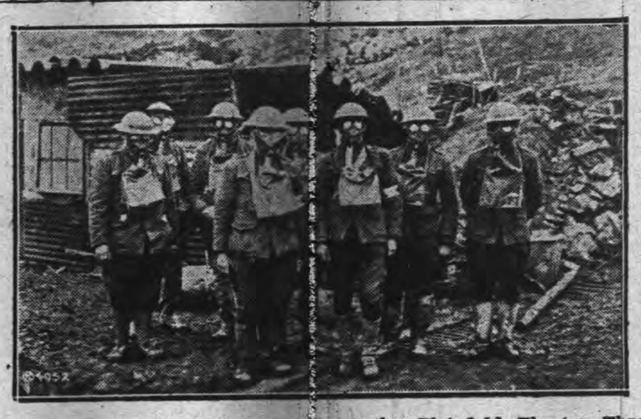
One of the earliest attractions of the legitimate field will be Willie Collier in his latest farce comedy production, "Nothing But Lies," on Saturday afternoon and night August 24. Mr. Collier is highly popular in this city as he has been an attraction at the Second street playhouse almost annually since the opening in 1905. His big success, "Caught In the Rain," had its initial performance at the Plainfield and he also presented them "The Dictator," and many other memorable pieces.

"Nothing But Lies" is from the pen of Aaron Hoffman, a well known author and dramatist. It affords Mr. Collier unusual opportunities for his fun-making talents and is said to be one continuous succession of laughs. Ten days after the show appears in Plainfield it will take possession of the Long Acre Theatre in New York for a long run. Supporting Mr. Collier are Olive Windham, Raple Holmes, Riley Hatch, Frank Monroe, Grant Stewart, Florence Enright, Saxon Kling, Charlotte aCrter and Robert Strange.

Klaw & Erlanger, New York's biggest theatrical firm, will send all of its attractions to Plainfield and those from William A. Brady's office will also be presented during the winter.

Although war extremes have hit the theatrical field even harder than some other business ventures, Manager Shannon is optimistic over the outlook for the present season. He is making every effort to give his patrons the best there is to be had without boosting prices "sky high" as has been done in other cities. More than 1,500 young men from Plainfield and North Plainfield have been taken away from the community by the call of the Government but even though this makes a big gap in theatrical patronage, Manager Shannon believes that by offering good wholesale vaudeville, feature pictures and regular productions in alternating periods that popular prices, that standard that has made the Plainfield Theatre so successful, can be maintained.

The house staff for the coming season will be the same as last year with but one exception. This is Stage Manager William Vroom, who resigned recently in order to accept a position in the shipyards at Port Newark. His successor has not yet been named. Dave Rogers will again be assistant manager and treasurer, a fact which bespeaks uniform courtesy and cordial treatment for all patrons. Mrs. Florence Smith will be the chief usher and Harry Wetton will again have supervision of the orchestra. Mr. Wetton has secured several new players and promises numerous musical treats during the season.



Secene from "Pershing's Crusaders," at the Plainfield Theatre Three Days, Commencing Thursday, August 15th.

"Pershing's Crusaders," wich is to feature the opening bill next Thursday night, is the first of the American war films ordered by Chairman George Creel, of the publicity committee appointed by President Wilson, and produced under the personal direction of Charles S. Hart. There are eight reels of this film, which graphically shows how every able-bodied American is helping to win the war. These pictures, which show the grim earnestness of the United States Government in its war aims and its determination to stamp out Kaiserism, were taken by U. S. Signal Corps and Navy Photographers and cameramen of the French General Staff at home and abroad. In addition to this, "Pershing's Crusaders" will show interesting scenes photographed by the cameramen of the Allies. Each week, as important events happen over there, they will be shown as a sort of curtain-raiser to the big feature.

"Pershing's Crusaders" will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre for three days, In order that everyone may see and thus realize the results of American effort in this war it has been decided to show this film at popular wartime prices within the reach of all three time daily.

In this comprehensive picture one will see Uncle Sam's soldiers in the making; the work at the cantonments; the activities of the great war charities, the Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Masons and Y. W. C. A.; how the army is fed and clothed; the making of arms and ammunition; farmers in the fields doing their part and workingmen in factories, each and all giving his best effort for his country; the building of ships on a scale such as the world has never seen; the navy in action; American aviators in the air somewhere in France and the boys in khaki with General Pershing on the Western front.

It is a revelation of a nation aroused in all its might. When you see what your government is doing to insure your freedom, you will put your shoulder to the wheel with new vigor. Here is the truth about the war. Here is Uncle Sam's answer to the lies of the Hun.

Mayor Ross Enters Congressional Race

Otto Ross, the present mayor of Madison, yesterday announced his intention of entering the congressional race as Democratic candidate for the short and long terms by filing his petition with the secretary of State. It caused no great surprise as Mr. Ross has a big following in the Fifth district, which has been urging him to try for the honor of being successor to the late John H. Capstick. The candidate in his petition names Frank Water. of Madison, as his campaign manager, and the Madison Trust Company as depository of campaign funds.

In entering the race, Mr. Ross issued the following statement:

"Being ambitious to represent the Fifth Congressional district in the House of Representatives, I have filed my petition for the Democratic nomination for Congressman for the full term beginning March 4th, 1919, ask the support of all the voters in Morris and Union counties who are qualified to vote in the Democratic box at the Primary Election September twenty-fourth next.

"I advance my candidacy in the belief that I have a sufficient understanding of the responsibilities which rest upon a member of Congress to justify my entering the race, and in the event of my nomination and election, I pledge my uttermost endeavors in the discharge of the duties which will revolve upon me.

"There has never been a time in our history when the Congress of the country has had more important duties to perform than at present, nor a time when the future sos urely held the certainty of additional great duties demanding the maximum of patriotic effort by Congressman, and consequently never a time when the selection of a representative in Congress was of greater moment.

"The results of the Congressional elections throughout this country will be eagerly awaited by the nations allied with us in the great war in which we are engaged, because Democratic success will mean the continuance, without delay or dispute, of the policies and aims to which the allied world is adjusted, while Republican success will carry a threat of discordance between the legislative and executive branches of the government which will remove the certainty of purpose and action so essential at this time. Furthermore, the cataclysmic struggle which has engulfed the whole world has brought about problems relating to our economic and social life of vital importance to our future and the principles to be applied in the solution of these problems are dependent upon whether the majority of Congress will or will not be favorable to a continuation of the enlightened policies, founded wholly on the interests of the great mass of the people which have marked the administrations of Woodrow Wilson.

"I believe myself fully conscious of our obligation to the young manhood of our land whom we have called to the defense of our liberties and who thousands of miles from home are fighting our fight under conditions calling for the acme of heroic sacrifice. and I will support all legislation necessary to protect them and their interests, and those at home dependent upon them, and also all legislation demanded by an unremitting prosecution of the war to the end that no sacrifice already made will have been in vain and that the great principles of right and justice which have been put into words by President Wilson, and which are now the creed of this country and its allies shall triumph. Also in this connection I wish to say thta unless the final agreement among the nations at the end of the war is a certain guarantee of lasting peace, and include a practical arrangement whereby World Peace can be enforced, I consider that Congress must, of necessity, take such action as will insure this country being ready at all times to defend its liberties if they are threatened.

"As well as the duty to our fighting men, and the non-combatant aids assisting them in the field, the depot and the hospital, there is an obligatin upon Congress to the great army marshalled at home behind the armed forces. Changing conditions requires a new spirit in legislation, with a sure recognition of the lesson we have learned during the last year of the dependence every class of our people must place upon every other class in time of national crisis, and of prime importance. In my judgment, to the interest of the whole people, for the immediate present and for the future. is such reasonable control of transportation, telephone, telegraph and the large aggregations of capital employed in the industries as will protect the public from exploitation in ordinary, as well as extraordinary times, and guarantee the prompt mobilization of the country's resources in time of need. I believe in this connection in legislation such as is exemplified by the Federal Reserve Act controling finances, which has not worked an iota of injustice to any interests, but without which there would have been fearful disorganization in all business during the past two years.

"If entrusted with the duty of representing the citizens of the Fifth district, I pledge my best efforts toward a practical and common sense exercise of the powers granted me, and having the desire to perform my duties with exact justice under all circumstances, I ask your support."

Otto Ross, present Mayor of Madison, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congressman in the Fifth Congressional district, has the distinction of being the only mayoralty candidate ever elected on a straight Democratic ticket in the twenty-five years' existence of Madison Borough. As a matter of fact, he is now serving his second term as Mayor, having been re-elected at the last general election by a large majority over William F. Redmond, Republican county chairman for Morris county, who had been variously councilman and Mayor of Madison and had never been defeated for office in the borough and who was placed in nomination in the expectation that Madison could thus be brought back into the Republican fold.

Mayor Ross is Morris county's candidate for the full Congressional term; as ex-State Senator Lyons, of Morristown, who had some time ago announced his candidacy, has withdrawn in his favor. Reports from all over Morris are that Mr. Ross has the support of the Democratic leaders, large and small, which is not surprising as Morris county is entitled to the nomination this time and the Morris Democrats believe that they have in Ross a candidate who will win on Election Day.

Mayor Ross, who is unmarried, lives with his widowed mother and has been a resident of Madison for the past eighteen years. He was born in Galveston, Texas, on January 7, 1874, but has lived in the north since boyhood. He has been a lifelong Democrat and has been a consistent supporter of President Wilson. He comes naturally by an interest in public affairs as many of his family have filled important State and National positions and his near relative, Frank L. Polk, is now counsellor for the State Department at Washington and in Secretary Lansing's absences Acting Secretary of State.

Mr. Ross has been connected in business for a quarter of a century with the banking firm of R. T. Wilson & Company, of New York, and their various interests.

Fisheries Board Resents Charges

The State Board of Fisheries, through its president, C. Asa Francis, of Monmouth county, has issued a statement at Trenton taking exception to the action of the State House Commission, through Comptroller Bugbee, in holding up its appropriation on the ground that the board has failed to accomplish the things which the Governor hoped for in its creation.

"The commission takes decided exception to any suggestion that the work of the commission has been a failure," said the statement. "We know, from being constantly in touch with the situation, that the cases have been few indeed where market men have charged more than a fair profit for the various kinds of food fish over the price that the pound fishermen have been receiving during the entire season with the cost of transportation, packages, etc., added to the original cost on the coast. If it can, through its supervision, prevent any and all extraordinary profiteering, which has not to our knowledge taken place, we have accomplished in some degree what was anticipated in accordance with the law under which we are acting."

Mr. Francis declared that so far as reducing the price of fish, the catches have been so small this year that nothing could be done in this direction. If fish should strike on the coast later on and be caught by the pound fishermen in large quantities, and conditions arise that flagrant profiteering by retail dealers should be discovered, the board would take the necessary steps to go into the fish business.

The resignation of Senator Lewis T. Stevens, of Cape May county, was accepted and it was announced that a new man would soon be chosen at a moderate compensation. His duty will be to keep in touch with fish dealers in the most populated centers of the State and the source of supply along the coast of New Jersey, and give to the public the information as to prices, both wholesale and retail.

Telegraph Dispate Put Up to Burleson

Postmaster General Burleson and other government officials this week had under consideration telegrams received from St. Louis, Atlanta and other cities in which the issue between the telegraphers' union and the Western Union Telegraph Company, recently taken under government control, was put squarely up to the government.

In St. Louis, according to R. F. Wise, president of the St. Louis council of the union, twenty more telegraphers, members of the union, were discharged when they appeared for work wearing their union buttons. The total discharged thus far is thirty-seven. The policy of the Western Union, Mr. Wise and other union leaders assert, has been unchanged since government control went into effect. President Carlton of the system is still determined, they say, to attack unionism whenever it appears.

In Atlanta, the local council of the union adopted resolutions urging its president to call a strike against the Western Union unless union men were reinstated before Tuesday. In other centers, the union telegraphers have not spoken of strike action, but have called upon Mr. Burleson and other officials for a speedy ruling. The telegraphers hold they are entitled to freedom from discrimination, now that the system is in government hands.

More Efficient Shipping Sought By U. S. Heads

The problem of ships, which is still the most vital factor in winning the war, is the subject of highly important conferences in London and Paris right now. It is this question more than any other which has taken Food Administerator Herbert C. Hoover and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt to Europe to join Assistant Secretary of War Edward R. Stettinius.

Mr. Stettinius has direct charge of the movement of troops to Europe. Mr. Roosevelt has to do with the convoying of these ships, while Mr. Hoover's job is the feeding of not only the American army but all of the Allied peoples of Europe. In the conferences of the three American officials with the British and French authorities it is hoped so to co-ordinate the various activities and distribute the food supply as to increase greatly the efficiency of the ships already in service.

Take the food situation as an example of the manner in which the problems are being approached. Before the war the United States supplied something like ten per cent. of the deficit in foodstuffs of England. France and Italy. That is, of the need of these countries, over and above their own production, the United States supplied one-tenth. As a result of the war the dependence of these countries on the United States has rapidly increased until in the last year, in addition to feeding our own soldiers in Europe, we have furnished half of the food which our European Allies have imported.

In the year to come, if Mr. Hoover's hopes are realized, the United States and Canada will supply eighty per cent. of all the foodstuffs needed in England, France and Italy, over and above their own production.

At first thought, to increase the percentage of food supplies from America would seem to increase rather than decrease the transportation burden, but exactly the reverse is the case. Heretofore Great Britain, France and Italy have drawn large quantities of food from South America, India, Australia, points far more distant than North America. $t is the necessity of drawing on these distant countries that Mr. Hoover is trying to avoid and if he succeeds the actual carrying capacity of the Allied merchant fleet will be vastly increased.

The United States will have more wheat to supply this year than last, because of a largely increased crop. It is also expected that the meat supply will be increased, but it is rather on adjustment of the food supply than increased quantity that Mr. Hoover is banking. He hopes that by more efficient utilization and distribution of the food products raised in Europe the Allied armies and peoples will be better fed in the coming year than in the year past, with a great reduction in food shipments from distant points and less arduous food conservation by the American people at home.

Tremendous strides have already been made in speeding up shipping and co-ordinating the food and war supplies of the Allied nations, but American officials believe there is still room for greater improvement in this direction.

On the working out of these problems directly depends the question as to how many American troops can be brought into the fighting in France. It is not only a matter of moving the soldiers themselves, but they must be fed and supplied with war materials.

Sir oseph Maclay, the British Controller of Shipping, is credited with the statement that for every 1,000 American soldiers in France it is necessary to ship 5,000 tons of material in a year. Thus the maintenance of the army of 1,300,000 men already abroad will require the movement of 6,500,000 tons of freight across the Atlantic in the next twelve months. An army of 2,000,000 men, which it is estimated will be in France by October 1, will require the movement of 100,000,000 tons of freight in the year thereafter.

It would require 1,000 crossings of a 10,000-ton carrier to transport this American arme tonnage alony. Assuming eight trips in a year, which is far more than the average cargo carrier has accomplished in the last twelve months, 1,250,000 tons of shipping will be required to move the supplies for an American army of 2,000,000 men.

These ships must be supplied in addition to those required for the transportation of the soldiers themselves and the food products for the civilian populations of our Allies. All of the shipping, both transport of men and supplies, must move in the face of the enemy submarines and this means that there must be hundreds of other ships employed in convoying and in searching out the undersea pests.

War Board Orders Newspapers to "C[illegible]" Amount of Rea[illegible]

An order designed to reduce the size of newspapers, through control of paper distribution to publishers, was issued late Tuesday by the War Industries Board, effective for daily newspapers August 12 and for Sunday editions September 1.

The War Industries Board has no direct power to control the size of newspapers, but an indirect power is to be applied by the direction that paper mills exact from newspaper publishers pledges that the publishers will comply with the regulations, while the paper mills are to be controlled through regulation of their supplies of fuel. The mills which follow the order will be rated as essential industries and be placed in the fourth class of coal priority.

As approved by Chairman Baruch, the reductions are for cuts in the reading matter of daily and Sunday editions, but no reduction of advertising matter is ordered. The reductions agree in the main with the recommendations of the committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. The pledges which the newspapers will be asked to sign are now being printed. They are to be signed in duplicate, with one copy for the War Industies Board and the other for the paper mill by which the newspaper is supplied.

The required cuts in reading matter range from fifteen per cent. for dailies, and from twenty per cent. for Sundays, upward.

The statement issued says:

"The war committee of newspaper publishers believes that this curtailment should be accomplished by the elimination of all wasteful practices and by the reduction of size of all newspapers, and to this end have made the following recommendations to the pulp and paper section of the War Industries Board. If by October 1 the above reductions are not accomplished additional curtailment will be puto into effect at that time."

These recommendations have been accepted by the pulp and paper section of the War Industries Board as controlling the weekday and Sunday newspapers:

One—Discontinue the acceptance of the return of unsold copies. Exceptions: Employes of newspapers who are employed directly at the home office by a newspaper as wholesale distributers to newsboys, news agents and news stands may return unsold copies, provided such unsold copies have not been in the possession of retail dealers, news stands or news boys. Such employes cannot take back, under any consideration, papers which already have been distributed for sale.

Two—Discontinue sending paper after date of expiration of subscription unless the subscription is renewed and paid for. (This ruling to be effective October 1. 1918.)

Three—Discontinue the use of all samples of free promotion copies.

Four—Discontinue giving copies to anybody except for office working copies or where required by state law in the case of official advertising.

Exceptions—Copies may be given free to employes of newspapers if such is the present practice of the office.

Copies may be sent free to former employes who are in the war service, and copies may be sent free to camp libraries of institutions recognized by the government such as the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., etc. Copies should not be sent to individual soldiers unless formerly employed by the newspaper.

Copies may be sent to the Library of Congress and to State and other public libraries, which will agree to bind or otherwise permanently preserve the files of the paper; also to government departmental libraries.

Copies may be given free in return for actual services rendered.

Copies may be sent free to clipping bureaus which render an equivalent service to the newspapers.

Copies for service purposes only may be sent free to newspaper correspondents and press bureaus.

Five—Discontinue giving free copies to advertisers except not more than one copy each for checking purposes.

Exceptions: Any advertiser who customarily places advertisements with the newspaper in at least four issues each week and advertising agencies from whom the publisher receives advertising regularly may be put on the regular mailing list to facilitate handling in the mailing room.

Copies must not be sent as a means of advertising the newspaper itself to advertising agencies from whom the publisher does not regularly receive business.

Six—Discontinue selling advertising with a guaranty of circulation requiring a debate if circulation falls below guaranteed amount.

Seven—Discontinue the arbitrary forcing of copies on newsdealers (i. e., compelling them to buy more copies than they can legitimately sell in order to hold certain territory.)

Eight—Discontinue the buying back of papers at either wholesale or retail selling price from dealers or agents in order to secure preferential representation.

Nine—Discontinue the payment of salaries or commissions to agents, dealers or newsboys for the purpose of securing the equivalent of return privileges.

Ten—Discontinue all cash discounts or bonuses to wholesalers or retailers.

Eleven—Discontinue all free exchanges.

Reading matter consists of all matter printed except paid advertisements and the following schedules are based upon a standard column of 300 agate lines.

The following curtailments are based on the average amount of reading matter published during the six months period, January 1 to June 30, 1918.

Week day editions, effective August 12, 1918:

Reduce reading matter up to fifty columns, 5 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over fifty columns and not over seventy columns, 15 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over seventy and not over ninety columns, 30 per cent.

Reduce on all additional space over ninety columnc, 50 per cent.

Sunday edition, effective September -1, 1918:

Reduce reading matter up to 150 columns, 10 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over 150 columns and up to 200 columns, 20 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over 200 columns and up to 250 columns, 30 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over 250 columns and up to 300 columns, 40 per cent.

Reduce on additional space over 300 columns and up to 350 columns, 50 per cent.

Reduce on all additional space over 350 columns, 60 per cent.

Because of the absolute necessity of curtailing the use of paper, the paper and pulp section of the War Industries Board has ruled that durin gthe war no new newspaper shall be established.

Plainfield's Part In Fare Rate Fight

In the following message, sent to the Common Council, Monday night, Mayor Leighton Calkins explained Plainfield's part in the recent fight against the Public Service trolley fare increase application:

To the Honorable the Members of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

I beg to advise that as a member of the Executive Committee of the New Jersey State League of Municipalities, I was in attendance at a recent meeting at which was officially reported the decision of the Public Utility Commission in the matter of the application of the Public Service Railway Company for increased rates. With the exception of an allowance of 1c on initial transfers, the application of the Public Service Railway Company was denied by the Commission on the ground that it had failed to show that it would be unable to operate successfully without such increase in rates of fare. The application was contested by the State League of Municipalities solely for the pupose of forcing the Company to prove its case before the Public Utility Commission, and not for the purpose of objecting to any increase in rates which the hearing might show to be fair and reasonable. The result justifies the participation of the various municipalities served by the Public Service Railway Company in the expense of retaining special counsel, Public Utility experts, engineers and certified public accountants to represent the League at the hearings before the Commission.

I have received a formal report from the executive secretary of the League advising that the total expense to the League for such services was 28,797.68, which sixty-six member municipalities of the League, in which the Public Service Railway operates agreed to pay in proportion to population. Plainfield's share, as I advised you on April 1st, was $500. In other words, the city through membership in the League has been able to employ able counsel and experts and has won an important case affecting the people generally at the cost of 2c per capita of population.

LEIGHTON CALKINS,
Mayor.

Plainfield, N. J., Aug. 5, 1918.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry DeMeza and family, of Westervelt avenue, have been sojourning at Ocean Grove.

Country Sets a New Record For Building Ships

With the launching of 123 vessels, totaling 631,944 deadweight tons, and the delivery of forty-one others of 235,025 deadweight tons, new world ship building records were established in July by American ship yards, the Shipping Board this week announced. The July launchings alone were greater than those of any single year in the past.

In addition to the forty-one completed ships, the American merchant marine was further increased by the delivery of two steel vessels of 15,855 tons by Japanese yards, in accordance with the recent agreement.

Thirty-six of the completed vessels were of steel with a deadweight tonnage of 217,025, and the other five were of wood, their deadweight tonnage being 18,000.

The launching included sixty-seven steel vessels of 433,244 deadweight tons, fifty-three wood ships of 187,700 deadweight tons, and three composite ships of 11,000 tons.

The total tonnage launched this year is 1,719,536, being divided by months as follows: January, 88,507; February, 123,625; March, 172,611; April, 160,286; May, 259,241; June, 283,322; July, 631,944.

Since August, 1917, when the present Shipping Board began operations, to August 1, last, thirty-seven steel contract vessels of 245,700 deadweight tons, and 210 requisitioned vessels of 1,326,156 deadweight tons have been completed and placed in service. Almost half of this tonnage was delivered during the last three months.

Launchings the last four days in July included six contract and six requisitioned steel steamships of an aggregate tonnage of 66,130 and four wood ships of 14,000 tons.

SERGEANT "BILL" MAHONEY ARRIVES IN FRANCE.

Sergeant William Mahoney, of Liberty street, arrived in France this week as a member of the Heavy Field Artillery. He left Plainfield last May, and after a few days' stay at Fort Slocum was assigned to Camp Jackson, Columbia, South Carolina. He was there only about a month when his division was ordered north and then sent overseas.

Previous to entering the service, Sergeant Mahoney was employed at the Saurer plant on West Front street. His shop mates and friends all predicted that he would "make good" and his early promotion to the rank of sergeant bore out this prediction.

Former Mayor Saunders Expresses Wish That Objecting Official Was Drafted

Opposition of David S. B. Chew, of Camden, to the application of the Emergency Fleet Corporation for a grant of lands by the Department of Commerce and Navigation, Tuesday afternoon, caused former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, of the board to criticize Mr. Chew for his attitude. He intimated that Mr. Chew was unpatriotic, following this up with a query as to whether he was an American citizen.

"Are you more than forty-five years old?" Mr. Chew was asked by Commissioner Saunders. When Mr. Chew said he was fifty-three years old, Mr. Saunders retorted "I wish you were drafted, for it is the general impression that you are an obstructionist whenever the government makes a move looking toward the prosecution of the war."

Mr. Chew denied the charges and in addition to stating that he was an American citizen, said he had five relatives engaged in military service and that his own application was on file in Washington since June of last year. He further argued that Mr. Saunders had been misinformed and requested that the commissioner furnish him a list of names and addresses of the persons making the accusations. Mr. Saunders declined to comply with the request. He is chairman of the Naval Consulting Board at Washington.

The application of the Emergency Fleet Corporation was for a grant of lands under water on Newton Creek in Camden county, to be occupied by the right of way for the electric railway extension between Camden and Gloucester. Mr. Chew protested against conveying any rights to the corporation as agent for the owners of the plant. His protest, Mr. Chew declared, was based upon the provisions of the law requiring that six months' notice be given to the upland owner before any grant is made, the ide abeing that the upland owner be given preference.

Counsel for the corporation informed the board that the government authorities had posted notices of its intention to commandeer the property in question, but this was denied by Mr. Chew. Until such notice was filed with the board, President J. Spencer Smith informed Mr. Chew that no action would be taken respecting the application of the corporation.

Behind closed doors the board took up with Controller Bugbee the controversy involving the two salaries paid to B. F. Cresson as consulting engineer of the Commerce and Navigation Department and in a like capacity for the New York and New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission. His salary in the former is $4,500 a year and in the latter $15,000, this amount being divided equally between New York and New Jersey. Both salaries have been held up by Controller Bugbee for some time, pending a final disposition of the case.

When the conference was over, Contrfoller Bugbee told a correspondent that the board had decided to take Mr. Cresson's name from the pay roll of the commerce department. It was, however, agreed that beginning July 1 he should be employed in the capacity as expert engineer and hereafter be compelled to submit bids for the amount of services rendered, together with the details of the work performed.

Payment of the two salaries was opposed by the State House Commission upon the ground that it was illegal. In an opinion given to the commission by the attorney general it was held there was nothing incompatible in the two positions and nothing to prevent Mr. Cresson from drawing the two salaries. Notwithstanding this conclusion by the State's legal department, Controller Bugbee was disinclined to gree with the ruling and insisted upon a "show down."

No Primary Vote For Soldiers in Foreign Service

There will be no registering of the wives of the New Jersey soldiers overseas at the primaries to be held on September 24 next, but every soldier and sailor on this side of the Atlantic will be given opportunity to register at the primaries next month, Secretary of State Martin announced Wednesday. He stated that as the primaries occur on September 24, it is apparent that it is a physical impossibility to bring about a situation where the soldiers overseas can vote within the time of the nominations and the date of the primary.

He also stated that no special session of the Legislature could make a law that would change this state of affairs, and that it had been decided by the department of the Secretary of State, after consultation with the Governor and after taking up the matter at Washington with the Secretary of War, that there could be no more to register the vote of the soldiers in Europe. For the General Election it is the intention of giving every man in the service an opportunity to register his vote.

Mystery Ships Big British Help Against U-Boat

Interesting revelations regarding the work of British mystery ships which have played an important part in anti-submarine warfare are made by the naval correspondent of the London "Times." They show how British seamen have met German craft and cunning with craft and cunning.

Until this week the public has known nothing about the mystery ships, known in the navy as the "Q" ships, although several officers notably Capt. Gordon Campbell, have been decorated for their services on these vessels. Details now can be made public, as the Germans are becoming aware, through bitter experience, of the methods used against them.

How a "woman and baby" accounted for a U-boat is told by the correspondent. The submarine ordered a vessel to surrender and fired a few shells into her. The boats then left the ship, leaving on board a woman, who ran up and down the deck with a baby in her arms as if mad.

The U-boat came alongside the vessel and the woman hurled the "baby" into the open hatch. The "baby" exploded and blew out the bottom of the submarine. The "woman" was decorated with the Victoria Cross.

The correspondent says that the first mention of a mystery ship was in the case of the Baralong, which on August 19, 1915, sank a U-boat after the torpedoing of the British liner Arabic. It will be remembered, he says, that the German government proteste dthat there was nothing to incidate the Baralong's warlike character.

The Baralong case was probably not the first in which a ruse was used, and since then the disguising of armed vessels as innocent merchantment for dealing with submarines has attained considerable dimensions.

"Howls and moans," add the naval correspondent, "went up in Germany about the treachery of British seamen but the Germans allegations curiously ceased at the beginning of 1916. These allegations afforded a typical example of German mentality, for they ignored the fact that in every case the U-boat was an actual or potential assailant, and any ruse of war is considered legitimate by them except when employed against Germany."

It should not be forgotten, he continues, that while the Germans designed mystery ships for commerce destruction, the British commanders showed much ingenuity in devising plans for trapping submarines.

In addition to the "woman and baby" case the correspondent mentions the story of a retired admiral, serving as a captain, who placed a haystack on board an ancient looking craft. When the U-boat ordered her to surrender, the Germans were astonished to receive a broadside from the haystack.

On another occasion a sea-worn tramp steamer was crossing the North Sea when a submarine ordered the crew to abandon ship. So sure was the German of his prey that the bombs with which he intended to sink the vessel were brought on deck around the conning tower. The commander of the tramp steamer, by careful maneuvering, brought the submarine within range of his concealed armament so that it required only a shell or two to explode the bombs and blow the U-boat out of the water.

Capt. Gordon O. L. Campbell, then a commander, was decorated with the Victoria Cross and the D. S. O. in 1915, being the first to receive these orders without the nature of his heroic deed being made public. It was announced early in 1917 that the reason for his decorations would be made public after the war. He was given special promotion over the heads of about 700 officers, and current rumor in London in July, 1917, ascribed his rapid rise to work against the submarine.

Capt. Campbell gained the military cross fro bravery in handling a tank when that weapon was first used by the British in the summer of 1916.

Public Utilities Sets New Date For Hearing Fare Case

The Public Utilities Commission announced at the close of a conference late Wednesday afternoon that it will sit at Newark on Thursday, August 29, to hear arguments upon the petition filed by the Public Service Railway Company, Tuesday, asking a reopening of the rate fare case.

The course of the commission in dealing with the petition will be decided after hearing arguments of counsel, although it was announced by President Slocum, Wednesday, that in no circumstances will the commission reopen the case in its entirety at this time.

Action which the New Jersey League of Municipalities will take in opposition to the new fare rate petition of the Public Service Railway Company may be decided today at a meeting of counsel for the league. The legal department of five of the largest cities in the league will be represented at a meeting in the office of Marshal Van Winkle, of Jersey City, general counsel for the league.

The meeting of counsel had been arranged before the new petition of the Public Service became known. It was called for the purpose of determining whether the league should take an appeal from the decision of the Public Utilities Commission on the original petition for a fare rate increase. This decision denied the company's petition for a seven-cent fare, with two cents additional charge for a first transfer and one cent more for a second transfer. It authorized the company the charge but one cent for the first transfer in addition to the regular five-cent fare. No charge was authorized for the second transfer.

Mr. Van Winkle and other counsel for the league stated that the new petition of the Public Service undoubtedly would be discussed at the meeting today. He explained that counsel expected to reach a decision today as to whether the league should appeal from the one-cent transfer grant. In advising the league as to what action it should take regarding the proposed appeal, counsel might also suggest action regarding the new petition, he said.

Getting Ready for Next Loan Campaign

As forecast, official announcement fixes the next Liberty Loan campaign as opening September 28 and ending October 19.

The amount of the loan to be determined when Secretary McAdoo returns to Washington next week is estimated at between six and eight billions to bear interest at the rate of 4¼ per cent. It will thus be the greatest and shortest loan campaign in the history of the world.

Shipping Board Gets Broad Powers for Control of Craft

President Wilson issued a proclamation Saturday giving broad powers to the Shipping Board in fixing charter rates for practically all shipping of American registry. Vessels of the Great akes, in land canals and waterways and those engaged in coastwise trade are excepted.

The proclamation follows:

"Now therefore I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, acting under authority conferred in Section 5 of said act, approved July 18, do proclaim that hereafter vessels of the United States, being full power driven vessels of 250 tons gross burden, or ocer, or sailing vessels, with or without auxiliary power, of fifty tons gross burden, or over, excepting vessels plying exclusively on the inland rivers and canals of the United States, vessels operating in the Great Lakes or other inland waters, and vessels operating exclusively in the coastwise trade of the United States, shall not hereafter be chartered unless the instrument in which such charter is embodied and the rates, terms, and conditions thereof are first approved by the President.

"Under authority conferred in Section 8 of said act, I do further proclaim that the provisions of said section 5, and of this proclamation, shall be and they are hereby extended to any vessel of foreign nationality under charter to a citizen of the United States or other person subject to the jurisdiction thereof.

"Under authority conferred in Section 10 of said act, I do further proclaim that hereafter no citizen of the United States or other person subject to the jurisdiction thereof, shall charter any vessel of foreign nationality unless the instrument in which such charter is embodied and the rates, terms and conditions thereof are first approved by the President."

Actors Also May Be Told to Work

While the problem of obtaining a sufficient number of men to fill the September calls en engaging the attention of Provost Marshal General Crowder and his staff, it was learned that they are giving consideration to plans for extendinn the "work or fight" order. When Secretary Baker ruled that baseball was a non-essential occupation and that diamond stars of draft age who had secured deferred classification must, after September 1, obtain work that would benefit the nation, complaints began to filter into General Crowder's office that actors and particularly "movie" stars, should also feel the freight of the government's power to force men of draft age to eiter work or fight.

The large number of chauffeurs throughout the country have also fallen under the scrutiny of the provost marshal general's office. Under the present regulations only chauffeurs who perform other duties in addition to driving a car come within the "work or fight" ruling. The cruising chauffeurs who infest the downtown district in many cities seeking "fares" are likely to figure in any new regulations that may be drawn.

Red Cross to Have More Room at Dix

The Red Cross is to have a new and larger headquarters buildings at Dix. The contract has been awarded to a Morristown firm. For some time past the quarters near the Hostess House have been too small to provide accommodations for the large staff necessary to carry on the vast amount of work done at the Camp and Dr. W. C. Sinston, the field director, has been working hard to obtain the necessary orders to go ahead with the work. It is expected that ground will be broken this week and the structure entirely completed in the early fall.

The headquarters will be a two-story building and the site selected is near camp headquarters, being the corner of Eighth street and New York avenue, opposite the barracks of the headquarters troop and on the extreme edge of the camp athletic field. This will be the only building on this oval and will, therefore, be easy to find. It will ben painted in the usual Red Cross colors, red and white.

On the lower floor will be the office sof the various departments and shower baths while on the upper will be six or seven bedrooms and tub baths. It will contain all the necessary equipment for successfully carrying on the work and the central location will make it easier for the workers to cover the big camp. The building near the Hostess House will be retained as a storehouse.

Captain William Berl, Jr., of Wilmington, commander of one of the units of the 59th Pioneer Regiment, was exonerated by a court-martial board on charges preferred by his superior officer and that he had not properly investigated and reported on charges of alleged misconduct of certain members of his company. The evidence showed that the captain made his report on the basis of an investigation and the fact that it did not coincide with the commanding officer's version was not any attempt on the part of the captain to deceive his commander.

A great reception was tendered Monday to the Rev. E. Y. Shabbaz, a graduate of Colgate, who was present in Armenia during the massacre. The Armenian soldiers in camp at Dix gathered in the morning at hut 9 to hear his talk and afterwards were entertained by the missionary with tales of their home land.

JOSEPH PICKERING ENTERS THE SERVICE.

Included in a contingent of New England men arriving at Camp Upton, Paphank, L. I., on Tuesday last, was Joseph Pickering, a former well-known Plainfielder and clerk at the Plainfield Elks' Club for more than a year after its opening.

Mr. Pickering left this city two years ago to become proprietor of a business at Westerly, R. I., which has been bequeathed him by a relative. He had been meeting with splendid success but gave up everything at the call of his country. Word that he had gone to Camp Upton was telephoned to Plainfield on his arrival and a number of his local friends intend visiting him as soon as he is out of quarantine. Although being kept busy at Westerly, he made it a practice to run down to this city regularly and always remained long enough to call on the major portion of his local acquaintances.

Miss Katheleen Allen, of New York, is visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. John Tobin, of Monroe avenue.

Army Ambulance Driver Recognizes Unconscious Patient As Old Friend

Another one of those heart interest stories of Plainfielders in the service meeting under unexpected circumstances comes from Syracuse, N. Y., following an occurrence last Monday night.

Private John C. Mottley, of 674 West Fourth street, was stationed at the military barracks at Syracuse, having been sent to that city from Plainfield in company with three other local young men. Late last week he becaem ill and on Monday pleuro-pneumonia developed in a serious form. The commanding officer ordered that he be removed to the Crouse-Irving Hospital at Syracuse, and an ambulance was summoned. The driver of the vehicle went about his work in the perfunctory manner that characterizes military duties in camp until he chanced to glance at the features of the semi-conscious patient. He gave a startled exclamation tht directed everyone's attention toward him, but ignoring the glances, knelt beside the form of the man on the stretcher.

"Good Heavens," he shouted, "it's my old friend 'Pop' Mottley from my own home town and believe me, I am going to stick with him until he pulls himself together.

The driver who made the discovery was Paul Pope, of Park avenue, who until his enlistment in the Ambulance Corps two months ago was driver for the Ford Taxi Company on North avenue. Pope and Mottley were very well known to each other and the surprise would have been as great to the latter as it was to the former had he been able to realize it at the time but he was so ill that he was unable to recognize anyone.

Pope secured leave of absence to remain near his friend to be of whatever service he could until the arrival of Private Mottley's mother and brother in response to a telegram. This reached them at Plainfield late Monday night and Mrs. Mottley and her son, James P. Mottley, of Lincoln place, the borough, left for Syracuse immediately. They remained with the patient until he was declared out of danger Thursday, at which time they returned home. The attack of pleuro-pneumonia, the physician said, had been developing for some time before the critical stage on Monday night was reached, but as the young private had passed through the crisis safely his complete recovery seems assured.

At the present time there are about twenty Plainfielders at the Syracuse barracks and all are so much interested in Private Mottley that they have promised Ambulance Driver Pope to be among his regular visitors when he recovers sufficiently to receive company.

"Casualties" in Sixth St. Drive Are Very Heavy

The recent big drive of the allies in France was duplicated on a smaller scale in this city, last night, when the residents of West Sixth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue, launched a sudden attack on a horde of thieving rats that had become a neighborhood plague. Thirty-five persons took part in the hunt and when the rush was over a total of thirty-three casualties were listed, all of them being fatalities as no mercy was shown to the wounded or those surrendering.

Most of the men taking part in the drive are the owners of henneries that have suffered from the ravages of the rats. The rodents became so numerous and so bold that they even attacked persons who sought to keep them from stealing chickens and eggs. One irate resident, who was especially annoyed by the nuisance, hit upon the plan of a "drive" and found a ready response on the part of his neighbors when he suggested his plan.

Securing a line of fire hose, as many terrior dogs as could be found in the West End and innumerable clubs, the attacking party got busy shortly after supper last night. The first, second and third line trenches of the rats were located by reconnoitering parties and the hose was played into the nests of the unsuspecting enemy before they realized their line of communication had been cut off. As fast as they appeared "over the top," they were bagged either by one of the dogs or a club wielded by a chicken owner whose arm gained strength by the thought of all the nice fat hens and six-cent eggs that had fallen prey to the "varmints."

The slogan of the party was "one rat for every man in the hunt" and it almost came to a realization. The rush stopped with only two short of the desired goal. The result was so satisfactory, however, that the attackers desisted for the night but will begin another drive this evening in the hope of ridding the entire neighborhood of the pests.

Plainfielder Picked For Important Unit In Engineer Corps

Sergeant Herman Kling, of Sandford avenue, has been selected as one of the men for a "distinctly different" engineering corps now being organized by the Government. Its principal duty will be to clear the front line trenches of water, a problem that has sorely vexed the allied authorities but which now is believed to have been overcome by the introduction of mammoth hydraulic pumps and other devices.

This company is to be composed of the best engineers in the service. It will comprise a captain, lieutenants, non-commissioned officers and fifty men. The unit is to be unattached and will traverse the entire length of the front lines held by the Americans in France. It will co-operate with other engineering corps in providing needed senitation of the trenches after the bothersome water has been gotten out, this being one of the important efatures of trench maintenance.

Sergeant Kling was connected with City Engineer Gavett's office when he enlisted last spring. He had a wide experience in street and sewer wor kand for that reason was quickly accepted by the Engineering Corps. He has been undergoing extensive training at Camp Pike, Little Rock, Arkansas, where he received his promotion to a sergeancy. He was placed in charge of a troop transient North to Camp Merritt last Sunday and reached there on Tuesday. Sergeant Kling took the opportunity to run out to Plainfield but will go back to Camp Pike today. While in town, he visited the Ellis Clu band, was given an informal reception by a number of friends. He asserts that he is highly pleased with army life and declares it is the only thing for a young fellow who wants to get real training for something better in life later on.

Prefers to Rot In Jail Before Paying $5 Fine

Declaring that a five-dollar fine imposed on him by Mayor Calkins in the city court this morning, was "shake down" on the part of the police and anything but justice to an American, Morris Fink, thirty years old, of 535 West Third street, declared after the sentence that he would rot in jail before he paid the amount. He was accordingly consigned to a cell and will be taken to Elizabeth this afternoon to serve ten days at the county's expense. The prisoner was in a rage all through the proceedings and declared among other things that he would carry the matter to the Supreme Court before he would stand for the imposition.

Fink was arrested on complaint of David Reskin, a barber, whose shop is on Plainfield avenue, who also preferred a charge against Isadore Steinman, forty-three years old, of 216 Plainfield avenue. Steinman was in the barber shop waiting his turn to me shaved when Fink opened the screen door to see what his chances were for getting his facial adornment trimmed up. He continued looking so long, holding the door open all the while, that Steinman had visions of numerous flies gaining entrance. He called to Fink to close the door or move inside, whereat the latter became highly indignant. He rushed over to Steinman, snatched the newspaper out of his hand and assumed a threatening attitude. Steinman accepted the challenge and handed the aggressor an upper-cut that nearly floored him. After that the two grappled and in swaying about the room both fell through a big plate glass mirror hung in front of one of the shop chairs. Reskin secured help and ejected both men before any further damage occurred but later in the day made complaint against the two fighters.

Steinman was fined five dollars as well as Fink and paid it without a murmur. The other defendant, however, asserted that he had been given anything but a square deal and that as long as he possessed a dollar or could hire a lawyer, he would appeal the Mayor's decision. He insisted that he had not been to blame in the barber-shop argument and accordingly should have had sentence suspended instead of being adjudged guilty. The evidence, however, was very apparent as all the witnesses agreed that Reskin had been the instigator of the argument.

Public Service Faces Another Trolley Strike

Refusal of Corporation's Officials to Recognize Newly-Formed Union of Motormen and Conductors May Result in Tie-up of All Lines--Company's Answer Must be Given by Tonight

The Public Service Corporation, which only recently suffered a complete tie-up of its traction lines in all North Jersey, when it refused platform men an advance in pay, today faces another strike because of President McCarter's announcement that the company would not recognize the newly organized union of motormen and conductors.

At a meeting held in Newark, Tuesday night, several hundred delegates from all locals, a number of whom were from Plainfield, voted to give the corporation until today to reconsider its determination. If recognition is not forthcoming by tonight, it was said another strike would be ordered such as paralyzed trolley traffic two months ago. On the occasion mentioned, the men went about their plans very quietly and early morning workers were taken completely by surprise when hurrying out of their homes to catch their usual car.

After the controversy over the advance in pay had been submitted to the Government arbitration board, the platform men decided to organize a union. This was quickly carried out and big locals are now in existence at Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, Elizabeth and other places. The Plainfield men are allied with the Elizabeth branch.

When the officers of the union called upon the Public Service Corporation to recognize its existence and agree to confer with the executive committee on all matters of business, the officers of the company stated firmly there would be no recognition. Attempts to mawe President McCarter and other executives change their attitude met with failure and the strike proposition was broached. The men are in a determined mood and it is quite possible another suspension of trolley schedules will take place if the required recognition is not forthcoming by tonight.

Plainfielder Says Nation's Presidents Are Not Infallible

Asserting that Presidents of the United States are not infallible, Arthur C. Maclay, the well-known New York lawyer, whose home is on West Eighth street, this city, expressed his opinion of the nation's chief executive's attitude on the equal suffrage question in the following communication to the Newark Evening News and printed by that publication this week:

To the Editor of the News:

Sir—In a recent editorial you leave the impression that the federal woman suffrage amendment should be passed by the United States Senate because the President wishes it and that we should follow his leadership because "he is talking about those things in which his skill and understanding are confessed almost without exception." You leave no room for us to supporse that he is in error in this matter.

With all due respect to our worthy President, we anti-suffragists firmly believe that he is in error and that his firm and consistent oppositiion to this federal suffrage amendment during four years of neutrality and nearly two years of war was the correct attitude to assume. Following your line of argument, the immigration bill, with its literacy test, should not have been passed over his veto. In fact, your reasoning would apply more strongly to that case, because two previous Presidents had already vetoed that bill and presumably they were all in a position to know what they were about. Yet, in face of all that, this immigration bill, with its literacy test, was passed by Congress over President Wilson's veto. And we today, in view of the developments and disclosures revealing the rascally methods of the German Government, know full well that Congress acted wisely in that matter and that all three Presidents were actuated by ill-advised sentiment and unsound statesmanship in vetoing it.

The Constitution of the United States distinctly recognizes the fallibility of Presidential judgment when it gives Congress the power to pass legislation opposed to the wishes and judgment of the Chief Executive. Thirty-five times has Congress exercised that power since the foundation of our republic. The theory of our government is that the matured will of a majority must prevail over the will of the minority. This is American democracy. But it is not democracy, after a majority of the States voting on this question have rejected overwhelmingly woman suffrage to have a minority of the States force it upon them by federal amendment without power to reconsider the matter in case fomale enfranchisement should prove unsatisfactory.

We anti-suffragists constitute a large majority of the people of our United States that do not "confess our President's skill and understanding" in changing his firm and logical attitude on the federal woman suffrage amendment during nearly six years of his administration. We think his scholarly ideals have overcome his better judgment, and we think that the amendment should be rejected by the Senate so as to conform with the expressed wishes of the people and the pledged word of the Republican and Democratic parties as solemnly set forth in their national platforms.

In no sense can the asking of forty-eight States to vote for or against this federal amendment be construed as a "war measure" or an "international issue." It is purely a matter of domestic policy and has absolutely no bearing on the war or "on the morale of the nations engaged in the war," inasmuch as only three out of twenty-one of our Allies favor suffrage. Russia is a stern example of woman suffrage and socialism, where its legitimate outcome was a general stampede of the men from the firing line. And England has not adopted woman suffrage in the same sense that the suffragists wish the United States to adopt it.

Most assuredly we are waging a war for democracy. But woman suffrage is not democracy. It creates a privileged class by conferring special privileges for the granting of which no valid reason exists and against the granting of which are many serious objections. New Jersey tried it for thirty years and then abolished it as a failure. One concrete fact is worth a ton of sentimental theory.

Insurance Claims of $291,000 Paid Here During 1917

Some idea of the amount of insurance paid on the lives of Plainfield and North Plainfield people is gained from the current report of all insurance companies as published in this week's issue of the Insurance Press, the New York Trade paper of which Plainfield people are the publishers.

The total of premiums paid to relatives of deceased policy-holders in the twin municipality was $291,000. Of this amount $259.000 came to the city and $32,000 to the borough.

The largest individual claim paid on the life of a Plainfielder was one of $40,016 to the estate of John Bushnell. Mr. Bushnell was a prominent local resident of many years, but was engaged in business in New York. His home here was on Central avenue. Another Plainfield estate received $10,000, but the name of the policy-holder is withheld. The largest claim in North Plainfield was one of $14,344 on the life of Alexander E. Faber, whose home was on Rockview avenue. It is stated by insurance officials that Plainfield and North Plainfield both rank very high in the number of large policies held by local residents, several of them being for $100 each.

New York heads the list with the amount of insurance paid in the United States during 1917. The total being in excess of $35,000,000. Newrak leads in New Jersey and stands ninth in the United States with the total payment on claims of $3,750,000.

ANOTHER DOLLAR DAY ON SEPTEMBER 4th.

At a meeting this week, the Plainfield Business Men's Association decided to hold another Dollar Day on Thursday, September 4th.

Committees have been appointed to arrange the details and an effort will be made to make the coming bargain day more successful than any attempted before. Several new ideas will be advanced and the particulars of these will be made public as soon as possible.

COUNTY COMMITTEE DECIDES ON EARLY CANVASS.

The Union County Republican Committee, at a largely attended meeting at Elizabeth last night, decided to make its canvass of the district this year previous to the primaries instead of afterward. The change is being made in order to get out a full vote in September.

City Clery John J. Carroll, of this city, acted as chairman for the meeting in the absence of Donald McLean, the county chairman. The remainder of the business transacted was of a routine nature.

New Order Issued For "Limited" Men

Provost Marshal General Crowder today called upon thirty-four States to furnish a total of 12,000 white selective service registrants qualified for limited military service for entrainment August 30 and 31.

The men called will be sent to three camps, 3,000 to go to Camp Upton, 4,000 to Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Ia., and 5,000 to Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. The quota of New Jersey is 650, which will go to Camp Greene.

Secretary Walter Freeman, of the local Exemption Board, said today tht the number of men to be taken from Plainfield on this call had not been specified as yet, but it would probably be the same within a day probably be given within a day or two. According to previous percentages the contingent may possibly comprise ten or twelve men from the district.

WILLIAM D. WYCKOFF DIES IN HOSPITAL.

Frederick Day Wyckoff, aged forty-three years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital last night, after an intermittent illness of more than a year. He was a stationary engineer lived at 710 Central street. Previous to coming to Plainfield, his home was at New Dover. He is survived by a widow and seven children, also several brothers and sisters.

The funeral will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 and Rev. William A. Dennis, of New Dover, will be in charge. Interment will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

FILES PETITION IN BANKRUPTCY.

Henry Gordon, a clerk of this city, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court at Trenton yesterday, in which he gives his liabilities as $1,-[illegible]89 composed exclusively of unsecured claims, and assets of $208, of which $8 is made up of insurance policies. The matter has been referred for a hearing on August 29 in Elizabeth before Atwood L. DeCoster, referee.

OFF TO ATLANTIC CITY.

Mrs. Jessie H. Brown and daughter, Mrs. Robert Shropshire, and Mrs. Shropshire's infant son left today for Atlantic City to remain until after Labor Day. Mr. Shropshire returned Tuesday after a two months' stay at Minneapolis and will spend the week-ends at the shore for the next two weeks.

RAPID PROMOTION.

Rapid promotion has come to Richard Lawton, of West Sixth street, who went to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., last week, as a member of a Plainfield contingent of selectives. This week he was advanced to a corporalship and is now serving with a company of infantry.

Date Set For Next Draft Registration

Another draft registration of young men who have reached their majority since June 5, 1918, has been decided upon by the Provost Marshal General, and orders to carry it into effect are in preparation. June 5 was the date upon which all young men who had come of age since the general draft registration of June 5, 1917, were obliged to register for military service. The new order will provide for a registration on August 24.

It is estimated that the August 24 registration will obtain about 133,000 young men who have come of age since June 5. They are badly needed, as the first draft is practically exhausted and the War Department is hard put to obtain 200,000 men who are wanted now. To obtain these 200,000 the government would be obliged to go deeper into the deferred classification, and it is anxious to avoid this as far as possible, particularly as there is general expectation that Congress will be fairly prompt in enacting the pending legislation for extending the draft ages so as to make all male citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 liable for military service.

The Provost Marshal General's office contemplates making provisions for having weekly draft registration hereafter.

A new feature will be the division of the countdy into fifteen selective service inspection districts, to each of which an inspector will be assigned, whose duties will be to correct the errors of draft boards, give instructions, prevent abuses, and generally to see that the selective service law is carried out honestly and uniformly. The proposal in this connection contemplates conferring the inspectorships on civilians of ability who have had large experience in the administration of the present draft and who have shown a thorough grasp and knowledge of the many problems that have been presented. It is intended to confer military commissions on these civilians in order to provide thehm with the necessary authority.

Young men in the Plainfield district are to register on August 24 to Exemption Board headquarters in the Babcock building, while those in North Plainfield must present themselves at the Borough Hall on Somerset street.

BACK TO THE FOLD.

Arthur Erber, of West Fourth street, who resigned from the city fire department several months ago and has recently been working at the Pond Tool shop, has been reappointed a fireman. He has been assigned to headquarters for the present.

FIGHTERS IN COURT.

James Scerado, of St. Mary's avenue, Charles Vaughn and Fulton Hines, of Cottage place, the latter two colored, were before Mayor Calkins in the city court this morning on a charge of fighting at the freight yards on North avenue, yesterday afternoon. The Mayor dismissed the trio after giving them a reprimand.

Standard Oil to Use Bonnie Burn Beds

The announcement recently by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey that as a result of an examination of its employes at the several plants, it had decided to have its tubercular employes cared for at Bonnie Burn sanatorium came somewhat as a surprise to the general public, but to members of the Board of Freeholders and other county officials it did not.

When the medical men submitted their report to the Standard Oil officials, they declared that the institution was the best in the State. Although it was at first thought that the company would require only twelve beds, which would be paid for whether they were used or not, it has been learned that the number may be doubled or tripled so that any of the 10,000 workmen at the Bayway, Edgewater and Bayonne plants may be cared for.

The sanatorium has enlarged its activities and even improved upon its efficiency during the past years despite handicaps. Dr. Jacob Arnheim, of New York, has given up his work as aide to Superintendent Runnells and is now in France fighting the plague. A dozen nurses also have gone into war service. Dr. Runnells is now assisted by a woman physician.

Besides caring for the adults in the county that become subject to tuberculosis, the sanatorium now has a separate building used as a preventorium for children. There are at present 150 being treated there and the work is meeting with distinct success.

FIREMEN'S VACATIONS.

Firemen Jens Claassen, of No. 2 hose company, returns to duty tomorrow, after enjoying his annual vacation. Captain George Feiring, of No. 4 company, at Netherwood, and Driver William Jaeger, of headquarters, began their vacations this week, the former to be off twenty days and the latter two weeks. Assistant Chief Townley will return to duty next week and Harry Wierenga, of headquarters, will begin his vacation during the next few days.

MARKET A SUCCESS.

George S. Clay, chairman of the Plainfield Food Commission, has issued a report to the effect that the Plainfield Market is being well patronized and has been much more successful than last year. He also reports that produce is plentiful and that prices are comparatively reasonable in view of the general increased cost of food stuffs.

Gilkyson Appeals To All Draft Boards

Stating that a majority of the draft boards in New Jersey have met every demand made upon them promptly and intelligently, but that a number has been delinquent in the performance of their duties, Adjutant General Gilkyson in a statement issued yesterday to all of the local boards of exemption in the State, says that it is hoped by the governor that the work of registering the men under the bill now pending in Washington will be performed by trained men. His statement says:

"Once more the local boards of exemption in our State have been called upon to perform a great task in the registration and classification of registrants, who will be called under the act now pending before Congress, for various duties in supporting the program outlined by the government in winning the war. Great as this task may seem, the governor feels tht the men who have freely given their time and abilities to service of the government and the State as members of the local boards of exemption, are again ready and willing to take on additional responsibilities at this time. The majority of local boards have met every demand made upon them promptly and intelligently, reflecting credit not only on the individual boards, but on the State they are so proudly serving.

"There are, however, a few boards in the State who have been delinquent in the performance of their duties which has resulted in retarding the work generally and necessarily lowering the State average efficiency.

"It is hoped by the governor that the work which confronts us can be performed by men who have been trained to the work, and who by their devotion and splendid spirit, have been of such great value in maintaining the State's high standard. However, it must be known to a degree of certainty at this time that the members of every board in this State are in a position to continue their splendid work, and, however serious the loss of any trained man would be, it is thought that unless such men feel that they can perform all the duties incumbent upon them, it would be only in justice to the member and the State that this fact be made known at this time and opportunity be given to replace such men. It is hoped by the governor that this action will not be necessary. If, however, it is the member should immediately communicate with this office, submitting a request to be relieved and stating therein the reasons. Such requests will in no way be construed as a lack of desire on the part of any member to continue his service, but rather that it would be based on his own knowledge of the needs of the service and his inability to make further sacrifice."

FRED COOMBS RE-ENLISTS IN MARINE CORPS.

Fred Coombs, of this city, who has been in the Marine Corps for the past four years, completed his enlistment Wednesday, but immediately re-entered the service. He is now in Plainfield on a thirty-day furlough, at the end of which he will go to Quantico, Va., as sergeant in a machine gun company and after a short period of training will go overseas.

Sergeant Coombs is the son of Mrs. William Deegan, formerly of Scotch Plains, but now living in New York. Previous to entering the service he was employed at the North avenue freight yards of the Jersey Central.

Plainfield and Other Cities in Transfer Appeal

Immediate steps will be taken by the State League of Municipalities to appeal the decision of the Public Utilities Board in granting the one-cent charge on transfers to the Public Service Railway Company.

That was voted at a meeting of the executive committee of the league held in Newark, Wednesday. Besides Newark, Jersey City, Trenton, Passaic, Montclair and Plainfield were represented.

George L. Record and Marshal Van Winkle, who represented the league in the fight against the original appliction for increases in trolley fares, will make the new battle.

Mr. Record contended that the commission found a judgment without a valuation and that if an appeal were made the decision would be reversed.

Others pointed out that President McCarter in a letter issued this week is asking municipalities to co-operate.

While opposed to municipalities abrogating franchises at this time, Director Raymond, of Newark, said he felt the league had a splendid case to appeal.

"If this stands," said Mr. Raymond, "the company will seek additional increased gas and electric rates during the war."

Mayor Gillen, of Newark, said he felt the league ought to oppose the new application of the Public Service Company.

The league's special counsel was told to oppose the new application.

"We will go down on August 29," said Mr. Record, "and find out what it is all about."

Mr. Van Winkle said they could not raise any more law questions as it was only a question of figures. Both lawyers urged the league to seek legislation that would protect them.

Mayor Seger, of Passaic, chairman of the league, referred to President McCarter's letter.

"Mr. McCarter feels and believes that it is easier to handle the municipalities individually than as a league," said the mayor. "He feels that if he gets one mayor it will be that much gained."

"Does this league feel it would be an advantage to throw the company into the hands of a receiver?" asked Director Raymond.

A VISITOR FROM DIX.

William C. Ryder, of Grant avenue, spent the past week-end at the home of his parents since going to Camp Dix several weeks ago. He has been assigned to the 312th Field Signal Corps and expects to go overseas very shortly. Mr. Ryder at one time was a member of the Plainfield fire department, but for several years was employed in the line department of the Public Service, an experience which fitted him for field signal work.

James Fosbre, of Essex street, is being held in $500 bail or the Grand Jury pending an investigation of the motorcycle accident on South avenue last wek, when Joseph Granieri, of Sycamore avenue, received injuries which caused his death. Fosbre was driving the machine and Granieri was on a rear seat. In attempting to avoid colliding with an automobile, Fosbre said, the machine caught in a rut and was overturned

Wilson Urges Coal Men to "Speed Up" Production of Fuel

Emphasizing his belief that the greatest obstacle to the winning of the war is the need for fuel, President Wilson on Monday issued an appeal to the coal mine operators and workers of the country, urging them to work hand in hand in assuming the burden of producing the amplest possible supply of coal for the nation's war needs at home and abroad. The President's appeal was as follows:

"To All Engaged in Coal Mining:

"The existing scarcity of coal is creating a grave danger—in fact the most serious which confronts us—and calls for prompt and vigorous action on the part of both operators and miners. Without an adequate supply, our war program will be retarded; the effectiveness of our fighting forces in France will be lessened; the lives of our soldiers will be unnecessarily endangered and their hardships increased, and there will be much suffering in many homes throughout the country during the coming winter.

"I am well aware that your ranks have been seriously depleted by the draft, by voluntary enlistment, and by the demands of other essential industries. This handicap can be overcome, however, and sufficient coal can be mined in spite of it, if every one connected with the industry from the highest official to the youngest boy, will give his best work each day for the full number of work hours.

"The operators must be zealous as never before the bring about the highest efficiency and management, to establish the best possible working conditions, and to accord fair treatment to everybody, so that the opportunity to work at his best may be accorded every workman.

"The miners should report for work every day unless prevented by unavoidable causes, and should not only stay in the mines the full time, but also see to it that they get more coal than ever before. The other workers in and about the mines should work as regularly and faithfully, so that the work of the miner may not be retarded in any way. This will be especially necessary from this time forward, for your numbers may be further lessened by the draft, which will induct into the army your fair share of those not essential to industry.

"Those who are drafted but who are essential will be given deferred classification, and it is their patriotic duty to accept it. And it is the patriotic duty of their friends and neighbors to hold them in high regard for doing so.

"The only worker who deserves the condemnation of his community is the one who fails to give his best in this crisis; not the one who accepts deferred classification and works regularly and diligently to increase the coal output.

"A great task is to be performed. The operators and their staffs alone cannot do it, nor can the mine workers alone do it; but both parties, working hand in hand, with a grim determination to rid the country of its greatest obstacle to winning the war, can do it.

"It is with full confidence that I call upon you to assume the burden of producing an ample supply of coal. You will, I am sure, accept this burden, and will successfully carry it through, and in so doing you will be performing a service just as worthy as service in the trenches, and will win the applause and gratitude of the whole nation.

"WOODROW WILSON.

Big Hospital at Colonia Gets First Patients

The base hospital at Colonia, six miles south of this city, has just received its first batch of wounded and ill sounders, and to the medical experts at the institution has been entrusted the task of bringing them back to health. Particulars are being withheld for military reasons, but it is known that some of the patients came from the firing line in France and others from various cantonments in this country.

The hospital, which represents an outlay of $2,000,000, is now ready for service. It has seventy-two buildings, and other patients are likely to arrive from time to time. Work was first started on the construction of the hospital last February and since then the buildings have been erected by the dozens over acres of ground. An unique feature is that all the buildings are connected and are supplied with heat, light and water from one central point. They are stretched over a series of hills, starting at the administration building at the entrance gates.

Accommodations are provided for 1,607 patients, fifty-nine officers, 550 medical corps men and 13 nurse attendants. There are two miles of corridor in the building and patients can be wheeled four miles without being taken out of the structures. There are thirty-four beds in each ward.

The hospital covers the greater part of the estate of Charles D. Freeman, situated about a mile from the Colonia station. He leased the property to the government for the period of the war for $1 a year and has turned over his residence to women engaged in relief work at the institution. Reconostruction work will be one of the features of the program. Noted specialists will exert their skill to rebuild crippled and maimed soldiers.

The command of the hospital has been given to Lt. Col. Alfred P. Upshur, of the Medical Corps. Major F. H. Albee, the well known bone surgeon, and a number of other eminent physicians and surgeons will be stationed there. Members of the mercy committee, many of whom are located in this city, make garments for the institution.

Banks and Business Men Can Help Out

Two specific causes by which banks and business men may help win the war—by eliminating loans for purposes not absolutely essential to the war or to maintaining the nation in healthy condition and by concentrating gold and silver in federal reserve banks—were receivew this week in a statement by the Federal Reserve Board at Washington.

Appealing for restriction of bank loans, the statement said:

"Banks should endeavor to divert the use of their credit more and more into productive fields, where its employment will result in augmenting the national resources. An intelligent and pruden use of credit will be an important factor in strengthening the national resources during the period of the war, in aiding its successful prosecution and in maintaining the economic strength of the country for the time of rapidly changing conditions which will come when the war has been won and the millions of men in our army are returning to the employment of peace."

Referring to the need for concentrating gold and silver, the statement said:

"Money of every kind, whether gold or silver, should be deposited in bank and usedfi but not hoarded. Surrender on gold coin and gold certificates and abstention from hoarding means an increase in the volume of bank credit available for the community and increased ability to finance its war and other requirements."

In the last four years the country's gain in stock of gold has been $1,078,000,000.

Traction Concern Gets Increase in Fare Rates

The Five-Mile Beach Electric Railway Company, operating between Wildwood and Anglesea, and the Toms River Electric Company, were granted permission by the Public Utilities Commission this week to put into effect increased rate schedules. The railway company will be permitted to increase its fare from five to six cents.

The electric company was given permission to increase from fifteen to twenty cents the rate per kilowatt hour for from one to fifty hours a month, from twelve to seventeen cents an hour the rate from fifty-one to seventy-five hours a month, and from ten to-fifteen cents the rate for all over seventy-five hours a month. The commission has refused to sanction the proposed sale of two tracts of lands and buildings owned by the Pleasantville Heat, Light and Power Co., to the Atlantic City Suburban Gas and Fuel Co., on the ground that the price of $36,648 agreed upon by the companies was excessive. Having determined that the fair value of the property is $26,000, the board has signified it will approve a sale at that figure if the companies so desire.

News of the Theatre

"New Bon Ton Girls" First of Season's Burlesque Offerings

Next Tuesday, matinee and night, Manager Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre, will offer to the patrons of burlesque, "The New Bon Ton Girls," a production of the Theatrical Operating Company, and one that comes to town with advance reports that are most encouraging. Headed by Lester Allen, John Barry, comedians, and staged in spectacular style, this new offering of the Operating Company should prove one of the winners of the circuit. Lester Allen, the tramp comedian, is one of the rectn "finds" of the burlesque world. Two years ago he was practically unknown, and today he holds a place at the forefront of tramp comedians. He is a versatile chap, with a most likable personality, can sing and dance, particularly the latter, and he puts his comedy lines and business over in excellent style. Assisted by John Barry, Jack Strause, Ed. Miller and other of merit, Allen ought to provide one of the funny shows of the early season. Elsie Cole, Flossie Everette and Martha Horton are the leading women, both vaudeville stars for several seasons, and since their debut in burlesque big favorites with the Plainfield audiences. Miss Cole's sings will again be a feature of her work, and Miss Flossie Everette will again startle the women patrons with the beauty and daring of her costumes. The principal burlesque is called "At the Movies." It is in two acts, with six big scenes in most extravagant fashion and offering the producers penty of opportunity for the display of gorgeous costumes and unique scenic effects. Throughout will be introduced several high class vaudeville acts.

The chorus is composed of thirty youthful girls and there are a dozen song numbers and stage pictures in which they will have the chance to display their talents and charm.

Your Own Particular Soldier Boy May Be in "Pershing's Crusaders"

In the first United States Official War Film, "Pershing's Crusaders," being shown at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow, you may see your own particular Sammy on the screen. Others have done so and the showing of these films has created an immense amount of interest among those who have relatives or friends now at the front.

In the recent showing of the films in Cincinnati, Lieutenant R. Stanley Davis, U. S. A., commanding an aviation post "somewhere in France" was recognized. His friends discovered him in the aviation field pictures with a starter's flag in his hand. While the pictures wefe showing a letter was received from him telling of things "over there."

Every mother, sister or sweetheart with a soldier at the front should see these latest pictures. You may see your boy over there. Look for him.

New Collier Farce "Nothing but Lies" Coming Next Week

Plainfield playgoers are going to have a rare treat on the night and afternoon of August 24, when William Collier, America's premier comedian, appears at the Plainfield Theatre in his new play, "Nothing But Lies." It is the premier performance of this new piece and as such is worthy of more than usual attention. Not only is William Collier the best farceur in this country today but his new play is said to be one of those sure fire successes that no one can afford to miss seeing.

Local playgoers are to have the first chance in passing judgment on "Nothing But Lies" and the excellent company that will appear in support of Mr. Collier. G. M. Anderson and L. Lawrence Weber, Mr. Collier's managers, have surrounded their star with players of renown and ability. Olive Wyndham plays the leading female role in "Nothing But Lies." Rapley Holmes, W. Riley Hatch, Florence Enright, Grant Stewart, Saxon-Kling, Mary Newcombe and Robert Strange are some of the players. Outside of a week's engagement at Washington and a few other performances in nearby cities, "Nothing But Lies" will not be presented any place else until the first week in September, when it goes into the Longacre Theatre in New York, where it is booked for an all season stay.

Aaron Hoffman is the author of this new farce, which is in three acts with a prologue and epilogue. It would not be fair to spoil one's enjoyment by telling the story of the play but suffice it to say that Mr. Hoffman is an expert playwright and knows that a successful play for William Collier must be laden with fun. "Nothing But Lies" is funny and is interlarded with witty dialogue and laugh-provoking situations.

This new play of Mr. Collier's must not be confused in the minds of playgoers with Mr. Collier's former starring vehicle. "Nothing But the Truth." It's true the title is somewhat similar but that is about all there is alike in the two plays. "Nothing But Lies" is woven around an entirely new idea and is not even a sequel to the old play.

Don't forget the date of Mr. Collier's engagement here. It's on August 24, and these premier performances ought to mark a mile-stone in the minds of local playgoers, who are interested in the best the stage affords.

War Tax Will Include Soda Fountain Drinks

A ten per cent. tax on all soft drinks sold by manufacturer, producer, bottler or importer, and a tax of from one to two cents on soda fountain drinks, have been written into the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill by the House ways and means committee.

The proposal is to put a tax of two cents on each ten cents paid for all soft drinks sold at soda fountains, and of one cent upon sales of seven cents or less. Near beer and similar fermented beverages would pay ten cents per gallon. The committee expects to raise from this source somewhere close to $100,000,000, it was stated.

The committee took proprietary and patent medicines out of the manufacturer's ten per cent. tax and grouped it in a ten per cent. stamp tax. The government expects by this change to largely increase the revenue, although the tax rate is the same, because of higher retail prices.

The Treasury Department submitted comprehensive excess profits and alternating war profits tax schedules. It retains the present rates on excess profits carried in the present law and provides for the eighty per cent. maximum on the alternatave war profits plan. It classifies different industries and in technical details regulates the exemptions to be allowed.

This plan, which will be considered by the committee today, involves the old controversy between the treasury and the committee, in which the committee contends for an increase of the present excess profits rates.

THE ENTRANCE OF MR. MOY.

The entrance of former Mayor George W. V. Moy to the local political arena, through his announcement that he would seek the nomination of Mayor on the Republican ticket is not without its advantages. It is a well-known fact that in certain circles the present administration has not given every satisfaction, whether the feeling is justified or not. The particularly sore spot seems to be with the expenditures on the City Hall and for street improvements and if any other man than those already in charge can do better, it is only just and proper that he be given a trial. These are the days when abnormalities are the rule rather than the exception and new ideas, new suggestions and new methods are always acceptable.

The coming campaign promises to be very interesting. It is not to be denied that Mayor Calkins has been a hard worker during his four years of office and the fact that he is willing to remain in the city's chief executive chair for another term, despite the heavy inroads upon his private time is evidence that he is sincere in his determination to carry out certain plans for the benefit of the people. He has a big following in every section of town that wants to see him keep up the war work and other activities of his own making. It was only at the urging of his many friends that the Mayor decided to become a candidate for re-election and it is believed that his constituents will support him strongly on primary day.

Mr. Moy, too, is not without disqualification. He made an excellent official during his one term six years ago, despite the fact that he was not in harmony with the political leaders of the day and the oppositions extended to the Council itself. He was heckled on every side and harrassed at every move. His appointments were held up by the Council and orders issued from his office were not obeyed as promptly as they might have been, to say nothing of the actual obstruction that was frequently placed in his administration path. The one thing that stands against him more than anything else, is the remembrance of his Sunday closing campaign, which led to the impression that he is an extremist. Mr. Moy is not altogether an extremist, as he never fails to admit that he has been wrong in any of his ideas or actions and that is something the extremists never do. In deciding upon the Sunday closing, the former Mayor was only enforcing laws that someone else made. If they are obnoxious to the people they should be taken from the ordinance books and not left there to invite enforcement or clutter up the records.

Mr. Moy went in office, tried to do what he thought was right and that is all that can be expected of any official in the discharge of his duties. The experience he gained during his one term as Mayor was of great value to him and should he again be honored by the voters he will undoubtedly profit by what he learned. At any rate, there are favorable points about both of the candidates and it will remain for a good clean campaign to bring out which of the two have the most merit. The voters themselves must decide.

HOW PLAINFIELD CAN HELP CONSERVE.

The patriotic women of Cranford have found a very practical way of helping the soldiers stationed at the Government hospital at Colonia and later helping the inmates of that institution. They intend to gather together such vegetables and fruits as exceeds the wants of those cultivating gardens or fruit orchids and convert them into food for the men quartered at the Government hospital. Lettuce, rhubarb and green vegetables have already been contributed to supplement their rations.

The idea may be carried yet further if a little planning and extra effort is made to do so. Unless more effort than formerly is made to convert excess fruits into foods that may be kept for future use, thousands of bushels of apples, peaches, tomatoes, pears, etc., will be wasted on the farms of the country. Such will be wasted within a hundred miles of this metropolitan district.

During the past years thousands of bushels of fall apples have rotted on the ground in farm orchards because the farmers have not found a ready and profitable market for them or have not had the time to harvest, pack them up, and send them to the city markets. Fruits seconds may be converted into jellies, apple butter and other food delicacies that would be greatly appreciated at the hospitals.

It is quite likely that such organizations as the one at Cranford could secure apples at a very reasonable price from farmers for the purpose of preparing products for war hospitals.

The farmers would be glad to have such a market opened for their fall fruit, and would do their part in supplying it. They would be influenced to make the price reasonable if they understood that the fruit was to be converted into delicacies for the hospitals.

The women of Cranford, at any rate, have given the world a good idea. Let all fruit and vegetables in this section that otherwise would not be used, be gathered up and prepared for the enlisted men, wherever they are.

It will be of great benefit to the Government in its great plan of conservation and show the boys at Colonia that Plainfield is not behind when work is to be done.

"PICKING THE WINNER" (A PRIMARY TIP).

"He's tented each night on the political camp ground,"
He's preached many doctrines which are new and unsound,
He's tried to catch voters with all kinds of bait:
But Record won't leave the boundaries of the State.

So Grey "rushes in where Colgate fears to tread,"
And he's only an echo of a candidate dead.
His platform is an "Anti," to everything new.
What's "illegal" depends upon the point of view.

Edge had no choice but his race to fully run,
You cannot kill a rival with a hot-air gun,
On the record as a Governor he has made.
He'll win the fight, despite the politician's raid.

Since we must all choose in this Republican fight,
These lines will give to voters much needed light
Of the candidates three, the last is the best.
Do your Primary duty, the party will do the rest.

A TIPSTER.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Plainfield officials first talked about the advisability of having a city park worthy of the name?

When you and your paticular gang carved your initials in the white birch trees in Steele's Woods, now a part of the "Red Roses" property?

When Tom Jones dished the ice cream out of a tub in Tier's traveling wagon, which announced its coming by a string of sleigh-bells jingled by Thomas himself?

When you tried to fool mother by rubbing dirt on your face so she wouldn't know you had "snuked" off to the forbidden swimming pool?

When Captain Edwards was in command of the High School cadet corps and Professor Knowlton borrowed trouble by accepting the job of drill-master for the "awkward squad?"

When Plainfield sports hired a buggy on Saturday night and paid two dollars apiece to see a cock fight at Scotch Plains?

When declamations took up most of Friday afternoon at the Fourth street school and when it came your turn to recite you had your choice of "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Marco Bozzaris" and "The Gambler's Wife?"

PICKINGS FROM POLTICAL PUCKERINGS.

At first we thought that Leighton C.
Would be the only one,
But Mr. Moy said, "Here I Be,"
And now we'll have some fun.

Mr. Moy is in the race all right, all right, but what gets us is why Messrs. Hetfield, Carroll, Townsend et als., fail to hear the rumbling of the coming storm when they made that tour of investigation for public sentiment.

Last week's heat wave was terrific but it will be as a chilling zephyr from a flock of ice-bergs in comparison when the Economyites dig into the archives of "The House of a Thousand Bungles," commonly referred to as the City Hall.

And, say, did you notice that there is a very strong possibility that John H. Cose may be named by Governor Edge to fill the vacancy on the Election Board? 'Pears like as though Brer John is coming back at the Judases of last fall who stuck a knife between his ribs and gave an awful twist.

P. B. Public—We have looked all over the shelves but can find no law against political muffler cut-out, although we understand that at certain few of our citizens in conference last spring decided that they are somewhat of a nuisance, especially when the faithful are holding a nomination love feast.

There are some men who love the income tax more for the way it socks it to the millionaires than for the revenue it provides for the purpose of licking the Hun. Tut, tut, Mr. Plainfielder, don't protest; you are no different from the rest.

About half the time when they put punk stuff over on you and tell you the war is responsible for it, they are simply lying about it. It has gotten to be such a common thing that most of us accept the fib without a murmur but, thank Heavens, there are still a few red-blooded citizens left who can make a howl, and one of these days, all these patriotic pirates are going to suffer.

Maybe the censor had a taste in his mouth like a motorman's glove, maybe his best girl decided to go to the dance with another fellow or maybe it was just pure carelessness on his part but anyway, here it is just as it was printed in the Class Magazine of the Plainfield Grammar School, Eighth Grade:

Teacher—"Harold, how long does Mayor Calkins' term last?

Harold (in a hesitating voice)—"Till the next election."

Yes, we're going to weed out all of the uniform-wearing barons and the lecturing returned heroes one of these days—and put all our philanthropy into the hands of recognized agencies which will see that it gets over to the boys.

"Are you eating as much as you should?" asks a patent pill ad. No, we are not, but the difficulty isn't one that pills can remedy.

There may be some social advantages in being a second lieutenant in the training camp, but after the war the enlisted man will not be handicapped for lack of a gold bar when he comes to run for justice of the peace.

Another thing that tends to make John D. Rockefeller unpopular in the democratic party is, the old man has done unto us what we have been wanting to do unto him, and he beat us to it.

The assessor's figures show that the Postoffice building on Watchung avenue, which yields no tax, is assessed right to the roof for its full value of $110,000, but the former Hood property at Stelle and Plainfield avenues, asserted to have been sold for $100,000, pays taxes on only $41,000. Three ripe raspberries and two strong onions for the small owner giving the best answer as to why the discrepancy.

Up to the hour of going to press, the peanut-stand owners, the boot-blacks and Sunday newspaper vendors had exhibited no enthusiasm over the announcement of Mr. Moy that he would like to get back to his old chair.

Today's official communiques from headquarters on North avenue contined the following:

"It is quite true that the heavy barrage directed against our forces by the Economyites was somewhat of a surprise but this was due to the fact that we were misled by the reports of Lieutenants Hetfield, Carroll, Townsend and Weeks and others after their return from night patrol duty. The enemy had carefully concealed his batteries until we had made our advance and could not retire without upsetting the morale of our gallant troops. However, we have brought up our shock troops, many of whom in civil life sold ice cream and peanuts and have a remarkable knowledge of human nature and are counted upon to throw back the advancing division. At present we shall rely mainly upon literary shrapnel but as the conflict grows stronger, we intend to use immense quantities of hot air and gas. Field Marshal Reed, whose health at present has been deployed, to put down a sporadic rebellion on the Elk frontier, will be recalled at once and will assume his old position on the strategy board. Last night all was quiet along the enemy lines with the exception of local artillery duels but several airmen report evidences of long ranged guns being brought up to the Mono forest.

Former Councilman Endorses Calkins

Former Councilman Leslie R. Fort, now in the service, and stationed in General March's office at Washington, has written the following letter of endorsement following Mayor Calkins' announcement that he would be a candidate for re-election:

Washington, D. C.,
August 13, 1918.

Editor, The Record:

May I, as a former councilman, and proerty owner in Plainfield, say a word regarding Mayor Calkins' decision o again seek re-election?

It was my privilege to work with him for six months, and during that time I never saw him make a move that was not for the benefit of the whole people of the city. I do not believe that it would be possible to find another man for the place who would give so whole-heartedly his time to the best interests of every resident and taxpayer. No one realizes the sacrifices he has made during the past four years, except those who have had the privilege to be intimately associated with him in conducting the business of the city. He has been open-minded on every thing which has come before him for decision, and has never made a move without thoroughly studying each case from all angles. To lose him at this time, when good men, because of the many demands brought about by the ward, are hard to find, would be little short of a calamity.

The few kickers against his administration are perpetual kickers, and are never found allied with the broad-minded people who are trying to do constructive work for the good of our city. The people of Plainfield will look back in future years to the time when Leighton Calkins was in office as one in which more things for the good of the whole people were done than during any similar period in the history of the city.

STANDARD AERO WORKERS JAILED ON STRIKE CHARGE.

Suppressing an attempted strike at the Standard Aircraft Corporation's plant in Bayway, Wednesday, the uniform guard, under command of Captain Everett Jacobs, arrested six laborers who are alleged to have threatened other workmen and endeavored to intimidate them from returning to work at the noon hour. The prisoners were James McGrath and Booth Caldwell, both of 147 Rector street; George Starr, of 816 Washington place; Festus Hyde, colored, of 27 Washington avenue, of Elizabeth, and Abe Thompson and Henry Morrisey, both of Richomnd terrace, Staten Island.

All of them were taken to police headquarters where they were arraigned before Acting Judge Brown on charges of disorderly conduct. It was said that they tried to force a strike among the laborers in order to secure an increase in pay. They were receiving forty cents an hour, according to Captain Jacobs. All six were discharged after promising not to cause any further trouble. The four Elizabeth men agreed to return to work at the aircraft plant while the Staten Island residents expressed a preference for employment in a shipyard nearer their home.

STATE HOUSE COMMISSION BARS HIGH-PRICED CARS.

The State House Commission has recommended to the heads of the different States institutions that in purchasing automobiles for State use they do not exceed the price of $1,500 on an ordinary car, and for a small roadster $1,000.

The commission has, under a new act, fixed the per capita allowance per week to be paid for county insane patients at $2.50 in place of $2, and increased the per capita for tuberculosis patients to $6 a week.

Attorney-General Boggs advises tht the commission may give the Inter-State Bridge and Tunnel Commission permission to hire an engineer to fix a site for the Camden end of the Delaware River bridge to Philadelphia.

War Service through War Saving

The Liberty Loan and Thrift Stamp Campaigns are teaching the people of this country to save, but as a nation we have only made a beginning. Our savings per capita are still far below those of many foreign countries and we can all improve on what we have already done.

The opening of a 4% interest account in our Special Department will be a great incentive to future savings and money can always be borrowed against such accounts for the purchase of Liberty Bonds.

Rob the Railroads And the Government Will Prosecute You

Thieves who prey upon railroad property no longer steal from a corporation but from the United States Government. Word to this effect is contained in a circular letter sent out by Joshua Gray, chief of the New Jersey Central's force of private police. It tells of a particular case of thievery from the railroad, as follows:

Jersey City, N. J.,
August 12th, 1918.

Editor, The Record:

Henry Bernsweig, of 1151 Summit avenue, Jersey City, was convicted of receiving nine bales out of a lot of 110 bales of silk stolen from a C. R. R. of N. J. car in Jersey City, in United States District Court at Newark, and sentenced to ten years in the United States Prison at Atlanta, Georgia, and fined $5,000.

Daniel Mecca, of 417 Tenth avenue, New York city, and Wesley Thurston, of 431 West Thirty-fourth street, New York city, were convicted before the same judge for conspiracy in the robbery of the abovementioned silk, which was valued at $100,000, and sentence; Thurston to one year and one day, and Mecca to two years in the United States Prison at Atlanta, Georgia. These two men were tried previously in Hudson County Court at Jersey City and acquitted for the theft of this silk. They were employed by the Central Railroad of N. J. as checkers, which made it a very easy matter for them to steal the silk. The evidence showed that one helped to load the silk, and the other was on the freight platform with a pencil and pad as though he was checking it as it was being loaded on the truck out of the car. Shey were performing their regular duties, but they not only failed to make any report of the arrival and unloading of this carload of silk, but they also destroyed the waybills. After their acquittal they sued the Central Railroad of New Jersey for $25.000 damages each for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution; case still pending. Many railroad employes saw the transaction, but there was no suspicion aroused on account of the men's positions until a week later when the silk did not arrive at destination when it was traced from Seattle, Washington, to Jersey City.

Railroad thieves stealing from the railroad will be prosecuted in the future in the United States courts vigorously.

P. J. Doherty, manager Property Protection Section, Washington, D. C., is urging vigorous action in all cases, as those now stealing from the railroads are actually stealing from the United States Government, and hampering it in the prosecution of the war.

Kindly give this item as much space as you can and assist Uncle Sam in destroying the efforts of organized thievery upon the Government's property.

Very respectfully,
JOSHUA B. GRAY,
Chief of Police.

War Revenue Plan Still Falls Short A Billion Dollar

The House ways and means committee entered Monday on what Chairman Kitchin regards as the final week of the task of framing the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill, with the big measure so far as planned still a billion dollars short of the goal. Excess profits and income taxes were to have provided $6,000,000,000, but their total falls short of that figure and the luxuries taxes, allotted the $2,000,000,000 balance will only produce a small part of that amount.

The luxury tax already has been written into the bill with two groups of articles assessed ten and twenty per cent., respectively, but six or more additions already are being talked of. Furniture and chinaware probably will be added, and luxury tax to apply above certain prices.

Most of the taxes in the bill will be effective immediately upon its enactment. The income tax will apply to the calendar year and the excess profits tax will have the same application except where a concern's books are based on a fiscal year different from that of the government's, in which case the company will pay its tax pro rata, according to the difference. The estate tax will apply from the date of the President's approval of the bill. The luxuries taxes will be effective a few weeks after the President's approval.

Chairman Kitchin did not go to the Capitol Monday, taking a complete rest. If he has evolved a plan to make up the billion dollar deficiency, he has not made it known to the committee. He will receive information early this week, from the treasury, giving the estimated revenue from the industries falling under the excess profits proposed tax.

It has been calculated that in the plan of an alternative system of excess profits and war profits taxes whichever would produce the higher revenue to be applied in any given case, ninety per cent. of all American industries would fall under the alternative war profits tax and the other ten per cent. in the straight excess profits tax. Some members of the committee believe Chairman Kitchin will yield to the treasury plan to let excess profits stand as under the present law and it is claimed that revised figures show the bill then will be with $300,000,000 of the total sought.

An effort will be made in the committee to write into the bill more elastic provisions as to exceptional business, with the dual object to avoid breaking down any particular industry and to allow a latitude of action that would permit raising more revenue than under too rigid language. Members of the committee point to the proposal to tax gross sales of retailers as a feasible plan.

Despite Chairman Kitchin's plan from the outset to avoid resort to the tariff, in the pending revenue bill, some committee sentiment apparently had turned toward the feasibility of a war-time increase on a limited number of customs items.

A tax of five per cent., or approximately that rate, on gifts of all kinds without qualification for the period of the war was favored Monday by Representative Hull, of Tennessee, one of the Democratic members of the committee, and the author of the income tax law. "We could raise $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 by a tax on gifts," he said.

Congress, with its legislative program, jammed with revenue, selective service and water power and other important bills, will not adjourn until just before the November elections, according to a prediction Monday by Speaker Clark after he had surveyed the situation. He said that while the ways and mean committee is planning to report the revenue bill when the House reassembles a week from Tuesday, the administration bill for general development of water power, by previous agreement, has right of way and can only be displaced by unanimous consent. It has been announced the military age extension bill will be considered promptly in the House military committee with hearings.

War Chest Plan of Money Distribution Not So Favorable

Although only one conference on the subject has been held, sentiment seems to be evenly divided on the proposition of adopting the War Chest plan of relief work in Plainfield. It is not improbable that the idea may be dropped entirely but not until Mayor Leighton Calkins has called another meeting of all interested to decide whether or not it would be advisable. This meeting will be called as soon as officers and leading members of the most important charitable organizations return from their summer vacations.

Mayor Calkins was induced to take up the War Chest plan through numerous requests from Plainfielders who had noted its success in other cities. Believing that it had certain merits as well as certain disadvantages, the Mayor decided to hold a conference with charity workers and go over the ground very carefully. This was done last month and although nothing definite was decided upon the opinions expressed were of great value to the executive in proceeding further. Since then he has gotten in touch with State Councils of Defense throughout the country and committees working under the War Chest plan in other cities and he has gained a lot of valuable information. From this he has compiled a set of pro and con "arguments" on the War Chest plan. These he has sent to Plainfield organizations and institutions for further enlightenment before the next meeting is held.

In favor of the plan, Mayor Calkins sets forth the following:

1. Economy of time and effort, by the consolidation of all separate campaigns into a single drive to raise an aggregate fund sufficient to carry all war relief work, and local philanthropic work, for a year.

2. The support of all worthy causes is assured.

3. The War Chest has been tried and has succeeded in many cities, the budget being largely oversubscribed in some cases, and the number of contributors much greater than where separate campaigns were conducted.

4. It is the application of the budget system, which we use in our public and business affairs, to relief work; and is therefore logically a desirable method of procedure.

5. It unites the patriotic community spirit, and so makes it more effective.

Against the plan are these points:

1. Separate campaigns tend to stimulate the patriotic community spirit and keep it alive. This would be lost under the War Chest plan as one's monthly payments into the Chest would become as matter of fact as the payment of gas bills and other current expenses.

2. With the great diversity of causes, many wish to contribute to some and not to others. Indnvidual, denominational, and racial interest is also minimized in the War Chest. It might be arranged tht people could have their money go to certain objects, yet the common fund idea would dominate.

3. The large majority of people who give have small incomes, many of them in these times have very uncertain incomes, and will find it very difficult to pledge themselves in advance; whereas they can always give up to the limit of their ability at the time of each separate drive.

4. If the War Chest is business-like and logical, because it applies the budget system to relief work; then we should go a step further and consolidate the management of all these activities. In other words, why have separate organizations at all? Why not have all war relief work managed by one, national in character? And the same reasoning would apply to local philanthropies.

Carrying out his determination to get as much information on the subject as possible, the Mayor wrote to Samuel Insull, chairman of the Illinois State Council of Defense and received from him a copy of a letter sent to Edward P. Jones, chairman of the Connecticut State Council, who had asked the same information. This letter is as follows:

Mr. Edward P. Jones, Chairman,
Committee on Commercial Relations,
Connecticut State Council of Defense,
Hartford, Conn.

Dear Sir:

In response to your letter of April 29 inquiring as to the action of the State Council of Defense in Illinois with reference to the "War Chest" plan, I beg to advise you that by Act of our Legislature any organization or individual soliciting funds for war relief purposes must receive a license from the State Council of Defense, except such organizations as are specifically exempted under the law.

A number of towns and in two or three cases counties of the State have organized "War Chests" which have been licensed by the State Council.

The State Council of Defense early recignized that a comprehensive and practical plan for the various financial campaigns was desirable and instructed each county in the State to organize a "County Finance Committee" which would be a permanent body and which would undertake the financial campaigns as they came along.

The State Council did not prescribe just what form this County Finance Committee should take and in several instances the War Chest plan was adopted and was licensed.

The more experience we have had with the subject the more objections and weaknesses we find in this plan and we have of late strongly advised against the adoption of the War Chest plan.

We have not as yet absolutely refused to approve the issuance of a license when application has been made. Among the principal objections to the plan we would note the following:

Each one of the financial campaigns whether for Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Liberty Loan, War Savings Stamps, War Camp Community Service, etc., has greatly stimulated the public patriotic spirit and has had a beneficial effect. This stimulus would be entirely lacking as soon as the "War Chest" is completed and the periodical payments to the Chest would become as matter of fact as the payments of gas bills and other current expenses.

The publicity and arousing of public sentiment which has been the attendant of each one of the money-raising campaigns would have to be accomplished in some other way and there would, therefore, not be any particular saving in energy or expense.

Then, too, it seems to us impossible to estimate the amount of money which must be raised for the war activities in the future, and most of the "War Chest," and with the great diversity of causes requiring financial support it must be appreciated that some people will wish to contribute to one and not to another, and the individual interest is minimized in the "War Chest."

The American Red Cross War Council has recently taken a definite stand against the "War Chest" idea and we think it most probable that the Y. M. C. A. will also do so. If these two major organizations withdraw their co-operation, it would seem that the "War Chest" plan must necessarily fail.

The plan which we most favor is a permanent committee in each county with sub-divisions by townships or school districts which will undertake each one of the financial campaigns and keep a card index record of what each person in the county has contributed. This plan has been worked out in detail and is successfully operating in a number of our counties.

Trusting that this is the information which you desire, I am,

Yours very truly,
SAMUEL INSULL,
Chairman.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Edward Ditzel, an eighteen-year-old lad who refused to give any home address, was sent to the county jail by Mayor Leighton Calkins, this week, in default of $500 bail to wait the action of the grand jury on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. He was arrested at Watchung avenue and Fourth street after he had discharged a loaded revolver five times from a Union Line trolley. The police believe Ditzel is a little shy on mentality and he will be examined by the county physician.

Julia S. Townley, of Putnam avenue, this city, has brought suit in the county court to recover an unpaid $500 promissory note signed by Mrs. Hattie P. Taggart, of 819 Park avenue. The case is returnable at the October term.

Marcus Carsello, of Midway avenue, was fatally injured, and Howard Templin, of 189 North avenue, received a broken ankle and other hurts in the foundry of the Pond Tool Works, Saturday morning, when a caldron of molten metal fell against them. Carsello died in Muhlenberg Hospital later in the day, but Templin is still a patient at the institution. The funeral of the victim was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Solomon Schwartzman, of New Brunswick, was fined $5 in the city police court by Mayor Calkins, Wednesday, after he had been found guilty of driving his machine recklessly at Fourth and Liberty streets, Sunday night at 7:30, and crashing into the rear of a taxi-cab driven by George Barry, of Howard street, the borough. Barry was also fined $1 on a charge of speeding. The latter's machine was damaged to the extent of $100 and Schwartzman agreed to pay for the repairs. Riding with Barry at the time of the accident were five other young men but all escaped injury despite the fact that their car was turned completely around by the force of the impact.

John B. Piazzo, proprietor of a "speak-easy" at 35½ Prospect place, was fined $50 by Mayor Smalley, in the borough police court, Sunday night. Five other men caught in the place when raided by Chief Marshal Weise and several marshals were released with a reprimand. They gave their names as Fred Brovarone, 5 Grove street; Joseph Boldrin, 312 West Second street; John Ricci, 129 East Second street; John Porter, 45 Park [illegible] and Guiseppi Bolfri, 155 Thom[illegible] street, New York city.

An auto-truck belonging to the New Jersey Ice Cream Company, of Newark, and driven by Fred Buob, of Maplewood, collided with a touring car belonging to Herman Theis, of Muhlenberg place, and driven by Lloyd Sharp at Park avenue and Randolph road, Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Theis were in the touring car but escaped unhurt. Buob and Sharp were arrested on a charge of reckless driving, but in the city court Monday morning, Judge DeMeza declared the latter blameless after hearing the testimony. Buob paid a fine of $5.

Philip S. Suffern, who was appointed to fill the unexpired term in the Common Council, brought about by the resignation of John S. Dahl, has announced that he will not seek election at the polls in November as private business affairs prevent him from giving the necessary time to the people.

In response to an appeal made by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, Sunday morning, the members of St. Mary's church contributed a collection of $200 for the Home of the Blind at Jersey City.

Charles H. Frost, of Franklin place, has been named local Food Administrator to serve during the absence from the city of Joseph B. Yerkes, who is at present on a vacation and will not return until September 15.

Deputy Sheriff Alexander Ayers, of this city, has engaged W. S. Angleman, as attorney in an appeal to be made to the State Civil Service Commission in the matter of the readjustment of the salaries of deputy sheriffs recently made by the Board of Freeholders.

It is understood an appeal has also been made to the Civil Service Protective League, of Newark, and that the league, through its counsel, will take up the matter.

Ayres, along with Jacob Miller, of New Providence, and Charles Fisher, of Summit, claim they have been reduced in salary by the recent standardization of the pay of the deputies. They formerly could earn $1,212 yearly, they say, while the standard rate fixed is $1,200.

Two Plainfield physicians who recently enlisted in the Medical Corps and received commissions as captains, received word this week to report for duty. Dr. H. V. Hubbard, the eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, of Central avenue, was ordered to proceed at once to Fort Oglethorpe Ga., and left for there Tuesday night. Dr. P. B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, has been instructed to report at Camp Meade, Md., on August 27, and is now warranging his private business affairs and practice to conform with the date of departure.

Included in a list of twenty-one New Jersey men receiving commissions the past week, is Cornelius Murray, of 806 West Front street, who is now a second lieutenant. Murray was a member of the former Troop D and went to the Mexican border with that organization two years ago when the troop was ordered Camp McClellan he was still in the ranks and when the Plainfield unit was broken up was transferred to an artillery division. He will be assigned to a new company in a few days and expects to go overseas very shortly.

The Federal Grand Jury, in the Newark district, has ailed to find an indictment against Arthur Klausner, of East Second street, this city, arrested recently on a charge of falsifying his questionnaire, and accordingly Judge Lynch ordered his release Wednesday. Klausner alleges that his arrest was the result of spite work on the part of personal enemies. Leon Livingston, of Grove street, the borough, was was arrested because he swore to the validity of Klausner's statements, is still held under bail but his case will probably be disposed of today or tomorrow.

In order to co-operate with the war ecenomy board, in carrying out its plan of conservation, the automobile dealers of Plainfield and North Plainfield have formed an association to impress upon auto owners the need of being careful in the use of gasoline, tires, oil and automobile parts. The organization will hold regular meetings and in a short time will have a carefully prepared plan of action along the same lines adopted by the National Automobile Dealers' Association.

The City Union of King's Daughters is in need of $5,000 to carry on its day nursery, children's infirmary and other charitable work and to that end has fixed upon Saturday, September 21, for a tag day. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Union, Tuesday. The work of this organization is one of the most important of the kind in Plainfield and it is hoped that Plainfielders will meet the emergency by contributing the amount of money needed for the care of mothers and babies.

Charles Palacio, whose home is on upper North avenue, was taken in custody by the local police, Wednesday, at the request of the military authorities who stated that he had overstayed his furlough from Watervliet Arsenal. The prisoner was taken to Governor's Island by Police Lieutenant Higgins, yesterday.

Harry Hall, of 1220 South avenue, was treated at Muhlenberg Hospital, Tuesday night for treatment after he had ran his motorcycle into a horse-drawn rig on lower Park avenue, near the city line. Hall's injuries consisted mainly of cuts and bruises and after these were dressed he was sent home. The owner of the horse-drawn rig did not make his identity known.

Because of the increased cost of maintenance, Camp Endeavor, located on the mountains back of Scotch Pains, will close next Monday, two weeks earlier than usual. The camp is maintained by the County Christian Endeavor Union and gives vacation for two weeks to poor children of the county who would otherwise have to stay at home. The high price of foodstuffs depleted the available funds of the committee and it was decided to end the summer season earlier than usual to avoid a financial deficit.

No More Liquor on Trains or in Stations

No more intoxicating drinks will be sold in dining cars, railroad restaurants, or anywhere in railroad stations. Director General McAdoo issued this order this week.

The main reason given is that Mr. McAdoo does not believe that the government should engage in the business of selling liquors. The order reads:

"The sale of liquors and intoxicants of every character in dining cars, restaurants and railroad stations under federal control shall be discontinued immediately."

Mr. McAdoo wired to Washington a week ago to have the order ready for his signature upon his return.

Not many dining car services will be affected, for the majority of the railroads have already banned the sale of intoxicants upon their trains.

However, there are bars in various railway stations, for instance in both the Grand Central and Pennsylvania terminals in New York, the Union Station in Baltimore, and in other cities. These will be closed immediately.

"Dry" advocates were jubilant when they learned of the McAdoo order.

Walter Zimmerman, of Park avenue, is home from his vacation spent at Asbury Park.

Mail Records Broken at Dix the Past Week

OTHER NEWS OF INTEREST FROM THE BIG CAMP WHERE MANY PLAINFIELDERS ARE LOCATED.

During the past eight days the mails that have been handled at the Camp Dix postoffice have been the heaviest since the opening of the cantonment. Last Friday 95,000 first class poleces of incoming mail were handled with 2,500 special delivery letters. With the big population now in camp the amount of mail sent out is enormous and in one day six three-ton trucks were needed to transport the parcel post packages for one train, while three of the trucks met each train and carried the bags to the postoffice for distribution to the soldiers at the camp.

The largest money-order business in the history of the camp was transacted over the week-end and thousands of dollars' worth of stamps are sold each day as the various Y. M. huts and K. of C. buildings carry supplies of stamps on hand and it is not infrequent that one of the secretaries drops into the postoffice and buys several hundreds dollars' worth of stamps.

Despite the heated spell of last week work went on without interruption and Col. George L. Forman, of Trenton, and his staff of workers labored unceasingly in order that there would be no delay in either the shipment or distribution of the mail.

Steps are being taken by military authorities at Dix to prevent a repetition of the disorder during the past week-end due to the fact that hundreds of soldiers obtained passes stating that they were going to make the trip to their homes by autos and then thronged into Trenton and endeavored to obtain passage on the trains. When this was refused they had recourse to the trolley, with the result that the Public Service Corporation was unable to supply the unexpected demand and large numbers of the men were unable to get to their homes until late at night.

Each week the Pennsylvania Railroad Company notifies the camp authorities as to the number of men that they can accommodate on the trains and the passes are issued accordingly. Those men who can reach their homes by autos are granted passes in addition to this, but if the privilege is abused it is likely that steps will be taken to allow only a certain number home, no matter which way they travel. This would be a hardship to men in nearby towns or to those who do not get home very frequently, as the number allowed each week-end would be reduced and the time between passes made longer.

Unit commanders will take more notice this week of the passes in order that no one will take advantage of the auto clause who is not able to make the entire trip by machine and in this way it is hoped that the situation will be remedied.

Night marches and field manoeuvres in the inky darkness are on the daily program of the various units of the 67th Divisioin this week in order that the men may become accustomed to moving in the dark and reaching appointed places by aid of the compass and stars. Then too it also allows for the holding of drills that had to be postponed from the middle of the day on account of the heat but which are very essential in the training of the men for future duty "over there."

About 1,200 men a day are being given the gas test, which every man must pass before he is allowed to go over there. The big barn on the Lippincott Farm, which is now being used for a gas chamber, is kept going all day and it is soon expected that the division will qualify to a man in this department, which is very essential if a soldier wished to protect himself while on the battle front.

A new administration building will be erected near the main Knights of Columbus building for the secretaries who are directing the K of C. activities at Camp Dix. It will be a portable structure 30x80 feet and in bungalow style. One-half will be used for offices and the other will contain lockers for the men who will use the new swimming pool to be constructed at Dix through the donation of Mrs. E. H. Stoutesbury of Philadelphia.

Work has been begun on the new building for the Jewish welfare workers in camp. It is expected it will be ready in the early fall.

That the fame of the Dix song leaders is spreading far is evident from the recogntion given Stetson Humphrey, War Department song leader, and Chrystal Brown, Y. M. C. A. song leader, by various nearby communities which have often requested that the men be sent there to lead Liberty sings. To Humphrey another honor was given, that of being invited to lead the big sing which was held Wednesday night at Willow Grove, Philadelphia. A quaret from the remount station alo attended.

Lieutenant John F Walsh, formerly post chaplain at Dix, said goodby and started Tuesday for Panama where he will be stationed as a chaplain.

A reception was given to Dr. P. F. Buffa, an Italian-American, who is lecturing for the Shipping Board. The men were eager to know more about the part played by Italy in the war, and of particular interest was his visit to the 300 odd officers and men who escaped from the Austrian army and who are now at Dix awaiting a ship back to Italy.

Despite the rather threatening weather Bonday, a large number of visitors were at the camp. Rumors that a quarantine would again be placed on Dix seemed to have spread broadcast, and relatives of the soldiers, fearing they might be kept out within the next few weeks, made sure to make their visit while the place was opened to visitors. At the present time there is no reason for the rumor.

With the heat wave apparently over, drills will be resumed by all organizations.

Restrictions Lifted on Beef Consumption

Restrictions on the consumption of beef in public eating places and the voluntary restrictions on householders, were removed Monday by the food administration.

The regulations rescinded this action prohibited serving beef more than once a day in restaurants and hotels, and limited domestic consumption to one and a half pounds a person weekly. In suspending these regulations about one month earlier than it contemplated, the food administration requests that the use of beef be restricted as far as practicable to cattle which dress under 475 pounds. Retailers are urged to purchase lighter cattel and the public is asked to patriotically accept it although used to the heavier beef, so that the military forces and the Allies may have the heavier grades which are required for export.

Extreme drought in Texas, Oklahoma and other sections of the Southwest and some cattle States of the Northwest, the food administration's statement says, is endangering the meat herds, creating an abnormal run of cattle to market. The larger part is below market weights and would normally remain on the ranges longer.

The desire of the food administration at present, the statement says, is not primarily to increase the consumption of beef as a whole, but to induce a preference in favor of the lighter weight cattle, of which we have an abnormal surplus. This will bring about a conservation of the heavier cattle needed for our soldiers and for export to our Allies. At the same time it will afford a measure of protection through increased outlet for cattle raisers in the drought-affected areas.

"There is always a liberal run of the lighter cattle at this season of the year, but the present supply is excessive.

"Practically all of the heavier and fatter cattle are needed for export purposes, for our own armed forces and those of our allies, because on account of their thickness and fatty covering they are less subject to deterioration during the transfer from cars to ships and freezers where they are not protected by refrigeration.

"In rescinding regulations which prohibited public eating places from serving beef more than once a day and in releasing the householders from their voluntary agreement to curtail purchases to one and one-half pounds a week, including both, the food administration requests that this freer use of beef be restricted so far as practicable to the cattle which dress under 475 pounds. To achieve this, the retail meat markets are asked to specialize in the sale of these lighter cattle, and families and patrons of all public eating places are requested to patriotically accept beef of this weight, even though they have heretofore been accustomed to using the heavier beef only."

Jersey's Response in Labor Mobilization

That the State of New Jersey and the various municipalities were prepared to meet the President's proclamation directing the mobilization of labor on August 1st is evidenced by reports submitted by Col. Lewis T. Bryant, Federal Director of Employment for New Jersey.

The number of men and women placed in employment in New Jersey by the Federal-State-Municipal Public Employment Bureau in the month of July far exceeds the record established for any previous thirty-day period.

It is of interest to note the placements made in the various municipalities in which the Employment Service is operated. The July record is as follows:

Newark, 8,618; Jersey City, 1,182; Orange, 345; Atlantic City, 747; Trenton, 1,437; Perth Amboy, 501; Camden, 2,375; Paterson, 1,568; total number of men and women placed in employment through the Government, State and City Co-operation Public Employment Bureau for July, 1918, 16,763.

Since August 1st Public Employment Offices have been opened in the following cities: Bayonne, Phillipsburg, Passaic and New Brunswick.

Other communities in New Jersey which have sent representatives to the Federal Director of Employment advising that the sentiment in their respective cities was favorable for the operation of a Federal-State and Municipal Employment Office include: Asbury Park, Chrome, Plainfield, Rahway and Bound Brook.

The New Jersey report has been filed by Commissioner of Labor Bryant with John B. Densmore, director general of the U. S. Employment Service at Washington.

MECHANICS ARE NEEDED ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

A summary of labor conditions throughout the country for the week ended August 10, issued by the Department of Labor, shows a general shortage of unskilled labor east of the Mississippi River and a shortage of farm labor in all sections except the Southern and Southwestern States.

There is a general demand for machinists, boilermakers and molders in all localities, as well as for mechanics generally, although calls for automobile and electrical workers are slightly lessened, due to curtailment of manufacture because of shortage of material.

A demand for shipbuilders at Seattle, Philadelphia, Wilmington, New York and Galveston is noted. There is a general surplus of workers in the building trades, which seem to be again passing through a period of depression. The demand for female labor in factories and munition plants continues.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stewart of West Eighth street, are summering at Southampton.

Police Get 1,200 Slackers in Dragnet

As the outcome of a dragnet spread by the police of Trenton, assisted by 400 members of home guard organizations, 1,200 young men, lacking registration cards, were taken into custody Monday night and hustled to the Second Regiment Armory for examination. Thirty of this number now are held by the police as slackers, while many others have been released under police surveillance, awaiting confirmation of claims that they have been duly registered.

The round-up, carefully planned, under instructions from the War Department, was directed against theatres and other public places where the young men of the city are accustomed to gather in the evening. The hour set was 9 o'clock, and from that time until midnight automobiles were kept busy hustling suspects to the armory. In most cases the young men taken into custody had merely neglected to have their cards in their possession, an omission which resulted in many being compelled to spend the night at the armory.

For several days preceding the raid warning notices had been published in local newspapers, advising young men to carry with them their selective service cards at all times. No reason was given for the advice, and it was not even intimated that a raid was planned. Members of the home guard unit, gathered at the police stations shortly after 8 p. m., when the theatre audiences had already assembled. Accompanied by squads of police they were assigned to various theatres and public places with instructions as to how to proceed.

Promptly at 9 o'clock the police and home guards swooped down on the theatres, all exits to which were carefully guarded. Captains of the various squads explained to the audiences the presence of the officers, and in many cases their remarks were greeted with enthusiastic applause.

The audiences were advised to remain until the end of the performances, and in the mean time the search for young men without credentials was begun. When the performances concluded those without cards were held until they could be transported to the armory. Citizens of Trenton had lent their automobiles for the occasion, and little difficulty was encountered in the round-up.

The local registration boards were all in session at the armory, and under their supervision the work of checking up registrants was begun. In the mean time hurry calls were sent out by young men who had left their registration cards at home, and many of these were delivered at the armory in the course of the night. It was also found that in the round-up many had been taken into custody who were either above or below the registration age. These, of course, were released upon furnishing satisfactory evidence of age.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

JAMES MOTTLEY.

James Mottley, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Mottley, of 1141 West Fifth street, died Wednesday morning, after a long illness. The little fellow had been at Muhlenberg Hospital for several weeks but was taken home Tuesday, when it was realized that he could not recover. He was the only child in the family and the bereaved parents have the extreme sympathy of all their friends. The funeral was held at the late home yesterday afternoon, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. SOREN SORENSON.

Mrs. Mary Sorenson, wife of Soren Sorenson, died at her home at 204 Spooner avenue, Monday morning. She had been ill a long tihe. The funeral was held at the late home Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, and burial was in Evergreen cemetery.

Mrs. Sorenson was seventy-one years old and had lived in Plainfield for a long time. She was a member of Hope chapel and was especially well acquainted in the West End. Beside her husband, who is a gardener, Mrs. Sorenson leaves two daughters, Mrs. Smith, who lives at the Spooner avenue address, and Mrs. Becker, of Newark.

WILLIAM FLATLEY.

In St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock this morning, a high mass of requiem was said for William Flatley, of West Fifth street, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital, Monday night, following an operation performed last week. Rev. Father B. A. Bogan was the celebrant and a large gathering of relatives and friends was in attendance. There were numerous floral tributes as Mr. Flatley had gained many acquaintances during his long residence in Plainfield. Among the set pieces was a large one from Division No. 4, A. O. H., of which he was a member; another one from the employes at the old Plainfield Gas plant, on East Fourth street, where the deceased worked for thirty-four years, and another from Plainfield Lodge of Elks, of which a son and son-in-law are members. Burial was in St. Marry's cemetery.

Mr. Flatley was born in Ireland in 1862 but came to this country when little more than a lad. He located in Plainfield thirty-seven years ago, residing here since that time, and practically all the while on West Fifth street. Mr. Flatley entered the employ of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company in 1884 as assistant engineer at the East Fourth street plant. In those days all the gas used in the city and borough was generated at the plant and the force of employes was quite large. Most of these were dismissed when the pipe line from Camden to Plainfield was built, but Mr. Flatley remained at the local station and continued in the capacity of engineer there until his illness began.

The deceased had suffered greatly during the past year with stomach trouble and as a last resort an operation was decided upon. It was performed last Thursday by Dr. Ellis Hedges, but complications set in which brought about the death of the patient at 9 o'clock Monday night.

Mr. Flatley was a faithful member of St. Mary's church and the various men's organizations connected with the parish. His only fraternal affiliations was with the A. O. H. Division.

Beside his wife, Mr. Flatley leaves six daughters and four sons. They are: Mrs. Charles L. Ryder, Jr., Mrs. Alfred Lubeck, Mrs. Howard Van Arsdale, the Misses Margaret, Ada, Catherine and Frances Flatley; Martin Jr., George, William W. and Thomas Flatley, all living in Plainfield. He also leaves two brothers and two sisters. One brother and a sister live in Ireland, and the others are Patrolman Thomas Flatley, of West Fifth street, and Mrs. Thomas Brown, of South Second street, this city.

MRS. FRED M. LETSON.

A number of Plainfielders were among the friends in attendance at the University Heights Presbyterian church, New York, Tuesday afternoon, when the funeral of Mrs. Elsa Letson, wife of Fred M. Letson, a former resident of this city, took place. Burial was in the family plot in the cemetery at Stelton.

Mrs. Letson and her husband lived for many years on East Seventh street, near Woodland avenue, but removed to New York some time ago. Mrs. Letson was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Hugle, of New York. She was active in church and social work in Plainfield and maintained a wide acquaintance here by frequent visits after removing to New York. Beside her husband, she leaves a daughter and a sister, Mrs. W. Kempton Brown, of Camden, wife of Dr. W. Kempton Browning, the first captain of Company K, of this city and now a commissioned officer in the U. S. Medical Corps.

CATHARINE M. HAGEDORN.

Katharine Mae Hagedorn, the fifteen months' old daughter of George H. and Martha Hagedorn, of New Dover, died yesterday morning. The funeral will be held at the parents' home on New Dover road, this afternoon, in charge of Rev. Franklin D. Duncombe, and burial will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

HENRY C. MEYER, JR.

The funeral of Henry C. Meyer, Jr., son of Henry C. Meyer, of Scotch Plains, who took his own life in a fit of melancholy, was held at the father's home at Park avenue and Front street, Scotch Plains, Monday afternoon. The service was private and was in charge of Rev. A. D. Strickland, of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. Burial was in the Scotch Plains cemetery, members of the family acting as pall-bearers.

Mr. Meyer was thirty-three years old and until two months ago had been engaged in the grocery business at Scotch Plains with his brother, William Meyer. He sold out to his brother at that time in order to take a much needed rest. So far as the family knew he had no financial or other troubles but for some unexplained reason eh decided to end his life and did so by hanging himself in his father's barn. He was possessed of a cheerful nature and his scores of friends in Scooth Plains and Plainfield are greatly mystified by his action.

Beside his ather, the deceased is survived by two sisters and three brothers. They are: Mrs. Alexander Muir, of Harrison; Miss Louise Meyer, Charles, William and Albert Meyer, of Scotch Plains.

Baker's Plan For Classifying New Selectives

Selective service registrants under the new man power bill now before Congress, extending the age limits to include all men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, will be called into service or placed in a deferred class under a new set of regulations. Indications are the new orders regarding deferred classifiation would be promulgated soon by the War Department and issued after passage by Congress of the new law, which will render an additional 10,000,000 men liable for military service.

First intimations that new classification ruling were to be issued came from Secretary Baker, Monday, after he had testified regarding the new bill before the Senate military committee. In a general way, the War Secretary stated that in the operation of the new law deferred classification would become automatic, thereby eliminating the stigma often attached of "claiming exemption." The duties of the registrant would be, Mr. Baker said, to answer a series of questions. The government, through the exemption boards, would decide from the answers the question of deferred classification or liability to service. Mr. Baker also indicated that for persons coming within the new age limits marriage in itself would constitute deferred classification.

"I am inclined to think," said Secretary Baker, "that the marriage relation will in itself constitute deferred classification, although the new regulations are not drawn."

In addition the Secretary desires to have the regulations written so clearly and so definitely that the individual's liability to military duty will be demonstrated not by excuses or reasons he would advance, one way or the other, but by the facts obtined concerning him, his family, his financial and other circumstances.

"What I want to get in the regulations," said Secretary Baker, "if possible, is to have them so that the government does the selecting rather than putting it up to the individual. That is, where there is a man who ought to be exempted from the point of view of the national interest. I do not want to put the man in the position of having to claim exemption, but have him only answer some questions of fact and let the rules take care of the classification. That is what I am thinking of just now."

Mr. Baker told the Senate committee that there was no intention to extend the "work or fight" order at present by addressing classes of persons in various professional occupations.

"I said that when I decided the baseball case I thought that perhaps other forms of amusement and entertainment might require an extension of the order to be on a parity with the baseball situatin, but that was not in their mind. They had heard from outside sources that the department was considering bringing professional classes, like lawyers, newspapermen and persons who were not actually engaged in producing material suppliesfi under the order."

The Secretary's statement also indicated what the administration policy would be toward boys of eighteen years.

"The Senate committee on military affairs asked me this morning," said Secretary Baker, "whether young men from eighteen up would be drawn indiscriminately in Class I, or made into a deferred class by age, and drawn later, giving them some added months to come to maturity. I told the committee that no fixed policy had been determined upon by the department, but that the purpose was to allow the President to defer in Class I the call of the youngest men.

"I have always considered, as you perhaps remember, that nineteen was the preferable minimum, and I have come to the eighteen minimum only because it seems necessary to get the men. Not that I think men of eighteen are necessarily too young because I do not think that. I think that history shows that boys of eighteen to nineteen are immensely valuable, as valuable, perhaps, as from nineteen to twenty, but I think there is a sentiment in the country which will look with very much more anxious regard on the boys from eighteen to nineteen than the boys from nineteen to twenty. Eighteen years seems to many people a more tender age than nineteen, and it is for that reason that we are thinking of making this preferential deferment of men from eighteen to nineteen."

Organization of 1,000,000 youths to do industrial work, take military training in preparation for later army service, and, at the same time, attend specially arranged vocational or technical schools, is planned by the government as a means of dealing with the growing shortage of labor without drawing boys away from their schooling.

The corps will be developed through extension of the United States Boys' Working Reserve, which already has enrolled 250,000 youths between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one engaged mainly this summer in farm work. Many of these boys will go back to school this fall, but a large proportion, together with others to be enrolled, will be directed into industrial work to fill vacancies left by men now being selected for the army. These boys are to be organized, as units in each community, serving under an adult training officer, taking courses of study in night schools, or by some other system program, living either at home or in camps and wearing the uniform of the reserve corps, which will be of gray cloth with roll collar jacket.

Another feature of the program for drawing on the great reservoir of youth labor involves the postponing of the opening date of school courses to about October 15 for the boys now at work on farms throughout the country. This will apply only to those boys and not to all pupils. Definite plans are now being worked out through the Federal Bureau of Education.

Regular army officers may be assigned to train units of the working reserve, and to direct the establishment of special courses which will prepare the youths for technical service in the army when they reach selective service age.

Without this plan for an industrial army of youths, hundreds of thousands of boys would quit school this fall and winter, according to W. E. Hall, director of the Boys' Working Reserve, to take big-paying jobs as helpers in industrial plants, and their education which is considered vitally essential to success later as soldiers and in civilian life, would be curtailed. It was to remedy this prospective situation, examples of which might be taken from the experience of England, France and Germany, that the government now plans combining schooling, military training and productive employment of the nation's minute boys.

If the selective service age minimum is reduced to eighteen, as is proposed by Secretary Baker, youths above that age would cease to be eligible to membership in the working reserve. Consequently, officials contemplate extending the lower ages for accepting boys for the work corps from sixteen the present minimum, to fifteen or even fourteen years.

Boys who serve in the working corps are to receive medals and service records representing official recognition by the United States Government of their value in the war emergency. Development of the project is assigned mainly to the Department of Labor, under which the boys' working reserve now operates, and enlistment in the corps will be entirely voluntary.

President Himself Opposes Re-election of Obstructionists

The one big feature of the Congressional campaign now in progress is the fight of the President and the administration to oust from the House and Senate those members who are up for re-election who have not supported the entrance of the United States into the war. Primaries so far held have all shown the anti-war members fighting for their political lives. In most cases such members have met with defeat, while men whose record in support of military preparedness and the subsequent measures have almost invariably been renominated by large majorities.

President Wilson gave the keynote for the campaign at the time Irvine L. Lenroot was running for the Senate against Joseph E. Davies. While the President failed in defeating Lenroot for the Senate, recent efforts on the part of the Chief Executive to rid Congress of all men, both Democrats and Republicans, who have consistently opposed his war measures, has been attended by success. It is strongly intimated that in the election campaign, to follow the primaries, the administration's influence will become an even more pronounced factor, taking the form of a general effort to defeat all of the anti-war men who have succeeded in gaining renomination.

The President's interference in local Congressional fights already has been sufficient to fully express his attitude. In Wisconsin he attacked Senator Lenroot because of his support of the McLemore resolution of 1916, warning Americans off armed merchant ships of the belligerent nations. In all other respects the record of Lenroot was entirely in support of the war. He voted for the resolution arming American merchant ships in March, 1917, for the declaration of war and for the selective service bill.

Representative Slayden, of Texas, Democrat, whose renomination the President opposed in a letter written to one of Slayden's constituents, had a record similar to that of Lenroot. Slayden, however, withdrew from the face of executive opposition.

The President's most recent letter of condemnation has been written in opposition to the renomination of Senator Hardwick, of Georgia. While Senator Hardwick's voting record on war measures will stand up, as pointed out by the President, he had been more or less of an obstructor to administration measures in debate, usually using the Constitution to support his contention that too much power was being delegated by Congress to the Chief Executive.

Other letters of condemnation have been written in opposition to Representative Huddleton, of Alabama, who succeeded Senator Oscar W. Underwoody in the House, and Senator Vardama, of Mississippi, one of the "wilful twelve" who conducted a filibuster in the Senate against the resolution authorizing the arming of merchant ships. Vardama also voted against the declaration of war and conscription. He is engaged in a bitter contest for renomination against Representative Harrison, who has been a consistent supporter of the administration and who has the backing of Senator John Sharpe Williams, the President's leading spokesman in the Senate on war measures. Huddleston has been a consistent opponent of all war measures, voting for the McLemore resolution and against the declaration of war and conscription.

While the President has written letters in only the five cases mentioned, failuhe to support administration measures has been almost invariably the main factor in accomplishing defeat of the members of Congress so far given stay-at-home tickets in the primaries.

Representative Frank Woods, of Iowa, chairman of the Republican Congressional committee, was defeated for renomination in a campaign in which Wood's vote for the McLemore resolution and against war measures was the chief issue. Representative Dillon, of North Dakota, was defeated in the same way. In the recent campaign in Missouri, the fight of sitting members was in every case attributed to some failure to support the administration.

Representative Dorsey Shackleford, who has served twenty consecutive years in Congress and is second only to Champ Clark in the Missouri delegation in length of service, has been a bitter opponent of the war and he was defeated by a large majority. Representative Borland, of Kansas City, was defeated largely because of President Wilson's veto of what is commonly known as the Borland bill, requiring government employes in Washington to work eight hours instead of seven as is now the case. A powerful contributing factor in bringing defeat to Senator Xenophon P. Wilfley at the hands of oseph Folk was the discovery of Wilfley's name on a petition to Congress of Missouri citizens in 1917 urging against the declaration of war.

Other States where the support of the war is being made the chief issue in Congressional campaigns are Nebraska, Nevada and New York. In Nebraska, Senator George W. Norris is engaged in the bitterest fight of his long political life. Senator Norris' attitude was that of a pacifist. He was a bitter opponent of any steps which seemed to lead the United States toward participation in the war and was equally strong in his opposition toward military and naval preparation.

Norris is a progressive of the Dolliver-Cummins Iowa school. He has at times supported Colonel Roosevelt, but failed to follow him out of the Republican party in 1912 and has opposed the colonel's militaristic efforts since. Norris has two opponents. One is Ross Hammond, editor of the Fremont Tribune and a Roosevelt, pro-war progressive. The other in Representative Charles H. Sloan, a Republican stand-patter. Sloan voted for the McLemore resolution, but he has since supported the war measures. Hammond is fighting Norris' anti-war record all down the line.

In Nevada the battle centers around Representative E. E. Roberts, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. Roberts has shown great political strength in his State-wide campaigns for the one Nevada seat in the House and he was generally expected to win the Senatorial nomination without opposition. Recently there has arisen, against him, however, an opposition candidate in the person of Walter C. Lamb, a newspaper editor of Tonopah. Lamb is bitterly attacking Roberts' record.

In New York city the big effort is to defeat the election of Socialist anti-war Congressmen. Republicans are backing the Democratic candidate in the Twelfth District to defeat Meyer London, the one Socialist now in the House. The Republicans will place no opposition against the re-election of Christopher D. Sullivan, Democrat, of the Thirteenth District. In return, the Democrats have agreed to support Representative LaGuardia, Republican, now an American army aviator in Italy, in the Fourteenth District, and Representative Isaac Seigel, Republican, in the Twentieth District. There districts are all strongholds of the Socialists.

New Order Ends "Booze" Parties For Selectives

From the time they report for the first roll call until they leave for camp, draftees hereafter will be subject to more rigid military discipline, according to copies of new rules governing the induction, mobilization and entrainment of selected men, which have just been received by the Plainfield Exemption Board. These regulations hold the selectives to a more strict accountability for their conduct and provide punishment for their infraction.

One rule provides that the men shall wear distinguishing arm bands to show that they are in Uncle Sam's service. The law prohibiting the sale or gift of intoxicants to soldiers then applies to these selectives, so that farewell booze parties will no longer be popular. The rule reads:

"The local board shall furnish each selected man at the time he reports for duty on first roll call with an arm band, or brassard, bearing the letters, "U. S. N. A.," to be stitched immediately to the left sleeve two inches above the elbow. This shall not be rmoved prior to his arrival at the mobilization camp."

In addition, each leader and assistant leader shall have stitched on the right sleeve an arm band bearing the letters, "S. P.," meaning special police. Assistant leaders are to be appointed at the rate of one for each eight men. The leaders are given authority to arrest any selectives who are disorderly on the way to the mobilization camp.

Provision also is made in the new regulations for the assignment of seats in the railroad coaches used by a departing contingent. It directs the leader to assign seats to every man in the group and they are not to leave them unless granted permission to do so. The leaders also are instructed to guard against destruction of railroad or other property along the trip.

Volunteer Medical Corps Is Approved by Wilson

President Wilson in a letter to Dr. Franklin Martin, chairman of the general medical board of the Council of National Defense, made public Wednesday night, expressed his appreciation of the service being rendered the nation at this time by the medical profession.

The President in his letter approves the establishment of a volunteer medical service corps to include all physicians who, because of age, physical disability, dependents and essential home needs, are ineligible for the medical corps of the army or navy.

In reference to the establishment of the corps, the President wrote:

"I am very happy to give my approval to the plans which you have submitted, both because of the usefulness of the volunteer medical service corps and because it gives me an opportunity to express to you and through you to the medical profession, my deep appreciation of the splendid service which the whole profession has rendered to the nation with great enthusiasm from the beginning of the present emergency."

Joseph Thompsen returned home Sunday, after a week's vacation spent at Asbury Park.

William D. Thickstun and family, of Central avenue, are spending the remainder of the summer at their cottage at Belmar.

New Tax Schedule Slams High Priced Clothing

Purchasers of costly clothing will be required to pay a tax of twenty per cent. if a luxury tax schedule agreed upon this week by the House ways and means committee is accepted by Congress in passing the new $8,000,000,000 revenue bill.

Men's suits and overcoats selling for more than $40, women's suits and coats selling for more than $60, women's dresses for more than $40, shoes for more than $10, men's neckwear for more than $2, men's shirts for more than $3, and other articles of wearing apparel above an established price will be subject to a tax of twenty per cent., the tax to be paid by the purchaser on the cost above the established prices.

The committee also provided for a tax advisory board of five members, to be appointed by the President, to interpret and administer the internal revenue laws in co-operating with the internal revenue commissioner. Members of the advisory board will receive a salary of $9,000 a year.

A tentative agreement was reached to double the tax on capital stock of corporations and the present exemption of $99,000 was eliminated. The tax of fifty cents for each $1,000 of capital invested was increased to $1 for each $1,000 of invested capital.

The present tax yields $24,996,000 and it is estimated that the government's revenues will be increased $30,000,000 by doubling the tax and lifting the exemption. This capital tax will be assessed against every corporation, joint-stock company, or association or insurance company.

Board Plans to Take Over Fire Alarm System

Ryder & Graves Give Up Contract and Councilmanic Committee Appoints James Pearsall as City Electrician to Exercise Supervision Under Direct Control of Chief Andrew D. Jennings

Following a conference between members of the Councilmanic Fire Board and Charles L. Ryder, Jr., of the electrical firm of Ryder & Graves, the Fire Board officials have decided to take over the care and maintenance of the city's fire alarm system. This is the first time this has been done since the Gamewell apparatus was installed twenty-six years ago, as it has always been supervised by private parties under contract.

According to the present plan, James Pearsall, of Wallace place, who has been serving as lineman for Ryder & Graves in their contract with the city, will be maintained for the same work and he will be listed officially as "city electrician." He will be under the direct supervision of Fire Chief Andrew D. Jennings, who will keep the Fire Board in touch with the situation. It is understood that Pearsal's salary is to be $1,500 a year.

Messrs. Ryder & Graves took over the care of the firm alarm system two years ago, when they purchased the business of Allan B. Laing, who held the contract for a long time. The increased cost of materials and the necessity of raising wages made the existing contract price of $150 a month too small an amount for the work returned and the Fire Board felt that it could not give any increase. The conference followed and Mr. Ryder expressed a willingness to have the officials take the system in charge themselves. He offered to co-operate with the city to the fullest extent and to that end asserted his willingness to have one of his own men in readiness for any emergency or to be on the job should Mr. Pearsall become ill or wish to leave the city at any time. He also declared that he stood ready at any time to "go on the line" himself should a heavy storm occur and disrupt the alarm system. His offer was gratefully accepted and the committee expressed a desire for Mr. Ryder to serve in an advisory capacity. The change in maintenance will probably go into effect September 1.

When the alarm system was first installed it was cared for by the old New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, with Herbert Chamberlain as official lineman. Later the contract was taken over by Allan B. Laing, who held it for a number of years before turning it over to Ryder & Graves. Mr. Pearsall has been in charge of the work for the past five years and is regarded as a most efficient man in every respect. Beside the salary allotted him, the city will have to maintain his liability insurance, provide a wheel for getting about and bear the expense of several other minor items.

Slight Change In Traffic Law

At the conference of the Business Men's Association with Mayor Calkins this morning, his suggestion that parking be permitted on Front street after 7 p. m., except on Saturday nights, was approved. This change will also apply to Park avenue, between Front and Second streets.

Parking on more than one side of Park avenue, and Madison avenue may be prohibited later on. These streets are narrow and it is difficult to get through with cars parked on both sides.

The changes in the traffic regulations will be promulgated by the Police Board in the course of a few days.

Local Boys Lured by the Call of Big Wages

Big wages paid by western farmers are believed by the local police to be responsible for the disappearance of Dominick Revitio, seventeen years old, of 330 East Fourth street, and Stephen Vastano, nineteen years old, of 429 Cottage place, both of whom have been missing from home since Monday night.

Revitio's mother reported his disappearance to Chief Kiely, Wednesday Investigation by Captain John J. Flynn revealed the fact that the young man had drawn his pay at the International Works, Monday afternoon, and later was seen in the company of Vastano. The latter ran away from home just about a year ago, returning late in the fall with about $500 which he said he had saved from his pay as a wheat harvester in the Kansas fields. The police were acquainted with the fact, consequently it was no hard matter to deduce that he had evidently gone back after more ready money and had taken Revitio with him.

Revitio's mother, however, is very anxious to get word of her son's whereabouts and would welcome any information. When he left home he wore a blue coat, gray trousers and gray cap.

JACK ROGERS.

Jack Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Rogers, of Watchung avenue, who is in the naval hospital corps, has been enjoying nightly visits at home this week, his ship being in a nearby port. He has been accompanied by one of his shipmates, Carey Jones, of Raleigh, N. C. Since last January, Mr. Rogers has made six successful round trips across the ocean.

COMING HOME FOR VISIT.

Lieut. J. Atwood Giddings, of Leland avenue, the borough who has been at Camp Dick, Texas, for several months, will arrive in Plainfield tonight for a visit previous to moving to another post of duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wyckoff, of East Orange, are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Smalley, of Central avenue.

Shows Field Outfit of "Y. M." Worker

An idea of how much equipment a Y. M. C. A. worker has to carry with him in the field when he gets an assignment for foreign service maybe had by stopping in front of the show window at William H. Olmsted's stationery store at 331 Watchung avenue.

Mr. Olmsted was to have gone abroad recently and had everything in readiness for actual work, when complications arose which prevented his going. The equipment with which he had provided himself numbers nearly forty separate articles and is quite a source of amazement to the laymen who know nothing of the Y. M. C. A. army field work. Mr. Olmsted placed everything in his show window and the outfit has been attracting much attention. It includes his personal articles of clothing, such as sleeping bag, poncho and helmet, also a folding stool provision equipment, writing materials and many other necessities. The display demonstrates that a Y. M. C. A. worker has troubles of his own in transporting his baggage from one point to another.

Mr. Olmstead was accepted by the Y. M. C. A. for foreign service but the insurance companies refused to pass upon his application because he had once had pneumonia about twenty years ago and they feared that he would not be able to stand the damp climate of Northern France.

Morris Abrams Improving Seventh Street Property

Morris Abrams, who recently purchased from Miss Lillie Brooks what has been known as the "Doctor Boone property," at West Seventh and Liberty streets, has already commenced extensive building operations.

The old residence which stood directly on the corner facing Seventh street is being moved around on Liberty street and will be remodeled into a two-family house. It will be made strictly modern in every respect. On the Seventh street side later, Mr. Abrams will erect a fine residence to cost in the neighborhood of $12,000. The contract has not yet been awarded.

The "Boone property" is one of the best known corners in the city. It originally extended a full block, from Liberty street to Division street, but more than half of it was sold some time ago to William H. Abbott. The plot purchased by Mr. Abrams has a frontage on West Seventh street of 127 feet and a depth of 150 feet.

OFF TO NEW ENGLAND.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Higgins and children, of West Fourth street, left by automobile yesterday morning for Groton, Conn., where they will remain with relatives of Mrs. Higgins until after Labor Day. They planned to stop at Norwalk, Conn., last night, as Groton, which is near New London, is more than an ordinary day's motor trip.

Last of Original Registrants Off to Camp Mead Tuesday

A call for fifteen white men received by the local Exemption Board on Wednesday takes the last of the 1-A men in the Plainfield district who registered in June, 1917. Men now remaining on call, of whom there are about fifty, were those reaching the age of twenty-one since June 5, 1917, and registering last June.

Seven of the men to go in the contingent of fifteen are farmers who have been held back in order that they might carry on necessary work. The Government has now ordered that they be sent to camp and with the others they will leave Plainfield on a special train reaching this city at 11:30 a. m. on Tuesday, August 27. They are to proceed direct to Camp Mead, Maryland, where they will begin their training for service overseas.

In addition to the call for fifteen, Secretary Freeman will send two other men. One of them is Nathan Gillman, who has been held back for several reasons. The other is Theodore L. Mendle, of Somerville, who will be inducted for the Somerset county board. The list of fifteen designated is as follows:

Harold S. Moon, James Venezia, William Gassert, Peter C. Peterson, George R. Long, William H. Toms, Clarence J. Edwards, Arthur E. Giles, Luigi Ramelli, Clarence R. Zimmer, Charles Schuck, Elidio Merola, Harry R. Pottberg, Arthur E. Lefkowitz and John Mostrian.

The Plainfield board also sent today ten more colored men to Camp Dix in response to a call received Tuesday. The contingent was given a farewell reception at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last night and left the North avenue station on the 12.39 train this noon. The men were as follows:

Samuel Robinson, Hansin Duffin, Clarence Jeter, Perry Wright, Pete Moore, Alexander Armstrong, Doc Reese, Walter E. Horton, John J. C. Roach and Alinton Walker.

MISS MARY LINE ARRIVES OVERSEAS.

Friends in Plainfield have received word of the safe arrival overseas of Miss Mary L. Line, of 248 East Front street, who went abroad as an army nurse. Her present address is given as "reserve nurse, U. S. Army Nurse Corps, Base Hospital, No. 48, American E. F., France."

Miss Line is the daughter of A. M. Line, of East Front street, who recently went to Providence, R. I., to make his home with his son, Charles H. Line, of that city. The young woman enlisted last winter and previous to going abroad was stationed at one of the camps in Texas.

Draft Call Orders Three Limited Men

The local Draft Board today received a call for three limited service men to go to Camp Greene, N. C., on August 31. The names of the men to go will be announced within a day or two.

The Board received a separate call Tuesday for a man in the limited service class versed in photography and blue print work to be sent to Madison Barracks, Sacketts Harbor, Lake Ontario, on August 29. Secretary Freeman asked for a volunteer, but as no one responded he announced today that Joshua T. Loizeaux would be selected, unless someone appears before tonight. The man is to be assigned to the photography division of military aeronautics for overseas duty.

Young Men Must Register Tomorrow

A third registration for men of draft age will take place throughout the country tomorrow, when youths who have reached the age of twenty-one since June 5 last must place themselves on record for military examination. In this city the registration will be held at the Exemption Board headquarters in the Babcock building, which are to be opened from 7 in the morning until 9 at night. The men will be numbered in the order they appear to register and will be selected for service accordingly. It is estimated that only twenty-five or thirty young men in the Plainfield district will be included in this registration.

North Plainfield young men will have to go to Somerville to register.

BACK TO DUTY.

Patrolman John Wurth, of the city police force, is back on duty after an enjoyable vacation of two weeks. Most of the time was spent in visiting relatives at Long Island City and Secaucus.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Johnson, of 925 West Fourth street, left Monday for Ocean Grove to remain until after Labor Day. They are occupying a bungalow on New York avenue.

Women Now At Work in Local Shops

Women workers in local machine shops, long announced as a possibility because of man-power scarcity, have arrived at last. They made their appearance this week at the International Motor plant and also at Spicer's in South Plainfield. At the latter place there are about fifty of the new type of factory hand and at the former about twenty-five. Most of those taken on are married women of foreign birth whose husbands the employed at the same place.

At the International shop the females are placed mostly on drill presses and automatics. They work ten hours a day and are paid for eleven and a half, thus making their daily wage $2.96. In the Spicer shop the women are all on automatics and receive about $15 a week.

The hiring of female workers is in the nature of an experiment at present, but if they continue to prove satisfactory other Plainfield factories will follow suit.

Edward M. Loizeaux Starts for Japan

Edward M. Loizeaux, a widely-known Plainfielder whose home has been at 856 Berkeley avenue, left last Sunday for San Francisco, from which port he is to embark tomorrow on the Pacific Mail steamer, Venezuela, for Japan. After arriving at Yokohoma, he is to proceed to Tokio, at which city he will be located for the next three years as buyer and general representative for a large New York importing concern. His company deals principally in flax and materials for making buttons.

Previous to the beginning of the war, Mr. Loizeaux's concern dealt almost exclusively in linens and had large factories located in Belgium. These have all fallen into the hands of the Germans, who have dismantled the plants and at last reports were using them as stables and storehouses. Mr. Loizeaux was offered the opportunity of going to Japan for a new field of effort and his friends believe that he has a most promising career ahead of him.

Mrs. Loizeaux, who was formerly Miss Ella Case, has leased the Berkeley avenue home and for the present with her son, Edward Case Loizeaux, will reside with her mother, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, of East Front street. Some time during the fall, she will also leave for Japan and will join her husband at Tokio.

City Council Makes Three Appointments

Dr. Raphael Yood, of Grant avenue, is now Plainfield's city physician. He was appointed to this position by the Common Council, Monday night, to fill the vacancy caused by the entrance of Dr. Norman W. Currie to the Medical Corps of the Army, the latter having held the city office for several years. Dr. Yood has been practicing in Plainfield for the past ten years and has gained an enviable reputation as a skilled practitioner. It is the general consensus of opinion that his selection was a very wise one.

The Council on Monday night made two other appointments. Dr. Franw C. Ard was named as a member of the Board of Health to succeed Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow, who resigned to enter army service, and Arthur E. Smith to succeed Samuel Rothberg, now a resident of Atlanta, Ga., as a member of the Research and Advisory Commission. As in the case of Dr. Yood, these appointments have been received with extreme satisfaction on the part of the public.

NEWSY NOTES FROM THE CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT

Stephen Staats, the efficient and obliging clerk at headquarters, returned to his desk Tuesday, after a pleasant two weeks' vacation. The time was spent in short trips to nearby places, one of which included attendance at the Newark fire department's official test of a new fire boat. Mr. Staats declares the boat is a wonderful piece of mechanism with four powerful streams of water and a sure enough enemy to a river front blaze.

Two new men have been added to the department recently. One of them, Arthur Erber, left the service recently after two years of membership, but decided to return. The other man is William Reinman, of North Plainfield, who was appointed by the Common Council, Monday night. Both men are stationed at headquarters.

Firemen Vincent Carroll and William Gaub, of No. 1, are back on the job after two weeks' leave of absence. Captain Feiring, of No. 3 company, and William Jaeger, of headquarters, are now on their vacations but will return within the next few days. Harry Wierenga is to be the next vacationist.

Sergeant Kennedy Believes the Fight Will Soon Be Over

That the big fight in France will soon be over and the boys come sailing home again is the firm belief of Sergeant Joseph Kennedy, of this city, is expressed in a letter to his sister, Miss Mae Kennedy, of Fourth street and Monroe avenue.

Sergeant Kennedy has been "over there" for several months as a member of the 311th Headquarters Company and has had an excellent opportunity of studying conditions. At the time of writing one of the big American drives was on and in common with the members of his division, he noted the demoralization of the enemy ranks when the Yankees' solid line swept against them. American correspondence bear out the young Plainfielder's opinion by repeated cable dispatches that the end of Germany's activity on the western front is in sight.

Further on in his letter, Sergeant Kennedy says:

"As far as the trip over is concerned, I had a very good time. When I landed in England I had a fine ride although it took about nine hours to go where we were going by train and saw some beautiful country. This is the fourth time I have moved since I have been in France. I have seen a great deal of the territory but as to the villages there is not much left of them, as they have all been shot to pieces and the people have gone away. I have been thinking about Al Bryniarski's story of how he had to sleep in a hay loft but he has nothing on me. You ought to see when I get home. I don't think I will be able to sleep in a regular bed. The place I am in now is very nice, but I can hear the guns booming night and day and quite often I see airplanes overhead. Very frequently the latter engage in battles which we are able to watch.

"There is nothing for you to worry about as I am all right and very soon I will be back home again. Otto Linke is over hear and near me. I saw him the other day but not to speak to as he was on march with his company. Many other Plainfield boys are but two miles away from me but I do not get much chance to see them. Tell that person who put the piece in the paper about me that I am not in the depot brigade for if I was I would not be over here. I am in the 311th Headquarters Company. Remember me to all my inquiring friends and tell them that I am in good health.

"Your brother,

"SERGT JOSEPH J. KENNEDY."

Ten Million Jump In County Ratables Now Seems Certain

The increase in Plainfield's ratables, after the assessment just completed was $1,031,405, as exclusively reported in the Record on August 9. This splendid showing is the result of big additions to the local industrial plants, the ordinary building having fallen off almost to nothing in the past year. It is believed the new assessment in October will produce but very little increase as the time is too short in which to get in any great amount of new building work, consequently there is apt to be a marked increase in the tax rate. Some of the city authorities believe the increase over the recent assessment may not be as much as $100,000, unless local building takes a sudden and unexpected jump.

After filing the tax duplicates for the present fiscal year, Plainfield's Tax Assessors will enjoy but a short vacation before commencing the assessment for the year 1919. Under a law adopted at the last session of the Legislature, the fiscal year must begin co-incident with the calendar year, making it necessary to change the period for valuing taxable property.

The law requires the assessment to be made October 1 instead of May 20, and the duplicates, beginning with 1919, must be filed January 10. Another provision of the law fixes two tax payment periods, requiring half the bill to be paid June 1, and the other half on December 1. This enactment also goes into effect next year, so that tax bills for the present year are payable December 20 as usual.

SAFE SPECIALISTS MAKE ANOTHER HAUL.

While the store was closed for the Wednesday holiday, thieves broke into the Zeek Baking Company's place on East Front street, and stole thirty-five dollars from a safe inadvertently left open.

Captain John Flynn investigated and arrested John and Louis Martone, ten and nine years old, respectively, who make a practice of locating unlocked safes. Part of the missing Zeek money was found in their possession and returned. The youthful offenders will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza next Tuesday. They are the same pair who robbed the safe in Schloss Brothers' store a few weeks ago, gaining entrance to the place by crawling through a coal hole.

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart Seeks U. S. Senatorial Nomination

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, of West Eighth street, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States senator and petitions in his behalf are being circulated throughout the city and county. The readiness with which they are being signed indicates that he will receive generous support.

Mr. Stewart is well known in Plainfield and Union county through his term as Mayor from 1912 to 1914. He gave the city a splendid administration and retired with the best wishes of both Democratic and Republican parties. He was a candidate for the State senatorial nomination several years ago and made a splendid run.

Petitions are also being circulated in behalf of Hugh Treacy, of Darrow avenue, who has announced himself as a candidate on the Democratic ticket for the Congressional nomination in the Fifth district. Mr. Treacy has been a resident of Plainfield for a long time and is highly regarded by all who know him. He also has a big following in Elizabeth and other parts of the district and is counted upon to become stronger as soon as his candidacy becomes better known. The petitions circulated in his behalf have already been signed by more than the necessary number of voters. While Mr. Treacy has held no office locally, he has been active in Democratic circles and his friends believe that he is entitled to recognition. He was a candidate for the Common Council last fall and polled a most encouraging vote in the face of numerous obstacles.

Collis Case Busy in Southern Camp

Among the Plainfield young men who are working hard in the Government service at the present time is Collis Case, of East Front street, who at the time of his enlistment, last summer, was studying medicine in Columbia College in addition to holding the position of inspector with the local Board of Health.

Mr. Case was assigned to sanitary work in Texas but was later transferred to General Hospital No. 12 at Biltmore, North Carolina, where he holds the position of pathologist and serumologist. In this capacity, he has been assigned to help in the work of caring for the typhoid epidemic among the German prisoners in the camp at Hot Springs, Va. It has been an immense task for a large corps of army medical men but they have succeeded in getting the better of the epidemic and prospects are now that it will be stamped out entirely in a short time.

The young Plainfielder has been at Hot Springs for some time in charge of a detachment of eight men. At times they were compelled to work from 6 o'clock in the morning until 12 o'clock at night, in order to stay the ravages of typhoid. In addition the medical men had to care for hundreds of other patients, so that they have had very little time to themselves.

While in Plainfield, Mr. Case was known as a tireless worker and the Government has profitted by having him in its medical service. He made good while in Texas and his transferral to North Carolina was in the form of a promotion. His friends here are confident that he will rise still higher in the very near future.

Autoist Whose Machine Killed Boy, Out on Bail

Through the efforts of his counsel, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., Fritz Howack, of East Sixth street, whose automobile fatally injured fifteen-year-old Victor Brancatti at South avenue and Terrill road, Sunday night, was released from the county jail Tuesday afternoon. Bail in the sum of $1,500 was fixed by Judge Carlton B. Pierce and the amount was furnished by Daniel F. Dugan, who is Nowack's landlord. The charge of manslaughter has been preferred against the defendant, although it is believed he was not at fault in the affair. The case will be heard by the Grand Jury during the October term.

Brancatti and a companion were about to cross South avenue, near Terrill road, when the accident occurred. The autoist did not see the boy until almost upon him and the latter became confused as the car approached. He turned in several directions and eventually stepped directly in the path of the machine. Nowack hurried the injured lad to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he died shortly before noon Monday. His skull was fractured and he was also hurt internally. Nowack reported the matter to the police, who held him on a technical charge of manslaughter.

The victim of the accident was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ercole Brancatti, who live at 286 Terrill road. He is survived by several brothers and sisters. His mother is the daughter of Angelo Brancatti, of 449 West Fourth street, and sister of Miss Julia Brancatti, the well known singer who took leading parts in the local Elks' musical comedy production.

The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning, when Rev. Father Hennessey offered a requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

RUN DOWN BY AUTO.

Edward Connors, fifteen years old, of 418 John street, was run down on West Front street, opposite Exchange alley, last night, by an automobile owned by Benny Fieldman, of Dunellen, and driven by Bernard Ovsivitz, of 229 Prescott place, this city. The Connors boy was severely cut and bruised and had to be treated by Dr. Pittis. His wheel was wrecked. The police investigated the case but made no arrest on the ground that the collision was purely accidental.

John E. Carney Numbered Among Latest Wounded

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Carney, of 191 Grove street, received a telegram from the Adjutant General's office this morning, announcing that their son, Private John E. Carney, of the 26th Infantry, had been wounded in France.

The message stated that the injury was a bullet wound in the thigh and that it was not considered serious. Any further developments, the wire read, will be forwarded immediately.

Private Carney enlisted July 12, 1917, and was sent to France in January of this year. From letters received by his parents and friends, it was learned that he has been on the firing line for the past three months. The young man is twenty-four years old and previous to entering the service was employed by L. F. Hersh & Brother at the East Fourth street place of business. He attended St. Joseph's church and was a member of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society.

Plainfield Man in Care of Enemy Alien Property

Attorney George W. Anderson, whose home is in Crescent Court, this city, but whose law offices are in Newark, has been named as one of the directors to take charge of the various properties of Gottfreid Krueger, the wealthy Newark brewer, whose breweries and properties have been taken over by the United States alien property custodian. Mr. Krueger is at present in Germany and an appraisal shows his American holdings to be worth several millions of dollars.

Mr. Anderson has been named in company with James E. Bathgate, Charles F. Herr and Edward F. Maguire to take charge of the United States Brewing Company, a Krueger concern. Messrs. Anderson, Bathgate and Herr will also look after the Lyon & Sons' Brewing Company, included in the same interests.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAS A BUSY DAY.

After a lull of more than a week, the city fire department had a busy day Wednesday. Four alarms were answered, all of them coming within five hours but in no instance was the blaze serious.

The first call was at 2:21 in the afternoon for a grass fire at Monroe avenue and Fourth street. No. 3 company was sent out and was compelled to use a hydrant stream to put out the flames. The second alarm was received at 2:58 for a bad blaze in the dump on East Seventh street, between Leland avenue and Terrill road. No. 4 company was sent to the scene and after laying in a line of hose was kept busy for three hours. At 3:54 an alarm from box 15 called the down town apparatus to the rear of W. J. Firstbrook's store at Front and Washington streets, where a fire started to burn up some debris spread to a fence and a tree. The flames did twenty-five dollars damage before they were extinguished.

The last call for the day afternoon was at 6:04, when No. 3 company was again sent out for a slight blaze at the home of John Neylon at 203 Stebbins place. The family was at supper when a crackling noise was heard in a bed-room on the second floor and a hurried investigation showed that a dresser and a part of the carpet was in flames. How the fire started is a mystery. The firemen used chemicals in putting out the blaze, which did about fifty dollars damage.

Mr. Sweeney, who is the son of Mrs. Margaret Sweeney, of Bridgeport, Conn., was employed for several years by the Daily Press and later as salesman for the Vitaphone Company. Two years ago he secured an excellent position as retail sales manager for the Edison Company's Detroit branch, and was meeting with unusual success at the time he responded to his country's call.

Federal Control of Packers Is Senator's Aim

A bill carrying out the Federal Trade Commission's recommendations that the packing industry be supervised for the period of the war by the United States government will be introduced by Senator Borah, of Idaho, soon after the Senate reconvenes.

Senator Borah announced this week that the bill is now in preparation by the Federal Trade Commission. He believed its passage was certain and that it would have the active support of the administration forces in both houses. The bill will give the government power to supervise the transportation of meats and to control the Stock Yards, but would not federalize the entire packing business and the manufacture of by-products.

"It is a temporary measure aimed to check profiteering," Senator Borah said. "In my opinion, however, it goes as far as it is wise to go in war times when the attention of the government must be centered on things contributing more directly to the winning of the war. After the war, of course, I shall stand for complete government ownership."

Additional legislation to allow the President to supervise transportation of meats and control the Stock Yards, is unnecessary, Borah declared. The authority conferred in the national defense act, the railway control law and the food control law is sufficient, he said. However, the Federal Trade Commission takes the opposite view and holds that any action must be on new legislation.

If the evidence the Federal Trade Commission has can be substantiated, any of the packers can be put in jail for violation of the Sherman act, Borah asserted. "And that might help matters considerably," he added. "The example would prevent repetition of these unfair practices."

Government May Take Over All Power Plants

A bill introduced in the House, Tuesday, by Representative Thetus W. Sims, of Tennessee, would give authority to take over all power plants in the United States, whether steam, electrical or hydraulic, and to control them for the period of the war. Representative Sims said the bill was prepared by experts of the War Industries Board, and was indorced by President Wilson. Secretary Baker and heaos of boards directing conservation and war activities.

The bill carries an initial appropriation of $200,000,000 for acquiring power plants. A large portion of this would be used to build or acquire power plants at the mouths of coal mines. Refuse coal would be used for fuel and electric power transmitted to factories doing war work.

Baker Asserts There Is No Man-power Shortage

Rapid shipment of troops now going on will continue under program of the War Department and the draft. Secretary Baker made known this week. Even if the new draft law cannot be put into operation before October there need be no diminution of the flow of men to Europe, as there are 1,500,000 in training in the United States, which is 500,000 more than the regular plans would make necessary. With this margin to draw on Baker says there will be no serious shortage of man power.

Troop movements to Europe are being kept at top speed largely through the help of the British Government in providing shipping, Baker said. For this no compensation has been given to Great Britain, and such a question was not even considered during the negotiations that made the pooling of British ships possible.

U. S. Makes More Than 100,000 Machine Guns

The production of machine guns by the United States Government has passed the 100,000 mark, according to a statement issued by the War Department. The exact number of machine guns of all types inspected and accepted since the country entered the war is 108,973. These figures include all machine guns inspected and accepted up to Saturday, August 10.

Nearly one-third of these machine guns are Brownings, the total number being 30,226. The number of heavy type Brownings is 11,187 and of light automatic Browning rifles 19,039.

During last week 1,354 heavy Brownings and 2,035 light Brownings were accepted by the Ordnance inspectors.

History of War Loans

The United States entered the war on April 6, 1917. Eighteen days later by a practically unanimous vote Congress passed the Liberty Loan Bond bill.

On May 2 the First Liberty Loan was announced, on May 14 the details were made public, and on the fifteenth the campaign began and closed one month later. The issue was for $2,000,000,000, the bonds bearing 3½ per cent., interest and running for 15-30 years. The bonds carried the conversion privilege, entitling the holder, if he chose, to convert them into bonds of a later issue bearing a higher rate of interest. Four and a half millions subscribers from every section of the country, representing every condition, race, and class of citizens subscribed for more than $3,000,000,000 of the bonds. Only $2,000,000,000 was allotted.

The outstanding features of the First Liberty Loan were the promptness with which it was arranged and conducted, the patriotism of newspapers, banks, corporations, organizations, and people generally in working for its success, and the heavy over-subscription of more than 50 per cent. Another notable feature was that there was no interruption to the business of the country occasioned by the unprecedented demand upon its money resources

The Second Liberty Loan campaign opened on October 1, 1917, and closed on October 27. The bonds of this issue bear 4 per cent. interest and run for 10-25 years. They carry the conversion privilege. It was announced that 50 per cent. of the over-subscription would be taken. Nine million subscribers subscribed to $4,617,532,000 of the bonds, an over-subscription of 54 per cent. Only $3,808,766,150 of the bonds was allotted.

This campaign was marked with the same enthusiastic support of the public as its predecessor. The labor and fraternal organizations were especially active in this campaign, and the women of the country did efficient organized work which greatly contributed to the success of the loan. The men in the Army and Navy worked for and subscribed largely to the loan.

The third Liberty Loan campaign opened on April 6, 1918, one year exactly after our entrance in the war, and closed on May 4. The bonds of this issue bear four and one-quarter per cent. interest and run for ten years, are not subject to redemption prior to maturity, and carry no conversion privilege. The loan was announced for $3,000,000,000, but the right was reserved to accept all additional subscriptions. Seventeen million subscribers subscribed for $4,170,019,650 of the bonds, all of which was allotted.

A great feature of this loan was its very wide distribution among the people and throughout the Union and the fact that the country districts promptly and heavily subscribed to the loan, in a great measure making up their quotas earlier than the cities. Secretary McAdoo pronounced this loan the soundest of National financing.

A little over a year ago there was some 300,000 United States bondholders; there are now somewhere between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000. Awakened patriotism has made the American people saving people, a bond-buying people. The effect of the Liberty Loans on the National character, on our National life, on the individual citizen and our home life is immeasurable—of incalculable benefit. Not less incalculable is their effect on the destiny of the world as our ships plow the seas and our men and maerial in Europe beat back the Hun.

The fourth Liberty Loan campaign will begin Saturday, September 28, and close October 19. No American doubts its success; no good American will fail to contribute to its success. The blood of our men fallen in Europe calls to us; our answer must be and will be worthy of them and our country.

Federal Inquiry on High Cost of Living

Country-wide investigation of the cost of living was started this week by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to obtain data for use in making wage adjustments. Six agents began the inquiry in Baltimore, calling on representative families in different parts of the city.

Information will be gathered from the families regarding their annual expenditures for food, clothing, housing, fuel, furniture and miscellaneous expenses. This information is expected to be useful, not only to the government, but to the housewife as well, enabling her to know exactly what she is getting for her money.

From data already gathered by the bureau an increase of three per cent. over the prices prevailing June 15 is shown on twenty-two essential food articles a month later. The prices of several articles decreased, the fine cuts of fresh beef dropped one per cent., navy beans two per cent., and lard, lamb and coffee less than five-tenths of one per cent.

A comparison of retail food prices for July 15, 1918, with prices a year previous to that date, shows for all articles combined an increase of fifteen per cent. Fresh beef and chicken show the highest increases, advancing thirty-six per cent. Increases averaging sixty-nine per cent. were shown for the five-year period from July 15, 1913, to July 15, 1918.

News of the Theatre

Irwin's Big Show Returning to the Plainfield Theatre

Fred Irwin's Big Show will furnish burlesque entertainment at the Plainfield Theatre, Tuesday, matinee and night, August 27, presenting as the principal offering, "Let 'Em Off," written and produced by Leo McDonald. Devotees of burlesque who attended the Big Show last season will recall the clever entertainment the burlesque then provided and will anticipate an entertainment of novelty and originality for this season's bill. There is assurance that "Let 'Em Off" will mark an advancement in burlesque, even above the usual Fred Irwin standard, which has always been high class. Comedy of a bright and spontaneous variety will feature the arrangement with Harry Conley, Ernest Fisher, Jess Brown, William Wainwright, and Wong and Lilley leaders of the cale contingent. Handsome and talented Hilda Bertin and Dolly Sweet will be the leading singers and in playing the leading roles they will share their opportunities with equally pretty and clever Franz Marie Lloyd, Maud Baxter, Virginia Irwin, Margaret Shane, Bertha Conners and Rutheda Barnett. During the burleskue proceedings a company approximately fifty players will be engaged, with a chorus selected primarily because of the individual ability of each member. Two clever vaudeville offerings will be added for good measure, Wainwright and Bertin showing a classy musical comedy specialty with Wong and Lilley presenting sensational acrobatics.

"Mutt and Jeff" Coming Here Monday

When Manager Gus Hill some years ago decided to transfer the famous cartoon characters, Mutt and Jeff, from the confines of the newspapers to the stage, there were many doubting folks who were ready to proclaim that these two noted personages would never be very funny outside the pages of the dailies where their mirth-provoking propensities won both fame and fortune for their creator, "Bud" Fisher. That Mr. Hill's judgment has been as far-reaching as it has been effective has been demonstrated. Probably no production of the many he has offered since he entered the show business has been as successful as those in which these world-renowned pair have figured. Each season he has surrounded the two in some sort of musical play until today their advent is looked upon with as much importance as the coming of our daily food. And why not? Everyone likes to laugh and forget their troubles, especially just now when there is so much real tragedy in the world.

This year the "long and the short of it," as this twain of hilarity mongers has been captioned, will have the leading roles in a play with the locale laid in the Golden West. If their adventures of the past have made us sit up and shriek with glee, and tickled our ribs until we were prone to admit that our sides ached and were sore, the prediction is made that they are bound this time to become so injured that unless we are careful the treatment of a skilled surgeon must needs become essential. Their excuse for cutting up all kinds of capers, tom-foolery and didoes that would compel the silent Sphinx to get up and yell; adventures that would make the boldest and most heroic savor of the nation stop and ponder, is called "Mutt and Jeff in the Wooly West." This triumph of modern construction and ingenuity will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre next Monday with the usual matinee.

It is in three acts and three scenes with a plot permitting of innumerable surprises, features, novelties and irresistible hilarity, plausible action and the introduction of specially written songs and singing, dancing ensembles, and other bits calculated to place the auditor in a state of infectious machination from start to finish. The story briefly relates to a scheming lawyer who tries to embroil Little Jeff into forming a martial alliance with an old maid whom he cares nothing about. A valuable piece of mining property is involved, which according to a will left by his late brother, reverts to him in the event of his marrying the widow. The lawyer endeavors to palm off another woman, with the result that deliriously funny situations and complications arise.

"Bride's Awakening" Pleases Audiences At the Plainfield

Audiences at the Plainfield Theatre yesterday afternoon and last night were more than delighted with Manager Shannon's latest feature picture offering, "The Bride's Awakening," shown yesterday for the first as the headline attraction of the combination bill for the remainder of the week. The vaudeville numbers also went big and taken all in all, the show can be described as a crackerjack in every respect.

At the top of the vaudeville portion of the program is Billy Baskett, who composed the popular war song, "Goodbye Broadway, Hello France." With the assistance of the Chesleigh Sisters, he presented last night a musical offering that won repeated encores. Mr. Bastket is known as "The man who set the world a-singing," and he richly deserves the title, not only because of his composition but because of the manner in which he presents them. The Lottie Williams Trio also leaped into popular favor last night by their original offering entitled, "A Comedy Riot." The act is nothing but fun from start to finish. On the bill also are Galvin Levie and Galvin in "Fifteen Minutes of Comedy," and Synco, a musical novelty. This program will be repeated in its entirety today and tomorrow. There will be a complete change next week on Wednesday, following the presentation of "Mutt and Juff" on Monday and Fred Irwin's big show on Tuesday.

"The Bride's Awakening" is from the pen of F. McGrew Willis and is by far the best drama he has ever written. The story deals with a secret marriage which a young woman foolishly allowed herself to be tricked into and the subsequent abuses she suffered at the hands of her deceitful husband. In the end the latter gets his just deserts but before this happens a lesson is taught the spectators that they will remember for years to come. Miss Mae Murray plays the leading role in the production and she has the support of a splendid company selected by the Universal Film concern.

JAIL SENTENCE THE ONLY REMEDY.

Time and again the Record has lifted up its voice against the danagers that exist on streets ond highways because of reckless automobile drivers, but in common with other newspapers of the State its cry of warning has been more or less disregarded. Officials either loath to call authority or go about their task of jailing offenders in half-hearted fashion. Between times, fatalities occur and they will keep on occurring until the drivers who disregard life and limb are placed behind the bars for a long term instead of escaping with fines equivalent to those imposed upon the poor drunk who creates a slight disturbance on a street corner.

Within the past week Plainfielders have read of two fatal automobile accidents on the outskirts of the city. One took place at Scotch Plains and exacted a young girl's life as its toll, while the other occurred in the city limits on South avenue and hurled a young lad of fifteen into eternity. In neither case has the autoist been charged with criminal negligence. It is possible that the drivers, in one case a woman, were blameless, but yet there is no getting away from the fact that our highways are deathtraps and no longer safe for pedestrians. With startling regularity, fatalities occur in and about Plainfield and the result is almost always the same—the accident was unavoidable.

It stands to reason that all of them are not unavoidable as violations of traffic laws and speed regulations are to be seen at any time and almost anywhere in the city if one cares to be observant. The poor victim who goes down to death as the result of one of them, however, is not able to tell whether or not his killing was legal or illegal and consequently there is no prosecution. The chances of even a civil suit are frequently very remote. So it goes on day after day and it has come to the point where Front street or Park avenue are worst deathtraps than the Central Railroad tracks, which mothers teach their children are to be shunned as the plague. At the very moment the parents are telling their offspring the danger of getting near the railroad trains, vehicles far worse than locomotives, are dashing up and down in front of the very house. We say worse than locomotives, because the railroad engine keeps to its own track on its own private way, but the automobile swrings all over the people's streets in absolute violation of speed and traffic laws. No matter how careful one may be in crossing from one side of the road to the other, there is a possibility nowadays that he may never live to reach his destination and it will continue to be that way until the police get busy and jail every speed maniac or reckless driver.

Throughout the State the farmers are making a concerted move against the practice of autoists to use the improved highways for speeding courses and their objections are beginning to take fruit. Delegations of farmers have gone to the Legislature and pointed out that while they appreciate splendid roads for getting their produce to market they insist that more stringent steps be taken to safeguard their lives from "joy-riders" who dash along at express train speed at all hours of the day or night. The matter is to be taken up seriously by the State solons in the hope of making the road safe for pedestrians and horse-drawn rigs.

Plainfield has had numerous automobile fatalities and it will continue to have them but the number can be lessened if drivers of motor-vehicles are made to understand that streets were made for others beside themselves. Let it be jail instead of fines for the culprits and there will be less accidents.

MARRIED MEN'S STATUS IN THE NEW DRAFT.

In a statement made public by Secretary of War Baker yesterday, a misunderstanding was cleared up relative to the belief that married men would not be called in the new draft from 18 to 45. Mr. Baker now makes it plain that marriage will not be a bar to military service under the new draft act, and says:

"There are many married men in the country who ought to go and fight as freely as single men."

Under the explanation given yesterday married men who do not support their families and who are not engaged in useful occupations will continue to be called for service just as they have been under previous draft laws.

Mr. Baker further states that Provost Marshal General Crowder within a few days will issue a statement detailing the exemptions which will be effective in the new draft. This is well. For there is no question but that in previous drafts much misunderstanding has come about because Washington at the beginning did not clearly recite the causes for which exemption would be granted. Washington now has had sufficient experience in working out the other drafts that the officials of the draft machinery should be able to give clear rulings for the Government of exemptions under the next registration law. And some thirty thousand men in Union county, at least three thousand of them in Plainfield, will await with interest Mr. Crowder's statement.

AGAIN THOSE DAYLIGHT STREET LIGHTS.

Why is it that every time the Fuel Commissioners talk about a shortage of coal, the Public Service Corporation turns its street lights on while the sun is still shining in all its glory? Such has been the case in Plainfield half a dozen times during the past week and local people are wondering when the fuel heads and the big corporation are going to get together for a dissertation on "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

The people of this city are submitting to every inconvenience and doing everything possible to go easy on the use of coal but they can't be expected to keep on this way if certain parties continue to waste it by burning street lights at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. If they should attempt anything like that in proportion they would be accused of being unpatriotic, pro-German or some other silly appellation. Yet, who can blame people for getting sore? The merchants are told that they must use no unnecessary light in their stores or burn display signs and all the while the Public Service keeps on its street illumination when it is about as necessary as a rudder on a rocking chair. Get busy, some of you fuel heads, and find out why it is that coal is being used to provide current for street lamps that nobody wants before dark.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When "Jakely" Benner was the town's champion hog killer?

When no one ever imagined for a moment that prunes would some day be an expensive luxury instead of an enemy alien on the boarding house menu?

When Bracebridge Hemying thrilled the juvenile world with his accounts of "Jack" Harkaway's adventures?

When the gang held fast to a minor beneath George Miller's window from midnight until any time up to five o'clock in the morning?

When a big boob with no heart at all gave you two cents and a bottle and directed you to the nearest cobbler's shop for a half pint of "strap oil?"

When you emerged from the swimming hole to get your clothes and cold chills ran up and down your back as you heard the dreaded cry from somewhere behind a bush: "Chaw beef; the beef was tough, poor little nigger he couldn't get enough?"

HARKEN NOW TO THE SUN-STRUCK GOAT.

Rumor has it that Freeholder Elias Bird's name heads the list on Mayor Moy's petition How cometh John J. Carroll to permit any such insubordination in the G. O. P. household?

Trouble and still trouble. Just as everything is proceeding calmly, the local Barbers' Union up and says it won't endorse either of the present mayoralty candidates. If either one is elected, says the Union, its members will receive no official recognition.

That Sherman avenue father who was sued by a disappointed lover for the value of a diamond ring he had given his daughter, should go back at the daring plaintiff. He might ask recompense for the light the young lady burned while she was entertaining the [illegible] giver, or request full value for the carpet he wore out walking in and out the front door. Us fathers have got to have some protection or rejected swains will be sending us to the poor house.

The [illegible] article told about in this week's papers who masqueraded as a girl for twenty-three years and then concluded she was a man when the he-she fell in love with a pretty school-teacher and married her has nothing on the voter who falls in love with economy after the City Hall has been built and the streets paved but who failed to attend the meetings of the Common Council and protest when those matters were up for public hearing.

Have you heard the lastest whimper from the Public Soakus Corporation? It has been crying around the front door-step of the Public Utilities Board that if it doesn't get financial help to carry its load of ordered stock, it will go into bankruptcy, thereby ruining thousands of small investors. It cites two particular instances of a boot-black who haved $3,000 from his "meagre" earnings and a girl household servant, who accumulated a like amount and turned over the money for Public Soakus stock. If the corporation goes down, say the high paid officials, this bootblack and household servant will be absolutely ruined. It certainly is a pitiful wail but it won't go worth a cent. All we have to say is this: Any bootblack or household servant who saves $3,000 from his or her pay doesn't need to worry about starving to death as long as their jobs hold good and besides, if they didn't know any better than to put all their eggs in one basket, they have nobody else but themselves to blame. We doubt not, however, that what both poor investors are fictitious characters and are but the fore-runners of many more that the Public Service publicity department will manufacture as occasion arises.

There is still room—in fact considerable room—on the list of candidates for the mayoralty for those able but modest gentlemen who "never back track or weaken before a disagreeable situation" and who really don't want political office but are willing to sacrifice their personal preferences for the good of the community at the behest of their legion of friends. We would be pleased to extol their virtues to a waiting world, and bid them go to it. But really they must not forget that to conform to the food regulations political pills must be taken this year without any sugar coating.

At last a little ray of sunshine has oozed into the lives of nearby suds-lovers. Justice Bergen has ruled that Dunellen's "dry" election was illegal because the soldier boys did not have a chance to cast a ballot and in consequence the booze emporiums have re-opened their doors. The joy that was once the possession of the "antis" is now clutched firmly by the "wets."

Talk about rank heresy. Weiss' borough drug store, which is listed as a recruiting station for merchant marines, advertises in the Courier-News with daring effrontery: Bosche's German Syrup. Mr. Weiss, he'd better change that, add or one of these fine mornings he'll find his plate-glass window smashed in and the contents of his shelves rudely disturbed.

We suppose when our boys are conducting the German postoffices and occupying the public buildings at Berlin the War Office somewhere in Finland will be saying: "The enemy has been decisively defeated and the prisoners have been put out to work as postmasters and officers are quartered in the royal palaces."

Like any fool who thinks things are always as easy as they look, we wonder why in the mischief the navy don't capture the U-boat devils who are raising the mischief right in the shallows of our coast line.

The married man who's been resting easy on the idea that a wife to take the pay envelope home to constitutes a barrier to service may again start in figuring his chances and getting ready to shoulder his musket with the rest of us. But the eighteen-year-old may go on with his studies and work for another extra year.

Regardless of the expense or trouble to which we will be put, the Record has decided to enter the contest field and accordingly makes a very special announcement: For the reader, new or old regardless of age, sex, color, religion or war sympathies, who can offer the best answer to the question below, it will present a nice large red apple, soon to be displayed in the show window of one of our leading plumbers. Anyone can answer as many times as he or she wishes but the award will be made by a committee selected from the city's officials, the police department, the Red Cross and G. A. R. As the contest is to be conducted on an absolutely fair and square basis the Record reserves the right to reject any answers submitted by Robert Newton Crane, Harry T. Marshall and John J. Carroll for the reason that they might be in position to get inside information. Get busy now, all you puzzle fiends and let us hear from you quick if your grey matter is hitting on all six. Here is the question as it has been narrowed down to simplified form: "Who are the Plainfield saloon-keepers for in the mayoralty contest and why?"

Elementary Hygiene Graduates Wanted For Work in France

A call has been sent out to women who have taken and successfully completed the course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick, as given under the auspices of the Red Cross, to volunteer for service in France. The qualifications for this service are as follows:

A. The Red Cross course in elementary hygiene and home care of the sick.

B. Ability to speak French.

C. Age not below 25—preferably not above 35.

D. Passports will not be issued to women who have husbands or sons in the service and to women under 25 years.

E. Good physical condition and willingness to serve wherever they may be assigned.

All those who are willing to volunteer and can meet the qualifications above are asked to communicate with local headquarters, 1107 Watchung avenue, telephone 645.

There is plenty of wool at the present time at the Red Cross headquarters to be knitted into sweaters and socks for the soldiers and sailors. The requisition which has been received from Divisional Headquarters calls for 1600 sweaters and 6400 pairs of socks. If every knitter will ask herself what is my share of this allotment, there will be no difficulty in caring for this requisition, which should be shipped at as early a date as possible in order that the garments may be started on their way in good season.

The report that the Government has commandeered the wool does not mean that the men who are fighting will not have the knitted garments they need for the Red Cross is a department of the Government, and as such will be supplied with material.

At every camp and cantonment there is a representative or field secretary of the Red Cross and from him the commanding officer requisitions a sufficient number of knitted articles to supply the men under his care. Any man who is without sweater, socks, etc., will receive whatever he needs by applying either to his commanding officer or to the secretary.

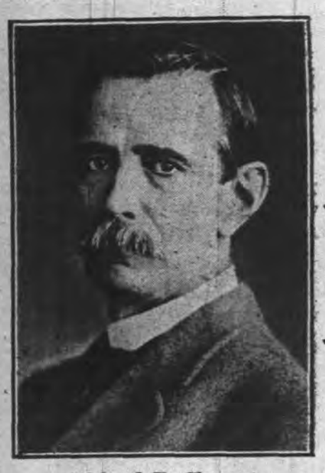
RICHARD E. CLEMENT

Candidate for both short and long term in Congress, was born at Lancaster, New Hampshire, January 2, 1861, of American Colonial and Revolutionary ancestry. He is married, has three daughters, and lives at 356 Grier Avenue, Elizabeth. He is a Mason, a Universalist in religious belief and has always been a Democrat, as were his forebears.



Richard E. Clement

He has never been a candidate for political office, though for about ten years he was a member of the Union County Democratic Committee.

He has served the people of Roselle, Cranford and Elizabeth as Principal and Superintendent of Schools continuously since September, 1882, and, literally, has a host of friends in Union County, who support him without regard to party politics.

The city of Elizabeth constitutes about one-third of the Fifth Congressional District, and Mr. Clement is the first Elizabeth Democrat in 24 years to be a candidate for Congress, while during that periods the Democrats of Plainfield, of Westfield, and of Morris County have each selected the congressional candidate more than once.

Because of her great war industrial plants Elizabeth is nationally of importance as great at the present time as the remainder of Union County or Morris County.

Elizabeth now presents a candidate whose long and excellent record of public service in Union County will ensure his election if he is nominated on September 24. Vote twice for Mr. Clement, the man who can win in November, and thus by your action ensure the success of one who will uphold the hands of President Wilson, help win the war, and stand like a rock for social justice and the rights of labor.

New War Revenue Bill Still in Preparation

When the House reconvened Monday, the ways and means committee was still unprepared to report the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill. Members of the committee expressed the opinion that two more weeks may elapse before a final draft of the bill is completed. They added that they do not expect it to be reported next week.

The inability of the committee thus far to reach an agreement with Secretary McAdoo on proposed excess profits taxation which Chairman Kitchin favors continued to hold up the bill, they explained, although they voiced the hope that they would soon arrive at an understanding with the treasury department.

Chairman Kitchin said that the plan of levying a tax of forty per cent. on all excess profits between eight and twenty per cent. and a tax of sixty per cent. on all excess profits exceeding sixty per cent. was only a tentative one the committee had submitted to Secretary McAdoo for his consideration.

Mr. Kitchin was emphatic in announcing that it was the purpose of his committee to recommend the most drastic and far-reaching methods for combing the country for tax dodgers. The committee has approved the request of Commissioner Roper for a total appropriation of $25,000,000 with which to carry out the plan of recovering taxes aggregating at least $1,000,000,000 from those evading tax levies and making false returns.

Another plan Mr. Kitchin and his colleagues are seriously considering is to have proposed taxation upon luxuries and liquor, for example, become effective the instant the revenue bill is reported. By this plan, members of the committee believed, those seeking to evade such taxation by disposing of property subject to it would be prevented from doing so.

It is proposed that a resolution making such taxation at once effective be passed by the Senate and House when the committee is finally ready to report the bill.

School in Trench Tactics Now Being Conducted at Dix

Others News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

In the Depot Brigade at Dix there are units composed of men selected for ability along certain lines, but there is one unit of which little is known. Yet it is unique in Depot Brigade work, for the men do not confine themselves to minor drill work, but, under command of Lieutenant Glenn Moffett, of Hutchinson, Kan., they are studying French tactics and are being used as a demonstration platoon for the officers' school.

Composed of fifty-seven men, nearly all of whom are college graduates or who have had previous military experience, this platoon of seven squads is taking up advanced instruction work based on reports brought back from "over there." It consists of rifle grenadiers, bombers, machine gunners and liaison runners, and each day some new problem of field work is mapped out.

Third Assistant Secretary of War Keppel paid a visit to Dix Tuesday, and made an inspection of the camp.

With the opening in a few days of the new administration office building for the War Camp Community Service greater efforts will be made by William P. Jackson and his assistants to bring before the soldiers the work that is being done by the community service branch and the opportunities that are open to enlisted men in nearby cities and towns. With this idea in view an information office will be opened. Booklets will be prepared, telling the soldiers of the various entertainments and places where they can find lodging and also giving information of nearby places.

Judge J. Warren Davis presided Tuesday afternoon at a session of the naturalization court held in the Liberty Theatre. Abut 300 aliens were granted citizenship.

Owing to the large number of men enrolled in the English classes at camp it is necessary to conduct classes all day, each class devoting three hours to study. More than 1,700 men with eighty teachers and about fifty graduates is the record so far attained by the school.

Stetson Humphrey, who has had charge of singing here as song director under the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, has been assigned to San Diego, Cal., where he will have charge of the work on the Western coast with headquarters at Camp Kearney, Cal. He has been succeeded by William Simmons, of New York city.

The soldiers at the camp are now getting fresh vegetables from their farm. Forty acres were planted to corn and an equal area planted to beans will begin bearing next week. The farm is cultivated entirely by the soldiers.

Among the thousands of men now stationed at Camp Dix there are only about six conscientious objectors, and it is expected that their cases will be disposed of in the near future so that the cantonment officials will have to take care only of the cases that come in each day. The reason for the reduction in the number is the order from the War Department allowing the furloughing of the real objectors for work on farms and, in this way, Dix was able to release about thirty-five men for this sort of labor.

The men must agree to work continuously on the farms to which they are assigned, and failure to perform their duty means that they will face a court-martial. The men are to receive the usual $30 a month, the pay of a soldier, and also a bit additional, according to the locality in which they are work, and their incidental expenses. All the money they earn over and above this will be turned into the Red Cross fund.

The Government is using this method as the best to dispose of the men who, because of religious scruples, refuse to perform military duty. All the camps of the country are thus reducing the number of objectors.

Two deserters were summarily dealt with by the court-martial that heard their cases at Dix recently. One, Private Vlyde M. Ward, of the detachment at the school for bakers and cooks, was given a term of ten years, and the other, Private Clarence Bockman, of the Pioneers, was given twenty years. Ward gave himself up at his home town, Fort Wayne, Ind., while Bockman was apprehended at Fort Du Pont, Del.

Having long ago been given up for dead by his father, from whom he separated in Philadelphia some sixteen years ago, Major M. H. Taylor, of the 148th Infantry, now stationed at Dix, has been united to his parent, who now lives in Wilmington, Del. The meeting was a great surprise to his father, who had not heard of his son since he went West and enlisted in the regulars as a private.

A. B. Meredith, of Plainfield, assistant director of educational work in the State of New Jersey, who is at Dix during the month of August, aiding in the work of educating the non-English speaking soldiers, is now stationed at the Y. M. C. A. headquarters and, during the temporary absence of H. A. Townsend, education director, will have charge of the work.

The Eighty-seventh Division passed in review Monday morning before Major General S. D. Sturgis, the commander. This was the first time since the command came from Camp Pike that all the units have appeared together.

The division has a new assistant chief of staff in the person of Major Arthur R. Harris, a regular army man, whose home is in New York city. Major Harris was in France when Major General Leonard Wood was wounded, being one of the party that accompanied him. Colonel K. A. Joyce, who was the chief of staff of the Eighty-seventh Division, also was wounded at the same time. This incapacitated him for further duty with the division, and now the chief of staff is Colonel H. R. Richmond.

So the soldiers at Dix of foreign birth may be made familiar with the co-operation which the United States is offering their native country, arrangements are being made to give entertainments each week for the men of different nationalities. The first will be held tonight in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium and will consist of a concert for Polish men in the camp under the auspices of the Wolna Polska of New York.

About 2,000 men a day are handled by Major J. C. Bierwirth, of Brooklyn, chief medical examiner of the camp, and his staff of forty-five medical officers and 150 enlisted men. The physical examination before a man is passed as qualified for overseas service is very thorough. In the early days of preparing the army for overseas duty the man was given three or four examinations at different times, but now he is given but one, and on this is based his chances of going overseas.

Prohibition by Fifteen Votes Is the Prediction

Passage of the prohibition amendment to the emergency agricultural appropriation bill by the middle of next week, with a margin of fifteen votes to spare, was predicted by "dry" leaders in the Senate today.

The prohibition amendment will be called up for action Monday, under the Senate agreement, but if the administration man-power bill has not been passed by that time, will be laid aside temporarily. The indications were today that the man-power bill would be passed by Saturday night, leaving the way for prohibition on Monday.

On a test vote on prohibition before the Senate recessed, the vote stood 36 to 33, giving the prohibitionists a majority of three. The test came when the president of the Senate ruled that the prohibition amendment was not in order as an amendment to an appropriation. The Senate overruled him. "Dry" leaders said today that from twelve to fifteen of those who had voted with the opponents were prohibitionists, who differed with them merely on this point of parliamentary law.

The amendment in its present form would halt the manufacture of beer and wine November 1, and the sale of all alcoholic beverages January 1. The drys announced today that they were prepared to accept amendments that would extend the time three months—stopping the brewing of beer and wine February 1 and the sale of all liquors April 1.

Thus the "drys" will steal a march on the "wets" if the extension amendments are adopted. Anti-Prohibitionists have insisted that six months should be allowed after January 1 for the liquidation of liquor properties. Adopting the amendments would cut the term of grace in half.

It is conceded that the House will adopt the amendment in whatever form the Senate approves it and with a much larger majority. The lower body in Pune adopted a much more radical prohibition provision—the Randall amendment—which would have attempted to coerce the President into issuing a prohibition proclamation.

Senator Phelan will offer an amendment to the provision agreed upon by the Agricultural Committee, exempting wine from its provisions. This will lead to much debate, and there is a possibility that it will be adopted, although the "drys" insist they have the votes to beat it.

The general proposition of whether there shall be prohibition for the period of the war, will be little debated. Only a small part of Monday's session, if prohibition is taken up on that day, will be given over to it. A vote probably will be reached by the following evening.

YOUTHFUL HIGHWAYMAN PURLOINS WATCH AND CHAIN.

Although but twelve years of age, Kenneth Wilson, of 228 East Fifth street, knows the value of a watch and chain and not having one himself, decided upon a highwayman's method of getting a time-piece. Accordingly on Tuesday afternoon, he noticed Fowler Zeisse, eight years old, of Clinton avenue, proudly displaying a silver ticker attached to a chain and he grabbed at it. Despite Fowler's howls, Kenneth made off with his prize but not before his victim's yells had attracted the attention of someone who recognized the youthful Jack Sheppard.

The police apprehended Kenneth later in the day and he appeared before Mayor Calkins in the city court Wednesday morning. He expressed great penitence for his act and as the watch and chain had been returned to Fowler, much to his elation, the young prisoner was released on suspended sentence. The Mayor gave him a severe lecture on the evil of theft and it is quite probable that Kenneth will never take another watch unless he has the money to pay for it.

HOME FROM THE SHORE.

No Women on Election Boards In Plainfield

Although the Runyon-Close bill passed at the last session of the Legislature permits women to serve on the local Election Boards, none made application for appointment at the meeting of the Union County Board of Elections, Tuesday. In consequence, all he old Election Boards, composed of men, were reappointed.

Elizabeth was the only municipality in the county coming to the front with women applicants and eighteen were appointed. Of this number, sixteen expressed a desire to represent the Democratic party. The women will be given instruction in election methods at a meeting in the county courthouse next Monday night.

The Runyon-Close bill also provides that schools shall be designated as polling places wherever advisable and in consequence eight of Plainfield's educational buildings were designated for this purpose. They will take the place of private stores that have heretofore been rented. One other notable change was the transferring of the polling place of the First district of the First ward from 138 North avenue, where it has been located for many years, to the office of the borough clerk, Frederick A. Martin, at 171 North avenue.

The Plainfield schools at which polls will be located for both primary and general elections will be the Evergreen avenue, Bryant, Emerson, Washington, Irving, High School, Stillman and Jefferson.

The polling places for all districts and the Election Boards were named as follows:

Warner Opposed by Labor Organizations

Assemblyman Arthur E. Warner was soundly criticized by the delegates who attended the meeting of the Central Labor Union held at the Eagles' home in Elizabeth, Wednesday night, for the stand he took in regard to the State constabulary bill last year at Trenton. The meeting was supposed to deal in the main with the plans for the coming parade in Elizabeth on Labor Day, but after the reports of the various committees had been heard showing that the different unions with one or two exceptions, are ready to fall in line for the Labor Day celebration, political topics of the day were discussed.

At the convention which was held at Perth Amboy last Sunday of the leaders of the labor party and organizations throughout the State, a demand was made for closer co-operation among the labor unions. It was suggested there that labor political committees be established in all the labor centers of the State so that the workers can be properly advised as to the way they can best vote to help their cause.

The criticism of Assemblyman Warner was the outcome of a discussion on the action the Union county assemblyman took in regard to the State constabulary bill. Right or wrong, the labor unions are opposed to the passage of any such bill, on the ground that such a body of military police would leave the power entirely in the hands of the capitalists. It was pointed out that, while there were many Assemblymen who at first favored the passage of the bill, they voted for the amendment to give the people of the State, by referendum vote, the chance to decide the matter for themselves; Assemblyman Warner did note vote for this amendment, the labor men say.

While there was no resolution passed by the Central Labor Union condemning Warner it was readily seen by the delegates from the different labor unions of the city that they would oppose Warner for another term.

Mr. Donovan, president of the union, said he hoped to see the people elect a man in the place of Mr. Warner who is in sympathy with the cause of the laboring class.

He pointed out that such a man did not have to be one of the labor men nor a union man, but that any good, fair-minded man, regardless of the party that he belongs to, if he is known to have the welfare of the labor interests at heart, will be supported by the working class of Elizabeth if he runs for public office.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

Vincent Esponto, of 945 East 80th street, New York, and Eugene Poggio, of Warrenville, were fined $10 each in the North Plainfield court Monday morning, on a charge of racing their automobiles in Somerset street.

The Queen City Wheelmen of Plainfield will close the season next Sunday with a twenty-five mile road race over the Mounain avenue course. Raymond Corbin has thus far scored twelve points for the local championship.

Carl Krummenacker, of Watchung avenue, was riding a wheel on South avenue, Westfield, Monday night, when he was run down by an automobile owned and driven by Clark Swaney, of Highland avenue, Westfield. Krummenacker was badly bruised and shaken up and after being attended to by a Westfield physician was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. His hurts are not serious and he will be able to return home soon.

September 10 has been designted as the only day on which voters in the city and borough can register if they wish to vote at the primaries on September 24. In municaptlities of more than 10,000 population, voters may register for the general election in November on September 10, September 24 and October 22. The Union County Republican Committee will canvass the Plainfield vote previous to primary day.

The bicycle thief is again in our midst. During the past week he appropriated two machines, one belonging to Edward Cannon, of Grove street, the borough, which had been left standing in front of Proctor's Theatre and the other to Edward Andrews, of East Fifth street, taken from in front of the Suburban Transit Company's garage on Madison avenue. The police are working on slight clues.

The local Exemption Board this week sent two delinquents to Camp Dix, both of them belonging to other cities. The first was Joseph Umbro, who was registered at Taunton, Mass., but came to this city and did not present himself on a call from his home town. Secretary Walter Freeman located his whereabouts and after submitting him to a physical test, which he passed, he was sent to Camp Dix, Tuesday. The second delinquent was Charles F. Baltrus, of Worcester, Mass., who was found to be of military age after he had been arrested on complaint of the Scott Pres Works executives that he had spoiled a valuable job on which he had been working. The prisoner asserted that his ignorance of machine work was what caused him to ruin the piece of mechanism and his story was accepted in the city court. It developed, however, that instead of being twenty years as he told the shop people, he was twenty-two years of age and Secretary Freeman took him in hand. He passed the physical examination and was sent to Camp Dix on the 12:39 train Wednesday noon.

Plainfielders learned with deep regret this week, that Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, former pastor of the First M. E. church, of this city, was in a French hospital suffering from wounds received while attending to his duties as a field worker. Some time ago it was reported that Dr. McCrea had been taken prisoner in a sudden rush of Germans on the American forces, and this was believed until news of his injury was cabled a few days since. Dr. McCrea left Plainfield nine years ago to become pastor of a Jersey City church, but for the past year had been located at Ridgewood. He secured a leave of absence from his congregation and went abroad with a Y. M. C. A. contingent last January.

Following the appointment of David S. Dunavan, of East Second street, this city, to succeed the late Andrew McCardell as a member of the Union County Board of Elections, this body met at Elizabeth, Tuesday, for reorganization. Fred Zior, of Elizabeth, was made chairman, and George Stewart, secretary. Beside these officers and Mr. Dunavan, the only other member of the Board is Frank Praff, also of Elizabeth. Mr. Dunavan's appointment came as a great surprise, as it was generally believed that the political powers were in favor of Harry C. Van Emburgh or John H. Cose.

Odin Beyerheims, of 818 Washington street, Elizabeth, sent his automobile along East Fifth street, Tuesday night, with the muffler cut-out wide open. It made suer a racket that the populace was greatly annoyed and Officer Loersh headed off the noise-maker. He furnished ten dollars bail for appearance in the city court Wednesday morning, at which time Mayor Calkins let the offender off with a suspended sentence.

Martin A. Korff, of Watchung avenue, the borough, who has been active in local war enterprises for the past year, particularly as a four-minute speaker, has decided to give up his entire time to social and religious work in home camps and cantonments. He is to leave shortly for Camp Meade, Maryland, to enter upon his new field of effort in which all of his local friends wish him great success. Mr. Korff is a talented musician and orchestra leader and has had a wide experience in Y. M. C. A. work, both of which adapt him for work among the soldiers. He was given a farewell reception at the Evona chapel, Monday night.

Lemuel Woolston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Woolston, of Mountain avenue, the borough, who recently enlisted in a Canadian regiment, has arrived in France, according to word received by his parents this week.

As a result of determination of the local police to put an end to automobile speeding, two more victims appeared in he ctiy court, this week. Oswald Meyers, of East Sixth street, was fined $25 for "hitting it up" well over the law's limit, and Shepherd Smith, employed at the Laing garage, paid a five-dollar fine for using East Fifth street for a motordrome. Mayor Calkins presided on the bench on both cases.

An investigation by the Plainfield police Saturday, showed that L. F. Hanlsey, of 702 Glen Ridge street, Newark, it is alleged, run into a car owned by J. C. Hansen, of East Front street. Mr. Hanley has been notified to appear in the city court to answer Mr. Hansen's charge.

Mayor William L. Smalley and former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, were among the attendants at a reception given last Saturday in honor of the 100th birthday of John S. Smalley, of Bound Brook.

The local police are searching for the thief who stole 150 pounds of copper plugs from the New Jersey Central's section gang house in this city. The loss was reported by Section Foreman William Reilly, of North avenue.

According to an announcement by Mayor Leighton Calkins the different city departments will take possession of their new offices in the municipal building on Watchung avenue, October 1.

Judge J. Henry Crane, in the District Court, ruled that Alexander Golka had no cause for action in seeking to recover $125 from Louis Super, of Sherman avenue, the value of a diamond ring, which the plaintiff had given Super's daughter. It appeared from the testimony that after Golka had presented the young lady with a ring in the expectation that she was to be his "steady," she married another fellow and left the State. In giving his decision, Judge Crane declared there was no reason why the father of the girl should be made to pay for anything that had been given to her.

Judge William Newcorn, who took an appeal from the verdict of $22,500 awarded Miss Sarah Carney, of Central avenue, this city, in her suit for damages against Alderman Brothers, of New Haven, and George Carpenter, of Rahway road, has received word that his application has been acted upon favorably and the matter will be reviewed by the Court of Errors and Appeals at the October term. Miss Carney was badly injured last September, following a collision at Third street and Central avenue, between automobiles owned by Alderman Brothers and Carpenter. One of the machine afterward plunged across the sidewalk and pinned the young woman against a stone wall. The verdict of $22,500 was one of the largest ever given by a jury in the Union County Court. Miss Carney was represented in her original action by William Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, whose law offices are located in Newark.

War Industries Board Confers With Auto Men

That automobile manufacturers should get into war work, even up to 100 per cent. if possible, and stop unnecessary use of cars, was agreed when a committee of twenty-five automobile dealers, representing their national association, appeared this week before the War Industries Board. The conference was arranged following a request for such a hearing by the New Jersey Automobile Dealers' Association and resulted in a thorough threshing out of every angle of passenger car curtailment scare.

Difference of opinion was apparent in details, yet the dealers were agreed with the War Industries Board that war work should receive every attention. It was suggested that if possible the manufacturers be engaged on a 100 per cent. war work basis by January 1 if such a step is possible. It is not the intention of the War Industries Board, it was pointed out, to rule the manufacture of automobiles non-essential, and it also favors encouragement of industrial activity during the war.

The committee of the Dealers' Association intends to engage in an education campaign the decrease the unnecessary use of passenger cars and increase their utilitarian use. The results of the conference were summarized by the War Industries Board as follows:

"One—While no order has been issued by the War Industries Board canceling motor car production and no definite order of curtailment could be given until the automobile manufacturers submit inventories of stocks, the board has suggested to manufacturers of automobiles that they undertake to get war work, even up to 100 per cent., if possible, by January 1, 1919. Automobile manufacturers have already accepted war orders aggregating between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000.

"Two—The War Lndustries Board realizes the importance of a continution of all possible industrial activity, so far as it can be brought about without interference with the war program.

"Three—All automobile dealers, however, should put themselves as rapidly as possible on a war basis, in order to be ready for whatever curtailment may become necessary.

"Four—The War Industries Board has not classed the automobile or any other industry as non-essential, and in determining the standing and position of any and every industry it will be guided solely by the war requirements and the needs, as distinguished from the wants of the civilian population.

"Five—In view of the fact that the war requirements of steel and rubber exceed the supply and make automobile curtailment necessary, the war service committee of the National Automobile Dealers' Association have agreed to recommend ways and means to stop the unnecessary use of passenger cars and increase their utilitarian uses."

Prisoners' Parole Law Retroactive Is Decision

Prisoners sentenced to State prison prior to July 1 last are entitled to all the benefits of parole and commutation the same of those indicted or sentenced since July 1, when the new law became fully effective. An opinion to this effect has been received by Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, from the Attorney-General.

The ruling that the new law is retroactive, to the extent indicated, has proved gratifying to officials and will be of the utmost importance to inmates of the prison. It means in effect that irrespective of the time of conviction, all prisoners will be entitled to the benefits of parole and commutation for good behavior, faithful performances and manifest effort in accordance with the new law.

Under a plan devised by Headkeeper James H. Mulheron and Commissioner Lewis and his staff, approved by the State Board of Charities and Corrections, inmates who make good at road work will be especially favored as to parole.

Commissioner Lewis has requested Mr. Derrick, director of education and parole, to formulate a plan to be submitted to the State Board and the Court of Pardons, whereby their work may be co-ordinated so that the divided responsibility as to parloe may cause a minimum of hardship and friction within the prison.

"Under the State use plan the men inside the prison," said Mr. Lewis this week, "will have the advantage of work which is not only more productive than the private contract work, but which will be educational in character—a kind of work private contractors had no apparent interest in promoting.

"The State Prison farm at Leesburg is being studied intensively to ascertain whether it is really worth developing upon a larger scale. If it is the State Board will urge its comprehensive and speedy development; otherwise energies and moneys will be expended elsewhere."

The Leesburg Farm has recently been visited by Warden Samuel T. Atchley, of the State Hospital of Trenton; Superintendent Louis E. Rawes, of the New York City Farm Colony Reformatory and an expert of the United States Department of Agriculture; Mr. Mulheron, the board of managers of the State Prison, Commissioner Lewis, Directors Kelly and Derrick and Supervisor Steward Golden.

Work or Fight Plan Insulting Labor Man Says

The Thomas work or fight amendment to the man-power bill is an insult to labor, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, charged before the House military affairs committee this week.

"We do not protest against men going into the army to fight but we do protest against putting this weapon in the hands of unfair employers to brand the workers as slackers," Morrison said.

Morrison declared the amendment was nothing less than labor conscription and that it would be mandatory on the President to enforce it to prevent strikes, citing the opinion of several attorneys who differed with Secretary Baker on this score.

"Senator Thomas, the author of this amendment, admits it is aimed at strikers," Morrison said.

"The Government is not exercised over the industrial situation, but some one is and he is hidden in the dark," Morrison continued.

"Is the Colorado Fuel Company and the Steel Trust behind this legislation?

"The men who urge this amendment urge it as a punishment, but the men know they would be better off in the trenches than they are overworked and underpaid in steel mills.

"Organized labor has kept faith and does not want the odium of slackerism cast upon it. Drag out the influences behind labor conscription and you'll find the most prolific profiters in the Nation."

Morrison denied Senator Thomas' charge that war work had been held up by strikes, and Senator Reed's statement that the miners were laying off two and three days a week, introducing statements from the Fuel Administration to show that fewer miners had produced more coal this year than last.

Morrison emphasized throughout his statement the charge that employers had asked deferred classification for employes and were now trying to hold military service over them to prevent agitation for better wages.

Dr. C. R. Mann, chairman of the Educational Advisory Board of the War Department, told the committee that drafting men below 21 would not wipe out education in the country, because it is planned to put these young men through an intensive course of instruction before and after they are in the army.

Several members of the committee pointed out that since boys of 18 would be the last to be drafted that they would in all probability make up the eighteen divisions, which are to be in this country on June 30 next year.

Mrs. Harry Wierenga and daughters, Mable and Dorothy, of East Fifth street, will return home tomorrow, after an all-summer stay with relatives at Freeport, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin B. Stutsman, of Lenox avenue, left Monday for Echo Lake, Pa., where they will remain until after Labor Day.

Public Service Asks Patrons to Help in Zoning

A special department has been organized by the Public Service Railway Company to carry out the order of the Public Utility Board that the company submit by January 1 next "a plan whereby the method of charging now in force may be revised by an equitable zoning system over its entire territory."

Active field work in collecting necessary traffic statistics was started Monday, when young men began riding the cars and asking passengers to fill out slips which will show the origin and destination of each ride. Every line in the entire system will be covered as speedily as possible and the data secured will be tabulated. So much work is involved, however, that it will be months before it is completed and the company officials say that satisfactory results can be obtained only if the public cooperates to the extent of giving the information sought.

Preliminary work has been under way ever since the Utility Board's decision was accepted by the company last month. The task is regarded of such importance that President McCarter is personally directing it, he having designed a special committee consisting of General Manager R. E. Danforth, Assistant General Manager H. C. Donecker, General Solicitor L. D. H. Gilmour and General Auditor M. R. Boylan, with himself as chairman, to carry on the work. Dr. Thomas Conway, Jr., of the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, has been retained as a special expert.

A corps of sixty college students has been recruited to collect data. These young men have been supplied with blanks, the use of which, it is expected, will enable the company to chart traffic on all lines in such manner as to enable it to lay before the Utility Board the most comprehensive information covering the demands of service and length of rides of those using the cars that it is possible to obtain.

The most important phase of the work will consist of securing the basic data upon which any zoning system must be predicated and as the company is acting under the direction of the Utility Board it is counting upon receiving the willing assistance of its patrons. All the passengers will be asked to do will be to write on blanks to be furnished them where their journey will end.

As the Essex division has the heaviest traffic it has been selected as the territory for starting the field work. Other divisions will be taken up in order until the whole system is covered.

The Misses Josie and Margaret Birmingham, of West Sixth street, are spending a week at Lake Hopatcong, as the guests of Mrs. A. R. LaRock at Camp Buena Vista, Halsey Island, Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Anna Lee, of West Sixth street, is enjoying a vacation from her duties at the local commercial office of the New York Telephone Company. She is spending the time at Indian Lake, N. Y.

Fuel Head to Act on Avoiding Waste

The plan of the United States Fuel Administration to curtail the needless waste of coal in factories will be made effective at once. Announcement to this effect was made at the office of the State Fuel Administration this week.

After the filing of comprehensive questionnaires by manufacturers, personal inspection of every power plant will be made by United States fuel inspectors. Each plant will be rated in one of five classes according to the degree of thoroughness with which the owner conforms to the recommendations of the fuel administration for using coal efficiency. If any manufacturer fails to put these recommendations into effect, his supply of coal may be curtailed, at the discretion of the United States Fuel Administration or the State or cut off completely.

The industries of the United States burned 250,000,000 tons of coal last year. It is estimated that the enforcement of this plan of the Federal Fuel Administration's Bureau of Conservation will achieve a saving of at least ten and possibly twenty per cent. of this enormous total.

The questionnaires will be sent out from the fuel administration in each State to plants on a list of industries compiled at Washington. Each plant owner returns one copy to the State Fuel Administration and keeps one copy of the questionnaire to show the inspector at the time of inspection.

As the work grows, it will be necessary to make it clear that the administration is not composed of consulting engineers, and that its function is chiefly to criticize. Manufacturers who wish to know how to correct defects probably will be referred to a list of competent engineers in the State. It would not be fair to these engineers if the administration made inroads into their regular business.

In view of the difficulty in getting inspectors competent to do the work, the boiler insurance companies have offered the government the use of their inspectors, who visit a large proportion of the steam power plants at regular intervals. Additional inspectors needed will be recruited on the volunteer system through local committees. The National Association of Stationary Engineers has patriotically volunteered to aid the fuel administration in thtis work.

Many plants have already formed "Factory Fuel Committees," which have shown substantial savings, among these are the H. W. Johns-Manville Company and the E. I. Du-Pont de Nemours Company.

All manufacturers are urged to take a similar course of action immediately, and report the estimated savings which they may be able to effect to the District Representative of Conservation of that section in which they are located.

Miss Cecilia Wilson, of Washington, D. C., left for home Tuesday, after several days' visit with Miss Cecilia Fee, of Spruce street.

Jenkinson Issues Warning to Violators of Lightless Order

State Fuel Administrator Richard C. Jenkinson, of Newark, has issued the following letter to county administrators regarding violations of the lightless night order:

Gentlemen: The Legal Division of the United States Fuel Administration, Washington, D. C., Harry Nusbaum, Attorney, writing, and under date of August 5th, in regard to violations of the lightless night order, says:

"The action to be taken, aside from the diversion of coal from all viatlors, is to instruct the utilities company, who serve the offender with light, to shut off the flow of light and remove the meter.

"In addition to cutting off the nights from each violator, you will also place all the facts in relation to these violators, before the United States District Attorney and request prompt prosecution of each.

"You will also request the United States District Attorney to advise the Enforcement Section of the Legal Division of this Administration of any action which he may take, and furnish us with a copy of any indictments which may be found."

I need not impress upon you the necessity of careful investigation before taking each action, so as to be sure of conviction. Also that a little leniency to be shown to first offenders, who are not acquainted with the orders.

Yours truly,
RICHARD C. JENKINSON,
U. S. Fuel Administrator for New Jersey.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. MARY McNAMARA.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary McNamara, widow of Patrick McNamara, whose death occurred at her home on Central avenue, Tuesday morning, was held in St. Mary's church, yesterday morning, when a solemn high mass of requiem was offered for the repose of his soul. Rev. Father Michael Glennon, of Morris Plains, a former Plainfielder, and friend of the family, was the celebrant. Rev. Father Holsters, of St. Mary's church, was deacon, and Rev. Father Dunphy, of Dunellen, was sub-deacon. Masses of floral tributes were in evidence, the gift of many friends sought to express their sorrow.

Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Patrick Melvin, Michael D. O'Keefe, John Walsh, Patrick Mottley, Edward Lunch and John Payne.

Mrs. McNamara was a native of Ireland, but came to this country when only a young woman. She had made her home in Plainfield for more than fifty years. In all that time she resided only at two addresses, first on South Second street, near Plainfield avenue, and afterward at the Central avenue address where she died.

Mrs. McNamara was a devout communicant of St. Mary's church and a woman of strong Christian character. Her acquaintanceship in the city and borough was very wide. Her husband, who died a few years ago, was employed for nearly half a century by the New Jersey Central. The deceased is survived by one daughter, Miss Catherine McNamara, and four sons, William, Michael, David and Thomas McNamara, all of Plainfield.

SYLVANUS L. SCHOONMAKER.

Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, a former well known Plainfielder whose home was at 963 Central avenue, committed suicide last Saturday night at his country home at Rosebank, Locust Valley, L. I. He had been in ill health for some time and a graduate nurse, who had been caring for him, went to his room in the early hours of the morning. She found him dead in bed with two bullet wounds through his head, a pistol still clutched in his hand, showing from whence they came.

Mr. Schoonmaker was sixty-six years old and the son of James Schoonmaker, of Pittsburgh. He completed his education in Western University and engaged in the coal and coke business at Pittsburgh. For many years, he was associated with Henry C. Frisk, to whom he eventually sold all of his interests. Mr. Schoonmaker removed to Plainfield about thirty years ago and resided here for a long time. He was a member of many societies and clubs and also a directorate in numerous big concerns, among them the American Locomotive Company and the General Electric Company.

The deceased is survived by his wife, who was Miss Mary J. Layng, and one son, Frank L. Schoonmaker, living at the family town house, 239 Madison avenue, New York. The funeral was held at the Madison avenue home and burial was in Uittsburgh.

WENDELL H. HUTCHCROFT.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hutchcroft, of 281 Clinton avenue, was filled with sorrowing relatives and friends Wednesday afternoon, when the funeral of their son, Wendell Holden Hutchcroft, took place. The young man's death occurred Sunday after a long illness but in itself was quite sudden and occasioned a deep shock to his hundreds of acquaintances. The service was in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, of which the deceased was a member. Two solos were sung by Mrs. Robert Giddes, both hymns being favorites of the young man. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the following friends acting as pall-bearers: Ralph Ludgate, Christian Peterson, John MacQueen, Benjamin and Louis Kriney and Theodore Martin.

Wendell Holden Hutchcroft was born in Cleveland, Ohio, and came to Plainfield with his paretns when only a boy. After graduating from the local grammar schools he entered the employ of the Standard Aero Corporation and worked either at the Plainfield or Bayway plants until failing health compelled him to give up his position. He suffered from a stomach complaint for more than a year despite efforts of physicians to eradicate the disease. While in school, Mr. Hutchcroft was prominent as an athlete and acquired considerable prominence as a baseball pitcher. He was possessed of an attractive personality that readily won and kept friends, and his untimely demise is greatly regretted by all who knew him.

Beside his parents, the deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Harry Kanengeiser and Mrs. George L. Leighs, of this city.

GEORGE NELSON GILES.

The funeral of George Nelson Giles, whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon, after an illness of six weeks from pleuro-pneumonia and complications, will be held at the late home at 128 Duer street, the borough, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. It will be in charge of Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, formerly of this city, but now of Passaic. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Giles was born in Dunellen, thirty-one years ago, and lived in that borough most of his life. Several years ago he established a provision and roduce business on Duer street, the borough, and had been meeting with remarkable success. About two months ago he suffered an attack of appendicitis which was overcome without the necessity of an operation. When he recovered, however, he was in a considerably weakened state and contracted pneumonia, which resulted in his death.

Mr. Giles was a member of the First M. E. church and also of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. His friends were numbered by the hundreds in Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen. He had a promising future ahead of his and his death at so early an age has produced more than ordinary expressions of regret.

Mr. Giles is survived by his widow, one sister, Mrs. Frank Meany, and two step-sisters.

MISS MINNIT FRAZEE.

The funeral of Miss Minnie Frazee, the twenty-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frazee, of Scotch Plains, who died in Muhlenberg Hospital following injuries received when struck by an automobile at Park and Mountan avenues, Scotch Plans, was held in the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon. Rev. C. S. Strickland, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives, many of whom were from Plainfield. Burial was in the Scotch Plains cemetery.

Miss Frazee, who was a very attractive and widely known young woman, was employed as bookkeeper in the Scotch Plains garage at Park and Mountain avenues, which is conducted by her father. One of her duties was to place a lantern each evening on the traffic post at the corner opposite the garage. She had just performed this duty when two automobiles approached from different directions. She stepped out of the way to avoid one, the driver of which was unknown and stepped in front of the other one, driven by Mrs. Sarah Barnes, of 122 North Maple avenue, East Orange. The girl was hurled to the curb, sustaining a fractured skull and other severe injuries. Mrs. Barnes was held by Recorder Morgan, of Scotch Plains, on a technical charge pending an investigation.

Beside her parents, Miss Frazee is survived by a sister, Miss Anna Frazee, of Scotch Plains.

U. S. Navy Display Exhibit at Big Fairs

To more thoroughly acquaint people of the country with the part the U. S. Navy is taking in the present war an elaborate exhibit with equipment and accoutrements of the service is to be made this summer at the larger fairs throughout the Nation. The display will be made in connection with that of the Joint Committee on Government Exhibits which includes the various departments and activities of Federal work. Five circuits are to be covered.

The Navy exhibit will comprehensively represent each department of the service. There will be a display of captured guns while the Ordnance Department will show the types of shells, depth charges and other explosives but used against the enemy. The Bureau of Construction and Repair will be represented by valuable and unusually interesting models of types of ships in the U. S. Navy. These models have been taken from the halls of the Navy Department in Washington and it will be the first time that they have ever been shown generally throughout the country. The Bureau of Medicine and Surgery will show accessories of its work, while the Department of Supplies and Accounts will put forward the specimens of heavy clothing provided for the protection of American sailors during their viligance at patrol work against submarines in the North Sea and on the Atlantic Ocean. For the Bureau of Navigation, which handles the personnel of the Navy, the work of the Recruiting Division will be shown by a display of posters. These are the work of the most famous of American artists who contributed these artistic appeals for the various campaigns in recruiting the Navy up to its strength of more than half a million men. Each exhibit will be surrounded by a booth designed and painted by well-known artists. An interesting and comprehensive exhibit by the Marines, the soldiers of the sea, will also be made with this display. These exhibit booths have been arranged and constructed by the U. S. Navy Recruiting Bureau, New York city.

In artistic excellence this exhibit embodies the high standard demanded for the Navy by Admiral Palmer, Chief Bureau of Navigation. Charles A. Valentine, the well known New York architect and the designer of the city's best sky-scrapers, patriotically volunteered to Lieutenant Commander Cooper, of the Navy Recruiting Bureau, to design the general architecture of the Navy's exhibit at these county affairs. Mr. Valentine's chaste and dignified archiecture gives the exhibit the proper setting befitting a government enterprise. Two large mural panels flank the entrance and represent various phases of Navy life and of the Marine Corps. On one side hCarles B. Falls, the talented painter, has glorified the valor of the fighting Marines, on the other side Lieutenant Reuterdahl has painted stirring scenes of the Navy at war.

The exhibit will be shown in the following fairs in this section: Erie, Pa., August 19 to 24; Rochester, N. Y., September 2 to 7; Syracuse, N. Y., September 9 to 14; Trenton, N. J., September 30 to October 4; Richmond, Va., October 7 to 12; Petersburg, Va., October 15 to 19.

Public Service Allowed More Fare on Fast Line

The Public Service Railroad Company was on Monday given permission by the Public Utility Commission to put into effect the increased rate which the company recently asked permission to charge. The rates are to be charged on the fast electric line which the Public Service operates over its private right-of-way in the main and partly over leased street railway lines. The company asked permission to put into effect new rates of two and one-half cents a mile, ten cents minimum fare, excepting from Chrome Junction to Chrome, where the fare is to be five cents each way, with no reduction on round trip tickets, and this rate to apply to the districts in which the company operates on its private right-of-way.

The board says there is no objection made to the proposed increased rates except from South Brunswick Township, which entered a protest. Manufacturers of the Borough of Foosevelt were represented at the hearings and requested increased car service which was promised by the company, which promise it has already fulfilled.

The value of the company's property set up in this application was determined by M. E. Cooley, Dean of Engineering Department of the University of Michigan, and his assistant, Professor Anderson. The Commission says it arrived at an estimate cost, new, of the property, as of December 31, 1915, of $2,0408,885, as compared with Dean Cooley's estimate of $2,716,984.

Additions to the property for December 31, 1915, to December 31, 1917, amounted tto $105,678, making the total cost new as of December 31, 1917, $2,514,563. The foregoing figures represent only the valuation of the physical property. There are securities amounting to $2,326,650.

The company estimated that it would derive a net increase in revenue from the new rates of $49,835.23, which the Utility Board does not think it will be excessive. The company is ordered to file with the Board for each quarter a complete comparative statement for 1917 and 1918 of its operations showing revenue and revenue reductions, in conformity with the board's regulation system of accounts for street or traction railway utilities. If conditions change, the board says it will modify the rates accordingly.

Plenty of Wool for Red Cross Knitters

Although the War Industries Board last week served notice that because of the needs of the military forces no more woolen or worsted hand knitting yarns may be manufactured until further notice, the Red Cross issued a statement through the Atlantic Division headquarters from George E. Scott, acting general manager of the American Red Cross, showing the position of the society regarding future knitting for volunteer workers for the Red Cross.

The statement shows that although the expected total is considerably below the 10,000,000 pounds used last year, there is nevertheless in stock or on order 1,400,000 pounds of yarn for distribution. The notice gives the first detailed information for the many Red Cross knitters of the division.

The statement:

"When the War Industries Board some time ago, advised the Red Cross that future production of knitting yarn would be greatly reduced we immediately commenced to purchase all yarns suitable for our knitting. As a result, we have today in stock or on order 1,400,000 pounds of yarn for distribution to our chapters. It is hoper that we may obtain some additional yarn from wool unsuitable for government uses. The expected total, however, will be considerably below the 10,000,000 pounds used last year.

"In addition to this stock of yarn, the Red Cross has already for distribution, 1,600,000 sweaters, 134,000 wristlets, 228,000 helmets and 1,328,000 pairs of socks, a total of 3,674,000 articles.

"We are hopeful, therefore, that these and such additional garments as we shall be able to make will enable us to meet the more urgent requirements of our men during the coming winter.

"In this connection it will be of interest to the women who have been knitting to know that from September 1, 1917, to June 13, 1918, the Red Cross distributed 5,875,000 knitted garments to the army and navy of the United States. During the same period 870,000 knitted articles were sent to the Red Cross Commissioners in France and Italy for distribution to soldiers, sailors and civilians."

County Budget Shows Advance, Total $899,945

Although the revised county budget for 1918, as adopted by the Board of Freeholders at a special meeting last week, called for the expenditure of $899,945.80, of which approximately $746,198.08 must be raised by taxation, the record increase in ratables is likely to prevent the tax rate from increasing but on the contrary will lower it, the county officials say.

In reconsidering the budget for the present year, which was first approved in January, the board took advantage of the provision in the new financial laws that allows an increase of five per cent. to be made in the total, and ten per cent. in any one item, during the year. This is the first time tht it has been necessary to make up a budget for twelve months in advance, and despite war conditions and other factors that have arisen, it has only been found necessary to increase the total by $36,198.06.

In regulating the county's expenditures, Director George G. Teller says the Board of Freeholders has had one eye on the tax rate and did not make a single addition not necessary. In a number of instances where jumps were made it was by law or action of the judiciary. Although taken at a glance the revised budget calls for the raising of more than the original one, a jump in the estimated amount of receipts from $128,800.72 to $153,748.71 and the indication of a larger bank tax than last year will help materially in keeping the tax rate stationary.

In 1917 the rate was .34 plus, when $670,000 had to be raised by taxation. This year approximately $45,000 more will have to be secured by taxation, but with an increase of something like $15,000,000 ratables, as is indicated from reports of the County Tax Board.

In submitting the revised budget to the board for approval, Freeholder Smith, chairman of the finance committee, said that when it was considered last January the estimating of the various items was largely a matter of guesswork. With nearly five months still remaining of the current year, it is easier to decide on the revisions in expenditures as well as what the receipts are to be.

The adding of $9,500 to the account set aside for the construction and repair of roads, bringing it up to $104,500, is probably the most important. The refusal of the Government committee on bond issues to sanction the floating of bonds to the value of $80,000 with which to reconstruct a part of St. George avenue, Rahway, made it imperative to raise funds scomewhere so that the thoroughfare could at least be repaired.

The board had no other course, Freeholder Smith said, than to add another $4,700 to the lunacy account, although the law permitting an increase of more than ten per cent. prevented a large addition. A short time ago the State raised the maintenance fee for the 390 inmates of the asylum at Morris Plains from Union county to $2.50 a week. It was formerly $2.

The coroner's account was increased from $100 to $110 because the expenditures already have reached that amount. There, again, the law governing increases prevented adding further to the account. The incidental account received another $850 because the original appropriation was insufficient. Another $10 was added to the sum alloted for the paying of children's guardians for the same reason as in the coroner's account.

The increasing of salaries caused changes in both the appropriations for the county tax board and county employes. Increases were made in the bonded debt account and the fund set aside for the paying of interest on temporary loans, but were mandatory. The $3,850 increase for public grounds and buildings and the $3,500 for bridges were made necessary because of war conditions, the Freeholders claim.

The board appropriated another $500 for the maintenance of the prison farm because the venture, although tried for only a few months, has proven so successful tht it was decided to continue it. The new item is for $5,865 and is for the new filing system installed inthe county register's office.

Final word from the Federal Reserve District committe on bond issues that it would not approve the issuing of bonds for the reconstructing of a part of St. George avenue was contained in a letter received by County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt and read at the meeting last week. After the committee had first sent word to that effect, a second effort to gain consent was made by the county, with the knowledge of the War Department, but the decision could not be changed. With the extra appropriation in the budget the thoroughfare will be repaired as much as possible.

A resolution was adopted suggesting that a committee be appointed to draw up suitable resolutions upon the death of J. Russell Wheeler, of Linden, the first county employe to be killed in the present war. He was a member of the county engineer's staff until enlisting and was fatally wounded in the fighting on the Marne July 15. Freeholders Brokaw and Smith were appointed by Director Teller to draw up the resolutions.

All bids received for the construction of a bridge over the Rahway River at Monroe street, Rahway, were rejected as being too high. The lowest was $455.

It was voted to increase the salary of Miss Boch, the secretary of the board, from $7 0to $80 a month. The cleaners at the courthouse will from now on receive thirty cents an hour instead of twenty-five and will be under the direction of the custodian instead of a forewoman.

County Tax May Remain the Same

The prelimiary equalization table of realty throughout Union county was presented and adopted at a meeting of the County Board of Taxation, held at the Courthouse in Elizabeth, Wednesday afternoon. The total is found to be $162,463,609, against $156,190,376 in 1917, an increase of 6,273,233 for this year. The personal assessments will bring another increase of approximately $6,000,000, making the total increase of ratables over that of last year $12,273,233. According to the equalization table the county tax rate will not be any greater than it was last year, when it was .34 plus, and may possibly be less.

Elizabeth leads the cities of the county with an increase of $1,888,211 in realty values. Linden township is second with an increase of $954,728, while Plainfield shows an increase of $720,965, and is closely followed by Hillside with $641,218.

A hearing will be given on the preliminary equalization on Tuesday, August 27, when assessors and the governing bodies of the municipalities will be heard in reference to the percentages and true valuations for their own and any other district.

The true valuations, as finally determined, after the hearing, will be the basis for the apportionment of the State and county taxes, pursuant to chapter 31, laws of 197E.

Status of Married Men Now Outlined by Baker

No general exemption of married men simply because of their married status is contemplated by the War Department in preparing for the proposed extension of military ages, Secretary Baked declared this week in a statement before the House military committee on the new administration man power bill.

Mr. Baker said his previous remarks on this subject had been misconstrued and that married men who do not support their families and who are not engaged in useful occupations will continue to be called.

"There are many married men in the country who ought to go and fight as freely as single men," the Secretary added.

Volunteers Wanted For County Draft

Plans for the registering of the men between the ages of 18 and 45 as called for in the proposed man power bill now before Congress were discussed at length at a meeting of the members of the three draft boards in the county and fifty municipal clerks and officials at the county courthouse in Elizabeth, Monday night.

It was the consensus of opinion that the registering of the 13,000 that it is estimated will be affected will have to be done largely by volunteers, as the registration of the men from 21 to 31 was accomplished. The aid of the election officers will be enlisted to as great an extent as possible and school teachers are also to be relied upon. The members of the draft boards will exercise a general supervision over the work, traveling from one place to another on the day that has yet to be set for the enrollment so as to see that the work is properly carried out.

George C. Otto, chairman of Board 1 and supervisor of all three boards, presided over the meeting and explained the magnitude of the task that the new registration entails. Ruford Franklin, mayor of Summit, and Mayor David Trembley, of Rahway, made brief remarks, the former declaring that it was his opinion that the quickest method to bring back the boys who are in France is to send as many others as possible over to aid them.

Following Mayor Franklin's suggestion, the members of the boards gathered with the volunteers from their districts present and discussed arrangements for the registration. The Plainfield board was represented at the conference by Chairman Charles W. Runyon. Edward Hand, of Scotch lains, who has aided the Plainfielder in various ways, was also present.

Newark Police Mystified by Rosko Murder

Despite the fact that half a dozen suspects have been arrested and examined the Newark police have been unable to gain any tangible clue to the person or persons who murdered and robbed Peter Rosko, of 218 Plainfield avenue, this city, in the yard of L. Larentowicz's acetylene welding establishment at 292 Halsey street, Newark, last Saturday night. Every effort has been made to learn something about the man's whereabouts just previous to the time of the murder but without results. The Plainfield police are also working on the case and so far have learned nothing of moment. Half a dozen of Newark's best detectives have been assigned to the case and the belief exists that they may yet apprehend the guilty parties.

Rosko's body was brought to Plainfield and the funeral was held in St. Mary's church Monday morning, Rev. Father Hennessey offering the mass. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The police, as yet, have no definite theory on which to work. The only trace of the crime they have is a piece of wood about two feet long, six inches wide and an inch thick, which was found near the body and which is thought to have been the weapon used in killing Rosko. At first the police thought Rosko might have been killed in some other place and carried to the yard, but circumstances destroyed this theory. He was found lying flat on his back, arms outstretched, fully dressed and in a position showing that he had fallen as a result of a heavy blow. His straw hat was found a foot away from the body.

When they appeared for work shortly after 7 o'clock four workmen employed by Larentowicz opened the rear door of his shop and walked out into the yard to repair an automobile truck. Within a yard of the truck they found Rosko's body. The men were Waclaw Charossziske, 73 Livingston street; Konstanty Borowski, 1 Lillie street; Michotoz Bojezuk, 188 West Kinney street, and Karp Grezarshuk, 21 West street, Newark. They immediately notified the police and Detectives Conlon and Donnelly hurried to the scene. They in turn notified Assistant County Physician Miningham, who ordered the body taken to Holle's morgue.

An autopsy performed by Dr. Miningham at noon showed that the man had died of concussion of the brain resulting from the blow on the head. His straw hat had been crushed by the blow. The board found by the police fits exactly to the mark on the face. Dr. Miningham said Rosko was in a healthy condition before his death and had not been under the influence of liquor.

The yard in which the body was found is surrounded by an eight-foot fence. That the crime happened in there is certain, the police say. At first it was thought probable that he had been killed outside and the body thrown over the fence. This theory was disproved by the fact that there was no dirt on Rosko's clothes except where they were touching the ground. His hat seemed to have rolled off when he fell, and his traveling bag was several feet away. The board was near his left hand.

That Rosko climbed the fence with someone and was killed by that person inside for some personal reason, is the only thread upon which the police can work. There are only two ways of entering the yard besides climbing the fence. One is through the shop in Halsey street, which closed at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and the other is through a locked gate on the Hill street side of the yard. The police do not think the gate was opened by the victim or his companion, because it can be locked only from the inside.

Rosko boarded at the Plainfield avenue houme with Joseph Conklin. He had two brothers, Stanley Rosko and John Rosko, who lives at 675 Kest Third street. The police traced Rosko to Plainfield by means of his hat, which bore a Plainfield dealer's name and the initials P. R. of W. B. The date inscribed in the ring was November 20, 1913.

It appears that Rosko's wife, Mrs. Wolla Rosko, has been in the Morris Plains Hospital for about four months. Rosko had been visiting her frequently. Saturday he left his home at 9 o'clock, saying he would be back at 9 o'clock in the evening. He arrived at Morris Plains at 12 o'clock, the police learned, and gave his wife some clean clothing and fruit. He left there at 4 o'clock. What happened after that, the police have yet to learn. Two children, Albert, three years old, and Mary, thirteen months old, survive. He was employed by the Bound Brook Engine Company in Bound Brook.

Coal Companies Big Tax Dodgers Declares Roper

Coal companies are among the country's most flagrant tax-dodgers, Internal Revenue Collector Roper informed the House ways and means committee, which is engaged in framing the new $8,000,000,000 revenue bill, it was revealed yesterday.

Roper told the committee that an audit of the tax returns of 248 out of 2,800 coal companies which has thus far been made disclosed that there were taxes due amounting to $4,452,000 more than already paid.

Roper estimtated that the Government, during 1917 and 1916 alone, had been deprived of $1,000,000 in taxes which he said he could collect if he were provided with an adequate force of accountants and the necessary facilities with which to undertake such an immense task.

MAYOR URGES DISPLAY OF ITALIAN COLORS.

The local Italian Society, the Sons of Italy, recently asked Mayor Calkins to encourage the display of the Italian flag from buildings. The Mayor explained that it was planned to have the flags of the allied nations displayed from the new City Hall and these would be of good size and quality. In the meantime he arranged, with the co-operation of M. S. Ackerman, chairman of the public affairs committee, for the purchase of smaller flags, which can be used temporarily at the City Building on North avenue. R. F. R. Huntsman kindly undertook to get these for the city.

Mayor Calkins expresses the hope that householders also, who display flags from their homes, will not forget the brave part played by Italy in the war, and that the Italian flag may appear with the flags of England and France and America, representing the four great nations which are exerting all their strength and resources in the cause of liberty.

ERNEST R. ACKERMAN OPENS CAMPAIGN

expresses the belief that the average voter will give thought to the man he can most freely trust with the public welfare while his attention is turned to his war-winning activities. Such a man, the statement implies, is one who has proved his loyalty, who has business ability and who has had wide responsibilities in political office.

Senator Ackerman's statement says:

"In filing my petition for nomination in the Republican primaries for member of the House of Representatives from the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey I am actuated by five reasons:

"1. To give to the country and to the President the best that is in me in answer to the call for self-sacrificing devotion, to the winning of the war and a permanent peace based upon justice and the natural demands of all people to enjoy to the fullest their self-evident rights in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness.

"2. A thorough belief in co-operation and co-ordination, but I am opposed, however, to any socialistic or communistic policy detrimental to freedom and national or individual initiative. As a representative I would use my powers unreservedly toward the perpetuation of the tried and true principles of Government that 'hath made and preserved us a nation.'

"3. To give to the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey a constructive voice during this crisis when our country must be wisely guided through very intricate legislative channels to meet the new problems that are just beginning to force themselves to the attention of the world and to the people of the United States.

"4. That my experience as a business man and a large employer of labor during 25 years can be valuable to the people, and possessing first-hand knowledge as an observant world traveler and student of theeconomic, industrial and political problems that are even at the present moment confronting Congress for solution; and

"5. Finally, as a public servant while a member of the Common Council and for six years as State Senator of Union county, as president of the Senate (also having served as acting Governor) are, in combination, sufficient to merit confidence and support."

RED BLOODED MEN FIGHTERS

THEY RULE THE WORLD

Red blooded men are born leaders in every walk of life and fight intelligently with both brain and muscles. They are always live wires, smiling and full of ginger; keen, alert on their toes and ready for anything that comes their way. Work is a pleasure and they land on top every time.

You will not find a strong successful man or woman trying to plug along with poor health or weak nerves. They kno better; they are wise and see to it that their blood has plenty of good fresh Iron and their nerves at all times loaded with Phosphates—the nerve food.

A leading doctor says, "Show me a strong, healthy, successful man or woman and you can bank on it every time, their bodies are just loaded with Iron and Phosphates." Another prominent physician says, "There is no need of anyone going through life sickly, miserable, played out, fagged and nervous when Phosphated Iron will always put energy and vigor in the body, mind and nerves." This same doctor also said, "With the system loaded with Phosphated Iron you can fight life's battle at any stage of the game and be a winner at every turn."

Mr. Run Down man or woman in any stage of life, if you feel all in; your nerves are all shot, and life seems like one continual drag and drudgery from day to day, get next to yourself; wake up, take a brace. Lay in a supply of Phosphated Iron and take a new lease on life. You will once again feel like a live one and face the world with the smile that wins. Are you game?

To insure physicians and their patients receiving the genuine Phosphated Iron, it has been put up in capsules only, so do not allow dealers to give you tablets or pills. Insist on capsules. Weiss' Boro' Drug Store and leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

WHAT ENLISTED MEN ARE ASKING FOR IN NEW YORK

Thousands of soldiers and sailors spend from 24 to 36 hours each week in New York City, either enjoying their brief leaves or on their way overseas. With the intention of providing these enlisted men with exactly what they want most, the New York War Camp Community Service made a thorough investigation. Where the War Camp Community Service is not already meeting these demands, it plans to do so at the earliest opportunity.

Between twenty and twenty-five thousand enlisted men are housed, fed and entertained each week by the various units of the War Camp Community Service and the superintendents and managers of these places were delegated to question the soldiers and sailors, and find out what is their first desire on reaching New York. Practically all the 29 units reported with the following result:

Harvey P. Vaughn, manager of the Harvard unit, Seventh avenue and 33rd street, where there are 100 beds, reports that the first thing the men demand is a "show." "They ask what's a good show?" he said, "and how to getthere." Their next wish is to see the town and some few ask for a place to dance."

Henry F. Lutz, manager of the Hotel Earlington, 55 West 27th street, which is maintained by the War Camp Community Service, and has 900 beds, said about the same thing. "They flock in here and after getting their rooms, demand a good Broadway show. They prefer the show even to food. They tell me that you can't beat the 'eats' Uncle Sam gives them and food is ouly incidental when they're on leave here. Quite a number want to dance, but most of these have hob-nailed shoes and can't get on a dance floor. But for these "Army spikes" I think many more would choose dancing."

BAD NEWS FOR THE ENEMY

From half-and-half to four-to-one in wheat and substitutes both for ourselves and our allies is a victory that will echo in the Central Powers. The credit is not ours alone. Part belongs to the farmers and women of the European countries that strove to learn how to grow more of their own food, part to the navies that held the seas and a fair share to our own farmers who did what they could. But all of this effort to help ourselves would have been of small profit but for the mercy of Providence that made the growing conditions auspicious.—Newark Evening News.

Its 32 horsepower motor, the perfected fruition of yaers of experience, is a "giant for power and a miser with fuel."

The way it consistently meets every driving need day-in-and-day-out, through congested traffic, over steep hills, in fair or bad weather, and for short or long rides, proves its adequacy for every motoring need.

When you have inspected this car and driven and ridden in it, you, too, will understand why comfort accommodations have contributed so much to Model 90's fame.

Behind Model 90 stand nation-wide service facilities of the highest order, quick, competent, courteous, and at reasonable cost. No matter where your tour, Overland service is accessible at your beck and call.

In making a survey of the reasons for the popularity of the Model 90 car, seldom has its moderate price been mentioned first—

CONFUSION ABOUT ELECTION BOARDS

Resignations of Appointees Bring Up a Legal Question

Special to Courier-News:

Elizabeth, Aug. 30.—Unexpected developments have arisen in the recent appointments of election officers to serve during the campaign, and in order to remove doubt as to the legality of the county election board's acceptance of resignations, a conference will be held between the board and Judge Carlton B. Pierce today. There have been several resignations by those appointed, including men and women. The board questions whether or not it has the right to accept the resignations, and has decided to have Judge Pierce decide.

One of those who has sent in a resignation is Miss Elsie Degenring, who was assigned to the Fourth district of the Seventh ward, populated mostly by Italians. Miss Degenring declares that some one with a knowledge of the Italian language should be placed in that section. Others who desire to be excused from the work, complain about having too much war work on their hands.

The procedure of appointing this year is different from that of last year, and many of those named for the positions apparently failed to realize the duties involved.

The election board members are wondering whether they will be handicapped by the presence of women on the boards. Realizing the fact that the school teachers who volunteered for the work are qualified to perform the clerical duties involved, the board members at the same time are placed in the embarrassing position of asking the women not only to remain at post until possibly 5 o'clock in the morning, until the ballots are counted, but then of walking to the city hall with the ballot boxes. This is a task that the men, not to speak of the women, do not relish, but they are prompted to select the easiest way out of the difficulty, by volunteering to carry the boxes to the city hall for the women.

Elizabeth is the only city in Union county that has women on the boards, there being eighteen assigned to vacancies formerly occupied by the men.

ALBERT E. JACKSON IS PUSHING HIS CAMPAIGN

Albert E. Jackson, of West Summit, is seeking the nomination for member of the Assembly on the Republican ticket. He was here yesterday, meeting old friends and acquaintances, and received assurance of good support at the primary election.

Mr. Jackson says that Assemblyman Warner, of Elizabeth, is entitled to another term, but that Assemblyman Morgan, who has had two terms should retire, for the reason that he has already been sufficiently honored, and Elizabeth cannot expect to have two representatives in the Legislature, while the rest of the county contents itself with one.

Mr. Jackson is a man of mature age, who has had a great deal of experience in public affairs. He says he believes that he can be of service to his fellow citizens, and that is why he offers himself as a candidate.

LOCAL COUPLE ARE WEDDED 15 YEARS

In honor of their crystal wedding anniversary, last night, Mr. and Mrs. David B. Martin, of 1175 South Second street, entertained a number of relatives. The popular couple received many beautiful gifts in cut glass and proved a delightful host and hostess to those who shared the pleasures of the hospitable home.

A program of musical selections and card games were followed by refreshments. Mr. Martin, better known as "Brit" is a well known base ball player.

The couple were married in this city by the Rev. Fred B. Newman, of Trenton. They have two children, the Misses Gladys E., and Thelma B. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin received many congratulations as the party dispersed shortly after midnight.

F. J. BLATZ TO SEEK ANOTHER TERM

Francis J. Blatz, president of the Common Council, yielding to the request of many friends has consented to seek re-nomination on the Republican ticket as a candidate for member of council from the Fourth ward.

Mr. Blatz's petition will be filed with the city clerk today or tomorrow. Mr. Blatz had decided not to seek re-nomination, but his fellow councilmen urged upon him the necessity of continuing as a member of the local governing body because of his experience and knowledge of public affairs. He decided late yesterday afternoon to present his name to the voters again for re-election.

Mr. Blatz has been in the council for the past six years and has been president of the council for two years.

Others who have filed petitions for nomination on the Republican ticket are: First ward, Nelson Y. Hull; Second ward, Marion S. Ackerman; Third ward, G. Herbert Condict; Fourth ward, Irving Kunzman and James A. Maynard.

C., and sailed for France in May.

OPEN LETTER TO MRS. BASSETT

Mrs. Feickert Replies to Mrs. Bassett on Criticism of Suffragists

An open letter to the President of the Antis.

My Dear Mrs. Bassett:

Within the past few weeks a number of statements from you have appeared in various New Jersey papers criticizing the suffragists for continuing their work in war time and commending the anti-suffragists for their devotion to the Red Cross and similar activities to the exclusion of all other interests.

From a former member of your organization, who has recently become a suffragist, we have just received a copy of a circular letter signed by you and addressed to the anti-suffrage organizations of the State. It is headed, "An Urgent Call to Action," and reads in part:

"We have all been feeling that our days were too short—our hands too slow—and our purses too slim to accomplish what must be done and given as our part in the great business of the war; but we owe it now to the New Jersey boys who have the biggest part in hand, as well as to the New Jersey women who are standing back of these boys, that in their absence our beloved State shall continue to possess her sacred rights.....Two things are immediately imperative. There must be a canvass of the State, and there must be systematic publicity given to our determined effort to save New Jersey from the fate that has overtaken New York. Our first and most pressing duty is to start the proposed canvass in order that we may present convincing evidence to legislators in Washington as well as in Trenton, that our contention that we are the majority is undeniable.....We have fortunately secured the services of Mr. Bossong, who has conducted such a canvass in other States with colossal results, and he is ready to begin in New Jersey. The expenses of this canvass will be large, but can be met if each branch or group of anti-suffragists will do its part..... We inclose printed slips which we ask each anti-suffragist to send with a personal note to as many persons as she may think of as possible contributors. Don't forget that every dollar given to defeat Woman Suffrage is a dollar towards winning the war, because Woman Suffrage in America will give aid and comfort to the enemy." We look to you, anti-suffragists of New Jersey, to show your patriotism and thus help to save your country."

May I point out to you that you are taking issue with the President of the United States, whom loyalty demands that we should all support, irrespective of political or party prejudices. He says in his letter of June 14th to Mrs. Catt:

"The full and sincere democratic reconstruction of the world for which we are striving and which we are determined to bring about at any cost, will not have been completely or adequately attained until women are admitted to the suffrage, and only by that action can the nations of the world realize for the benefit of future generations the full ideal force of opinion or the full humane forces of action."

Believing that the Federal Amendment for Women Suffrage should be passed at once the President has written to urge various Senators, among them Senator Baird of New Jersey, to give it their support, saying that he believes our present position of champions of democracy throughout the world will be greatly strengthened by the passage of the amendment. In our own State, Governor Edge, Senator Frelinghuysen, every candidate for the United States Senate except Messrs. Baird and Gray, and dozens of other prominent men, favor the immediate passage and ratification of the Federal Amendment. It seems strange to us that women who are fighting against suffrage because they believe their sex will not have wisdom in things political should set their own judgment up against that of the political leaders of the State and nation whom the men voters have elected to office.

We believe that the protection of our boys in France demands that their women folks at home have the right of suffrage. To many Americans it is shocking news that alien enemies may vote in this country, but in eight States this is true, the qualification being the first papers only. One Congressman confessed that the Germans composed a majority in his district and that a very large number voted on their first papers. He admitted that he could not safely offend these men by voting for woman suffrage. In Nebraska men in one county claimed exemption from the draft upon the ground that they were enemy aliens but upon being questioned they admitted that they had been voting for years. Here among us are hundreds of thousands of men too alien in sympathy to fight for this country and too un-American to be trusted with responsible war work yet they are permitted to help elect our Congressmen, Governors and State Legislators, who may obstruct needed war legislation, and, if the war lasts so long, may help elect a President upon whose attitude and character the fate of our country will depend.

During the present war the governing bodies of Germany and Austria have both rejected woman suffrage. On the other hand England and Canada have granted it to all their women, and France and Italy have promised increased suffrage rights to the women of their country at the close of the war. Do we wish to stand on the side of our enemies or of our Allies?

Yours very truly,
LILLIAN F. FEICKERT,
President, New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association.

EDGE REFUSES TO DEBATE WITH RECORD

Special to the Courier-News:

Trenton, Aug. 30.—Governor Edge today declined to comply with the suggestion of George L. Record to speak at political meetings at Jersey City, Newark and Trenton in company with Mr. Record and Congressman Gray, the third Republican candidate for the United States Senate. The Governor gives three reasons in a letter to Mr. Record for his refusal to adopt the suggestion. The first is his intention not to make a political speech-making tour in advance of the primaries; second, because personal appeals for party nominations are not essential or proper, in these grave times, and finally because there is no need for such public discussion when the issues are already clearly defined and in the minds of the people.

The Governor points out to Record that he discussed the issues of the gubernatorial campaign two years ago at a public meeting in Jersey City with his opponent, and at his opponent's suggestion, and that these people, neighbors of Record, complimented him with 5,138 votes to Mr. Record's 1,710 in the primary balloting.

The executive then calls Mr. Record's attention to his already expressed views on the public question of the present time, and to the platform he has already announced in his candidacy for the Republican nomination.

WILL SAVE GAS ON SIX SUNDAYS

Special to the Courier-News:

Washington, Aug. 30.—General compliance with the Fuel Administration's request that automobile owners east of the Mississippi forego the use of pleasure cars on Sunday to build up a gasoline reserve should bring gasolineless Sundays to an end within six weeks, officials said today.

"War needs must be first supplied," said Mark L. Requa, Director of the Oil Division of the Fuel Administration. "By conserving through the non-use of motor-driven vehicles for a few Sundays and the exercise of care in the use of gasoline and oil during other days, there probably will be no necessity for more severe control. If this program is followed to the extent that the Fuel Administration believes it will be, a few Sundays will effect the desired conservation."

Officials say that for the present at least they will depend upon the patriotism of auto owners to refrain from using their cars for pleasure on Sunday, and that no official attempt will be made to check up on those who insist on driving on Sunday.

Scores of telegrams have been received from automobile clubs pledging co-operation. It is evident also that patriotic men who keep their cars in their garages will not view violation of the request by others with equanimity. Public opinion generally is expected to prove the most effective police agency.

But the Fuel Administration has not abandoned its intention of exerting all its power to compel gasoline saving if the present plan fails. If results are not shown, and very soon, an order forbidding the use of gasoline for pleasure on Sunday may be expected.

PORT NEWARK DRIED UP BY PROSECUTOR'S ORDER

United States Attorney Lynch, at Newark, yesterday created the first military dry zone in that city, by ordering closed all liquor establishments within a half-mile radius of Port Newark. Only two saloons are affected. At Port Newark are a big Quartermaster Corps supply depot and the Submarine Boat Corporation shipyard. In both places upward of 1,000 soldiers are doing guard duty. The attorney ruled that the port was a military encampment.

A GOOD AND FAITHFUL SERVANT

With the passing of Dr. Jacob H. Gallinger on August 17th the United States Senate lost its grand old man, the nation lost one of its wisest and sanest legislators, the City of Washington lost its best friend, and New England added one more star to her crown of great statesmen. Forty-seven years of public service as a representative of the people, beginning with his election to the New Hampshire house of representatives in 1872, during the days of reconstruction, terminated with the close of a distinct epoch in American history. But two men during that period broke the continuity of Republican control of the destinies of the country, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson. Under the party of which Gallinger was one of the acknowledged leaders, he saw this country emerge from the Civil War, exhausted and saddled with debt, recuperate, and become economically the most powerful nation on the globe; its industries developed to a pitch which has enabled it to stand the terrific pressure of a great war and which will ultimately score a decisive victory over the enemies of popular government. How much of this is due to the statesmanship of Jacob Gallinger remains for his biographer to inform us; for his career merits a compendious volume. An ordinary, everyday American citizen, on the 25th of March last, wrote a note to Senator Gallinger, congratulating him on having reached his eighty-first birthday, to which the Senator responded: "To know that I have the respect of men like you is the best reward that I can ask for in this life." The expression was characteristic of the man. The respect and love of his fellow-citizens was recompense enough for him. He might have turned his wonderful talents to selfish ends and achieved riches and directorates, but, choosing rather to serve the commonwealth, he died a comparatively poor man, a splendid example, however, of the testamentary injunction that "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." Gallinger was educated to the medical profession, and he had already scored a success in that vocation, when, heeding the call of the commonwealth, he left the bedside of the sick and entered into the larger sphere of legislature to cure social ills. Twenty-seven years of this practice was as a United States Senator. His clientele grew from 63,000,000 to 105,000,000, and Gallinger prescribed what he believed to be best for the whole country, and not for a section or a class. He was a tariff protectionist, he was for sound money and the currency system which Senator Aldrich outlined and the Democrats borrowed. He championed the child-labor laws, and he was stalwart in his maintenance of national honor, without quibble or compromise. It is, perhaps, with the effort to build up an American merchant marine that Gallinger was most prominently identified. He was probably the greatest authority in the United States Senate on this subject, and he advocated the policy of reasonable subsidies to establish routes of travel for American ships. Senator Aldrich did not live to see his currency system put into operation, because of Democratic minority opposition. Gallinger died without seeing his measure for a merchant marine adopted, but in its place, he saw saddled on the taxpayers of the country, by the very men who had opposed subsidization, a Government-controlled, Government-operated system, socialistic in its nature and costing infinitely more than the plan he had espoused. His pet legislative hobby was the beautifying and modernizing of the National Capital, and Rock Creek Park, the Lincoln Memorial, and many other civic embellishments in Washington, will endure for years to come, and remind the American tourists of the large soul of this man, while the Gallinger hospital will testify to his sympathy for human suffering. His services to the nation entitle him to undisturbed repose.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS
Hunger for Home News

All the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross workers among our boys "over there" are urging that the folks back home send more "home papers" to our soldiers and sailors. One newspaper tells more than a hundred letters. Home newspapers are the one thing the boys crave that the Government has not been able to supply.

If you have some one over there or know some one who is making the "big sacrifice," send him the Courier-News for three or six months.

EVILS HAVE BEEN CONQUERED

A majority of our last million soldiers inducted into the service are boys slightly under 22 years of age. A majority of them come from the smaller cities and towns and from the rural districts. Just as their physical and moral health and strength while at home was due in a large measure to their training and environment, so now their efficiency as soldiers must continue to depend not alone upon themselves, but on the care and attention of others. This care and attention cannot now be given by their own home folks. The home folks must pass along their activities, but not their responsibility, to the army and navy commissions on training camp activities. In order that the home influence, the home atmosphere, may be present in war camp communities, the Government has called to its assistance war camp community service. The business of this service is to furnish an environment that is good; one that is normal, wholesome and healthy. Without such a force bringing this influence to bear directly in every community near which our boys are camped or to which they come, there would spring up and flourish to the utmost all around them all of the traditional community evils. Saloons, gambling houses, dives, red light districts, profiteers and exploiters would most certainly flourish. Every description of jackal and camp follower that has been the bane of the soldier's life in the past would find that they could operate without any organized opposition were no such agency as war camp community service in the field. Do the people of this country realize that practically every one of these evils—as baneful in a way to the soldier's life as the enemy himself—have already been conquered here at home, and that in this work there is no more effective force than war camp community service? Its value to the community can never be estimated in dollars and cents. It is one grand magnificent invitation to every fine quality, to every fine instinct in the hearts and souls of our boys and girls.

NEWSPAPERS FOR WRAPPERS

A movement is spreading widely to secure the use of old newspapers for wrapping parcels in stores. It utilizes the material better than the usual practice of selling them to the ragman for conversion into pulp again, which involves a new process of manufacture. The cost of wrapping paper is quite a bill in running a store now. Storekeepers usually pay 12 to 15 cents a pound for it. The customer has to pay for this expense. He can't dodge it by telling the dealer to let him take it unwrapped. A package wrapped in newspaper does not look as attractive. It would not be desirable to use it in wrapping meats and many other foods, but a large part of the material sold in stores could be wrapped in newspapers without hurting the material a particle. These are times when we shall have to overlook exterior appearances a little. If a material is essentially suitable to a certain use it is good enough.

THE SERVANT QUESTION

A correspondent suggests that a solution to the servant question is to raise the immigration gates a little higher, so as to admit Chinese servants and cooks into this country. He adds: "That would soon settle the impudent, ignorant, presumptuous and incompetent ingrates that pose as cooks and servants in this country today. The Chinese, with perhaps the exception of the French, are the best cooks in the world. They are faithful, loyal, painstaking and hard working, and in addition, they are economical and the acme of cleanliness. They know their place and they never attempt to abuse the liberties given them. Of course, the war will bring about many changes, and scientific methods of housekeeping will in future years help to eliminate our slovenly servants entirely, but in the meantime the importation of Chinese help would at once help in solving this perplexing problem."

ANOTHER HUN LIE NAILED

Berlin propaganda appears in various forms in this country under the inspiration of Prussian gold, but one of the most insidious and meanest is the whispered rumor that from German secret service agents our Government expects to confiscate the money of depositors in savings banks. This dirty lie strikes fear to the people of small means whose savings are drawing interest and which are specially exempt from provisions affecting money that is placed in many other forms of safety and increment, but Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo gives assurance that the Government has no intention of touching savings deposits.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Henry Ford, who has been nominated by the Democrats for United States Senator, says he would give $1,000,000 to be out of the race. If he feels that way about it he can get out for less money. Michigan is a Republican State and will probably elect a Republican.

From present indications our army one of these nice Monday mornings will be hanging out their washing on the far-famed Hindenburg line.

The newspapers, full of information, are restricted in size owing to paper shortage, but silly novels that are sold only by sensational pictures on the front cover seem to be issued freely as ever. There is also a lot of other useless matter printed on excellent paper, clogging the mails and going into the waste basket.

Formerly you could interest people at public gatherings by having baseball bulletins read. Now the baseball managers might be able to interest the public at their games by having war bulletins read.

The man who kicks worst about the price of rubber tires is apt to be the same one who uses up tire stock by rushing around corners at high rates of speed.

There isn't much choice in many political contests, but it is a satisfaction to the voter to think he can help defeat one of 'em, he doesn't much care which.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

Are We Patriots?

Editor, Courier-News:

The gravest and most deadly combination that Germany faces today is America's unsentimental, colossal power, and cold, calm determination to utterly smash and destroy beyond all hope of repair or construction the physical or political ability of that country to exist as a menace to the safety of the human family.

Germany is not a nation of civilized peoples. It is a disease. It ranks in destructive force with yellow fever, smallpox, cholera and leprosy, and self-protection compelled us to organize an efficient fighting force to destroy its germs, and as coldly and as calmly as we would stamp out dangerous plagues by killing its bacteria, just as coldly and pitilessly we will proceed with the extermination of German life.

We do not hate the Germans; that emotion does not enter into our dealings with them.

We do not hate—in the strict interpretation of the word—the snake that crosses our path. We merely kill it, without malice, simply because it is a danger to our peaceful progress along the path of life.

We will proceed with the business of destroying German life in the same manner we go ahead with any important piece of work, devoting to it our best efforts, as all high-grade people do, whose ambitions lead to higher planes of civilization and constructive achievement; and being a very practical people in all our business methods, we waste but little time or thought on questions of sentiment or emotional demonstrations. Whether or not we stand or sit while certain pieces of music are being played makes no difference in respect to our attention to the work to be done, and in that national characteristic Germany feels already the relentless crushing fingers of remorseless fate.

We may not display our feelings in regard to war in the same way that our good friends and Allies of France do. But your correspondent who signs himself "French-American" need not worry on that account. We are "on the job," and "without malice, without hate, without fear, without pity and without mercy" we will stay on it till the last German outlaw and murderer lies dead across the threshold of his breeding place of pestilence, never to rise again.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Hugh Boyd and Miss Jennie M. Kyle wish to thank their friends for kindness shown them in their recent bereavement.

TANKER, U-BOAT VICTIM, BEACHED ON STATEN ISLAND

The oil tanker Frederick Kellogg, which was attacked and reported sunk by a German submarine off the Delaware Capes two weeks ago, is now on the flats off Vanderbilt avenue, Clifton, Staten Island. Wrecking tugs towed her to Staten Island, where she was beached. She will be pumped out and efforts made to save part of the cargo of crude oil. A body of a sailor, believed to be one of the crew, was taken ashore and placed in McGinley's Morgue at Tompkinsville. It is rumored that there are several other bodies in the hold of the vessel.

BATHING IN OIL AT THE SEASHORE

Asbury Park, Aug. 30.—When the derelict tanker Frederick, R. Kellogg, torpedoed off Barnegat August 13, was towed to New York, Tuesday, she left a trail of oil behind her that has now floated ashore and has absolutely stopped bathing in all the New Jersey resorts in this vicinity. The beaches are black with the tarry oil, and the asphaltic substance ruins clothes. The only hope is said to be a west wind, which will clear the surf.

SOMERVILLE NOTES

COMING CAMPAIGN IN SOMERSET

Much has been said in reference to the coming campaign in various municipalities of Somerset, but little has been published in regard to the bigger field, the county.

One of the larger county contests will apparently be for nominations and election to the lower house of the New Jersey Legislature. Charles H. Fetterly, of Bound Brook, a member of the Borough Council of that place, is the first to file a petition for nomination. He is a Republican and has always been active in the party's interests. He was at one time engaged in the drug business in Somerville, later moving to Bound Brook, following a similar business. He is also connected with a large wholesale drug company.

Mr. Fetterly's contestants for the nomination are the present Assemblymen, John S. Amerman, of Neshanic, who has held the position for two years, the average period of an incumbency, and Frederick A. McCollough, a young and promising lawyer of Somerville. McCollough has been an active campaigner in Republican circles for the past few years. He is an able speaker, and has a commanding personality. He has a strong hold upon Republican sentiment in the county. Petitions have been widely circulated for both Mr. Amerman and Mr. McCollough.

Until this time no Democratic petition has been filed, nor is it definitely known that any is in circulation.

There will be an election for County Clerk, too, this year, and considerable interest centers around the selection to be made by the two parties for candidates. It is understood that the present incumbent, A. G. Anderson, who has efficiently filled the position for many years, will not be again a candidate. The deputy clerk, Fred N. Voorhees, has filed a petition for the Republican nomination, and Bogart T. Conklin, the present assessor of Somerville, has been frequently mentioned as another candidate. On the Democratic side the name of Walter S. Linbarger, of North Plainfield, is most frequently mentioned.

Outside of contests confined purely to the county, two larger contests are attracting considerable attention, because of the fact that two candidates for honors reside within the county. George M. LaMonte, of Bound Brook, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from New Jersey, and Frederick A. Pope, of Somerville, will make an effort to land the Republican nomination for member of Congress from the Fourth District of New Jersey, against the present incumbent, Elijah C. Hutchinson, of Trenton.

The entries close for all petitions at an early date, and the personnel of the primary contests in the county will soon be known.

Several Changes On Trust Company Staff

George W. Walsh has resigned his position as assistant secretary and treasurer of the Somerville Trust Company, to enter the service of the country, and is succeeded by David T. Lane. Clifford D. Phoenix becomes chief clerk.

Two bookkeepers employed by the company, Wallace G. Hawley, Jr., and William W. Brokaw, have recently enlisted in the service, making a total of six from the bank.

Local Nurse In War Work

Miss Katherine Dietz, a resident of this place, and a graduate nurse of the Mercer Hospital in Trenton, who sometime ago enlisted in the Nurses' Corps of the United States Army, is now in service at Camp Devens, near Boston. She writes to relatives here that she is well pleased with her work, and advises other trained nurses and young women to enlist in the cause.

Three-Year-Old Boy Injured

The three-year-old son of Frederick Sixt, of West Main street, is recovering from injuries sustained late Tuesday afternoon, when he was struck by an automobile belonging to John Freck, of Raritan, in charge of one of his drivers. The driver claims the accident to have been unavoidable.

BOUND BROOK

WATER SHORTAGE IS BECOMING SERIOUS

In spite of a vigorous effort on the part of the officers of the Bound Brook Water Company, to avert a water shortage in the borough, the continued dry spell is gradually detracting from the supply. It may be necessary for the company to connect a large hose with the water plant of a neighboring borough.

Middlebrook, in the vicinity of which the local company secures its supply, is practically dry, only a few pools of water remaining where before there were deep holes, containing great quantities of water. In the higher points about town and in the section farthest from the pumping station no water is available.

Customers of the water company must continue to be economical in the use of water until rain relieves the situation. In this way more serious conditions may be averted.

In the meantime the Bound Brook Fire Department is maintaining a strict watch against the outbreak of fires, another way in which the general public must be of great assistance.

Former Local Resident Writes of War

Frank Sperduto, of East Main street, a few days ago, received an interesting letter from his cousin, James Cuviello, a former resident of Bound Brook, who has been in the foreign service for the past year. In his letter Cuviello makes frequent reference to his chum, Edward Vroom, also of Bound Brook, and speaks exultingly of the allied victories on the other side. A few excerpts from the letter say:

"What do you think of us Yanks over here? Uncle Sam is sure proud of his boys and the spirit they show. They have the Huns running, and falling head over heels, yelling for mercy, 'kamerad!' in order to get out of the way. They'll get the mercy that they show. The tide is beginning to change, and by the time you get this letter the Huns will be back of their lines around St. Quentin, and back to the old Hindenburg line.

"Well, after a year in foreign service, I couldn't resist the temptation of a visit to Paris. Had a fine time, met some wonderful people, and really hated to leave, but knew that I must be back to the old army game again.

"Just tell them all that I will be back in the States by Christmas, 1918."

Two Fined for Assault

Two Polish men from Newark were arrested Wednesday afternoon by Officer Michael Grazione, for an assault upon Nicholas Patatilow, who boards at 245 West Main street. The two men came out from Newark to visit one's sister, who lives at the same address. After an afternoon of celebration and hilarity a war argument arose among the three men, with the result that a fight ensued. In it Patatilow was very roughly used by the two Newark men, John Shure and Mekte Larbarnock, and later made a complaint against them before Recorder Andrew D. Flammer.

Recorder Flammer gave them a hearing at which the two men were fined $11.45 each. This they paid and returned to their homes in Newark.

Closing Out Business

As I am closing out my business and moving from the borough, I request the payment of all accounts due me before September 1. Franz Kaltner. 8-28-30-31

The pump at Mrs. Jephtha Smith's home on West High street, was the mecca for the thirsty souls of that neighborhood during the dry spell. When an alarmist neighbor suggested that her pump would run dry if everybody was allowed to help themselves, Mrs. Smith exclaimed. "Well, as long as they are careful and not wasteful, they are welcome, and if the pump goes dry, we'll all go dry together!" The pump still works.

Francis Johnson, of Beechwood Heights, ticket agent for the New Jersey Central in Elizabeth, formerly night agent in Bound Brook, is spending two weeks in Pittsburgh.

G. Clyde Somers is enjoying a vacation of a week from his duties at the Pathe plant.

George Graham is spending a few days in Washington.

DUNELLEN

MANY RALLY TO SOLDIER'S BENEFIT

Seldom has there been a more patriotic demonstration in the Dunellen Borough, than that displayed last night at the Community Benefit Social, held by the Men's Forum, on the lawn of the Methodist church. The affair was given for the benefit of Sergeant John Park, U. S. A., and a goodly number responded. The grounds were attractively decorated, and there were booths for the sale of sweet corn, frankfurters, watermelons, and lemonade.

At intervals during the evening, the Liberty Orchestra, of Plainfield, played selections. Miss Etta Raybert, soloist, of Plainfield, was unable to be present.

A feature of the musical program was the singing of army songs led by G. R. Sutton, of Plainfield. Miss Frances Rittenhouse was the accompanist. The entire assemblage sang the patriotic selections with much enthusiasm. There were also solos by D. H. Roberts and W. W. Giddes.

About $27 was received in the silver offering, and still more was realized by the auction of refreshments at the close of the entertainment. The committee of the Forum desires to heartily thank all who so kindly aided them in this worthy cause.

Local Republicans Arrange Slate

The meeting called by the Dunellen Republicans, last night, at the residence of W. S. Frederick, Dunellen avenue, proved a most harmonious one. The Republicans placed the following ticket in nomination:

For councilmen, E. E. Waller and F. H. Fuller; for assessor, H. L. Cook; for collector and treasurer, I. J. Stites; for committeemen, First District; W. S. Frederick; Second District, J. J. Walton. These nominations will be placed in the field by the party at the coming primaries.

Sergt. Vogel Wounded in France

News has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Vogel that their son, Sergt. William Vogel, has been wounded while fighting in the conflict in France. The news of the young man's injuries came this week through a telegram received by relatives from the authorities at Washington. It is not known how serious the injury is.

About the first of the month his parents received a letter from him, stating that he was on the firing line, and was in good health. He is with Company A, of the 80th U. S. Infantry.

Local News Brevities

Secretary G. R. Sutton, of the industrial branch of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., conducted a patriotic noon meeting today at the Hall Printing Press Works. Hon. W. N. Runyon, of Plainfield, was the speaker. Miss Etta Raybert, of Plainfield, was the soloist. The affair made quite a hit with the employes of the factory.

Two of our local canoists, William Mundy and Theodore Oakley, received a real ducking while paddling along the Raritan canal, Bound Brook, on Wednesday afternoon. In some manner, yet to be explained, the canoe lost its equilibrium, throwing the occupants into the water. Oakley emerged from the water minus his "sneaks."

C. H. Holbrook has been making considerable improvements to his farm property in Greenbrook section. The carpenter work is being done by Contractor Conover's men from North Plainfield.

James McCann has been locked up at the local bastile, and is awaiting a hearing under the anti-loafing act. He was given a warning some months ago and promised to go to work.

It is said that the present Democratic assessor, John Peters, Sr., will not be a candidate for the office this fall. The name of Councilman Neighbour has been mentioned for the place.

I. J. Stites, with his daughter, Miss Lila Stites, will make a visit to the U. S. Hospital at Colonia tomorrow afternoon. They will be accompanied by friends from Plainfield.

The fire siren, which the borough rejected several weeks ago, is still in position on the bell tower. It is not known when the company owning the siren will take it down.

George A. Doyle is the latest patriot to enroll in the Merchant Marine from this place, through the Suter pharmacy, which is the local recruiting station.

The month just closing has been a slow one among the building lines in this locality. Building Inspector Clum did not issue a permit.

Christian Hunt has completed his contract of rewiring the Borough Hall, and the job now awaits the fire underwriter's inspection.

DISCUSSED EARLY SATURDAY CLOSING

A meeting of the merchants was held in the store of Harold Gordon, on Elm street, last night, to discuss the question of closing the stores earlier on Saturday nights, because of the threatened shortage of help. A number of the girls in the stores of F. H. Schaefer & Company, and Miss L. A. Piker, have left to take other positions.

The merchants discussed the matter informally, and decided to leave the question to the proprietors of the two stores. The other merchants present were of the opinion that it would be a detriment to their business to close earlier on Saturday night than they are now doing.

Peddling From Auto Without License

William Gregg, Thomas Gregg and Thomas Shaw were arrested yesterday afternoon, by Police Officer Howarth, for peddling oil-cloth from an automobile without a license. When taken to the police station they stated that they were from Newark, but from articles found in their dress suit cases they appeared to come from Waterbury, Conn., instead. The automobile had a Michigan plate on it, and the number on the engine did not correspond with the registration card that Shaw, the driver, had.

They were arraigned before Acting Recorder Millett, who fined Shaw $20, and the two Greggs $5 each. The car was held at the police station pending an investigation by the police as to who is the owner.

Yesterday morning Andrew Martin, of Elizabethport, was fined $5 for peddling without a license, and Philip Mann, of Roselle, $2 for not having rear lights on his automobile.

Invitations have been received in town for the wedding of Thomas LaPia, of Central avenue, to Miss Marguerite Maddaloni, which will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Maddaloni, 1341 George street, Plainfield, on September 15th.

Word has been received from George Bergkamp, Jr., a former resident of this town, who was gassed and wounded while at the front, states that he is now in the Government hospital at Otisville, N. Y., and is getting along nicely.

Word has been received from Edward W. Wittke, who has been in the Officers' Reserve Corps Training Camp at Leon Springs, Texas, since May 6th, that he has been promoted from sergeant to second lieutenant.

MAY ADVERTISE FOR UNSKILLED WORKERS

Permission to advertise for unskilled workers, male or female, may be obtained on application to the United States Employment Service. Restrictions placed on advertising by Washington and effective August 1st, 1918, were, "no advertising for unskilled labor by employers engaged wholly or partly in war work whose maximum force exceeds one hundred. Private recruiting and advertising for skilled labor not restricted provided it is so conducted as to avoid taking or causing restlessness among men engaged in war work including railroads, mines and farms. Non-war industries may not, by advertising or otherwise, offer superior inducements or in any way compete for labor with Government or employers engaged in war work."

An amendment to these restrictions that has just been received authorizes the employment service to grant permission to firms desiring to advertise for unskilled labor along the following lines:

Mentioning: The nature of the work. Approximate location (using designation "local" or if out of town permitted to mention the name of the city.) Referring applicants to office U. S. Employment Service.

Not mentioning: Wages. Name of employer.

Authorization may also be given, on application, for war emergency industries to use their field forces providing that all labor recruited shall be sent to a United States Employment office and there questioned as to whether or not they have been solicited from other war emergency operations. It is understood that when applicants are solicited from other war emergency work that they shall be returned to the plant from which they were taken and the company warned against continuing to recruit from such war industries.

No employer may recruit outside the boundaries of this State except on special permission from the Federal Director of New Jersey, Col. Lewis T. Bryant.

JEWISH REPUBLIC SEEMS ASSURED IN HOLY LAND

After 2,000 years of exile it is now almost certain that a Jewish government will be established in Palestine. When General Allenby, at the head of his victorious army, carried the Union Jack into the Holy City last December, a dream of twenty centuries became possible. On the hills of Zion a Jewish civilization with something of its old moral and intellectual vigor may once more come into being. The Jews have seized their opportunity, and already an administrative commission of Hebrews is at work restoring the country for that race.

This administrative commission has a program. Its aim is to bring back the life of the Jewish colonies in Palestine to their flourishing prewar conditions. It intends to furnish the necessary educational, medical and economic aid to all Jews who go back to the Holy Land. One of its most important projects is the immediate founding of a Jewish university. Along the lines of diplomacy, the commission proposes to create harmonious relationships with the Arab and Armenian States which are to be its neighbors.

All over the world the tribes of Israel have waited through the centuries for this promised day. Their poets have sung of it. The exiles have yearned for their native land. Great Britain's military operations of last winter have furnished an opening wedge for the realization of Zion's hopes. When Britain undertook the rescue of Palestine in order to strike a staggering blow at the Turk, the eyes of Jews everywhere watched the progress of General Allenby's army. They saw that little army, foot by foot, and mile by mile, drive back the Turk and the Hun. Their joy grew as they beheld it move forward from Gaza to Bethlehem from Bethlehem to Jerusalem, from Jerusalem to Jericho. When Jerusalem fell the delight of the Jews was unbounded, for Great Britain had gone on record in Balfour's speech as favoring a Jewish republic there.

Mrs. E. C. Perkins, of Central avenue, and Evarts Tracy and family, of West Eighth street, attended the golden wedding of Senator and Mrs. William M. Evarts, in Windsor, Vt. The aged couple were parents of Mrs. Perkins, and uncle and aunt of Mr. Tracy.

The funeral of Warren Ackerman, of Scotch Plains, was held in the First Presbyterian Church, this city, the pastor, the Rev. C. E. Herring, officiating, assisted by the former pastor, the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham. Selections were sung by a quartet composed of Mrs. Asa Collier, Miss Jessie Smillie, L. C. Bond and B. T. Barnes, with accompaniment by William E. MacClymont. The honorary bearers were: A. D. Shephard, Amzi Dodd and General Bloom.

FURNISHED 291 MEN FOR OVERSEAS WORK

New Jersey Sends 13.1 Per Cent. of Total from Eastern Department

Newark, Aug. 30—H. S. Park, of the War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, has just made public statistics which show that New Jersey has furnished 291 men for "overseas" service with the Y. M. C. A. These men are with the American, French and Italian armies. This number is 13.1% of the total furnished by the Eastern department, including New York and New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia. The quota alloted to New Jersey to be furnished prior to September 1st was 11%.

All classes and types of men are represented in the list of those who have responded to the Red Triangle call. The greatest need at this time is for men competent to organize and lead in physical and recreational sports. Men of Christian character, who are qualified for this sort of work, are urged to offer their services for overseas duty with the Y. M. C. A.

The need of physical directors also is pressing, both in the local associations and in the camps and cantonments in this country. Several men of the right character and ability could be placed in New Jersey in the near future.

There is a pressing need for automobile mechanics in France—men who have sufficient knowledge of automobiles to make the repairs necessary to keep the Red Triangle trucks and smaller cars in motion. There are many of these trucks and machines transporting supplies at the front and it is important that they be kept going all of the time.

Members of the New Jersey War Commission are gratified with the splendid way in which the men of New Jersey have responded for this work. They are hopeful that in view of the pressing need for still more men with executive ability—really big business men—to go "over there" more business men may arrange their affairs to take up this grand work of helping conserve the lives and health of the brave men in the trenches.

The men who are qualified for this work "overseas" should be of unquestionable Christian character, unselfish and with a desire to serve; good health, plenty of physical energy, cheerful disposition and strong personality. The greatest need is for men with initiative, who have the judgment to act in emergencies and do the right thing.

To take care of the increasing work of recruiting the State has been divided into three districts with headquarters in Newark, Trenton and Camden. In addition to these districts local recruiting committees have been organized in Bergen county, the Oranges, Atlantic City, Bayonne, Somerset county, Paterson and New Brunswick. Further extension of this work by the organization of other local committees is being planned.

MERCER COUNTY HAS MUNICIPAL LEAGUE

Special to Courier-News:

Trenton, Aug. 30—Mercer county has organized the first Municipal Ownership League in the State, taking the initial step in the campaign for public ownership of utilities, particularly trolley lines, in New Jersey. The organization was effected at a convention, held here, attended by several hundred delegates representing civic, social, fraternal and political organizations, and also several hundred others, without delegate's credentials, but who are interested in the movement.

Peter Witt, the Cleveland trolley expert, was the principal speaker. He maintained that there was nothing new or radical in such a policy. By way of illustration, he described the evolution in our system of education, fire fighting, policing, etc.

"Why, my dear friends," he declared, "the children who ride on our municipal trolley cars will never know that such a person as Governor Stokes ever lived." In making allusion to politics, Mr. Witt apologized to his audience for departing from his main subject, but he explained that he had come 550 miles to make the speech and he felt justified in taking some liberty with his hearers.

"I know that I am not expected to say anything about politics," he continued, "but I cannot restrain the impulse to call your attention to two men in this United States Senatorial campaign. They are Record and Hennessy. Both stand for about the same high principles and it's a fortunate thing that they are connected with different parties. That ought to make you feel that, no matter which of them you vote for, you are supporting a man who has a proper regard for your interests." He also paid his respects to the banking interests opposing public ownership.

Commissioner George B. La Barre opened the convention with a review of Trenton's fight for better trolley service. Benjamin A. Wilson was chosen chairman of the league, George Cuthrie, a labor man, was named secretary, and Everett Townsend, who is being advocated for the Public Utility Commission, was selected as treasurer. The league plans to meet again on October 8 in the high school auditorium, this city.

MOTOR CORPS HAS PASSED ITS "EXAMS"

The first Plainfield class of the American Motor Corps has successfully passed its examinations in automobile mechanics. This class consists of eight members under the instruction of R. W. Campbell, who are now planning to enter their course of first aid and emergency treatment supervised by Dr. Tomlinson. A second class in automobile mechanics will be formed providing enough members are procured to make it worth while, and these may enter the first aid class now forming.

The work of the American Motor Corps is under the direction of the War Department and is fast becoming an important unit in volunteer work for women. It includes ambulance, dispatch, and, in fact, almost all transportation work assisting the Government. Members must be proficient in special first aid, stretcher drill, military drill, the driving, care and upkeep of cars, as well as the making of the necessary ordinary running repairs. After the members have finished their different courses they are fitted for duty overseas providing they are qualified.

This division of service is for women alone, and all those interested in joining the second class of motor mechanics will kindly communicate with Mrs. R. W. Campbell, 308 West Fourth Street, this city.

FUEL FOR HEATING HOMES COME FIRST ON NEW LIST

Washington, Aug. 30—Fuel for the heating of homes will head the new priorities list being prepared by the War Industries Board, it is announced.

The list, which will contain sixty-four classifications of industries to be given priority, in fuel, transportation facilities, material, labor and finance will be divided into four basic groups for the order in which they will receive preferential treatment. The present list contains thirty-two classifications, but the position of an industry on the list does not determine its order of priority.

The new list, to be announced in a few days, will serve as a guide for district selective service boards in determining industrial exemptions. A representative of a new committee on relationship of military and industrial man power recently appointed by the war labor policy board will sit with each district board to aid in determining all such exemptions.

BOYS WHO EXHIBITED CALVES AWAIT JUDGES' VERDICT

Belvidere, Aug. 30—Boys who had entered calves in the competitive exhibition Tuesday, open to high school pupils, who had raised the calves themselves, are waiting eagerly to learn the verdict of the judges. The exhibit, arranged and conducted by Charles H. Reagle, principal of the Belvidere High School, attracted many farmers, who drove in from the outlying districts. The boys, fifteen in all, were congratulated for their work.

The prize for the boy whose calf may be judged as the best, considering its "points" as well as the cost of its feed, etc., will be a pure white bull calf, a blooded animal, donated by Mrs. Helen Masserat, owner of the Piquot Farms, near Belvidere.

GEORGE W. SMITH CHOSEN TO FILL VACANCY

Phillipsburg, Aug. 30—George W. Smith, who has been acting mayor of Phillipsburg since the death of Mayor Joseph H. Firth, about two months ago, has been elected mayor for the remainder of the term by the town commissioners. Commissioners Houser, Potts and Perdoe voted for Mr. Smith. Commissioner Britton was recorded as not voting.

Mr. Britton, who ran second to Mayor Firth at the May election, also aspired to the office, but not a vote was cast for him. Mr. Potts, who was recently elected to fill the vacancy on the commission caused by the death of Mayor Firth, took his seat for the first time.

NO JERSEYMEN IN LATEST ROLL

Washington, Aug. 30—The names of forty-seven American soldiers and officers who have been located in German prison camps have been made known by the War Department. The list as issued gives the names of next of kin and emergency addresses. No Jerseymen are on this roll. More of the men are from Pennsylvania than from any other one State, but many States are represented.

ASSOCIATION SENDS OUT RULES

New Orleans, Aug. 30—As the fall hay fever season is on the American Hay Fever Prevention Association, in accordance with its annual custom, has issued the following instructions in the interest of public health:

Hay fever subjects should choose localities distant from weed-infested areas. The pollen of the grasses and of the summer hay fever weeds generally do not ordinarily travel very far, and a mile is usually a safe distance. Should the neighborhood be infested with weeds, it should be reported in the interest of public health to the Board of Health.

The diet of hay fever subjects during the season should be light foods, rich in protein, such as meat, fish, eggs, cheese and milk. Farinaceous food may be taken in moderation. Vegetables and fruits are of benefit.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just worn out with pains which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. H. DOOLEY, 1135 25th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Dooley's experience, and instead of dragging along from day to day with life a burden, give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. 8,000,000 GALLONS OF GASOLINE SAVED

Washington, D. C., Aug. 30.—Fuel Administration officials estimate that nearly eight million gallons of gasoline will be saved each Sunday through non-use of motor vehicles on those days, as requested Monday by Administrator Garfield. East of the Mississippi River there are approximately four million motor-driven vehicles. Of these two hundred thousand are trucks, to which the restrictions do not apply.

The estimated saving is based on the use of an average of two gallons of gasoline for each car of the 3,800,000 cars affected. The Fuel Administration was deluged Wednesday by inquiries telegraphed by automobile owners seeking information about the call to lay up their cars on Sundays until further notice.

There will be two scenes and eighteen numbers under the title, "America Answers the Call." The opening scene will be "The Garden of Peace," which will later be shown destroyed by "The Spirit of War."

JOE'S STUFF

Jimmy Condos has another feather in his cap. While we were not present at the match last evening, we have been told by our representative who was there that the local lad acquitted himself nobly. Condos has a wrestling future and there can be no doubt about it.

#

The soldiers at Camp Morgan will get a peek at Jimmy Condos tonight. Other local wrestlers are carded to work out with the local lad for the benefit of the soldiers.

#

Silence reigns supreme in the camp of "Kid" Blake and George the Greek. Blake picked up George's challenge, but that seems to have ended the discussion.

#

Meanwhile Blake is working out with George Brown. Very likely Blake will help get Brown in trim for his next welterweight opponent.

#

The City League milling is to be continued tomorrow. The line-ups are almost certain to be makeshift ones. We understand that the Y. M. C. A. manager is looking around for a catcher.

#

With Wilson and Moulton gone, the Y. M. C. A. leader really has cause to worry. We have been informed that Leo entered the Merchant Marine and that Harry is with the naval aviation.

#

The departure of Houston some time ago and of the two catchers at the present writing, places the cellarites in a ticklish position.

#

Joe Alberts expects a large crowd out to witness his boys and the sailors go to it Sunday. The sailors demonstrated a few weeks ago that they can play baseball. Alberts may get a few extras to help out with the playing.

#

George Miller has a good team and it is now up to Georgie to book games for it. The season is not over by any manner of means.

#

It must be remembered that the daylight-saving law makes it possible to play baseball until late in October, and all of September is still before us.

#

We are continuing our prophetic vision in another column today. The infield proposition occupies our attention.

#

The world's series comes early this year, and it may not come at all next year.

#

Lest we forget. Tinfoil is still being gathered by our office. Arrangements have been made by the president of the city league to dispose of this material at a good profit. As soon as he is able to sell the tinfoil announcement will be made of the fact.

Also, the editor has started a peach-pit fund. Peach-pits have been coming in with marked regularity. Mr. Editor beat us to the idea. Peach-pits neutralize gas effects.

BUSY COURSE LABOR DAY

Thousands Will Take Part in Patriotic Golf Events on That Day

There should be a turn-out of something in the neighborhood of 10,000 players on New Jersey courses in this vicinity and elsewhere Labor Day, when golfers in the metropolitan district take part in the patriotic tournament under the auspices of the Metropolitan Golf Association. The event is open to every organization, and should all the clubs in this State participate, the army of golfers on the links here will be nearer the 15,000 mark.

It is figured that 20,000 golfers belonging to the eighty-seven member clubs in the association should contribute to the cause, the funds to be divided equally among the Y. M. C. A., War Camp Community Service and K. of C. Therefore, as nearly half of the eighty-seven clubs are in the Jersey district, it is logical to assume that at least 10,000 will tramp the links hereabouts.

Medals, posters and entry blanks have been sent to member clubs by the Metropolitan Golf Association, and should any non-member organization wish to take part, information concerning the tournament may be had by communicating with A. H. Pogson, 55 Liberty street, New York. Last year a total of $60,000 was raised, but most likely the amount this summer will be considerably less, as the clubs in 1917 had the unusual incentive of raising sufficient money to get their names on ambulances to be used in France.

At the Traps

By PERER P. CARNEY
America's Leading Authority on Trapshooting

Of the 45 trapshooting competitions registered with the Interstate Trapshooting Association for September the one of greatest moment is the Westy Hogans, which will be held in Atlantic City on the 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th. Other shoots of more than ordinary importance will be the annual tournament of the Wild Life League of Pennsylvania, which takes place at Conneaut Lake, and the Virginia State championship.

This will be the twelfth tournament of the Hogans. The Hogans' shoot yearly is second only in importance to the Grand American Handicap. For a number of years the Hogans shot on the old steel pier. When this was destroyed they moved to Venice Park. Now that Venice Park is no more the Hogans have selected a place on the Albany avenue boulevard. Eight traps have been installed and the targets will be thrown over the waters of the Atlantic Ocean. Thus the shooters will have a sky background. With eight traps in use the even numbered squads will shoot on the even numbered traps and the odd numbered squads will shoot on the odd numbered traps.

The success of last year's tournament, which for the first time was conducted on a class basis, prompted the Hogans to adopt a class program again. The features, such as the Westy Hogans championship, the Westy Hogans handicap and the Westy Hogans special for 88 per cent. shooters, the State team race and the East and West team event are continued.

The handicap event this year will be from 14 to 22 yards. Sixteen yards is the standard trapshooting distance, so it will be interesting to watch the experiment from 14 yards.

The East and West competition will be at the entire 480 targets from 16 yards. The winning team members will receive trophies. Captains will be chosen and these captains will decide on the divisional line. To the shooter with the highest average the Continental Hotel will give a trophy, and the woman with the best average will get a trophy from the Hogans. There will be $1,100 in average money.

The State team race will be decided on the last 100 targets on the 11th. The Hogans championship will be decided on the last 100 targets on the 12th. In the team race there will be one team from each State. There will be 10 trophies in the championship event, the leading one being given by the Traymore Hotel. The Hogans handicap takes place on the 14th, as does the Hogans special. There will be 15 trophies in the special event.

There will be four classes—A, B, C and D—based on 92, 88, 84 and under 84 per cent. There will be two prizes in each class for every ten shooters.

The Hogans had more than 300 shooters in competition last year. They don't expect that number this year, but there will be a goodly number there just the same.

ELECTRICAL STORM SAVES TILDEN FROM DEFEAT IN SINGLES BY HALL

A heavy electric storm with cloudburst accompaniments intruded on the national championship tennis tournament at Forest Hills late yesterday afternoon and mussed up the program. There never will be any telling whether this torrential downpour came as a blessing in disguise to William Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia, or whether it was just a nasty rain which broke up an interesting set of matches that still left nine men in the hunt for the title.

Suffice it to say that the lanky Quaker was very much relieved when the downpour made further play impossible. He was fighting with his back to the wall when the match was called. Walter Merrill Hall, who surprised Walter Hayes the day before by putting him out of the tournament, showed Tilden more stuff than William No. 2 has been asked to cope with this summer. Hall put over his first big surprise in the first set, which he won handily at 6—3.

Tilden won the next one just as easily at 6—1, and the gallery came to the conclusion that the first set just served as a warming-up exercise for Tilden, and that he would have easy going the rest of the way. But here Hall worked another surprise, winning the third set, 7—5. About twenty minutes time was taken out in the latter part of this set because of rain, so the players decided to go on with the fourth set without the customary wait.

However, shortly after the fourth set was started it began to rain harder than at any time during the afternoon, but Hall and Tilden kept at it. The local man started the set by reeling off three straight games, the second and third being deuce games. Here Tilden braced, and won the next two. The sixth game was another deuce affair, with Tilden serving, when the match finally was called.

Other scores follow:

Third Round—Lyle E. Mahan defeated Seiichiro Kashio, 8—6, 6—8, 8—6. (Match continued from previous day).

Fourth Round—Nathaniel Niles defeated Elliott H. Binzen, 7—5, 6—0, 6—2; Beals C. Wright, vs. Ichiya Kumagae, 9—8 in first set when match was called on account of rain; Robert Lindley Murray defeated Frederick B. Alexander, 6—8, 8—6, 6—0, 4—6, 6—0.

Fifth Round—Lieut. S. Howard Voshell defeated Lieut. Craig Biddle, 6—2, 6—3, 9—7; Walter Merrill Hall vs. William T. Tilden, 2d, 6—3, 1—6, 7—5, 3—2 (deuce score in sixth game of fourth set when match was called on account of rain).

BENEFIT HORSE SHOW

A horse show under the patronage of Mrs. Robert E. Strawbridge, of Philadelphia, will be held at Bryn Mawr on September 19, 20 and 21. The entire proceeds will be donated to the Philadelphia branch of the British-American War Relief Fund, of which Mrs. Strawbridge is chairman, and which has been doing such excellent relief work here and in England and France.

WEBB FOR SERIES

Harry A. Frazee, president of the Boston American League baseball club, last night appointed Melville E. Webb, Jr., of The Boston Globe, Boston, representative of the Baseball Writers' Association, to take charge of the press arrangements in Boston in the event the Red Sox participate in the world's series games there.

JIMMY CONDOS GETS DECISION IN MATCH WITH CYCLONE BILL

Before a large crowd of his admirers Jimmy Condos, the pride of Plainfield wrestling ranks, defeated Cyclone Bill, the middleweight champion of New England, last night. Jimmy did the trick in clever fashion and the Bostonian will have to, nominally, concede the New England honors to the local lad. The match was staged in the Knights of Columbus Auditorium on West Front street and was the feature attraction of a championship wrestling bill.

Although there were three matches scheduled, the time was not sufficient to permit of the staging of all three. However, Bill Tekas, a local featherweight, wrestled Gus Mullinos, the featherweight titleholder, and Tekas earned a draw. Mullinos was unable to do anything with the young local mat artist. However, Mullinos retains the cup that was on exhibition in a West Front street shop window.

Jimmy Condos' victory ranks him among the best middleweight wrestlers in the country and has given him a lot of necessary confidence in himself.

Condos will wrestle for the benefit of the soldiers at Camp Morgan this evening. Jimmy gets absolutely nothing for this match, it being prompted by patriotic motives only.

Golding and Stanley did not wrestle last evening.

JOE ALBERTS ON THE ALERT

Plains Manager Looking for "Tune" Kline and Company

Joe Alberts has dropped a line to the effect that he is anxious to hear from Brother Kline in regard to a baseball game between the Royals and the Scotch Plains team. The game, if arranged, would be played at Scotch Plains Sunday, September 8. Alberts would appreciate word from "Tune."

Joe also states in his communication that he would be willing to lead his team against any other on the Hunter avenue grounds September 15 for the benefit of the Red Cross. The entire proceeds would be turned over to this most worthy charity if it is possible to carry out Alberts' plans.

Incidentally, Alberts calls attention to the fact that the Pelham Reserves are coming to Scotch Plains next Sunday and that it will very probably be the last time that the sailors can perform in this vicinity for this season at least.

BRILLIANT GOLF BY A LINK NOVICE

The most brilliant golf thus far exhibited in the Women's Western championship at Indian Hill Club, Chicago, was played yesterday by Miss Elizabeth Klotz, of the home club, despite she lost to Miss Frances Hadfield, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin champion, the only non-resident player left in the contest, 1 down. Miss Klotz, who never before played in a championship, was nervous at the start and a few bad holes sent her score for the first nine to 50. Her score for the second half was 40, a record for the course and 2 under par.

Miss Hadfield, who is an experienced match player, although only 15 years old, had to use all her resources to win, scoring 12 holes in par or better.

Games Tomorrow

Baptists vs. Y. M. C. A.
Spicers vs. Ponds

The City League will be active tomorrow afternoon when all four teams will engage in exhibitions of the national pastime. Last week only two of the teams were busy, but the regular work will be resumed tomorrow afternoon. There will be no games over Labor Day.

The managers of the league teams, it is said, expect to experience difficulty in getting their line-ups straightened out for tomorrow afternoon. Of late it has been increasingly hard to get the players to come, the ravages of the draft having placed good players at a premium.

The games on the morrow can have no material effect on the race for the flag, as the First Baptists have the emblem practically cinched. The fight for other positions is bound to be keen, however.

SIZING 'EM UP

By "JOE"

The Infield

The question of which team has the better infield is not an easy one to handle. There have been many articles written on the subject, and, naturally, many conflicting ideas have been given out. However, in our opinion, if the infields are compared, man for man, the Red Sox have a shade the better of the argument. We wish to go on record as having said this and we wish to go on record also as having stated that the pitching staffs of the Cubs and Red Sox are about equal.

At first base the Cubs have Fred Merkle and the Red Sox have Stuffy McInnis. Merkle has had a good year, but McInnis has had several good years. Honestly, Merkle has done better of late than McInnis, but the former Athletic excells in experience and in his knowledge of inside play. Stuffy can be relied upon to keep his head in a pinch, but Merkle has never been forgiven for his world-famous "bonehead" play of years gone by.

At second Dave Shean, while by no means a star, is better than Rollie Zeider. Shean excells in every department, although Zeider is at his best in the pinch. Neither has had world series experience. Hollocher at short is better than Everett Scott, but has not had the experience that Scott has had. Hollocher, a youngster, may go up like a balloon. At third Charley Deal has a shade on either Coffey or Cochran. With Larry Gardner gone the Red Sox will have to depend on Coffey, who is an old-timer, or Cochran, an inexperienced player of minor leage ability.

We will discuss the infields to greater extent in tomorrow's paper.

CHANGE STARTING HOUR FOR TOURNEY

The hour for starting the championship tournament at the Shackamaxon Country Club tomorrow has been changed to ten o'clock a. m. Thirty-six holes will be played, with the best sixteen players to qualify and play according to conditions given in the "Schedule of Events for 1918."

In addition to the published program for Labor Day, there will be added an 18-hole medal play tournament to be held under the auspices of the Metropolitan Golf Association for its Red Cross fund. An entrance fee of one dollar or more will be charged, and prizes will be awarded by the association. It is desired that as many of the members as possible enter this contest.

The qualifying round of the women's autumn handicap is scheduled for Tuesday, September 3. The handicap committee will arrange the handicaps of entrants so that all may have a chance of winning the event.

The qualifying round of the autumn handicap, "the round-up," will take place on Wednesday, September 4. This event is for Class B players only. It is earnestly desired that all Class B players enter, as this event is expected to "graduate" a number of our players into Class A.

The board of governors' handicap will start Saturday, September 14, at 10 o'clock. Members desiring to enter should register before the date set for the qualifying round.

HOME DEFENSE GAME WILL NOT BE PLAYED

At a meeting of the commission of the North Plainfield Home Defense League last night Corporal Earl Moran explained that it would not be possible to put a team on the field Labor Day to meet the Plainfield Home Defense League aggregation. He said that Barry, McDonough, Daley and Patrick have gone into the service and that Conshay is laid up with a broken finger, while Meade and Sutphen are out of the city, leaving only four men availble for the game.

After hearing Moran's statement the commission authorized the cancellation of the game, and Manager Dan Randolph, of the city fencibles, has been notified accordingly. It may be possible to play the game at a later date.

Players Get Respite

Adjutant General Gilkyson, following the receipt of a message from Washington to the effect that the President has directed that the "work or fight" regulation shall not apply to the baseball teams who play the world series until September 15, yesterday notified all local boards in New Jersey to this effect.

Rigler Going Over

Bill Rigler, National League umpire, will go to France as soon as the baseball season ends to engage in Y. M. C. A. work, he announced yesterday. He previously had accepted a remunerative offer from an Ohio firm, but when asked to take up Y. M. C. A. war work gave up the job.

RAIN PREVENTS SOX FROM CINCHING FLAG

With the success of the Boston Red Sox over the Detroit Tigers Wednesday and the defeat which the Cleveland Indians met in Philadelphia, it was made all but certain that the Boston team would finish first in the American League and meet the Chicago Cubs in the world's series.

The Red Sox now have a lead of three and one-half games, and the season is to end Labor Day. The Red Sox must win one more game in order to annex the flag. Rain prevented that yesterday.

LOVE GOES TO WORK

International Arms and Fuse Company ball tossers have not had much luck in their contests on the diamond.

With the addition to the squad of workers at the huge Bloomfield plant of Slim Love, lanky twirler from the New York Americans, it is likely that the Fuse nine will be more successful hereafter. Love is said to be a fair machinist, and he is to start at work in the lathe department. Slim expects to remain with the International folks until the war is over.

ADUBATO BENEFIT

Benny Miller has offered the services of Lou Cardell, Kid Henry, Danny Pavese and Johnny Evans for a benefit to be given for the widow of Tom Adubato, Newark detective, who was killed on duty in New York. The benefit will be held at Wiedenmayer's Park Friday, September 13.

Miller says Cardell is ready to fight Mickey Donley and Evans is willing to meet Young Hicks. Pavese and Henry are willing to oppose any good boy.

FAVORITES CONTINUE

The second round of match play in the Shenecossett Country Club championship found the favorites still in the tournament. Three of the four remaining players are from Hartford.

H. C. Fenn, the medal winner, defeated C. G. Miller, of St. Andrew's. He meets J. P. Taylor Armstrong, of New London, today, in what shoul! be the best match of the week. Armstrong yesterday put out his namesake, J. D. Armstrong, of Buffalo.

Mike Dwyer Wins

Friends of Mike Dwyer, the former Mohawk A. C. athlete, will be pleased to know that he recently defeated a field of 120 runners in a cross-country run in France. He was awarded a cup donated by Mrs. Vincent Astor. Private Dwyer is with the first Upton draft army.

Big Price for Horse

At the sale of the H. A. Porter horses at Syracuse last night the colt, Pride of India, a brother to Dominant, went to W. P. Burch for $19,000. It was said Mr. Burch made the purchase for Samuel Ross, of Washington. Pride of India is nominated for the Futurity to be run at Belmont Park September 14.

POLISH ARMIES ON BATTLE FIELDS IN FRANCE BEFORE AND TODAY

(By Joseph Dukszta)

Heroism of the small Polish army in France is seen. The first class distinguished service cross (Kryz Legii Honorowe), was given to the first Polish officer from Plainfield, N. J., L. Chwalkowski; many others also received service crosses. When the German shell tore his arm off, Lieutenant Chwalkowski cried, "It is for Poland!" The commander, for his bravery, decorated him with the First Class Distinguished Service Cross.

The Polish detachment mentioned in London despatches of July as having taken part in a successful engagement east of Rheims, with the capture of more than 200 prisoners, has been identified as a portion of the Polish forces recruited in the United States. General Archinard's cable message is as follows:

"The soldiers of the Polish army in France have taken part in the great battle of General Gourand's army. They have had their share of glory in their splendid defensive, and when they attacked they captured prisoners. As it is custom to write on the death certificates of the French soldiers who are killed in action the words, 'Died for France,' the same will be done for the Polish soldiers who are now buried on French soil. Their death certificates also will bear the inscription, 'Died for Poland'."

Paul Ayres Rockwell writes as follows:

The recently-constituted Polish army, which contains many men who volunteered with the French Foreign Legion in 1914, received its baptism of fire in the Champagne, while aiding in the recapture of outposts occupied by the Germans July 15. Among the many gallant exploits of these fine soldiers who fight under the White Eagle must be mentioned a combat on July 29, when a Polish company, charged with the capture of a difficult, far-away objective, spread out along a two-kilometer front, rushed forward irresistibly, carried assigned terrain, and captured 135 Germans and 25 machine guns. The enemy reacted and began an assault. For an instant it seemed the Polish line would be pushed back. Then the hesitating second wave saw arriving, hands high, the Germans already taken by the first wave, and encouraged, redoubled the rush forward.

"One of the captured Germans declared that he did not know before that the Polish army, adding that as soon as he recognized the nationality he 'made the most stupid pose of his life.'

"After having conquered the position the Poles were obliged to withstand five successive violent enemy counter attacks. Every German onslaught was repulsed with bloody losses. Two sections of reinforcements, commanded by a young captain, arrived at the most critical moment, and aided in pushing the Germans back. The captain found himself suddenly assailed by a strong group of Germans, sprang upon the parapet, and single-handed forced the Germans to decamp, by hurling an entire case of grenades at them, which his companions had found in the shelter and passed up to him. Other Poles arrived, and enthused by the courage of their chief, counter-charged and gained 300 additional metres of terrain. The captain was wounded and lost much blood, but insisted on remaining with his men until the combat ended. Such a gallant beginning shows that the Polish fighters of today are entirely worthy of the traditions of the various battalions which won glory on the Vimy Ridge battlefield with the Foreign Legion in May and June, 1915."

The Poles are amply proving their loyalty to democracy on the battlefields of Europe. Though they comprise but four per cent. of the population of the United States, they have already contributed ten per cent. of the dead in action among the expeditionary forces. The first American soldier of the contingent from Chicago, Milwaukee, Passaic and Webster, Mass., to be killed was a Pole. But the signal proof of Polish devotion to the cause of the Allies is the existence of a Polish army in france, to which President Poincare has just presented a set of flags, standards and pennons, the flags decorated with the French War Cross. It is not a large fighting force; it numbers at present but 30,000 to 50,000 men, and with the 20,000 Poles training near Niagara, and with other additions, it may eventually comprise 100,000 soldiers. But there it is, an independent army, Polish patriots, battlin g for democracy, under their own colors, in the western trenches, and battling also for a free Poland and the realization of a century's struggle for liberty.

Poles, follow the paths of your forefathers, Kosciuszko and Pulawski. Enlist in the Polish army, which is now one hundred thousand strong. Make it one million men who will help to crush German militarism, and free Poland from the Hun. Poles from Austria, Germany and Russia enlist and enlarge the Polish army, which will revenge the wrongs done by Germany!

Poles, if any of you who are in the American army wish to get a transfer for the Polish army, you may do so by following the instructions below:

'Hout Commisariat de la Republique Francaise.

"1954 Columbia Rd, N. W., Washington, D. C.

"Ref. 9-1133, July 22nd, 1918. From Colonel James Martin, French Military Mission, to Polish Military Commission, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

"Gentlemen—Referring to your letter of June 20th, I beg to inform you that if there are any Polish 'aliens' in the American camps who have been drafted without being naturalized American citizens, and who are willing to enlist in the Polish army, they only have to make an application to obtain their transfer. The American authorities will give the necessary attention to such applications.

FORMS RECEIVED FOR REGISTRATION

Draft Board Preparing to Enroll Men from 18 to 45 in This District

The Plainfield Exemption Board today received the forms to be used for the 18 to 45 registration, which will take place early in September. They comprise registration cards and certificates, there being about 5,000 of each. Although the registration date has not been set, it is the opinion that it will be about September 7. The War Department has lost no time in preparing all the data for this important event, pending the passage of the new draft law and the signing of the same by the President.

Joshua T. Loizeaux, of Leland avenue, who was selected as a draughtsman to take a position in the photographic branch of the military aeronautics, left last night for Madison Barracks, Sacketts Harbor, on Lake Ontario, where he will prepare for service overseas. The board was unable to get a volunteer for this branch of the service, and was therefore obliged to draft the only available man on the list here.

Willard H. Rolles, of Easton, Pa., where he was registered, but who has been living here, was today inducted into service at Camp Dix for the Easton draft board.

Another delinquent draftee, Daniel Ciufo, of Scotch Plains, who has been working at the plant of the International Motor Company, was discovered yesterday, and he will be sent to Camp Dix next Tuesday. He should have gone into service last February, but escaped notice in some way.

Announcement was made in Washington today that Provost Marshal General Crowder had authorized increased pay for local draft boards throughout the country. Under the order members of all boards will receive from $50 to $200 a month, the amount varying with the number of registrants on their rolls.

Fifty dollars will be the minimum, for members of boards with 1,000 registrants or less. Heretofore the compensation has been ten cents for each registrant, which in many cases was a mere pittance, and not in keeping with the time devoted to the task.

Officers at General Crowder's office said that the local board members had made real sacrifices to do their patriotic duty, many of them having to give their entire time, and it has been realized that they were not properly compensated.

Although it is known that a majority of the draft boards have been accepting pay for their services, this is not the case of the members of the local board They have never taken any pay for their services. A fixed amount is allowed for an assistant, but aside from that the board has been giving its services.

"BRINGING UP FATHER AT HOME" AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE LABOR DAY, MATINEE AND NIGHT

"Bringing Up Father at Home," at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday, Matinee and Night.

Merry, meritorious and mirthful may well be applied to the latest of the "Bringing up Father" series of cartoon plays. It is called "Bringing Up Father at Home," and will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre on Monday, matinee and night. Those who have seen and enjoyed the other editions of these popular and side-splitting comics will no doubt endorse this one as the best of the entire crop. Gus Hill, who took "Father" out of the pages of the newspaper and made the most talked about celebrity in the world, has invested the production with that intelligent and lavish attention to detail which has characterized all of his enterprises and earned for him the reputation as one of the shrewdest and most original purveyors of modern amusement now before the public. While clinging to the set style of entertainment, which has marked all of the "Father" pieces in the past, announcement is made that the fun that occurs from this particular concoction is on entirely new lines. An elaborate scenic investiture, new ideas, innovations, jingling songs, tuneful melodies and a competent cast are assured. The company, besides a chorus of fifteen beautiful young women vocalists and dancers, also includes Walter Veron and Louise Earl, essaying the roles of "Father" and "Mother."

The offering is in three acts and from all accounts is easily the laughing hit of the current season.

"PARLOR, BEDROOM AND BATH" AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE NEXT TUESDAY

Do women prefer Don Juan to Sir Galahad? Do they prefer the man with the rosy past to the man with the roseate future? No matter which side of the controversy you take you will find delight in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the sensational New York farce hit, which A. H. Woods will present at the Plainfield Theatre, on Tuesday, matinee and night, direct from a run of seven months at the Republic Theatre, New York and an engagement of four months in Chicago. "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," described as a new tale of a wayside inn, is a fresh, flippant, farce-comedy, in three acts, by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, and has the rare distinction of having been the biggest comedy hit in both New York and Chicago, in the same season, on the occasion of its first production. The play is said to contain one of the most ingenious plots ever embodied in a comedy, and one that affords unlimited opportunities for broad and rollicking fun, both in dialogue and situation. As much of the plot as has been revealed concerns the romantic escapades of a mild and shy young husband, who seeks to live up to his wife's opinion of him as a gay Lothario. He elopes with another man's wife, repairs to a lonely wayside inn, hires a private suite and, to his amazement, finds himself surrounded by a bevy of lovely, but uninvited women.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," at the Plainfield Theatre, Tuesday, September 3, Matinee and Night.

The complications that ensue promise an evening of as rare and hilarious entertainment as the title of the play suggests. A splendid company has been selected by Mr. Woods.

DOUBLE FEATURE BILL AT PROCTOR'S TONIGHT

Two delightful features are being shown today at Proctor's Theatre. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, in "Pay Day," are seen in straight dramatic roles in this mirth-provoking novelty. Mrs. Irene Castle, in "Convict 993," has a role that calls for action rather than acting, but in the few scenes where a portrayal of emotional intensity is required, she rises to the situation more competently than ever before. The picture is full of suspense and mystery and a surprise ending.

Tomorrow Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stared in a brilliant comedy-drama, "A Pair of Cupids." This story was written especially for these two clever stars. The action of this story is centred around a frivolous butterfly of a girl, whose only pleasure in life is gaiety and clothes, and a young business man, to whom the world revolves around the word "business." The guardian of the girl, Virginia Parke, is also the uncle of the man, Peter Warburton, and he desires a match between his nephew and ward, but Peter says that he would never marry an empty-headed butterfly, and Virginia declares she will never marry a "human cash register." The uncle then conceives an idea and from that point the most amusing incidents occur and the situations are unique and delightful. Along with the comedy real human heart interest is cleverly blended and the picture is really one of enjoyment.

Tomorrow starts a new Vitagraph serial, entitled "A Fight for Millions," by far the best serial ever produced. William Duncan, the star, is supported by a specially selected cast in a marvelous outdoor melodrama, set in the picturesque snow country of the Northwest. Don't miss this first chapter.

A PLEASING PROGRAM OF PICTURES AND VAUDEVILLE AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE

With Ivan Abramson's gripping story, "When Men Betray," as the feature, a new and pleasing program of photoplays and vaudeville was ushered in at the Plainfield Theatre yesterday for the remainder of the week.

Miss Gail Kane, a charming young actress, whose work is well known here, has the leading role in "When Men Betray," and carries the difficult part in admirable form. The company supporting her includes Stuart Holmes, Gertrude Braun, Tallulah Bankhead, Hazel Washburn and Juliet Moore. The story deals with the actions of a faithless husband and the subsequent downfall of his neglected wife and family, a somewhat sordid theme, but is so presented as to be intensely interesting and dramatic, and it concludes with a pleasing climax.

The vaudeville numbers were well received yesterday. Featured on the bill are Paul Jones and the Hall sisters in a singing and violin specialty; Ed and Irene Lowry, in "Bits of Musical Comedy"; "The Morning Glory," a clever sketch, with three people, and Cameron and Clark in a pleasing skit.

William Duncan is the fighting hero and directed the serial, supported by fast and fearless players.

NEWARK AMUSEMENTS

Olympic Park, Irvington

"Madame Sherry" will be the farewell offering of the Aborn Comic Opera Company, at Olympic Park, beginning Monday, September 2, with a special Labor Day matinee. The play is too well known to need much of an introduction to frequenters of the opera.

"Madame Sherry" was originally fashioned in France by the Messrs. Ordonneau and Folks, but when coming to this country was elaborated upon by Otto Mauerbach, Karl Moschuna and George Lederer. The music throughout is tuneful, such as shown in "Every Little Movement Has a Meaning of Its Own."

Farcical and elastic as the comic scheme is, it has a sufficiently coherent plot to support the weight of song, dance and specialty. The humorous developments result from the action of an unscrupulous youth, posing as a piano teacher, in deluding his benevolent uncle into the belief that his sweetheart and her lover are his children, and that his housekeeper, wedded to the janitor of his apartments, is his wife. He complicates matters when he makes love to his young and convent-bred cousin, who catches him throwing kisses to his Lulu and disporting himself otherwise than his pretense of being a benedict warrants.

All Aborn favorites are provided with excellent parts and a lively performance may be looked forward to. Miss Florence Mackie will have a part admirably adapted to her taste, as will the popular Robinson Newbold.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

"Everything," at the Hippodrome, is Universally Acclaimed by New York Critics.

"Everything," the New York Hippodrome's mammoth musical spectacle for the season of 1918-19, revealed to the public for the first time on last Thursday night, captured the local critical body to a man. The reviewers vied with each other in concocting phrases expressive of their unmixed delight and admiration at the fourth overwhelming success in Charles Dillingham's brilliant series of entertainments. It seemed improbable, they all agree, that the scale of pictorial beauty, of comedy, of novelty could mount successively through four such productions as "Hip, Hip, Hooray," "The Big Show," "Cheer Up!" and "Everything," but the improbable had been fulfilled again as on two previous occasions. There was nothing left to do but to marvel.

John Corbin, of the New York Times, said: "In war as in peace, the Hippodrome is our great purveyor of popular diversion. 'Everything' is a gigantic popular pageant, with dominant, patriotic tone coloring." The Sun said: "Stupendous conglomeration of diverting foolery, patriotic thrills and tuneful music. 'Everything' from Genesis to Herbert Hoover. Hippodrome sets new record." Alan Dale said in the American: "The imagination let loose." Louis De Foe said in the World: "Enough of glittering, dazzling spectacle to equip a dozen musical comedies." Heywood Broun in the Tribune said: "Would make a New York critic laugh." "Zit" declared in the Evening Journal: "The biggest thing accomplished on any stage." Stephen Rathbun said in the Evening Sun: "Would need a whale to take it all in." Charles Darnton said in the Evening World: "Hippodrome's 'Everything' a Gargantuan spectacle." George Wotherspoon said in the Telegram: "Unparagoned, unparalled, unequalled, unapproached, unsurpassed. A very wonderful evening." The Herald said: "There is no limit."

At the Columbia

At the Columbia Theatre, beginning Monday afternoon, September 2, The Star and Garter Company will present a new burlesque, in two parts, the first called, "For Art's Sake," and the second, "Hingle Tingle," written by Don Clark. The entertainment is described as adhering to the customary burlesque performance, with comedy situations, musical numbers and vaudeville specialties following one another in rapid succession and with just enough story to keep the spectators interested. A large company of fun makers, singers, dancers and specialists, that includes several of the most popular players in burlesque, will be seen. Among them are Don Clark, Will Bovis, Bert Hall, Ray Read, Mae De Lisle, Babe De Palmer, Florence Darley, Harry Caperson and Charles Burns, besides a chorus of both male and female voices. An extensive display of scenery and costumes and several ingenious electrical and mechanical effects are said to be attractive features of the production.

The week's authorization for purchases of materials for shipment to the commissions of Italy, France and Great Britain are as follows:

Y. M. C. A. WOMAN WAS UNDER FIRE

Miss Mary O. Clark for Four Hours Under Fierce Bombardment

By MAXIMILIAN FOSTER

Paris, Aug. 18 (by mail).—An experience not often shared by women in this war was that of Miss Mary O. Clark, of Boston, Mass., now a Y. M. C. A. canteen worker in France. For no less than four hours Miss Clark was in the midst of a fierce bombardment by the boche guns, part of the time lying with a detachment of American soldiers in an open trench. In the same attack later two Red Triangle workers, Dr. John Brownlee Voorhees, of Hartford, Conn., and E. W. Ballew, of Lexington, Ill., were hit by shell splinters and severely injured.

The village where Miss Clark's canteen is situated is in an advanced position close to the front line trenches. Until the day in question, a Sunday, the Huns had not paid much attention to this particular part of France behind the lines. However, in this particular part of the war zone, the Toul sector, there is no telling where his morning's hate will break forth. In this case, apparently, he was only biding his time to wipe this particular village off the map.

The day dawned brilliant with sunshine. Shortly after 8 a. m. Miss Clark was getting ready for breakfast when the first shell sailed in over the roof tops and landed in a dump-heap not more than fifty yards or so from her open window. The first crash did not startle the Y. M. C. A. worker. She looked out in time to see the dumphead fly skyward, descending presently in showers of brick, dirt, farmyard and other detritus. A second shell followed immediately, upon which pandemonium broke loose in the hamlet. The detachment of American troops billeted there came pouring out of doorways and windows, all intent on seeing what was going on, and with them came a few scattering French peasants, the remnant of the village's former population.

As the shells by this time were falling thickly among the roofs and alleys nearby, Miss Clark decided it was time to seek some less exposed position. Accordingly, she locked her trunk, and picking up what small valuables she had with her, she made her way into the street.

A French peasant was just passing. Miss Clark recalls that the woman was wasting no time, but as she saw Miss Clark she paused long enough to inquire, "Are you afraid Miss?" Miss Clark hasn't decided yet whether she was at that exact instant; however, she shook her head, when the French woman, bidding her to follow, made off down the village street.

Half way to the end of the street the Y. M. C. A. worker encountered the colonel in command of the billeted troops. He and the regimental chaplain were looking out of their quarters watching the bursting shells. However, as there was a lull now, they invited Miss Clark to join them at breakfast.

The party was hardly seated when again uproar broke loose. At the same time regimental messengers brought the news that already there were several casualties in the town. Things began to happen then, one after another. A shell, pitching over the roof tops, laid waste a nearby house and was followed immediately by another still nearer. "You'll have to move out of here," the colonel told Miss Clark. Down the street, just beyond the town limits, was a refuge trench laid out for just this emergency, and the colonel directed Miss Clark toward it. Once she was headed in the right way the colonel and the chaplain went off to see what was taking place elsewhere.

It was evidently much. Miss Clark, when she reached the trench, found it already occupied. A section of troops, acting under orders, was standing there on the alert, and after a gasp at the sight of a woman, an American woman into the bargain, there in the midst of that shell fire, they made haste to help Miss Clark into the trench. They even tried to tuck her into a sheltered corner in one of the zig-zags, the man there giving up his place. Miss Clark, however, would not let him move, and taking her chance with the soldiers, she stood up among them.

Shells were again falling everywhere. Presently a runner brought in the news that the regimental chaplain had been killed and that the colonel's orderly had been slain also while standing beside the colonel. A later runner brought the report that the orderly had saved the colonel's life by leaping in front of his commander when the shell burst.

The fire now was a mixture of shrapnel and high explosive shells. Walls were falling everywhere, and when one of the big ones landed there was an eruption of brick, stone and tiling that filled the surrounding landscape.

"What did you do?" Miss Clark was asked.

"Do? Why, when the soldiers ducked, I ducked, too. There was nothing else to do."

Occasionally there were brief lulls in the firing. None of them lasted more than a few minutes, and each evidently was a trick on the part of the Hun to entice the unwary into the open. At any rate, the firing would cease for two or three minutes, when it would burst upon the town again in a sudden deluge of flame and flying steel. Anyone caught out at this instant was almost certain to suffer.

Miss Clark does not profess she wasn't frightened. That storm of noise and bursting metal would have frightened anyone. However, the soldiers all agree that the woman "Y" worker kept her nerve during all the trying ordeal. Now and then a shell would fall close to the trench in which she was standing, but fortunately none fell into the trench itself. Again and again, though, the soldiers in the trenches begged Miss Clark to crawl into the comparative safety of the angle, but this she refused to do. "I'm here; I'm a woman, and I'm useless. I'll stay where I am," was the reply the soldiers say she made.

And there she stayed. However, along toward noon the bombardment abruptly ended, and after waiting to make sure it had, the soldiers urged Miss Clark to make her escape. As the cloud of smoke and dust settled, she climbed out of the trench and made her way along the now ruined street to the regimental headquarters.

There was ruin everywhere along the way. The boche, evidently in a fury at the punishment our boys had inflicted on him a day or so before, had flung about everything he had into the village. The main part of it, of course, was shrapnel and medium calibre shells, but mixed in with this were a number of the huge Austrian high explosive shells. Where they fell they had wrecked devastation to the surrounding walls. Stone and brick filled the street, and there were craters where the high explosives had landed.

At headquarters Miss Clark found the colonel. He had a gash on his cheek, a memento of the shell that had killed his orderly, and as he saw Miss Clark his relief was evident. Division headquarters, he announced, had wired over, ordering her to be removed from the town at the first opportunity. Besides the chaplain and the colonel's orderly there had been other casualties, so that it manifestly was not a place for a woman. Even though Miss Clark protested at being made to leave her charge, army orders are inexorable, and that afternoon a Y. M. C. A. car took her back to a town out of range of the German guns.

"It was pretty thrilling," said Miss Clark. "I shall never forget the sight of those huge shells landing everywhere about me, raking down the walls of the houses I had come to know. Neither can I forget the sound the shells made when they came roaring toward us, then burst. The worst part of the experience was when our boys began dropping into the trench with an account of the casualties. 'You ought to see So-and-so; his head's shot off,' they'd report, or 'They got So-and-so; I helped scrape him up.' One or two of the victims they told about I knew personally, and it was dreadful to learn they had gone."

Miss Clark, in spite of what she went through, is not any the worse for her experience, but in spite of her appeals, the Y. M. C. A. has decided to have her work in a less exposed position.

FRAIL, DELICATE CHILD

Restored to Health by Vinol

Manville, R. I.—"The whooping cough—and later the measles left my little boy of eight years with no appetite, thin, frail, delicate and tired all the time. After everything else had failed Vinol gave him a hearty appetite, restored his strength and he is now as well as ever."—Mrs. James H. Hall.

The beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates contained in Vinol were just what this little boy needed to restore him to health. We strongly recommend Vinol.

The total number of war nurses assigned by the Red Cross to war service from the time the United States entered the war until August 1st, was 13,347. Surgeon General Gorgas needs 8,000 additional nurses by the first of October, and the remainder of the 27,000 before the New Year.

The New England Division States are third in number with 1,360 nurses assigned, or 41% of their allotment.

The Southern Division, composed of Tennessee, the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida on August 1st, had supplied 382 out of 1,371 nurses called for by January 1st, or 28% of its allotment.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE FACULTY COMPLETE

New Brunswick, Aug. 30—With the appointment of Miss Mary G. Ingersol as associate professor in home economics, the faculty of the new College for Women, which will be opened here on September 18th, is practically complete. The co-operation of the professors of Rutgers College has made possible a faculty of the highest standard and has insured a teaching staff second to no Woman's College in the country.

The fact that the new institution is filling a vital need in the educational system of New Jersey is recognized by men and women of prominence throughout the State. The two United States Senators, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen and David Baird, have both given their endorsement of the movement.

"Aside from the varied activities of our people in connection with the actual prosecution of the war, I know of no enterprise now before the public which is worthier of the patronage of the men and women of New Jersey alike," Senator Frelinghuysen wrote in a recent letter to Dean Mabel S. Douglas. "As a native of New Jersey, I am not content that we should be a laggard State in affording facilities to our young women to thoroughly equip themselves to play major roles in the work of world-development."

Senator Frelinghuysen is chairman of the Committee of Rutgers College Trustees, who has the establishmen of the Woman's College in hand. Senator Baird, although less active in the movement, has given it his complete endorsement.

"The need of provision for the higher education of young women of our State, especially the graduates of our high schools, has been felt for a long time. Now that Rutgers, a college with an honorable history, and with splendid educational facilities, has opened its doors to women, the benefit to the individual and to the State will be appreciated."

VEGETABLE MARMALADES TAKE LESS SUGAR

Vegetable marmalades may be made at small cost from products from the home garden. Since most of the marmalades contain a smaller proportion of sugar than those made from fruits, it is especially desirable to make some of them this summer. They are made of combinations of vegetables, sugar and fruit acid. Lemon juice is usually used and other fruits are sometimes added.

Each of the following recipes makes about one pint of marmalade:

Carrot Marmalade

2 cups ground carrot.
1½ cups sugar.
2 lemons.
2 teaspoons ground ginger root.

Cook the carrots until tender. Add the sugar. Quarter and cut the lemons in thin slices. Cook slowly until thick, without stirring. Pack in hot, freshly sterilized jars and boil (process) for 5 minutes in steamer or hot water bath.

Carrot, Rhubarb and Green Pepper

1 cup ground carrot.
¾ cup chopped peppers.
1 lemon.
1 cup unpeeled rhubarb.
1 cup sugar.
Ginger root if desired.

Cut the rhubarb in ¼-inch slices and make according to directions for carrot marmalade.

Ripe Tomato Marmalade

12 medium-sized tomatoes.
1½ lemons.
1¾ cups sugar.

Peel and slice the tomatoes thin. Remove as many seeds as possible and make according to directions for carrot marmalade.

Ripe Tomato and Carrot

1 cup ground carrot.
2 cups ripe tomato.
1½ cups sugar.
1 lemon.
1 teaspoon ground horseradish.
1 teaspoon ginger.
1 teaspoon vinegar.

Peel and slice the tomato. Put the ginger in cheesecloth bag and make according to directions for carrot marmalade.

THE RUN-AWAY ENGINE

Once there was a little engine with a long train of bright cars that thought the playroom far too small to live in.

One day, to the great joy of the engine and the little cars, the little master took them to the garden, and when lunch time came there he left them, right in the smooth garden path.

Night came and still the engine and its train of little cars stood in the garden path, and when the magic hour of 12 struck the little engine leaped for joy.

"Our time has come," it told the train of cars. "Now we will be off and you shall see how I can carry you around the world; we will run away."

A big beetle came along the path and saw the engine and train. "What sort of a creature are you?" it asked. Are you a garden animal?"

"Animal, indeed!" replied the little engine. "I will have you know I am a powerful engine, and this is my train of cars. I can travel fast and go around the world."

A ground-worm, awakened by the noise, put out his head from under the place he was sleeping and asked what all the noise was about.

"You are a queer-looking creature," said the worm, "but as I have never traveled very fast, if you do not mind I should like to get in one of your cars and go along on this trip you tell of."

The little engine, glad to have passengers, told them all to get in and it would show them all how fast it could travel.

The fireflies thought they should like very much to ride right in front on the engine itself, and it was well they did, or no knowing what would have happened.

"Now hold on, all of you," said the engine; "we are off! And away it ran, for the path was down a little hill, and at first all went well, but soon the little cars, anxious to get ahead, tumbled over, and out went the worm and the beetle. But the little engine did not stop. On it went, dragging the tipped-over cars after it, and right at the foot of the hill it struck a stone, and there it stood. The fireflies turned on their bright lights, for they were the only passengers left by then, and such a wreck as there was—the little cars on their sides and all scratched and bruised.

The fireflies flew about and looked for the other passengers. The beetle came flying to the spot where the little engine stood, while the fireflies tried to help poor worm to get out of the path into a safe place.

"Why, how did you get here?" asked the little engine, when it saw the beetle; "and Musty Miller, I thought you fell out. You must travel fast."

"Faster than you can," they told the engine. "We have wings. Watch us," and up and over the bushes they flew and were soon out of sight.

The fireflies soon came back and said Mr. Worm was safe under some leaves and not at all. But they felt sure that the garden was no place for the engine to live in and they thought it better to get back to the playroom to live.

"If ever we get back there we will never wish to travel again," said the little cars. "We were never so upset in our lives."

But the little engine was not satisfied. "If it had not been that you were tagging on behind me," it told the cars, "I should by this time be almost around the world, I am sure."

The fireflies, who were flying about, gave forth a blaze of light just then. "You would have been in this, too," they said. "Look!" And there, right besides the stone that stopped it, was a black pool of water.

Back to the playroom they all were taken the next day and the little engine talked no more of its wonderful power to travel far and fast, for it knew if it had gone into the pool and taken all the little cars with it, that the bright, shiny paint would have come off and rust would have spoiled their beauty.

OVERCOMING OBJECTIONS TO KEEPING POULTRY

Objection is frequently raised to the keeping of poultry in towns and cities because of the odor which may result and also because of the noise which is made by roosters crowing, particularly in the early morning. There is no necessity for the poultry flock to become a nuisance to neighbors.

If the dropping boards are cleaned daily and the houses and yards are kept in a reasonably clean condition there will be no annoying odors. The soil in the yard should be stirred or spaded up frequently if not in sod in order to keep it in the best condition. This will not only tend to keep down any odors which might arise, but also allow the droppings to be absorbed into the soil more readily and therefore keep the yard in better condition for the hens.

The male bird need not be a nuisance. Unless it is intended to hatch chickens from the flock it is unnecessary to keep a male bird. The fact that there is no male in the flock will have absolutely no effect on the number of eggs laid by the hens. The male bird should be sold or eaten just as soon as the hatching season is over. This is desirable, not only for the purpose of eliminating noise, but also to save the feed that would be eaten by the male and for the reason that the eggs produced after the male is disposed of will be infertile. Since these eggs are incapable of chick development they keep much better than fertile eggs, and consequently are superior for preserving or for market.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF PEPPERS

Peter Piper may have picked a peck of pickled peppers, but the pickling will have to be left to you. Here are some directions for that and other delightful things to be done with peppers, suggested by the United States Food Administration:

Pickled Peppers

Cut the stems out in a round circle with a sharp knife and lay them aside to replace later. Fill the peppers with a mixture of finely-chopped cabbage, grated horseradish, mustard seed and salt. Wash the peppers in cold water, fill them, replace the stem, tie them with a soft cord to keep the lids in, pack them in stone jars and fill up with cold sharp vinegar. They will be ready for use in two weeks.

Sweetbread in Peppers

Parboil sweetbread, cool and cut in small pieces; there should be one cup. Melt two tablespoons savory fat, add two tablespoons cornflour, and pour on gradually one cup of chicken stock; then add two tablespoons of cream. Season with salt, paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Cut a slice from the stem of six peppers, remove seeds and parboil peppers fifteen minutes. Cool, fill and bake for thirty minutes.

Further Suggestions

Peppers may be parboiled, stuffed with any sort of a mixture—cooked rice and meat, hominy grits, cornmeal mush, corn, rice and nuts—and baked.

Peppers combined with cheese are very good as a salad.

Peppers and cabbage also are very good.

WORK OF THE Y. W. C. A. IN WAR FOR HUMANITY

Of the seven distinct organizations recognized by the Government for service with the troops along recreational lines, now contemplating two big drives, the one for $133,500,000, by the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the War Camp Community Service and the American Library Association, to begin November 11, keeping the army behind the army fit is the major part of the Young Women's Christian Association's work behind the firing lines, both here and abroad. The Y. W. C. A. War Work Council is taking care of this great army of feminine soldiers whose business now is largely the making of bullets and weapons of war for men in the trenches. This is the work of the Industrial War Service Clubs, established at all of the big industrial centers, where supplies of all kinds are being turned out for the army, and at the twenty-two Government munition cantonments in the United States, of which New Jersey has her share.

Since the Y. W. C. A. went to France, more than a year ago, at the invitation of the French Y. W. C. A., to undertake recreation and welfare work among the workers in the big munition centers, foyers or club houses have been established in eight centers. Others are being organized.

The purpose of these foyers is to increase the efficiency of the workers by offering them relaxation from their work, to bring a little cheer into the dreary lives of women whose homes are now fragments on the battlefield and whose families have been separated or killed during the war.

LORD READING TO ATTEND N. J. HEBREW CONVENTION

The Associated Young Men's and Young Women's Hebrew associations of New Jersey will hold their seventh annual convention September 1 and 2.

Among those who will attend are Lord Reading, who will be the principal speaker; Governor Edge, Congressman Kahn, of California, and Louis Marshall.

Harrington Gale, Lawyer Detective

By G. COURT

I.—AN ALIBI FOR LOVE

(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

What would you do if your car, with a woman at the wheel, ran down and killed a child? Would you blame the woman and go free, or would you take the blame, go to prison, and leave word for the girl of your dreams that you had died? Harrington Gale, famous lawyer, in the first story of an absorbing new detective series, meets the man who made the second choice. Later he meets the girl. There's another man, of course. Gale plays Providence, and the result is an absorbing tale.

ONCE a case is over I suppose you forget it?"

The first act of the little dinner party was over and the only feminine touch remaining was a forgotten glove.

Harrington Gale, the celebrated counsel, drank half a glass of port before replying. It was a strange sensation to him, epicure as he was in the drama of life, to stay at the big prison, so often fed by his logic, so often cheated by his eloquence. "Yes," he answered, leaning forward a little, his pince-nez—the terror of the cross-examined—between his right thumb and forefinger, "I generally do; otherwise life would be impossible. A barrister must train his mind to be like the limelight—wholly concentrated on the man that matters while he is there needing help, then letting him pass into the darkness of oblivion." A servant entered with coffee and silence fell. Almost unconsciously Gale studied his host's face and wondered if he were a man to be trusted in a crucial moment. He summed him up as relentless and dissatisfied with life and imagined with what picturesque phrases the prisoners in the Castle described him. "Have a cigar." Simpson pushed the box toward him. "It must be exciting—to have a man's liberty your sole object for a day or two and then to forget him."

"Yes—often enough as I see them leave the dock for this"—Gale pointed through the open window of the delicately lighted dining room to the grim wall beyond—"I think of those words in the Second Mrs. Tanqueray: 'There is one social dead sea from which there is no return. I have watched my friends go down there one by one. They never come back.'"

Simpson listened to his guest with interest and wondered why he had asked to come down for a night. They had not met for twenty years. He remembered him so well at Eton—clever, hard working, with extraordinarily wide human interests but in no way exceptionally brilliant. Oratory, always a fairy godmother's latest birthday present, had not then touched his lips with prophetic fame.

"I expect I know even more than you do, Gale, about the return from the Dead Sea. I had five years' prison experience after I came back from India before I was appointed here a month ago. I am not enthusiastic about the brand." The tone was hard and cynical and jarred on Gale. He almost regretted his visit. His host, divining some insistent problem baffling hasty speech, waited.

"That's it, Simpson," Gale suddenly began, determined to get what aid he could, "the 'return from the Dead Sea.' Sometimes one cannot forget. That's why I asked you to let me come down tonight. I want your advice and help. I am the only man in England who knows his story and hers. If I don't stand by them no one else can."

Simpson foresaw a long conversation and hated the coincidences of life. Nevertheless—for his views of hospitality were Arabian—he settled himself down with apparent interest. "Do go on," he said; "you may rest assured I will do all I can."

Gale half closed his eyes as if focussing a picture. For the moment his surroundings were forgotten. The quaint old Castle—the moonlight stealing through the trees into the window—the lighter conversation of an hour ago—the dark, striking-looking man opposite him—were all as naught. His mind saw nothing but a courthouse—a man of eight and twenty with a pale, set face, and the foreman of the jury standing up and saying "Guilty."

"It was a most unusual case," he began; "there was a girl in it. Yet I never saw her or heard her name. God knows what would happen if they met."

"Out soon?"

Gale nodded.

"Yes—that's why I need your help. I have heard many men try to establish an alibi to avoid the punishment of crime. That is common enough. But this is the only time I have ever known a man convicted of crime deliberately prove an alibi with death to save the girl he loved from the knowledge of his dishonor.

"Is he here?" Gale loved the man for his monosyllabic directness. It was like talking on the telephone on a three-minute call.

"Yes. He was moved here from the jail, to which he would naturally go, three months after his sentence. There were reasons, but I forget them."

Simpson nodded. He was becoming interested in spite of himself. "Do tell me more. When a man leaves here there is always the riddle of the future to read."

"Yes," answered Gale almost sternly, "as there is the riddle of responsibility to read when he stands in the dock."

"What was his name?" Simpson was greedy for condensation.

"His real name was Mason, but I doubt if that has ever been found out. Circumstances combined to cover up his trail in an extraordinary way. He was tried and sentenced as 'Smith.'"

"Ten per cent of the inmates here would appear to be his cousins by adoption," was the contemptuous reply. "'Alias Smith' would be a splendid title for a criminal romance. Still, we will identify him later on. What was his crime?"

"Chivalry and circumstances. I know of no other. But the jury said 'Manslaughter.'"

"And the Judge?"

"Two years."

"And that's nearly up?"

"Yes—in about a week. That's why I came to see you and him."

"What was the story?" Politeness demanded the question.

"Dick Mason loved a girl. He had more brains than wealth, and feared to outstay the Old Country's welcome. He was not of the stuff of which schoolmasters are made and he swore by Jack London."

Simpson called to mind a lightning artist who undertook to draw any one's likeness with ten lines.

"What had he done till then?" he asked.

"Marlborough and Trinity Hall. A rowing blue and a call to the bar. Two hundred a year, and ragged journalism. Bachelor content; but after her—the deluge."

"Had she no money?"

"I don't think he knew. Vicarious support was not his ideal." Gale's glance would have hurt another man. "So he decided to reach out."

"Canada. In the summer of 1911 he said good-bye to all his friends in London and started for Plymouth intending to pick up the first boat for New York, and thence up into Canada and across the Rockies to British Columbia."

"And the girl?" The sneer was evanescent but comprehended all unknown women.

"Mason shut his lips and said nothing, wisely or unwisely—only the girl could decide that and probably she would decide wrong—but any way he left her—"

"Imagining everything and certain of nothing, I suppose."

Gale nodded.

"The usual problem soluble only in time. He meant to make a way for her somehow in British Columbia and then ask her to come out."

"And did the chivalry and circumstances you mentioned meet Prince Charming in Plymouth and prevent his little plan?"

"Not exactly in Plymouth, but in the western counties. He arrived quite early in the morning at Plymouth and found that his boat did not sail till late the next day. He looked about him on the platform for something to do and saw one of the big screens of colored photos with which the Great Western tempts the idle."

"I know them—I always want to count the 'have been there's' against the 'haven't been.' On the Great Western the 'have been's' generally win."

"Well—is Newquay a 'have been'?"

"North coast of Cornwall. No—been near it but never through it. Did Mason go there?"

"Yes, he left all his luggage at the cloak room at Plymouth and started off for Newquay. The girl had often talked to him about it. She had been there on and off since childhood and so, lover-like, he went to some place redolent with memory of her."

Simpson paused half way in lighting a cigar; Gale, with his massive brow and rough-hewn face, did not suggest emotional sympathies.

"It's a great place," continued Gale. "In an evil moment after he had been there an hour or two he hired a motor car. The roads are good. Hills like the legs of a stork."

Simpson smiled as he watched his guest gradually rearrange the salt cellars and wine glasses near him, like places on a map. It was all so unconscious. He was an actor playing what he described. Simpson had heard one—man who had been on a jury say, "He can use words like paints." He began to grasp his unpremeditated power.

"See here," said Gale, "this glass is Newquay—ten miles off down this crease in the cloth is this salt cellar. That's the bustling market town of St. Column Major. Here where I put this knife across the crease is a cross road about two miles out of Newquay. Turn to the right on your way from St. Column to Newquay and you come to the sea at Porth—turn to the left—that's the important place and you come down across the Trevemper Road." Again the thought of the ten-stroke artist came to Simpson's mind. He had listened to so many men describe places with a wealth of detail that left him mossily engulfed; but here—one glass—one salt cellar added to an existing crease and the thing was as plain as day.

"I follow."

"Well, then, Mason took a car and went for a long drive and landed up at St. Column Major and drifted inevitably to the Red Lion Inn for a late lunch of pasties and Cornish cream. There was only one occupant of the coffee room—a lady. She lifted her head as he entered and he recognized an old friend."

"Luck in loneliness—even for Romeo."

"That's what he thought. He was delighted. He had not seen her since her marriage. As a girl in London he had known her well—danced with her, dined with her, asked her to the Temple flower show, sent her a wedding present and forgotten her."

"Some girls are as recurrent as boomerangs."

Gale hated the omniscient cynicism of an undergraduate from a grown man and deemed that if Simpson ever married, his wife would find her self-respect worn out before her trousseau.

"They talked over bygone days and she had still the same sort of gypsy beauty as of old, but her manner had changed. Instead of the strong, clear-eyed independence of a couple of years ago she seemed nervous and agitated—not sure of herself. He drew a bow at a venture and asked her where her husband was—and then the flood-gates burst."

"Another pearl in a wrong shell? We seem to be mixing metaphors."

Gale smiled.

"Very much so. She was craving to talk about herself. He let her."

Simpson's sigh was heavy with reminiscence.

"I know the type. A selfish little belfry claiming a monopoly of sound. What was her grief?"

"The old, old story. She was misunderstood and unappreciated; her husband had no sympathy with the artistic temperament. They had been married for two years and had traveled. While they were abroad she had been apparently perfectly happy. Now they had come and settled down in the country and disillusion was complete."

"She loved excitement and called it a husband. Did she cleave to Mason as a new found affinity?"

Gale shook his head.

"No. Nothing so sudden and dramatic as that. It seems there was an affinity already found waiting for her at Plymouth and the train which Mason was to take to Newquay at 5:30 for Plymouth was to pick her up at St. Column Road and bear her to her lover's arms."

Gale leaned back in his chair and looked at his host.

"The usual elements of the ordinary play; don't you think?"

Simpson rose and stood by the mantelpiece, his dramatic sense aroused.

"What happened?"

"Well, Mason had no interest in the matter. He knew neither the husband nor the lover. But he did know the girl and for the sake of old times he wanted to save her from again mistaking excitement for love. So he just talked common sense—not morals or duty—painted the fading of the rose-leaf and the sordid dullness of life amid chronic self-whitewashers and finally got her to accept wisdom and a seat in his car."

"But was the husband in ignorance of her impassioned flight?"

"Yes. But now we approach the tragedy, the unnecessary tragedy that wrecked his life. The conversation I gave you in two minutes, but in fact it took two hours. The clock in the hotel coffee room pointed to four o'clock when she agreed to go back to her husband. She expected him home at 5:20. He was coming back to Newquay from Perranporth by a train arriving at 5 o'clock and would motor out to the house, arriving at 5:20. She must get back in good time because she had left the usual note for him in his tobacco jar explaining her change of address. Once she had decided to return, the wraith of the lover dissolved like mist and her one dream of happiness was husband and home."

"A somewhat volatile companion for a life-time," murmured Simpson.

"You are right. It all seems such a needless sacrifice. However, they walked to the hotel door to go to the car and as they reached the porch the old church clock struck five. The coffee room clock had been an hour slow. She went white with terror. Do you grasp the drama now?" Gale stood up and touched each article as he spoke. "Wife here at this salt cellar at 5 p. m. Husband arriving Newquay station—this glass—at 5 p. m. He is motoring comfortably two miles down this crease. When he reaches the knife—the crossroads—he will turn to the right and soon reach his home, where the fatal note awaits him meaning at the best disillusion and lifelong estrangement—unless—unless this car here at St. Column can reach the crossroads first—eight miles in twenty minutes in a hired car."

"I learned an expression in Canada once; 'Some haste and then some,'" said Simpson. "It seems the only appropriate comment."

Gale still stood, his hand resting on the salt cellar as if he saw the drama being enacted on the table cloth.

"They lost two precious minutes getting up the hood. She insisted on that. Then she took the wheel. She was an expert driver—Mason was not. Moreover she knew the country. Then she let her go. Mason told me he would never forget that drive. They met scarcely a soul—which accounts for the fact that no one ever subsequently suggested a woman driver. The hood prevented those they passed from seeing who drove. They reached the crossroads without disaster, swung round into the narrow road on the left—and then—well there was a child playing in the middle of the road—that's all. It was too instantaneous for any suffering—that was the one silver lining to the grim cloud of tragedy." Gale had his finger a few inches down the knife pointing to where he saw the child lying dead.

"She was out of the car in a second—just for that moment a woman, pitying, protective—and knelt by the little body. As she leaned down to examine it a warning hoot was heard and her husband's car hove in sight. Mason saw her face freeze with horror as she realized the iron fingers of fate closing round her. Then she looked up at her husband and—well, let us be charitable—lost her head completely."

"'Oh!' she cried. 'I was just walking to meet you. There's been a terrible accident!'

"Her husband looked at the dead child, then at Mason.

"'Were you driving, sir?' he said sternly.

"Doctors talk of drowning men seeing all their past in a moment of time. I rather think Mason saw past, present and future with racing nerves. Every man has his own code of chivalry. Mason's was a high one. Had it been only manslaughter he would have hedged, but a woman's reputation was more serious than mere crime. He looked at the husband and shrugged his shoulders. He did not know then the husband was a J. P."

"'This means the police,' said the husband. Then turning to his wife, 'I must stay here—take the car and go home.'

"She turned to go—"

"'Do you mean to say,' burst in Simpson, "she went without a word?"

Gale slowly put back his little direction posts, and then clasped his two hands together as if to hold himself in, but his voice as he answered shook with anger.

That woman, volatile and worthless, turned her back on Mason without one word, stepped into her husband's car and drove home, rescued the letter and doubtless burnt it. Subsequently she paid for a beautiful tombstone for the child and the village called her 'Lady Bountiful.'"

"And did you defend him?"

"Yes—if a man with both his hands tied behind his back can be said to fight. He refused to let me cross-examine her. Her evidence was that she arrived after the accident had happened. Cool and callous, wasn't it? And he refused to go into the box himself. All I could do was to try to show the case was not proved and after the verdict of guilty to urge leniency on the judge. It was no good."

Simpson looked at Gale in sheer amazement.

"He would not go into the box and tell his story?"

Gale's answering glance was momentary but full of comprehension.

"No, he refused to go into the box. You cannot save a woman's reputation by halves. I doubt if any woman would quite forgive him—and yet to a man no other course was thinkable."

"And so he went under?"

"Yes, he went under—as Smith. His tracks were well covered up and he resolutely refused to give any information about himself. He was tried for manslaughter as Smith and condemned as Smith. The case was only in the local papers, and anyhow none of his friends would ever dream that the Smith condemned at Bodmin was the Mason they believed in Canada."

Simpson sat wrapped in thought.

"But the alibi," he broke in on the silence, "the alibi with Death—what was that?"

"I only heard of it a fortnight ago. The solicitor who instructed me in the case was called Wilson. He died a month or so ago. His executors found amongst his papers an envelope addressed to me marked 'Private and urgent. To be delivered after my death without delay.' The envelope contained the most extraordinary story. Mason, being, of course, sure that he must be convicted if he did not go into the witness box, faced the fact that the brand of crime would be on him for all time and that he had no right ever to dream of marrying the girl he loved."

"But surely, surely," broke in Simpson, "no girl would think the less of a man if she cared for him, even if he had had a motor accident—let alone a man who had been as chivalrous and quixotic as Mason."

Gale liked Simpson better at that moment than he had done before. It was a spark of unpremeditated feeling, so different from the impression of calculated selfishness of which he had been conscious all the evening.

"I agree," he answered, "I agree cordially. But it is easy for us to sit here in cold blood and judge these things; it is a different matter for a man in the dreamland of an idealized love."

There was a note of reverence in Gale's voice that filled Simpson with astonishment. The great advocate was human after all.

"Mason," continued Gale, "from what Wilson wrote to me, thought the matter out deliberately and carefully. He knew that though no word had been spoken the girl cared enough for him to watch and wait for news and that the worst torment she could suffer would be the long-drawn death of hope. The only thing he cared for was her happiness; alive as an ex-criminal he should never make her happy, dead, she might be happy without him, so he planned an alibi with—it is George Eliot's term—'the great reconciler,' Death."

Gale drew from his pocket a letter case and took from it a letter and placed it in front of him, as yet unfolded.

"Mason made his solicitor, Wilson, write to the man in Canada to whom he had been going out. The man in Canada knew all about the girl. She had been the only beaconlight in Mason's life. Wilson never knew the girl's name. There was no need to mention it. All he was to do was to write to this friend in Canada. Mason must have known his friend well. The man wrote to the girl telling her Mason was dead and also to Wilson. In his letter to Wilson he preserved the same reticence as to the girl's name—it's a hall mark you never find in plated ware—and merely enclosed a copy of the letter he had written, in case Wilson had a chance of showing it to Mason."

Gale slowly unfolded the letter before him. A servant opened the door to clear away and shut it noiselessly and neither man noticed the interruption, so absorbed were they in their conversation.

"Listen," said Gale, quietly.

The Grand Canon,
Fraser River,
British Columbia.

I am the writer to you of sad and terrible news. Dick Mason and I have been traveling out here together through the wilds. Last night we camped on the banks of the Fraser River and we knew that today we had to run the rapids of the Grand Canon. It is always dangerous. Before we turned in we exchanged some confidences. Dick told me about you. Your name has never passed his lips before, but in case anything happened he wanted you to know that he left England to make a home for you. He had never spoken to you about it; he had no right to, so he came to this land of promise. You will guess the sequel. His canoe upset in the rapids. We found his body lower down. There is a little cross on the left bank where we buried him. It would be impertinent for me to offer you sympathy, but if ever a woman's life was hallowed by a man's great love, that crown of memory is yours. I can give you no personal address of my own—but if ever I am in England I will come and see you.

Gale's voice was hushed—as if in the presence of death—and even Simpson, cynic as he was about human affection, wondered dimly whether his tariff of life was rotten.

"What a heroic lie," he muttered.

"Yes," answered Gale, "that is my alibi with Death. So unnecessary—so quixotic but so inevitable. Wilson carried the secret of it till his death and then wrote to me bidding me do what I could. I suppose all his friends think Mason dead. He had very few relatives. It's nobody's business to write to him, and it's so easy for a man who goes abroad to be forgotten; so I have come to you tonight. I want you to let me see him and talk to him."

"Certainly, certainly," said Simpson.

Five minutes later Simpson was in the moonlit garden with Muriel Lennox. He admired her tall stately beauty, her wonderful dark eyes, beyond words, and, had he believed in love, he would have loved her.

"May I tell you a story?" he said gently.

She was nervous and knew it.

"Some romance of prison life? Yes, do."

"Yes, a romance of prison life." The words were ordinary enough, but his voice was infinitely caressing. No one but himself could have known he was acting.

"This prison?"

Yes," he answered, and she felt rather than saw the strong face she knew so well turned toward her, "this prison—but the story is not of a prisoner. It's just the story of a man who has walked along through a busy life knowing that some day the mists of half meaning would break." His voice seemed to tremble with uncontrolled emotion. "The Goddess of the Dawn has come." He stopped and sat silent, waiting the outcome of his skilful attack. He had studied her for four weeks to some purpose. He knew her passionate love of all things Greek—her intense aloofness. He did not so much as touch her hand. He just waited. She felt unable to speak. There was no mistaking his meaning; his delicate imagery thrilled her. Other men had sought her—some as an investment, some with deep-throated passion she deemed ephemeral, but this man touched her brain, satisfied her intellect; and for companionship she yearned.

And yet!

At last he spoke.

"Don't you understand?" The voice that men called stern was gentle and pleading.

"Yes," she answered, and the tenderness of her tone made him almost ashamed. "I do understand. I want you to be good to me a little longer. You shall have your answer soon. But you have taken me by surprise."

"No, don't say any more yet. I want to be honest with you. I owe you that. There was a man once I loved. I do not know if I have any love to give. If I could love any one it would be you, but I think my heart is buried with his—"

"Buried?" Simpson's interest in post-mortem romance was purely academic. It could not affect her investments.

"Yes," she answered sadly, "in a lonely grave by the side of the Fraser River."

Simpson felt the shock experienced by a man in the dark who tries to go down one more imaginary step. He was accustomed to think rapidly in times of crisis, but this gnarled contortion of circumstance transcended all experience and left him for a moment helpless.

"The Fraser River?" he echoed feebly.

"Yes, he was drowned there—the friend who was with him wrote to tell me. There is a little cross on the left bank where they buried him." Her thoughts seemed far away and her eyes were wet with tears. Any doubts he might have had vanished hopelessly, and his mind became intensely active. For one moment honor and decency called to him; clamored that he should tell her all he knew and give her one chance—unfettered and unrestrained—between the man she had loved and himself. The next moment flung before his mind the picture of what her loss to him would mean: pressing debts and another toilsome search for some one with whom to share them, next time perhaps without youth and beauty as a makeweight for enforced companionship. He had only to say nothing and she would never know Gale's story and Gale would never know hers: he would help Mason—more than he had intended—to go abroad with Muriel's money and all would be well. He solaced his yet protesting conscience with the motto usurped by man for every act branded with the bar sinister of dishonor, "All's fair in love and war," and with the half-whispered words, "Muriel, let us consecrate our new love by his memory," Simpson knew that he passed forever into the land of lost birthrights. She turned at the sound of his voice—she had scarce noticed his silence and was amazed at the storm of emotion visible in his face. The consciousness of her power thrilled her: her loneliness cried out for relief; she had been honest with him, and he loved her—after all, why not, why not?

A footstep grated on the gravel path and Gale moved slowly toward them. She thought his walk rather relentless and wished him a thousand miles away. Wholly unconscious of creating an undesired triangle, he took a seat with his back to the moonlight, facing the other two.

"Your sister told me to come out here to find you," he said to Simpson.

"Yes—where have you been since dinner?" Gale wondered a little at the girl's italicized interest in his movements, ignorant of the crisis that made her plunge into any words to prevent an impossible silence.

"In prison—seeing a man I once defended."

"How thrilling! I've never been allowed to see them even in chapel. Has he a name or only a number?"

Simpson went cold with terror—a chance word from Gale might mean shipwreck, and yet he was powerless to intervene. He longed to frown a hint of danger, but Gale did not glance his way. "Most prisoners," answered Gale with a quiet smile, "have only aliases—but this man is different; I call him 'The hero of the Fraser River.'"

"The hero of the Fraser River?" Her breathless question quivered in the air. The moon was shining full on her face and Gale noticed that she was deathly pale. The infinite pathos of all her unnecessary suffering touched him to pity and he turned to share his wonder with Simpson.

The Governor rose abruptly to his feet.

"Mason saw past, present and future with racing nerves."

"I am sure Miss Lennox will forgive us if we do not discuss prison affairs any further. Shall we go and have some music?"

There was a finality about the words that would have debarred most men from further comment, but they aroused the cross-examiner in Gale. He thought again of his half-crushed mistrust of Simpson and asked himself the reason of this aggressive closure. The haunting tragedy of the girl's question cried for an answer. Gale's chivalry was in arms.

"Oh, but he was my client before he was your prisoner," laughed Gale, determined to ignore the stiff official attitude. He saw that Simpson was pale, but as yet did not divine the cause.

"Did you know a hero of the Fraser River, Miss Lennox?" he continued. She was between the two men as they walked back to the house. He wondered how much her nerves could stand. She stopped and answered gently, "Yes, I did, but he died."

"Where?" he asked. It was only a monosyllable, but Gale knew it was pregnant with fate.

"By the banks of the Grand Canon."

Gale put an arresting hand on Simpson's shoulder and looked meaningly straight into his eyes.

"Don't you think, Miss Lennox might see the prisoner?"

The delicate rapier thrust was unexpected and found Simpson unprepared. He stood hesitating and speechless and the girl suddenly became conscious of mystery. The tragedy of two years ago had risen that night from its grave and was well nigh choking her; she felt an overwhelming sense of injury at being treated like a child—with a secret half told; her endurance was reaching its limits.

She turned impatiently to Simpson. The agonizing past was strangling the present.

"What is this mystery?" she cried passionately. "If—I—if I am—" and then she hesitated and looked at Gale and stopped. The irony of life broke in upon Gale as he marked her hesitation and the look that passed between them. The skein was less tangled now, and Simpson could stoop to this for what he called love!

"Simpson," said Gale, "I think you had better let me take Miss Lennox to see that prisoner," and then, as Simpson still hesitated, he added slowly, but with intense meaning, "I think he would tell his own story better than I should."

"Send for him to go to my study," said Simpson. "He can have ten minutes."

She thought his emotion strange, but imagined it was anger at a broken tete-a-tete.

Gale took Miss Lennox to the dining room and gave her a glass of brandy. She was trembling with excitement but drank it without a word. He opened the study door for her.

"Wait here, please," he said, and vanished to give Simpson's order to the jailer.

Half an hour later she returned to the hall and found Gale sitting there, smoking. Her eyes were bright with a light Simpson had never seen, and she swayed a little as she walked.

"I am going straight to bed," she said gently. "I can't stand much now. I won't say thank you—it would be impossible—but—well, we shall be married as soon as he comes out." She hesitated a minute. "Mr. Gale," her tone was meant to be careless, "did Captain Simpson know Dick Mason's real story?"

"No," said Gale, and the recording angel dropped a tear but it wiped away a little spot.

"The Fraser River?" he echoed feebly.

Freeholder Bird's Statement Is Riddled by Robert Newton Crane

Robert Newton Crane, who has been circulating former Mayor Moy's petition for Mayor and who obtained Freeholder Elias H. Burd's signature on the petition, was interviewed by a Record reporter yesterday concerning the statement of Mr. Bird, as published in the Courier-News on Tuesday. Mr. Crane said, "Mr. Bird signed the Moy petition on Tuesday, August 20. The petition at that time was completed but the first space was left blank for Mr. Bird's signature as I was advised that he wanted to head the petition. Surely Mr. Bird knew at that time that by friend, the present Mayor, had decided to seek the nomination again, and that his petitions were being circulated as this fact had appeared in the public press. On Tuesday evening, after reading the supposed interview with Mr. Bird, I 'phoned him to inquire if he was correctly quoted. He unequivocally denied that he had said that he did not know Mayor Calkins had decided to run for office, but on the contrary, he repeated the conversation we had at the time he signed the petition, viz.: 'George Moy is a friend of mine. He is a good business man; he made a good Mayor and even though I am to be criticized I will sign his petition.'

"I told Mr. Bird that I would gladly remove his name from the petition if he would make the request but he said, 'Elias Bird thinks first and not afterwards; I have never turned back yet and don't propose to now. Leave my name on the petition.'"

Mr. Crane filed Mr. Moy's petition with City Clerk John J. Carroll, yesterday morning. It contains seventy signatures, mostly those of working men. In referring to the filing of the petition Mr. Crane said:

"I did not attempt to get a lenthy petition signed up as I well know that petitions mean absolutely nothing. The working people will decide the issue by their secret ballot at the primary and not by petition."

Senator Ackerman Gives Reasons for Seeking Nomination

With a vigorous declaration against socialistic or communistic policies detrimental to freedom and national or individual initiative, former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, launched his campaign for Republican nomination for member of the House of Representatives from the Fifth Congressional district in a statement issued last night from his headquarters in Plainfield. He stands squarely on the issue that as a representative he would use his powers unreservedly "toward the perpetuation of the tried and true American principles" that "hath made and preserved us a nation."

In his statement he gives to the voters the five reasons that actuated him in filing his petition and expresses the generally accepted thought that these are times when deeper and broader and bigger things than mere political preference alone will guide the voter in making his choice of men who will serve him in public office. He sounds his campaign slogan: "Put a successful American business man in Congress" in the belief that now and in the immediate future the welfare of the nation, during the period of post-war legislation, will be safer if guided by men who have been trained in the science of trade.

Senator Ackerman's statement says:

"In filing my petition for nomination in the Republican primaries for member for the House of Representatives for the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey, I am actuated by five reasons:

"1. To give to the country and to the President the best that is in me in answer to the call for self-sacrificing devotion, to the winning of the war and a permanent peace based upon justice and the natural demands of all people to enjoy to the fullest their self-evident rights in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness.

"2. A thorough belief in co-operation and co-ordination, but I am opposed, however, to any socialistic or communistic policy detrimental to freedom and national or individual initiative. As a representative I would use my powers unreservedly toward the perpetuation of the tried and true principles of Government "that hath made and preserved us a nation'."

"3. To give to the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey a constructive voice during this crisis when our country must be wisely guided through very intricative legislative channels to meet the new problems that are just beginning to force themselves to the attention of the world and to the people of the United States.

"4. That my experience as a business man and a large employer of labor during twenty-five years can be valuable to the people and possessing first hand knowledge as an observant world traveller and student of the economic, industrial and political problems that are even at the present moment confronting Congress for solution, and,

"5. Finally, as a public servant while a member of the Common Council of Plainfield and for six years as State Senator of Union county as President of the Senate of New Jersey (also having served as acting Governor) are, in combination, sufficient to merit confidence and support."

In seeking the support of the Republican voters of the district at the primaries on September 24, the Ackerman statement expresses the belief that the average voter will give thought to the man he can most freely trust with the public welfare while his attention is turned to his war-winning activities. Such a man, the statement implies, is one who has proved his loyalty, who has business ability and who has had wide responsibilities in legislation.

Charles C. Burke of this city, is registered at the Hotel Marseilles, New York.

James J. McCann's Candidacy Receives Ready Endorsement

Acceding to the requests of his many friends in Plainfield, Elizabeth and other places, James J. McCann, of Division street, this city, has made positive announcement that he would be a candidate for the nomination of county registrar on the Democratic ticket. His petition has been in circulation the past week and more than the required number of signatures have already been secured. In many instances mn who were strangers to the popular Plainfielder personally asked to be allowed to endorse his candidacy, an indication that he stands in high esteem.

Mr. McCann is an Elizabethan by birth and lived in that city until twelve years ago, at which tim he removed to Plainfield. He was active in Democratic circles in his native town and continued to take a common part in affairs political on coming here. He has never received any reward for his services, although in 1912 he was elected one of the small Board of Freeholders, which was set aside by court action. In this contest, he ran high in Union county. He defeated several Elizabeth candidates in their own districts and ran only twenty behind the high man in Plainfield.

At the present time, Mr. McCann is motor vehicle agent for Plainfield, having been appointed to this position by Commissioner Dill. Despite the duties of this office, and demands upon his time because of private interests, he has been an energetic worker for civici nterests. These include war activities in which he has been a factor for the past year, especially during the Red Cross and Knights of Columbus drives.

The Democratic leaders of the county importuned Mr. McCann to seek the registrar nomination but he at first declined. Since the first request he has been sought after so many times, that he finally announced his acceptance of the suggestion. He will probably go to the polls unopposed for the nomination as the only other probable Democratic aspirant is Ten Eyck R. Beardsley, of Fanwood.

Increased Pay for Local Draft Boards

Increased pay for the local exemption boards has been authorized by Provost Marshal General Crowder. Under an order, announced yesterday, members of all boards will receive from $50 to $200 a month, the amount varying with the number of registrants on their rolls.

Fifty dollars will be the minimum, for members of boards with 11,000 registrants or less. Heretofore the compensation has been ten cents for each registrant.

Officers at General Crowder's office said yesterday that local board members have made real sacrifices to do their patriotic service, many of them having to give their entire time, and it has been realized that they were not properly compensated.

HARRY GOELLER SOON GOING OVERSEAS.

Harry Goeller, of New street, who was one of a contingent of five Plainfield selectives sent to Camp Humphreys, Va., on July 5, was brought North the past week as a member of a provisional company soon to go overseas. He is now stationed at Camp Merritt.

On first going to Camp Humphreys, Mr. Goeller was made acting corporal and assigned to the Engineers' Corps. Later he was selected for the provisional company which has been picked for special duty. He reports all the Plainfield boys at Camp Humphreys as doing well although the weather has been very hot and in the six weeks that he was there, he only experienced one rain storm.

Senate Votes to Make Country Dry Next July

King Booze got a bump from the United States Senate yesterday that he wasn't counting on.

That body, without so much as a roll call, decided not only to have "war time" Prohibition in the United States but to have Prohibition until all the troops sent against Germany are brought home and demobilized. This latter provision was one of the new features introduced and may evplain the real reason why an agreement was so easily reached with Prohibition leaders to let Prohibition be deferred until July 1, 1919, from January 1, 1919, the date originally contemplated for it to become effective.

A still further step, made to secure immediate Prohibition about big industrial plants, gives the President authority to create zones about coal mines, munition factories, shipbuilding and other plants where liquors shall not be sold. This discretionary power may be employed at any time after the law is enacted.

Getting Ready for "Farm Exhibition"

Preparations are under way for the second annual exhibition of produce from the War Gardens conducted by the young people of the Netherwood section; also very much to the satisfaction of the officers of the Netherwood Residents' Association, a total of 32 entries of War Gardens for the two cups and cash prizes have been received, exceeding last year's entries by five, and hundreds of individual ehtries of vegetables, fruits, etc., are promised for the Farm Show to be held at the Parish House Hall, Woodland and South avenues, on Saturday, September 7. There will be fine displays, the results of amateur gardening in the neighborhood, and the hall will be dressed up with flowers, sheafs of wheat and stacks of corn. The public is invited to attend.

In addition to the exhibition of garden products the committee has decided to offer their handsome ribbons, and open classes for preserved goods, the results of home canning by the ladies of the neighborhood. This will prove an added and attractive feature. All entries must be at the Parish House Hall by 10 a. m. Saturday, September 7th.

Mrs. Geier's Funeral Held at Late Home

The funeral of Mrs. Louise Anderson Geier, widow of Jacob Geier, whose death occurred suddenly Monday morning, following a stroke of apoplexy, was held at the late home at Craig place and Duer street, on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. B. H. McCoy, of the First Methodist church, conducted the service in the presence of many relatives and friends. Flowers were numerous and beautiful as the decesead and her family have always enjoyed a wide acquaintance. Burial was in the family plot in Evergreen cemetery. The casket was borne to its final resting place by Isaac Kennedy, Thomas Gorman, John Gjettlesen and E. J. Haberle.

Mrs. Geier was born in Sweden sixty years ago, but had lived in this country from the time she was a girl. She and her husband, the latter having died in June, 1917, had resided in Plainfield since 1885. She was a member of the Swedish Lutheran church and active in its work.

Mrs. Geier had been enjoying her usual good health up until a short time before the end came and the sudden demise was a great shock to her many friends. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Herbert Smith, of Division street, and the Misses Clara and Madeline Geier, of Craig place, who conduct the Kandy Shope on East Front street.

CUNNINGHAM AND LANE WITH "OUT THERE" COMPANY.

Hartley Manner's war drama, "Out There," which opens for the season at Allentown, Pa., next Monday night, has a distinctly Plainfield flavor in the make-up of its executive staff.

Samuel W. Cunningham, who was treasurer of the Plainfield Theatre for the first five years of its career, is manager of the production, and Joseph A. Lane, of East Front street, is advance representative. Both are familiar figures in the theatrical world and are counted upon to guide "Out There" through a successful tour, covering the important cities of the South and West.

Mr. Cunningham was in Plainfield this week as the guest of Manager M. L. Shannon, of the Plainfield Theatre. Mrs. Cunningham, who has a wide acquaintance locally, is at present stopping in Atlantic City.

MRS. CLARK A VISITOR.

Mrs. Charles Clark, formerly of Railway road, and who has been spending the summer at Atlantic City, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Newton Crane, of 525 Madison avenue.

Three of City's Ablest Firemen Quit Department

Three more firemen, two of them numbered among the oldest in the city's service, tendered their resignations to Chief Jennings this week.

One of the men, Vincent Carroll, of No. 1 house, has already left to accept a position with the Calco Chemical Works at Bound Brook. The other two, Jens Claassen and James McDonough, will leave Sunday morning. Claassen has secured an excellent position with the Armour Beef Company at the East Third street plant, while McDonough will return to his trade of machinist at the Pond Tool Works.

Both Carroll and Claassen have been in the department for eleven years and were listed among Chief Jennings' best men. Claassen is an all-around driver and for the past two years up to two months ago acted as "house man" at headquarters. He was transferred to No. 3 house in July. McDonough has been in the department four years with the exception of a few months out last winter. He left to take a position as salesman for a Newark rubber house, but returned to the department in April. He was also considered an excellent fireman through his years of experience and his loss is of no small moment as besides being a good firefighter, he served as mechanic in apparatus repairs.

The department is now short about fifteen men, practically one-half the working force prescribed by the Councilmanic Fire Board. Every effort is being made to secure new men but without much success as those who are eligible decline appointment because of the long hours and small pay.

The Fire Board has announced that no action has been taken on the request of Captain George Mehl, of No. 3 company, to be demoted to a private. It is believed that he has been induced to change his mind as the importance of his rank as captain is very necessary at this time. It has been stated, also by the Board that two applications have been received for appointment as captain in the event of a vacancy. The applicants are Martin Connaughton, and John Townley, both among the oldest privates in the department in point of service.

John Henry Promoted to First Lieutenant

Word that John A. Henry, son of Mrs. A. M. Henry, of Emerson avenue, had been promoted to a first lieutenancy in the army was received by his mother yesterday. The young man left Plainfield a year ago with old Troop D and since then has given Uncle Sam the best that any lad can give. After ging South he entered the officers' training school at Camp McClellan and successfully passed the examinations entitling him to his commission.

Lieut. Henry was born in Plainfield and always lived here. He was a pupil at St. Mary's School and later took a business course at the Drake College. At the time of his enlistment, he was purchasing agent for the Spicer plant in South Plainfield. He has a host of friends in Plainfield, who will be proud to learn of his success in Uncle Sam's army.

Mayor Calkins Appointed To Important Committee

Mayor Calkins has been appointed to represent the New Jersey State Council of Defense, together with Commissioner Raymond, of Newark, and Mayor Segar, of Passaic, to take up with Governor Edge and the State Board of Health the necessity of formulating a State program of Child Hygiene especially from the war activity point of view. The war has effected the conditions of living in the crowded centers of population, and the National Council of Defense has urged investigation by the various State Councils in the hope that an effective program can be worked out.

LIMITE DSERVICE MEN ORDERED TO CAMP GREEN

Henry Trottner, Girard B. Harris, Harold G. Davis and Conrad E. Appin, who have been listed in the limited service class of Plainfield registrants, will leave tomorrow for Camp Green, North Carolina. They are being sent by the local board in response to a call received Tuesday.

The men depart from Plainfield on the 8:35 train and proceed to Elizabeth, from which point they go South on a special over the Pennsylvania Railroad. Two colored Plainfield selectives in the general service class, George Jackson and Norman Jeeter, will be sent to Camp Dix next Sunday afternoon, leaving here on the 1:05 train. This is the first time any local registrants have been ordered to leave on Sunday.

Louis La Rock, Jr., of Providence, R. I., has returned home after spending the month of August in Plainfield and Lake Hopatcong.

Two Killed, Two Injured When Train Hits Auto

Party of Plainfielders Unable to Escape as B. & O. Express Bears Down on Stalled Machine at Schilling's Crossing, on the Lehigh Valley

Two persons were killed and two others injured when an automobile in which they were riding was run down by a Baltimore and Ohio express at Schilling's crossing on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at 6:40 last night.

The dead are Miss Anna M. Johns, twenty-two years old, of 224 East Front street, this city, and Mrs. Bessie Allen, twenty-five years old, of 645 Prospect street, Westfield. The injured are Herbert W. Ross, forty years old, of 330 East Fifth street, this city, and Samuel Ashmead, twenty-five years old, of 811 First place, this city, both of whom are in Muhlenberg Hospital. Ross has a fracture of the right arm, severe lacerations of the right thigh and is suffering badly from shock. Ashmead sustained no broken bones but is badly shocked and has many severe lacerations. It was stated at the hospital today that both would recover.

All four of the persons concerned wheels of the train and was badly in the accident were employed at the plant of the Standard Aero Corporation. Ross is a foreman and the other three were employed in his department. The four started out shortly after 6 o'clock last night for a ride to Rahway. The car belonged to Ashmead and he was driving. In a statement to the local police, Ashmead said that he approached the crossing, which lays between Picton and Goodman's Crossing, at a moderate rate of speed. He neither saw nor heard no signs of an approaching train and was almost directly on the tracks when the express bore down. He made an attempt to get out of harm's way but the machine stalled directly in the path of the approaching danger. The crash occurred just as the four attempted to leap to safety.

The bodies of the four persons and the remnants of the machine were hurled to either side of the tracks. Mrs. Allan's body went beneath the mangled. Miss Johns was injured internally when the crash took place and died almost immediately. Her features and body were practically unmarred. The two men went to either side of the train and were out of harm's way as the wheels passed by.

The crew of the express placed the dead and injured on the train and took them to the South Plainfield station, from whence they were brought to Plainfield. The bodies of the two victims were removed to Higgins' undertaking rooms, where they still remain pending funeral arrangements. The county authorities are making a full investigation in order to fix responsibility for the accident.

Miss Johns was the daughter of Morla Q., and the late Harry Johns. Her father was the well known building mover. Beside her mother, she leaves three sisters and two brothers. They are: Mrs. Ernest Newman, of Bridgeport; Mrs. Chester Allen, of Needham, Mass.; Mrs. Augustus Justice, of East Front street; Lester Johns, of Bridgeport, and J. LeRoy Johns, of East Front street. She also leaves her grandparents, Mr. and Hrs. James McCready, of East Front street.

The funeral will be held at Grace M. E. church, Eunday afternoon at 2:30, in charge of Rev. G. S. M. Doremus, of Rockaway. Burial will be in the family ploti n Hillside cemetery.

Local Families Now Have Three Sons in Service

As a result of the latest order calling for thirty-one Plainfield district draft boys, to be sent to Camp Humphreys, Accotink, Va., on September 6, two more local families will have three sons in the service.

The parents in the two instances are Mr. and Mrs. James Heron, of 817 West Sixth street, and Herbert Schillinger, of 255 East Second street. Mr. and Mrs. Heron's second oldest son, John, enlisted in a cavalry regiment at New Briton, Conn., last winter, having been located in that city when war was declared. He is now on the firing line in France as a member of a machine gun company. Thomas Heron, the oldest son in the family, was called in the service last February and after undergoing training at Camp Dix, was sent overseas as a member of the 311th Infantry. The call for September 6 takes the third son in the family, James Heron, Jr.

In the Schillinger family, the two boys in the service at present are Herbert and Andrew. The former enlistened last fall in the New York Telephone Company's special signal division and trained for six months at Camp Dodge, Iowa. From there, he was sent overseas and is now with the boys up front. The second son in the family, Andrew, enlisted in the Merchant Marine last spring, after undergoing his training at Boston, he was assigned to coastwise duty but is scheduled for an early overseas trip. The third brother is Edward Schillinger, a printer employed by a Perth Amboy concern, and he will be one of the thirty-one Plainfielders who are to go out next week.

The call coming to Plainfield followed General Crowder's order for 186,773 men to be inducted into service between August 30 and September 6. This is divided into 125,000 white men and 21,270 negroes for general military service and 40,503 white men for limited service. New Jersey is asked to send 4,000 white men for general military service to Camp Humphreys, Va., between September 3 and 6, and ninety-seven colored men to Camp Dix on September 1. Big Dollar Day Is Coming Next Week

Bargains galore may be had for the asking in Plainfield next Wednesday, because on that date the Plainfield Business Ben's Association will conduct a dollar day on a bigger scale than ever before.

Despite the advanced cost of everything, the merchants interested in the plan have searched everywhere for the right kind of goods at the uinform charge of a dollar, at which figure they are to be offered to the shoppers of this vicinity. Almost every conceivable article is included in the total list of the various stores.

The country-side for miles around Plainfield has been placarded to notify suburban shoppers of the big event. It is probable that hundreds will flock into town to take advantage of the profusion of bargains which will be disposed of on the "first come, first served" plan.

The committee arranging the bargain sale has termed the occasion "Thrift and Dollar Day." Every store bearing the Plainfield Business Men's Assocation label will be included in the plan. The committee is composed of John J. Varley, Henry Rosenbaum and Kenneth Stuart.

Steamer "Plainfield" May Have Trial Tomorrow

Indications are that the "Plainfield," the first ship to be launched at the New Jersey drydock yards at Elizabeth, will go on he trial trip tomorrow. During the last three weeks it has been thought that she would start any day and the men along the docks have been keeping a close watch on her for the first signs of life. Steam was put into her boilers early in the week, and this seems to have confirmed the story. It has been learned that the ship's future skipper has been at the Moore plant to give his craft a final inspection.

A great deal of interest has been shown in the Elizabeth shipbuilding plant from the time that the keel of the Plainfield was laid.

Just where the boat will be taken for her trial spin has not been divulged. With the Plainfield out of the way it is expected that the work on the Garfield will be rushed so that she soon will be able to make her trial spin. Her boilers are at the docks and will be installed in a few days. It generally takes from three to five weeks after the installing of the boilers for a ship of the size of the Garfield to be ready to proceed under her own steam.

FRANCIS HICKEY GIVEN A SURPRISE PARTY.

A very delightful party was given Francis Hickey, Tuesday evening, at his home on West Third street. There were about forty friends present and a very pleasant evening was spent. Dancing was one of the principal features of the evening.

Vocal selections were rendered by John O'Keefe, and Mary Esther Cook, accompanied on the piano by Miss Catherine McCue. Miss Catherine Harrington rendered violin selections, which were enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served at a late hour. At the close of the little party a very pleasing number was given by John Regan and Loretta McCauley in rendering the solo, "They Were All Out of Step Except Jim."

Commandeering of Supplies Causes a Building Shortage

Commandeering of buildings in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and some of the larger intermediate cities has produced a general shortage of buildings of about 45 per cent. of which the shortage in New York alone is now about 33 per cent., according to The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

Practically all of the buildings commandeered for war uses are those housing heavy machinery to which all structures are not adaptable. The type of buildings that could be used for this machinery are already in heavy requisition by the Government for storage purposes, the general net result being that the trade looks for at least a partial relinquishment of restraint upon building construction within the near future, probably by the middle of winter.

Signs of the approach of a change in this respect were noticeable last week when conferences were held at the Biltmore regarding the application of recent rules to building materials and the fact that barges have recently been relinquished for work outside of Government requirements, thus offsetting the recent order promulgated shutting off supplies of sand, gravel and crushed stone from railroad cars. In Boston, Philadelphia, Newark and New York, and most of the sound ports it is possible to obtain basic concrete ingredients and rough clay products by barge and scow until the very recent past there has been such a demand for harbor bottoms that the whole building industry was threatened. It is due to a realization of this menace and the retarding effect it would have upon the war program that arrangements were made to release more barges for the relief of railroads and to permit necessary building construction to proceed, with moderation.

With practically no space of any kind, whether living, commercial, industrial or manufacturing rentable today the best opinion in the trade seems to be that the financial institutions will be given more latitude in placing loans, especially since the action of J. P. Morgan & Company in announcing its plan to make call loans beginning today will relieve the financial situation considerably. Investigation shows that far sighted building material men have been in close touch with the situation and the sharp shift in building material prices in anticipation of a definite movement at the week-end is considered significant.

Common Hudson brick strengthened to $13.00 to $14.00 a thousand, wholesale, so that the best grades were being held for Monday sale at $14.25 to higher prices. This wholesale level represents the cost of ordinary building brick laid in the finished wall at around $30 a thousand. Second hand brick is far below the demand and it is sold in this market today at $15.00 for loads of 1,500, where it is possible to get the material. There is a large quantity of second hand steel in the market suitable for emergency construction work, largely consisting of girders used in the subway construction work.

Building stone interests are in a strong position for supplying material to building operations that can be erected without large quantities of steel and some of the most far-sighted who months ago loaded up heavy on supply are looking for an earlier outlet than seemed possible a fortnight ago.

If there was no prospect of a change in the building situation the glass and hollow tile markets would probably remain stationary, but in the case of hollow tile a change is expected to be announced early this week and in the glass department the manufacturers have changed the discount on factory lists. Some of the jobbers have already announced changes on their discounts, but the action has not yet become general. There is a very serious shortage of popular sizes and since there is little probability of any glass being manufactured for building purposes in this country before the spring of 1919, by which time the change in the general building program is expected to be fairly under way, the present change is being made to protect stocks on hand. Distribution is to be watched so as to prevent speculation.

General price advances are reported this week in The Dow Service Daily Building reports show a general stiffening tendency. A fifty-cent change upward is reported in hard and soft flux for oil blown asphaltum. The shift toward higher levels in the brick market is reflected in various yard prices in various cities, the quotation in Newark having gone to $18.25 for Hudson and Raritan brick, $3.15 for Portland and $2.10 for Rosendale cement; seven cents on common lime, plaster advances 15 cents and plaster boards are quoted at 24 cents, the highest ever known. Ordinary white building sand in Newark has been advanced to $3.25 a yard and yellow sand is $2.25 and $2.50 a yard against a normal price of eighty cents.

General reflection of price changes may be expected in all cities along the eastern sea board as the demand for new construction increases, and relinquishment of money for necessary building construction pertaining directly to war work or industries catering directly to it is of brighter prospect today than at any time since the world war began and will continue to be so, according to the best opinion in the trade, as the certainty of ultimate victory abroad becomes more and more apparent. The easement, however, may be expected only in these activities most intimately associated with the war winning program.

Tyler Inflicts Heavy Penalties For Violations

Heavy penalties for violating the sugar regulations were meted out this week by State Food Administrator Tyler, of this city, in the cases of two Elizabeth dealers. They are Abram Abraham, of 425 South Park street, and Joseph Blum, of Jersey City, but who conducts a dairy in Elizabeth.

In the case of Abraham, the penalty is one of the most severe imposed by the State Administrator. He is given the option of closing for a month from next Saturday night or surrendering 3,500 pounds of sugar which is now behind the ice box in the meat market of one of his tenants, as well as all his sugar purchase certigcates, and to have no more sugar certificates issued to him until October 1.

Abraham, who owns a dairy in Elizabeth, caused suspicion to be directed toward him when he made out his July statement with regard to sugar. An inspector for the food administration found that he had more sugar in his store than his statements set forth, and by doing a little detective work he found 3,500 pounds of sugar hidden behind an ice box in the meat market of Harry Zurav, who said it belonged to Abraham.

Blum sold 112 pounds of sugar to one customer. The sugar has been returned at the demand of the food administration and Blum is to close for one week, beginning at midnight on Saturday. He must also display a sign in his window, announcing that his store is closed for a violation of the food administration regulations.

Rushing Work on Big Aviation Field For Standard Plant

Airplane tests on a particularly large scale are to be held in Elizabeth, when the work that is now being rushed at the Standard Aviation Field is completed within a few weeks. The city will practically become an airplane training station. Four hundred army officers to test the De Haviland and other air machines being manufactured at the Bayway plant are to be assigned to the Standard Aviation Field as soon as the accommodations are finished, it was learned this week.

In addition to smoothing off the newly purchased ground, the Edward Waldron Construction Company of Newark, which has the general contracting job, is dumping dirt into the low marshy ground at the south end of the field. When this work is finished the Standard Field will be the largest field in the country connected with an airplane factory, it is stated.

De Haviland airplanes are being turned out rapidly now at the Standard plant. Blue prints covering minor changes suggested by General Pershing were received a few weeks ago, and in the future no machine will go to Europe before it has been thoroughly tested at Elizabeth. When a machine leaves the Standard plant hereafter it will be all ready to be quickly assembled and flown when it arrives in Europe.

It was also ascertained that the giant bombing airplane Langley will fly away from the Standard Field shortly. Final experiments are being conducted with the Langley and when the machine which created such a sensation at its launching on July 6 is declared perfect it will sail from the Standard Field to the training grounds at Mineola. It is believed that Captain Edward Wallter, who has been in charge of the machine while it has been undergoing changes, will be the chief instructor of American pilots in the art of handling the Hanley-Page type of machine at Mineola.

Obtainable information indicates that the Langley will be a much more powerful and up-to-date machine when she finally emerges from the Standard plant in a short time. It is even said that she will be a better machine than the 1918 model Handley-Page airplanes now under construction in England. The engineers at the Standard plant have been very patient and careful in the recent tests of the Langley and they are bent on turing out a bombing machine that will withstand any possible criticism.

Work on the construction of the army barracks at Bayway and South Broad street, was stopped temporarily Tuesday on Government orders. These barracks are about half completed. All the carpenters engaged in the work were laid off Tuesday afternoon. No reason has been advanced by army officers stationed at the field for the stopping of work.

Rules for Prisoners On State Road Work

Pending the formulation of rules and regulations governing the employment of prisoners on State road work, the following rules and temporary schedules for payments of wages and parole merits were this week promulgated by Commissioner of Charities and Corrections Lewis:

Inmates selected for road work must be carefully picked from Grade A and the road camp assignment is to be a reward assignment and a preparole condition. A daily record must be kept of the effort and conduct of each inmates and promotion will be made upon this. The following wage scale will apply until further notice:

Chauffeurs, 30 cents a day; machine men, 30 cents; mechanics, 30 cents; laborers, 25 and 15 cents a day. All payments above 25 cents shall be made only upon the approval of the principal keeper. Weekly reports will be forwarded each week to the principal keeper. Until a general parole merit system is adopted, inmates are to be credited as follows: For effort A, above average; B, average; C, below average. For conduct, the same letters denoting the same degrees of accomplishment; for performance, A, above standard; B, standard; C, below standard. Deductions from minimum and maximum sentences will be made upon the actual conduct, effort and performance ratings.

Miss Elsie Moore, formerly of this city, but now a pupil nurse in St. John's Hospital, Yonkers, N. Y., returned to her duties at the latter place, this week, after a three weeks' visit in town. Most of the time was spent with her sister, Miss Amy L. Moore, of Park avenue, Avon Park.

Motion Picture Industry Placed in Class of Essentials

The motion picture industry in all its branches has been recognized as an essential industry by the War Industries Board. Chairman Baruch announced this week that this action had been taken in line with Provost Marshal General Crowder's ruling under the work or fight regulation that the industry offered useful occupation.

Recognition of its value in affording an educational medium for the great masses of the people, as well as a wholesome and cheap means of recreation, governed the board in placing the industry upon the preferred list for priority. The extensive use of motion pictures by all war recreation agencies also was considered.

The erection of new picture theatres, however, will not be permitted during the period of the war. Saving of many materials used in the manufacture of films, several of which are essential in the production of explosives, will be effected by a ruling of the board that only one negative may be taken of each picture, instead of several as has been customary. The industry also has been called upon to institute other economies in material, chiefly tin and iron.

New Building Planned For County Jail Farm

The county prison farm experiment having met with success, the prison farm committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders has undertaken to secure tentative plans and secifications for the erection of a building to house the prisoners who are employed on the farm. Charles W. Oakley, of Oakley & Son, architects, of Elizabeth, has been asked to prepare such plans and specifications and submit them at the next meeting of the committee, which in turn will take the matter up with the Board of Freeholders at a regular meeting.

Chairman Thomas F. Haviland, of the committee, stated this week, that it was the intention of the Freeholders to erct a fire-proof building of stone and concrete. It is expected eventually to have a building to house 200 prisoners, but at present only one wing of the structure will be undertaken. It is the intention of the board to have the prisoners do most of the work, the stone being secured on the prison farm.

At present the prisoners and superintendent live in an old frame structure. This structure has been found unsatisfactory. When the new building is erected the frame structure will be used as the superintendent's quarters.

Eight prisoners are now at work on the farm and the clearing up of the premises to proceeding rapidly. Some vegetable have been raised on the farm this year, which have been sent to various county institutions.

While the honor system plays some part in sending men to the farm, the Freeholders believe a building should be erected where the men may be confined at night, which will prevent such escapes as have occurred recently.

The appropriation asked for this year for the farm is $8,500. Part of this fund will cover the expense of the erection of the new structure as planned.

Judge Carlton B. Pierce made an inspection of the farm Sunday. He expressed himself as highly pleased with the looks of the place and the manner in which it is conducted.

Eventually the Freeholders plan to have an ideal workhouse at the farm. This will give the prisoners something to do in the winter time.

At present there are but forty-five prisoners in the county jail, the lowest in some time. "It's the work or fight program," says Warden Hughson, "that's keeping my steady customers away."

Election Officers Declining the Job

A number of election officers designated by the County Board of Elections to act at the coming primary and general election have written letters to the board declining the appointment.

George J. Stewart, secretary of the board, this week stated that the board had no authority to accept the resignations, and as the warrants for the appearance of the persons designated as election officers had been given to Sheriff Warner to serve, there was no alternative but for those named to be on the job.

A penalty of a fine of $100 is provided by the election law for the failure of any one person to appear for service, except when such person has been exempted by a judge of the Court of Common Pleas upon the ground that he has served in such capacity within four years next preceding such application. The power of the judge is discretionary, and not all applications are granted.

It is believed that the fact that men are earning considerably more than the county pays election officers is responsible for the desire to avoid service.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fynn and twin daughters, Florence and Helen, of East Second and Berckman streets, will return next week from Lake Hopatcong, where they have been spending the month at Camp Billjack, Halsey Island.

News of the Theatre

"Parlor, Bedroom And Bath" a Comedy Full of Laughs

One of the conspicuous dramatic successes of last season will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre on Tuesday, matinee and night, September 3, when A. H. Woods presents "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," direct from its phenomenal run at the Republic Theatre, New York city. "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" is said to have scored more laughs than any other comedy on the boards last year. It is certainly one of the very few plays that survived the sweltering New York heat, and ran well into the summer. The play is the work of C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, and is described as a farce frolic in three acts. Its unusual plot deals with the adventures of an unsophisticated young benedict who is compelled to play the role of a Don Juan in order to satisfy the romantic cravings of his too sentimental wife. His reluctant ventures in the domain of amorous experience bring upon his head a series of unexpected troubles—most of them women—but provide the audience with a play that the New York Tribune enthusiastically declared had "more fizz than 'Fair and Warmer!'" The play will be interpreted by a notable cast.

Gail Kane Seen in "When Men Betray"

With Ivan Abramson's gripping picture story, "When Men Betray," as the feature, a new and pleasing program of photoplays and vaudeville was ushered in at the Plainfield Theatre yesterday for the remainder of the week.

Miss Gail Kane, a charming young actress, whose work is well known here, as the leading role in "When Men Betray," and carries the difficult part in admirable form. The company supporting her includes Stuart Holmes, Gertrude Braun, Tallulah Bankhead, Hazel Washburn and Juliet Moore. The story deals with the actions of a faithless husband and the subsequent downfall of his neglected wife and family, a somewhat sordid theme but is so presented as to be intensely interesting and dramatic and concluding with a pleasing climax.

The vaudeville numbers were all well received yesterday. Featured on the bill are: Paul Jones and the Hall Sisters, in a singing specialty; Ed and Irene Voyr, in "Bits of Musical Comedy," "The Morning Glories," and Cameron and Clark, song and dance artists.

Cartoon Comedy as Labor Day Attraction At the Plainfield

A triumph of modern theatrical foresight is the success obtained by the world-famous George McManus cartoons, "Bringing Up Father." About six years ago Manager Gus Hill saw the possibilities of introducing this lovable character upon the stage with the result that the latest attraction built around the popular comics is entitled "Bringing Up Father at Home." It is underlined to hold the boards at the Plainfield Theatre on Monday, matinee and night. Ever since "Father" became an actor, or since he elected to air his own views of life in a public temple of amusement, his destinies have been in the hands of Walter Vernon. This year Mr. Vernon will see that the good-natured and easily converted old Irishman is impersonated in the way to endear him to his great many friends and admirers all over the country. "Mother" too will be in good hands as testified by the return of Louise Earle in her original role. Another artist who is sure to find acclaim and approbation is J. W. Clifford, who will be seen as "Dinty Moore."

Regarding this latest play based on the popular cartoons, from what we can deduct, it is said to eclipse all previous efforts. As we all are aware and as memories of fun still cling to us, "Father" is not a dull sort of person, despite his palpable human short-comings. He is a natural mirth-provoker, the right of heritage from a race that never brooks sadness or despair. So naturally we can expect to find him in a series of adventures, episodes, situations and complications to the accompaniment of lilting melodies, tunes, song hits, ensembles, surprises and features.

Fifteen pretty and captivating women compose a chorus such as only a manager of Gus Hill's calibre can muster. Those who have seen the production declare it to be the final word in musical comedy accomplishments.

Scene from "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," at Plainfield Theatre, Tuesday, September 3, Matinee and Night.

Local Man in Cast of Big Musical Comedy

Walter F. Hamilton, of Verdon street, the borough, known to his friends as "Doc," is a member of the cast of Cohan & Harris' new production of musical comedy, "Going Pp," which opens for the season tonight at Syracuse, N. Y. The company includes sixty people, many of whom are among Broadway's best known musical comedy favorites. "Going Up" will play Syracuse again tomorrow night, after which it goes to Detroit for a week's run. After that, it plays a week at both St. Paul and Minneapolis and then goes straight to the Pacific coast, where it will remain nearly all the coming season.

Mr. Hamilton has been in musical comedy for the past four years and has been meeting with great success. His first venture was with Laddie Cliff, in "Tonight's the Night." After that, he was with the "Masked Model," and for the past two seasons has held an important role in the big success, "Watch Your Step."

THE AIRCRAFT SCANDAL COMING DIRECTLY HOME.

The discouraging report of squandered millions in the aircraft program comes directly home to Plainfield people for two reasons. The first and most important is that this same money which has been flung to the winds with a recklessness never before duplicated in American history, comes direct from the pockets of the citizens. It represents purchase of Liberty Bonds, Thrift Stamps, the railroad fare, theatre taxes and the hundred and one other ways the Government has of getting its war revenue. Plainfield has given its share and given liberally but it cannot be expected to go on giving without complaint when it gets direct evidence that their hard earned contributions are being wasted.

The second reason why the aircraft reports comes directly home is because one of the plants for manufacturing these costly machines is located in Plainfield. As far back as last year, there were ugly rumors about the way the work was being conducted and stories of almost unbelievable wages paid unskilled workers. "Cost plus" became a standing joke in town because of known facts gained months before official Washington began investigating. In many respects, it was no news to Plainfield, but verified what had been noised about.

The report of the investigating committee made to the Senate Committee on Tuesday is a highly discouraging one. In brief it states that up to August 1, America has squandered the hundreds of millions her people have invested in the aircraft program—and that not enough machines to make any showing whatever have really been delivered to the fighting forces in France by the program which has flittered from one type of machine to another, most of which have been declared useless after millions had been spent to turn them out and many valuable lives sacrificed in their tests. Without question the Administration has now rectified many of the earlier errors of judgment and in the near future we may hope to see quantity production of a machine fit for the use of our fighters at the front from the hundreds of millions that have been thrown around. And if this has not yet been done it is high time for official Washington to get down to business on the matter.

And while the Government is being prodded on its aircraft failures, we wonder if the time is not here for an exhaustive truth-telling probe into conditions in the shipyards. We have no objection to the wages being paid to the skilled workers in the shipyards. The skilled worker is worthy of his hire no matter what the price may be. But the payment being given to thoroughly unskilled labor, labor drafted into the shipyards to the detriment of other essential war occupations only because money seems to flow like water in the shipyard coffers, is becoming a scandal capable of just as searching an inquiry as the aircraft expenditures have brought. And it is not necessary to go further than Elizabeth, Staten Island or Newark to verify the truth of such a statemen.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

Within the past few weeks Plainfield has had the experience of seeing women workers enter spheres heretofore regarded as impenetrable for their sex. They are working as section hands on the Jersey Central tracks, running drill presses and "automatics" in two of the local machine shops and taking the places of male conductors on the trolley cars. It was hard to break the ice in this respect but now that it has been done the women are crowding still further into the industrial world and like Great Britain, we are soon to see a tremendous change in laboring methods.

Whether or not the introduction of female help in the machine shops and on the railroads proves successful, it remains to be seen that complexities are ahead that even the Government cannot see now. England has had her troubles in this respect and is still having them but so far the women are in the lead and are conferring a tremendous benefit to the empire so terribly bereft of man-power. America has not yet gotten to the same point but it is obvious that much of her manhood will never come back from "over there," consequently the female worker here will be of as much a necessity as in the countries where she has been toiling for several years. With our American standards, we hated to see women becoming section hands or machine shop employes but what else is to be done under the circumstances?

Women have taken a large part in this war, doing their full share in every line of endeavor and particularly in industry where they have shown themselves quick to learn, competent and trustworthy. Their part in the great war cannot go unnoticed in the days of peace that are to come soon, as we all hope, and what they have won in the affairs of every day is not to be given up; indeed, it cannot be given up, for women must continue and become more a factor in industry, and being such their right to equality cannot be questioned.

THE SUNDAY "MOTORLESS" APPEAL.

Finding itself facing a serious shortage of gasoline, the Government has issued an appeal to the people to give up their Sunday automobile "joy" riding. The result is awaited with a great deal of expectancy as hundreds of thousands of machines are to be affected. In Plainfield alone there are four thousand registered cars, three-fourths of them being for pleasure purposes only.

The first appeal is made for voluntary action to conserve the gasoline supply. The public is simply requested to co-operate with the Government in this important matter. If voluntary compliance with the request is not forthcoming, then the public is warned it will be necessary to issue a mandatory order prohibiting the use of gasoline for pleasure purposes on Sundays.

The uses of motor vehicles to which the restriction does not apply are as follows:

Tractors and motor trucks employed in actual transportation of freight.

Vehicles of physicians used in performance of professional duties.

Ambulance, fire apparatus, police patrol wagons, undertakers' wagons and conveyances used for funerals.

Railway equipment using gasoline.

Repair outfits employed by telephone and public service companies.

Motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam or electricity is not available.

The request is a war measure. Compliance with it is one of the necessary means by which the war program is to be fully carried out. The loyalty of the individual will be more or less tested by the spirit of willingness he exhibits to comply with the Government's appeal. It will involve some sacrifice upon the part of those, especially, who have no other day than Sunday for recreation. Sacrifice, however, is an incident of the Nation's effort to win the war.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Plainfield supported three daily newspapers?

When we saved up our pennies to see Evans and Hoey, in "A Parlor Match" and came away from the theatre whistling "I'h the Man That Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo?"

When "Whit" Frazee invented "Camouflage" by rapping on Music Hall's steam pipes with a hammer to make the freezing audience upstairs believe a little heat was coming their way?

When you could be independent enough to fire the guy who went on such a tear Sunday night that he couldn't get into work Monday morning?

When you entertained the belief that for every "Devil's Darning Needle" that lighted on your line you would catch a fish?

AT THE FORK OF THE ROAD.

As Bill Nye used to say: "Many interesting thing take place where the roads are engaged in forking."

—o—

It would seem to the observer, casual and otherwise, that Freeholder Bird has arrived at the Fork of the Road. An expectant public waits anxiously to see which way he will turn.

—o—

The now famous interview with the genial freeholder which the Courier-News reporter so eagerly sought was lacking in one very essential detail. It neglected to state whether Mr. Bird was a disciple of Calkins or an advocate of Moy. The article left the reader thinking of the Roman rider in the circus, who rides around with one foot on one horse and the other foot on another horse.

—o—

There is a tremendous amount of meaning in one particular part of the interview. You really have to read it over two or three times to get the proper idea. Here it is: "Any one who interprets my signing of Mr. Moy's petition as a repudiation of Mayor Calkins' administration, of which I was a part for two years, does me a great injustice by placing me in the position of one who repudiates his own official acts, and this I have never done."

—o—

So much for the gentleman who is stewing in a potion of his own making. We now turn to more sober thoughts and say maybe, remember now we say maybe, if the police did a little less skulking around for ten-cent crap games, and devoted more attention to the residential districts, there might not be quite so many successful burglaries.

—o—

Three more firemen out of the city department this week, two of them with records of eleven years' service. The people who voted against the two-platoon last fall will say: "Well, let 'em go," but you don't see any of them dropping around to headquarters to find out how Chief Jennings is running a department with less than half the number of men considered a safe working force. Maybe some way there will be another Lyle fire. Goodness gracious, won't the investigating committee discover a lot of things that should have been done.

—o—

A Philadelphia food doctor says one glass of milk equals in food value two eggs, a large piece of beef and two slices of bread. We urge everybody to remember this. Personal reasons, however, require us to stick to eggs, beef and bread.

—o—

"Are houseworkers ladies of leisure?" asks the inquisitive subscriber. Of course, they are. If a woman has nothing to do but to look after a husband and seven children, cook, scrub, clean house, do the sewing, wash the dishes and keep the yard clean, you would call her a lady of leisure, wouldn't you?

—o—

They say that the Kaiser is not feeling quite so hilarious as he was in the springtime. We have seen it happen many times that the rooster that strutted and crowed most in May was the most certain to figger in a boarding-house stew in November.

—o—

Perhaps you have noticed the pale gills of some of our citizens between the ages of thirty-one and forty-five. They are the same patriamaniacs who struck a Statue of Liberty pose last winter and told the boys between twenty-one and thirty-one how they wished they were young again so they could shoulder a musket and go after the Hun. With the Unted States army knocking at their back door its quite another story now.

—o—

It's all off, dear reader. The contest we started last week has gone all to smash. You remember we offered a ripe, red, rosy apple for the person furnishing the best answer to the question: Who are the Plainfield saloon-keepers for in the Mayoralty contest and why? So much interest was created the mail man came staggering in under a weight of letters, each containing from one to ten answers but none of them were any good. In fact they were so rotten their rottenness spread to the apple and that went rotten and far be it from us to hand out a rotten apple for even such rotten answers as those that were dumped into the sanctum. Hence, the contest is off until the money market loosens up and we have a few spare dollars to offer as a reward.

—o—

When the new selective law is enacted placing single men between thirty-one and forty-five at the disposal of the country, every old maid—God bless 'em—will declare that a use has been found for old bachelors at last.

—o—

Of course, when the present tax of $3.20 a gallon on whiskey goes to $8 a gallon, if the Christmas mince pie be properly made it will be worth not less than six bits to drive an Aisen-Marne salient into one.

—o—

The utter absence of anything to mediate will render peace negotiations simple enough. Is there ever anything to mediate between a mother and her small boy when she takes him by the snout and holds it till his mouth flies open and then pours the castor oil down?

—o—

The poor old Public Soakus Corporation now only three jumps ahead of the sheriff, has invented a new way of getting the dear public's sympathy. On the front of each trolley car it has displayed the sign, "Keep the Home Wheels Turning," the pat phrase gotten off by President McCarter before a meeting of Newark officials. The idea is a good one but does not go far enough. Let Mr. O'Toole, the Public Soakus publicity agent, get up a few more phrases, making sure, however, that they are fact and not fancy. We hereby suggest the following: "Keep the Dividends Paying," "Don't Keep the Stockholders Yearning," "Turn the Company's Dark Cloud Inside Out, With Your Teeny-Weeny Nickels and Dimes" and "Keep the Home Wheels Turning," so the big dealers with their limousines can keep the gasoline a-burning."

Forceful Statement Given to Voters by Candidate Treacy

Of the statements issued by Congressional candidates in the Fifth district during the past week, none are more vigorous or comprehensive than that made by Hugh Treacy, of Darrow avenue, this city, who seeks the nomination on the Democratic ticket.

As he declares at the outset, Mr. Treacy "is one hundred per cent. American and one hundred per cent. Democrat," and his explanation of his reason for wishing to become the representative for Union and Morris counties bears him out in this claim. He tells in a frank way how he wishes to support the admainistration in its war policies and binds himself in allegiance to President Wilson by adopting the slogan: "He Can Depend On Me." Mr. Treacy's statement is as follows:

"In seeking the nomination for Representative of the Fifth district, I do so primarily for the reason that I am a 100 per cent. Democrat and 100 per cent. American—two very necessary and very potent conditions at this time, when an undivided allegiance to Flag and Country should be, and of necessity must be, the pass-word to entrance within the confines of the Legislative Hall of this great liberty loving Nation.

Hugh Treacy.

"I presume, also in seeking this nomination, to speak in behalf of the entire Democracy of this State particularly. Never in the history of the State of New Jersey has such an opportunity been given to it, as will be afforded in the election of next November, to prove its loyalty and devotion to the man upon whose shoulders are imposed the greatest task in this Nation or any other.

"It will be given an opportunity to completely and fully repudiate its repudiation of him in the last Presidential election and show by its very unanimous support of the Democratic nominees for any and every office that it is in full accord with the President of the United States.

"The State of New Jersey cannot afford to write itself down as a traitor to the cause nearest and dearest to the heart of every true American, that of supporting in every possible way, the man who is doing more than any other to bring to a final and victorious conclusion, the war of madness instituted by the greatest cutthroat the world has ever known.

"To down the Hun and forever silence and make impossible his attempted domination of the peoples of the world is the task we have set ourselves, and with God's help, it shall be accomplished to the limit, and then some, and with all the spirit we have inherited from our Revolutionary ancestors.

"It cannot be given to the Hun to negotiate peace, he must accept the peace we and our brave Allies mete out to him, and, unconditional surrender—and an unconditional surrender in the fullest sense, it is ours to decide, we will decide, and it is on the way; it is written large on the horizon and he must ere now see where it leads—it leads to absolute victory over tyranny and despotism, such as the world never dreamed, and which in this war is going to be wiped out for all time.

"No more Kaiserism—nor more Hun—nor more Hohenzollernism—no more scraps of paper—no more trampling over weak Nations—no more despoiling of women and children—no more pomp; but a meekness and docility commensurate with the rights of all Nations, large and small, to govern themselves in peace and tranquility; without fear of invasion from without by any aspiring autocrat, who may think himself divinely appointed to rule the World.

"Let it be understood, that the treasures we are sending from our shores of the best blood of our Nation, to wipe out the World menace, is not to be taken lightly, it must be paid for in full, in complete victory over the Hun and his militaristic parasites, together with full indemnity and restoration of all property and places destroyed, and the peoples who have been despoiled and deprived of the right of self-government must be re-instated in all of their rights and privileges, before we can lay down our arms—in other words, no peace without full and complete victory, in all that it implies—THEY MUST PAY.

"We read a great deal these days, that it makes very little difference wh ois elected to Congress, as Democratic and Republican alike, both being good Americans, will support the President in any measure for the winning of the war. I have no doubt there may be a great deal of force in that argument; but why not resolve the doubt in favor of the man who above all others, is more likely; (because of his affiliations with the party represented by the President himself, all things else being equal) to more surely and more disinterestedly support the President in any measure, that in his own wise judgment may be necessary.

"Politics may be adjourned; but that does not mean that we must lay down our hands and calmly submit that it is just as well for the Presiment to have a Republican as a Democrat Congress I don't think it is contemplated that politics is adjourned to that extent. I know the President can depend upon me. I am a Democrat, fully convinced that there is no question of my loyalty to him in the present critical times, when loyalty means so much. This war must be won without a day's needless delay. The President can't win it with one hand tied behind his back; he must be free and untrammeled in any, and everything he undertakes affecting the war, and must have the full and complete support of not only Congress; but of everyone who is not a Hun.

"I am absolutely free from any pre-election promises to any individual or any organization.

"I carry no man's stamp upon me; there is no one backing my candidacy for his own personal gain, or otherwise.

"My idea of my duties as a Democrat are that, he who serves his country best, serves his party best.

"There are no strings on me, and in the larger sense, my duties are to my country first, and to my party as a secondary consideration. I am vitally interested in all that makes for honest, efficient legislation and in the winning of the war, and in the latter, I am deeply interested.

"My slogan is: 'He Can Depend Upon Me.'"

Mr. Treasy filed his petition last Monday, August 26th, taking it to Trenton himself. He was obtaining signatures up to the last minute; because he did not begin to circulate his petition until late last week. He, however, succeeded in obtaining a great many over the required number.

We feel sure that the Fifth district will not have any occasion to regret

Two Point Raise in County Tax Probable

Following a meeting of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes at the courthouse Tuesday afternoon, it was learned from Peter J. Olde, secretary to the board, Wednesday, that the county tax rate will be at least a point and one-half higher than last year. The rate will not be finally determined for another ten days or two weeks.

Mr. Olde said that the rate will probably increase from .34 plus to .36. Each additional $20,000 tacked on to the county budget means an increase of one point in the rate, and the adding of $36,000 two weeks ago is counted upon by Mr. Olde to cause the increase. The board will hold a meeting next Wednesday to go over the figures of assessments on personal and real property in the county, from which the rate will be figured.

The final increase in the county valuation for this year is $12,713,875.21.

The real and personal property of the county, which is taxable, reaches the highest figure in the history of the county. The total figure is $203,885,367.61 against a total last year of $191,171,492.40.

The increase in real property taxed is $6,170,423.

APPROVAL FOR NEW TRAFFIC RULES.

At the conference of the Business Men's Association with Mayor Calkins a few days ago, his suggestion that parking be permitted on Front street, after 7 p. m., except on Saturday nights, was approved. This change will also apply to Park avenue, between Front and Second streets.

Parking on more than one side of Park avenue and Madison avenue may be prohibited later on. These streets are narrow and it is difficult to get through with cars parked on both sides.

The changes in the traffic regulations will be promulgated by the Police Board in the course of a few days.

NO DATE YET FOR WAR CHEST CONFERENCE.

Owing to the absence from town in midsummer of many of the directors of the local philanthropic societies, which were requested by Mayor Calkins to take official action either for or against the War Chest plan, it has been necessary for the Mayor to postpone the second conference which he had hoped to have by this time. He hopes to be able to call it sometime in September. The purpose, as previously announced, is to obtain as careful a consideration as possible of the merits and disadvantages of the plan, before committing the community to it. The Mayor feels that it should be suupported by all the war and important local charities, if it is to be adopted.

FRAZEE PUTNAM'S CONDITION.

The condition of Frazee Putnam, of Park place, who has been ill for the past week, continues to be quite serious. He is suffering from a complication of stomach and kidney troubles.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

An automobile driven by Mrs. A. P. Palmer, of 810 Second place, skidded at Park avenue and Fifth street, yesterday morning at 10:30 and crashed into an auto truck belonging to John Watson, of Sherman avenue. The driver of the latter vehicle, James Hammil, of 942 West Fourth street, received a bad shaking up but was otherwise unhurt. The Palmer car was badly damafied. Patrolman McGinley ordered both participants to appear in the city police court today to establish the blame.

The City Union of King's Daughters has announced that its annual tag day for the benefit og the Day Nursery and Children's Infirmary will be held on Saturday, September 21. An effort will be made to secure $5,000, as this amount is needed to carry on the splendid work at the two institutions.

Theodore Lane, colored, of 546 West Third street, standing over six feet tall and built in proportion, was accused by his wife in the city court yesterday morning of failing to support herself and their child. As Lane is twenty-two years old, and has been standing in a deferred draft class, the wife agreed to his being placed in 1-A for induction into the army, this means being adopted to provide her with a certain amount of money each month. Lane is being held at headquarters until arrangements are completed for sending him to Camp Dix. He has repeatedly been before Judge DeMeza on the same charge and the officials believe there is no chance of his "making good' on promises to do better.

Members of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and friends will visit the Government Hospital at Colonia tonight to assist in entertaining convalescent soldiers. Miss Mary Donnelly, of West Fourth street, will be one of the soloists, and Miss Mary Smith, of West Fifth street, is to preside at the piano.

Mrs. Worley Dunlap, of Codington avenue, whose husband, Sergeant Dunlap, is on the firing line overseas, has taken a position in the clerical department of the Plainfield Trust Company. Mrs. Dunlap was formerly Miss Emma Ryno, daughter of the late Corra Ryno. Chauncey F. Colthtar, of Duer street, who has been a member of the Plainfield Trust Company's clerical force for the past year, has resigned to take a similar position with a New York concern.

Alexander McPherson, who boards at the home of Mrs. Scott at 770 East Second street, appeared in the city police court yesterday morning, as complainant against Archie Scott, the eighteen-year-old son of Mrs. Scott, and Russell Pernell, fifteen years old, of Dunellen, whom he accused of taking thirty-five dollars fgom a trunk in his room. The two youths were the only ones homes at the time and suspicion was directed towards them because of the fact that the trunk had been unlocked and the key put back in its regular place, known only to a few members of the household. Through their counsel, Robert Newton Crane, the two defendants entered a denial of the charge and the hearing was put over until next Tuesday morning.

The Martone brothers, Joseph, aged thirteen, and Louis, aged nine, who have been making almost daily appearances in police court recently, were sent to the county jail yesterday to await the action of the juvenile court. Because of their tender years, Judge DeMeza had been holding off putting them away but as they went almost direct from police headquarters after being released to another robbery there was nothing else left to do. Last week the boys stole thirty-five dollars from a safe in the Zeek Baking Company store. Monday night they carried away a ham and a carton of eggs from Wagner's meat market and Tuesday night Patrolman Wurth caught them entering the Keystone Shoe Store on East Front street. The Schloss store on West Front street and Roth's meat market on East Front street also received a visit from the busy pair recently, the former place yielding up forty-five dollars from an unlocked safe. The boys' parents live at 317 Cottage place.

Miss Queena Tillotson, a former Plainfield girl, and graduate of the city High School, will appear this season in the leading coloratura-lyric soprano roles with the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, opening September 2 in San Francisco. She has chosen for her stage name Queena Mario. She was a pupil of Madame Emma Eames, under whom she studied music for several years. Miss Tillotson's parents resided for a long time on West Eighth street, near Madison avenue. She is a sister to Miss Rose Tillotson, a writer on the staff of the New York Evening Telegram.

Owing to the need of more room because of greatly increased business, the City National Bank board of directors has ordered several changes in the floor plan of the banking quarters at Park avenue and Front street. They will include the making of a new lodging and the placing of a large vault further back on the Park avenue side of the bank.

Charles P. Senger, of Sycamore avenue, expresses his appreciation to the 8,000 voters who signed former Mayor Percy H. Stewart's petition as candidate for the United States Senatorial nomination on the Democratic ticket. The petition was not filed as Mr. Stewart withdrew from the race when he received the appointment of civilian aide for New Jersey in the government's plan to secure enlistments for the Plattsburg training camp.

A three weeks' old girl baby, abandoned in Hillside cemetery and placed in the care of Muhlenberg Hospital, after being found, has been given to a private family in Westfield for adoption. The local police are searching for the mother of the child who, it is believed, is an Italian woman seen near the cemetery shortly after an employe found the infant in a clump of bushes. A member of the Westfield family appeared at Muhlenberg Hospital, Wednesday, and after giving proper credentials was allowed to make the adoption.

William Redd and Lucius Smith, two gentlemen of color, engaged in a scrap on West Third street, and ended up in a police cell. When the pair were arraigned before Judge DeMeza Tuesday, it was discovered that Redd was twenty-eight years old and eligible for the draft. The case was accordingly put over until next Tuesday, and in the mean time the Exemption Board will give Redd the most direct route to Camp Dix.

The congressional campaign of former Senator E. R. Ackerman is being handled by Allen E. Beals, of East Second street, a former local newspaper man who has been publishin ga trade paper in New York. He succeeds John E. Nicol, of Richmond street, former secretary to the late Congressman Capstick, who resigned, who has gone overseas for field work. Mr. Beals was at one time a reporter for the Daily Press, and later became New Jersey editor for the New York Tribune. He has had a broad experience in newspaper and legislative work and is looked upon as an important addition to Senator Ackerman's campaign staff.

Miss Helen Besler, daughter of W. G. Besler, of West Seventh street, has gone to France for canteen work. She is a singer and while abroad will sing at the different Y. M. C. A. huts.

Mayor Calkins has been appointed to represent the New Jersey State Council of Defense, together with Commissioner Raymond, of Newark, and Mayor Segar, of Passaic, to take up with Governor Edge and the State Board of Health the necessity of formulating a State program of child hygiene, especially from the war activity point of view.

The same special train which carried eighteen Plainfield selectives to Camp Meade, Maryland, on Tuesday, conveyed the following North Plainfield men to the same destination: Pietro Raele, Thomas Riena, J. W. Schomp, C. M. Lewis, Howard A. Magg and William Kramer.

In the city court, Tuesday, Judge DeMeza imposed a fine of eight dollars on Harold White, and a fine of five dollars on Edson Henry, both colored, after they had been convicted of crap shooting. The two offenders were caught in a police raid in the West End which also bagged Thomas Jones, Charles Richardson, Colored, and Julius Perry White. Sentence on these was suspended.

John W. Arniel, of New Brunswick, has been appointed deputy of District No. 10 of the Free and Accepted Masons, comprising lodges at New Brunswick, Plainfield, Bound Brook and Somerville. Mr. Arniel succeeds George T. Caskey, of West Third street, this city, who resigned the deputyship because of ill health.

How the Y. M. C. A. Helps the Boys to Keep in Good Humor

"What do we do now, Dick?"

"Darned if I know, Harry."

"We got to do something, but how and where, and what, Tom?"

Tom, Dick and Harry were typical Americans, typical soldiers, abroad a typical troop ship, bound for "over there." Leaving the rush of civilian life they had entered the even more active life of the army. Days had been full of new sensations, new experiences, of work and drill, study and wholesome play in the training camps in America. Then, with the Hun battering the allied line on the western front, they, with many others, had been hurriedly place aboard ship.

Space aboard ship is necessarily limited. There is no room for drill, no facilities for the ordinary activities of camp life which keep the bodies and minds of men occupied, and mould them into better men and soldiers. Mess calls, boat drills and guard duty fill some time, but not an entire day.

Then there appeared among Tom, Dick and Harry and the others a chap with a pair of boxing gloves under one arm, and a bundle of stationery and checker boards under the other. He wore the khaki of the army, with the red triangle of the overseas Y. M. C. A. on his right arm.

"Find Hickey," came from the artillerymen. "He's a fighter. I bet he can lick anything that machine gun bunch can show. Oh, you machine gunners, bring out the best your've got!"

A boxing bout was soon under way in a cleared space on the deck, with the others packed thickly about, hanging from every point of vantage. Homesickness and ennui had been banished, dissatisfaction and restlessness had fled. Merry gibes and happy cheers rang out as the two-round bout came to a happy and harmless conclusion. One sergeant had seen fair play though he had little to do and another held the watch. There was no decision, and no evidence of ill temper. This bout over, another pair donner the gloves, and another and another. So the time passed from early dinner until dark, hours that otherwise would have been very long.

Other men had taken the stationery offered by the "Y" man and retired to quiet corners to write letters home. Still others had paired off at checkers or chess. And as the days passed the service to the men was extended and increased.

Theses boys, who had been more than busy, were mightily hungry to read, now that hours of leisure and confinement were upon them. The "Y" had had three cases of books, some five hundred, with which to fulfill this demand. The commanding assist the red. mPaLlhuetaoinnunu officer detailed two enlisted men who had had some experience in library work to assist the red triangle worker. They took full charge of the books, keeping the records and seeing to it that the copies came back on time.

311th Regt. Not in Fight Up to 1st of Present Month

The Plainfield boys who went to France with the Seventy-eighth division up until August 1 had not gone into actual fighting. The boys are near the front line ready for duty but have not been called upon to go into action, according to a letter received by the Record from Arthur Johnson, a local young man in that regiment. This is his letter in part:

"We are having a fine time. They are certainly working the boys hard, but they seem to be enjoying it, and, with but few exceptions, all are increasing in weight.

"WeW are still in the place we were when last I wrote. Fourth of July every night. Plenty of noise and flashes, but that is all.

"Every day or so we have a visit rrom the Hun planes which drop a few bombs, without any harm. This afternoon, we had a visit from two and one of our boys brought the second down near us. We are going over to look at what is left of him.

"I have been up to the front trenches seven times to carry certain messages. That is the nearest we have gotten to the fun as yet, but all are wishing they could get a chance.

"If any of the folks at home think we are suffering for good eats, including chocolate, candy, canned fruit, smokes, etc., tell them not to worry. We get all we want at the Y. M. C. A. canteen, which is right in our midst. It has a good organ and we have plenty of music. You ought to hear the noise and music fifty of us can make.

"We spend all of our spare time entertaining those in the hospitals in this section. Words cannot express the gratitude of those who for so long a time have had no music. Their appreciation is the best thing I have had since I left home.

"We hope it will be all over soon but feel that all the Huns should be driven into the ocean and drowned. We hear some awful tales and we have seen the proof so don't let any one tell you that what you hear is not true. It all is and more.

"Since we have the Y. M. C. A. canteen none of the boys can have any excuse for not writing home often. Before that it was hard to get pen and ink and paper. No excuse now."

K. of C. Seeking Overseas Workers

Men for overseas service in the war activities of the Knights of Columbus are greatly needed, and the officers are seeking men willing to take up this work. The must be above the draft age and have mental and physical equipment for the work. In a statement just issued all the possible questions of any man desiring to enter the service are answered. The War Council says:

"If you want to pose on a pedestal and be admired, you are not the man the Knights of Columbus are seeking for an overseas secretaryship.

"But if you want to peel off your coat, roll up your sleeves and go to work, they want you, and will gladly pay you a salary, too.

"You don't have to be 100 years old—the Knights are seeking men as young as 46, but the ideal age hovers around the 50-year mark.

"If you have gray hair, don't dye it—gray hair with the K. of C. is at a premium—they are opposed to hair dyes on general principles.

"Don't massage the crow's feet out of your face, either, and, above all, don't iron out any wrinkles—the more wrinkles you have, the better.

"The Knights need secretaries for overseas duty—not posing. They want men of charactere, of stamina and energy, to help in promoting the American soldier's and sailor's comfort. Our fighters are easily pleased; they don't ask much; they can shift for themselves, but there are times when a little personal attention, a personal service, a handshake, a word of counsel, a well-told joke, or even a cigarette looms up big to them."

William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Knights of Columbus Committee on War Work Activities, at his office, 461 Fourth avenue, New York city, taking about the age limit of K. of C. secretaries, said:

"We need for secretaries men of the highest personal charcater, in perfect health, possessin an abundance of energy, broad sympathies, executive ability, cheerfulness, mental alertness and, above all, a map must like the work.

"The bulk of the army is made up of young men who, naturally, will look to men older than themselves for advice in many matters, and a K. of C. secretary with strong paternal characteristics will be of great value in the K. of C. service.

"A knowledge of recreational entertainment is a big asset to our secretaries, and experience of an athletic nature is desirable—fighting men need diversion, and their outdoor life fosters a desire, I think, for outdoor games.

"We are finding splendid material among applicants now, and, with the extension of the age limit, we expect to have even greater success."

For a patriotic Catholic man above draft age, there is no more effective way in which to help win the war than by helping the American soldiers and sailors—and their allies. This is the only task required of a Knights of Columbus secretary.

Pope Benedict has conferred his blessings on the Knights of Columbus, its Supreme Council and persons co-operating with the order in its war activities. The Pontiff, in a cable message to James A. Flaherty, supreme knight, expressed his heartfelt thanks for sentiments of homage, fidelity and attachment tendered by the Knights through their supreme council.

The apostolic blessing was conferred after the Pope had learned, at his request, details of the gigantic scope of the order's war work activities, and its contemplated enlargement here and overseas. This knowledge of the Knights' activities in war relief work was gained from reports submitted at the K. of C. victory convention, at the Waldorf-Astoria, August 6 and 7. This was placed before the Vatican by cable and the message to Mr. Flaherty is an acknowledgment.

More Sugar for New Jersey in September

Distribution of September sugar certificates will begin Wednesday from the office of the State food administration. Grocers who were eliminated from the August allotment will be included in the September distribution. An increase for the State of between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 pounds over the August allotment is promised by State food officials.

The amount of sugar allowed New Jersey in August was about 9,000,000 pounds, while the September allotment will be 12,000,000 pounds, or only 1,000,000 pounds under the July allotment, when the distribution system was inaugurated. The increase this month is largely to take care of retail grocers, but there will be no change in the rate of consumption, set by the administration at two pounds per person per month for householders and two pounds for ninety meals of public eating places.

Richard Whitney, head of the administration division, said this week that the distribution system has shown that New Jersey is entitled to 4,000,000 pounds more sugar a month than has been allotted to the State by the National Administration. The claim for the extra amount is justified, he said, because of the increase of population within the last year.

The general plan of sugar sales by grocers under the two-pound ratio in Newark and Essex county has worked out well, according to a statement issued this week by Henry G. Atha, county administrator. Reports received weekly at Mr. Atha's office have shown that the grocers were living up to the regulations in all but a few cases, the omissions being due largely to a lack of complete understanding of the rules.

The food administration is appealing to the women of the State to cut their candy consumption ni half and asking them not to purchase more than a one-pound box at a time. Allotment of sugar for candy-making has been reduced fifty per cent. and retailers are appealing to the public to buy less. Candy manufacturers, it is said, are showing the greatest willingness to co-operate with the food administration in this matter. Stores have been asked to cut down their show window displays and to cut in half the amount of advertising formerly devoted to pushing confectionery sales.

Government Orders Cut in Production of 1918 Automobiles

Because of war needs, manufacturers of passenger automobiles have been directed to cut production for the last half of 1918 to twenty-five per cent. of their total output in 1917. The makers further have been warned to put their plants upon a 100 per cent. war basis by January 1.

The decree is the outcome of conferences between Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, representatives of its various divisions and delegates from the automobile industry, the latter being Hugh Chalmers and Albert Reeves. Chalmers and Reeves accepted the program when the government's agents assured them that the need of steel, iron, coal and labor in war use imperatively requires the curtailment.

To support the twenty-five per cent. production of cars, the War Industries Board will extend prefer ence treatment to automobile manufacturers in the matter of abtaining the materials they require to "match up" the stocks now in hand, on condition that the manufacturers subscribe to the pledges required by the priorities division of the board.

There is a further condition that, in evening up their stocks and completing cars, now in process of manufacture, plants that have an excess supply of steel shall turn over to other plants that can use it such steel from the excess supply as may be required to complete the other plants' production, if not needed for war work.

The agreement with the industry was expressed in a letter addressed to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, New York city, and signed by Alexander Legge, vice chairman; Edwin B. Parker, priorities commissioner; J. L. Replogle, director of steel supply, and George N. Peek, commissioner of finished products, of the War Industries Board, who served as a committee with full powers to act for it in the automobile negotiations.

The letter concludes:

"In justice to the passenger automobile industry, we feel again impelled, as the situation appears to us now, to frankly repeat our statement to you of August 9, that the urgent war requirements for iron and steel are so great that the probability of your industry procuring iron and steel after January 1, 1919, for the manufacture of passenger automobiles is so uncertain that we again urge the members of your industry to as rapidly as possible utilize your facilities for the production of direct and indirect war requirements, not only in the interest of the nation, but in the interests of your industry itself. In such effort the members of your industry will have the active and whole-hearted co-operation of this board."

Mrs. James L. Perry, of West Sixth street, is improving nicely at Muhlenberg Hospital following an operation for appendicitis. Mrs. Perry was formerly Miss Nora McCarthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McCarthy, of West Sixth street.

Military Control for Country's Draft Boards

What is believed by draft officials in the city and county to be the first step toward the placing of the draft boards of the country directly under the control of the military authorities was taken yesterday by Adjutant General Gilkyson, when he notified them that registered men are to be inducted into the service for use as clerks to local boards.

General Gilkyson has requested that each of the boards furnish him with lists of limited service men qualified to act in various capacities in connection with the draft. If necessary, he has let it be known, registered men physically fit will be used as clerks. According to the present plan they will be mustered into the service as either privates or non-commissioned officers and will receive corresponding pay.

While the measure has been taken primarily to insure a sufficient amount of help for the coming draft of men from 18 to 45, the opinion is held that the boards will eventually come entirely under the direction of the War Department with men sworn into the service acting as members instead of civilians, as at present.

Dr. Peter B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, who was recently commissioned as a captain in the Medical Corps, left Monday for Camp Meade, Maryland, to begin his army duties.

Asks That Troops Be Paid Regularly

Members of the Senate military affairs committee asked General March, chief of staff, this week, to take action to have all American troops, overseas or in the United States, paid at regular intervals. The Senators told the general that they have found that many men failed to get their money when due and that this had caused hardships The chief of staff promised a complete investigation and an immediate remedy of the conditions. Senators also expressed a belief that the casualty lists were not coming through from France as fast as they might. It was stated by members later, however, that General March said that all casualty lists were made public without delay.

General March told the Senators that all of the late news from the front was most gratifying. The British-French offensive is proceeding exactly as planned, he said. Men and supplies are going overseas in accordance with the original schedule. The shipping situation is satisfactory, he stated.

Newspaper Curb Stirs Criticism

Republican Senators charged Tuesday the Administration is trying to keep certain information from the public and that the War Department is seeking to "run the war in executive session."

A veritable torrent of acrid criticism was poured out against the official order barring from the foreign mails or from shipment abroad in any form of newspapers, letters or magazines containing the report of the Senate Aircraft Investigation Committee made public last week.

Senator Weeks, of Massachusetts, opened discussion by reading orders to the customs collector and postmaster at Boston not to permit newspapers carrying the report of the committee to go abroad, and to hold up all newspapers, magazines or letters carrying any "service reports."

"This was done probably on the theory that it would withheld information from the enemy," said Senator Weeks. "But the enemy knows the situation with regard to aircraft. Therefore this drastic and ill-advised action is based on an argument that has no force."

State Gains Revennes Under Riparian Leases

Although in operation only since February, New Jersey's new policy of leasing instead of selling riparian lands is bringing in annually a revenue of over $8,000, and just the thirty-two leases authorized in the past six months alone will result in a total revenue for the State during the life of the leases of more than a half million dollars. In addition to this annual income, which in so short a period as fifteen years will exceed the total amount which would have gone into the public treasury under the old system of grants in fee, the State, at the end of the leasing term, retains possession of the land and all the improvements made on the property by the lessee during the life of the lease.

A radical departure was made from the old practice of parting with title to riparian lands for considerations that failed to regard the possible value of water fronts to the State in future years. The Legislature passed a permissive act—Chapter 94—early in the session. The Board of Commerce and Navigation agreed upon a plan calling for a lease to run sixty years. The basic or capital sum was fixed in the lease, and stands for the first twenty years. This capital sum is the product of the lineal feet on the bulkhead line and the price per lineal foot fixed by the board, and at the end of the twenty, thirty, forty and fifty year periods, respectively, of the lease, the State revalues the land leased and fixes a new capital sum.

Since the rental is seven per cent. per year on this capital sum, which is, of course, the same as the total consideration would be for a grant in fee under the old system, the State gets the estimated sale price of the land every fifteen years and still retains title.

For instance, at the present time thirty-two leases have been taken or are under contract, comprising a total frontage of 8,327.3 feet, or 1.58 miles, at a total capital price of $116,049.81. The rental, or seven per cent. of this capital sum, gives the State an annual income of $8,123.49, which in fifteen years will aggregate $121,852.35, or more than the capital sum of $116,049.81, which is everything the State would have received under the old granting system, not to mention loss of title to the land.

In sixty years, or the life of the thirty-two leases, this annual rental would aggregate $487,409, if the 1.58 miles of land were not revalued. But under the periodical revaluation scheme, the total revenue for the sixty years will, of course, be greatly in excess of that sum on account of increasin gthe capital sum to correspond with increases in the value of the land. To the revenue which the State received there should also be added the interest on the rental moneys.

Soldiers Over There Perase The Record

That the Record is carefully read by the Plainfield boys "Over There" is apparent from a letter received yesterday by Charles P. Freleigh, of 661 West Fourth street, from Jack Kennedy, a former local young man now in the 501st Engineers.

Private Kennedy was employed for several years by Laggren & Greene and made his home on West Second street. He enlisted in the regular army last fall and has been overseas since early in the present year. In his letter to Mr. Freleigh, the latter being a close friend, the young soldier mentions the fact that he read the Plainfielder's poem, "Every State Has a Star," as published in the Record several months ago. The statement was very pleasing to Mr. Freleigh as he had no idea as to what extent his effusion would be perused and remembered.

Private Kennedy, who is twenty-three years old, asks that newspapers and magazines be sent him and tells of other things as the letter in full will show:

France, July 31, 1918.

Dear Friend:

I was reading the Plainfield Record of a recent date and happened to see that article that you had in there about the proper way to hang a flag when not on a staff and thought it was pretty good stuff.

Well, old maan, I suppose the bunch is all broke up now, with this last draft and what fellows enlisted before they were called. I have not heard from you or any of the boys in almost six months and am wondering whether you have forgotten me or not. You know that I like to hear about everything that happens in the old town and would also like to get some magazines and newspapers to read as the supply of reading material is very small. I have exhausted all that is available in the company.

This sure is some country, "believe me, George," the climate is very mild and it seldom rains during this time of the year. I am learning to "Parley vous Francais" pretty fair and also have some very pleasant times with a damoiselle that I met shortly after arriving here. There are two buddies of mine that keep company with her sisters, so you can imagine the good times we have.

Well, Charlie, let me know if Doc Fulton is in the outfit yet and if you see him tell him to drop the boy a line and let me know how everything is going on over in Newark, also tell Fuzzy Firstbrook to write, and Billie Fass.

Give my regards to the Mrs., Bill Britton and his wife, and I send my best regards to you.

I remain.

Your old pal,
JACK.

Thirty-Fourth Division Will Train at Dix

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

From out of the West, where sand storms are common occurrences, there has come to Camp Dix for final training the Thirty-fourth, or "Sand-Storm," Division, composed principally of former National Guardsmen from Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa, nearly all of whom have had some experience along the border. The division is under the command of Brigadier General John A. Johnston.

The men made a fine impression as they marched into camp. In the division are some selected service men from Arizona and New Mexico who were transferred to the various units while the division was in training at Camp Cody, Deming, N. M.

A number of the Depot Brigade men, who have had six months or more work on that organization, will be transferred to the new division as they will be replaced by limited service men, who will arrive at the camp early next month to be trained so they can remain as a permanent part of the brigade and assist in the work of breaking in the new recduits.

The Thirty-fourth Division is composed of the Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Infantry brigades, composed of the 133d, 134th, 135th and 136th regiments of infantry and the 126th and 127th Machine Gun regiments; the Fifty-ninth Artillery Brigade composed of the 125th, 126th and 127th regiments, together with the 109th Engineers and the various trains with the 385th Bakery Company.

Besides General Johnston, the headquaters staff consists of the following officers: Chief of staff, Colonel W. H. Raymond; assistant chiefs, Lieutenant Colonel S. J. Sutherland and Lieutenant Solonel H. H. McGee; division adjutant, Lieutenant Colonel H. M. Nelly; assistant adjutants, Captain C. A. Krauss and Lieutenant P. M. Woods; personnel adjutant, Captain Delos Walker; assistant, Lieutenant J. N. Sprecher; division quartermaster, Colonel J. R. Lee; assistant quartermasters, Majors M. Sorenson and Captain R. B. Gillet; division surgeon, Colonel Jacob Coffin; assistant surgeon, Major R. R. Fagan; division stanitary inspector, Captain H. A. Stoltz; division ordnance officer, Lieutenant Colonel J. T. Siles; division inspector, Lieutenant Colonel C. R. McGee; division judge advocate, Major H. R. Bitzing; acting division signal officer, Major H. A. Jess.

Catholic soldiers, serving in the army at Dix, have been notified that a recent order of the Pope grants them permission to eat flesh meat on all the days of the year, with the exception of Good Friday, during the time they are under the colors.

Another large contingent of officers and non-commissioned officers, who have seen service abroad, have arrived at Dix, and will remain until they are assigned to other camps for training purposes. In all about 300 officers and 250 enlisted men have reported, but many of them have already been transferred. The non-commissioned officers will have a chance to obtain commissions and some have been detailed to the Engineer Train and Replacement Center at Camp Humphreys, Va.

A record amount of insurance is being written by the Dix War Risk Bureau. Out of the last 10,000 selective service men who reported at Dix, only 125 failed to take out insurance.

Major General H. L. Scott, camp commander, is appreciative of the work that is being accomplished by the Y. M. C. A. secretaries stationed at the camp. When a representative of the New Jersey War Work Council called on General Scott recently he gave his views of the Y. M. C. A. as follows:

"No one could have a higher opinion than I of the wonderful influence and great amount of good your association has effected upon the men of this command."

Pianists will have a chance to show their ability and incidentally capture a prize offered by the Knights of Columbus, for a contest opening the night of September 4, which is being arranged by Chalres Bayha, of Hoboken, a composer, who is one of the K. of C. secretaries at Camp Dix.

An effort is being made to orgnize a Camp Dix quartet and every soldier who desires to try for a place should communicate with Chrystal Brown, Y. M. C. A. song leader. There have been a number of regimental quartets organized here, but Dix has never had a camp quartet.

Owing to the great number of non-English speaking soldiers enrolled in the English school at Dix, A. B. Meredith, of Plainfield, assistant director of education of New Jersey, now assisting the Y. M. C. A. in the direction of this work, has devised a new system. Each section has three hours of study and one hour of exercise and drill each day and the rest of the time the men are subject to the orders of their captain.

When the school was first started the teachers, who were inexperienced at the work, used the educational books that the Y. M. C. A. has found so successful in civilian life. But now that the teachers are familiar with their work, the lessons are built around military routine. During the recreation period all sorts of games are played and every day or so the men have a little sing, with one of the Y. M. C. A. song leaders helping them out.

The men of the Fifty-ninth pioneers are being used as demonstration units for the school for platoon commanders. One company has been complimented by United States officials for its excellent work as a demonstration unit for gas defense in recent tests made at the government experimenting grounds at Lakehurst.

A sudden shower Sunday afternoon sent hundreds of visitors scurrying for shelter.

MARTIN MILTNER NOW IN ENGINEERS' CORPS.

Martin Miltner, of Church street, who was one of four Plainfielders entered in Browne University, Providence, R. I., last May, for a special technical course, has completed his studies and is now a member of the Engineers' Corps as a mechanical expert.

Mr. Miltner was sent from Providence to Camp Leach, Va., three weeks ago and was brought back from there last week. He is now stationed at Camp Merritt, in preparation for an overseas trip. He came to Plainfield over the past week-end and enjoyed a visit at his mother's home until Monday.

Navy Is Scored by Senator McCumber

The failure of the navy to destroy the American fishing trawler after being captured by a U-boat off the Atlantic coast a week ago, was scored by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, in the Senate.

"Where is the navy?" he demanded. "Where are those swift subchasers and destroyers we have heard about? The trawler has a speed of eight to twelve knots an hour, I am told. It can't go under water, yet it is allowed to go up and down our coast destroying our fishing feets at will. Why is it?"

Red Men's Benefit at Wayside Park Labor Day

One of the most auspicious events of Labor Day is to be a big picnic at ayside Park, Dunellen, under the auspices of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, of this city. In addition to an attractive program of athletic and other events, added incentive to attend is given by the announcement that the entire proceeds are to be presented to the local Chapter of the Red Cross.

Suitable prizes will be awarded for winners of the different athletic events that take place during the day. These include a 100-yard dash for Red Men exclusively, a 100-yard dash open to all; shoe races for children and adults; jumping, shooting and quoit contests and also as an added feature of tug-of-war between teams representing Miantonomo Tribe of Plainfield and Maraticong Tribe, of Somerville.

Dancing will be on the program afternoon and evening and refreshments will be served at all times. The committee from Miantonomo has been very active in the preparations and anticipates a big attendance.

Miss Marion Harrington, of West Fourth street, has returned to her duties in Charles H. Lyman's office, after a two weeks' stay at Asbury Park. She was registered at the Wilsonia.

Mrs. Agnes Hurtt and Mrs. Howard J. Armstrong, of Washington avenue, have gone to Asbury Park to remain until after Labor Day. They are registered at the Albright.

NEW $1.00 AND $2.00 BILLS ARE BEING ISSUED.

Two new greenbacks—the first of the nation's war time currency—are in circulation. They are the $1 and $2 federal reserve bank notes planned especially to replace the silver certificates withdraw from circulation, as the treasury's silver reserve is melted into bullion for export to the Allies.

The $1 note bears a portrait of George Washington in the upper left hand corner of the face side, and otherwise resembles generally a federal reserve note.

On the reverse side is shown in a center oval an eagle in full flight, typifying the nation mobilized for war.

The $2 note bears a portrait of Thomas Jefferson on the front and a picture of a battleship on the back.

JUST AMERICAN.

Just today we chanced to meet—
Down upon the crowded street;
And I wondered whence he came,
What was once his nation's name.

So I asked him, "Tell me true,
Are you Pole or Russian Jew,
English, Scotch, Italian, Russian,
Belgian, Spanish, Swiss, Moravian,
Dutch or Greek or Scandinavian."

Then he raised his head on high,
As he gave me this reply:
"What I was is naught to me,
In this land of Liberty.
In my soul as man to man,
I am just American."

—Author Unknown.

Private Joseph Murray, of West Fourth street, and Private Jack McCarthy, of Lee place, were visitors at their homes over the past week-end. The former is stationed at Pelham Bay, while the latter was recently transferred to Camp Merritt from Camp Greene.

Rules For Alien Women Who Change Residence

U. S. Marshal Albert Bollschweiler, of Newark, has sent to Chief of Police Kiely the new regulations regarding change of residence of German alien females.

The new regulations demand that a German alietn woman changing her place of residence to another place within the same registration district shall immediately report such change to the registration officer of that district, and present to such officer her registration card for the purpose of having indorsed thereon by the officer the change of residence.

A German alien female who desires to change her place of residence to another registration district must obtain a permit. Such German alien female must present herself to the registration officer of the district in which she now resides and make application for the permit on a form supplied by the registration officer. She must display her registration card to the officer for the purpose of having the permit, if granted, indorsed on the registration card.

A change of residence in violation of the regulations subjects an alien enemy, among other penalties, to arrest and detention for the period of the war.

The officers who acted in the registration will continue to act for the purpose stated in respect to permits for change of residence.

"WHERE DID YOU GET YOUR FACTS?"

You may travel this world over
With your chest swelled up with pride,
Because you've heard of the good work
That's done on the other side.

Our boys are fighting like demons,
For they must defeat the Hun;
And that's the reason you feel proud,
For they've got them on the run.

A few may not be elated,
And will start to falsify;
And tell you oh! such dreadful things
And they know it is a lie.

It's your patriotic duty,
And from it you dare not slack;
Just you grab him by the shoulder,
Say, where did you get your fact?

He'll say he heard from so-and-so,
Your question perhaps he'll dodge.
He'll try to beat around the bush,
Then he'll try some camouflage.

There's no need of violence,
But there's one thing you can say,
If you want to stay in this land,
Stick to the good old U. S. A.

Thirty-nine young men, who reached the age of twenty-one years since June 5 last were enrolled by the Plainfield District Exemption Board in the registration of last Saturday and Monday. This is about nine more than was anticipated by the Draft Board.

"PLEDGED TO PRESIDENT WILSON'S DEMOCRATIC POLICIES"

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS, present Mayor of Madison, Morris County, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District for the full term in Congress, was born in Galveston, Texas, January seventh, 1874, of American ancestry antedating the Revolutionary war.

He has resided in New York and New Jersey since boyhood and has been a lifelong Democrat. He has been elected a Councilman, and twice elected Mayor of Madison Borough on the Democratic ticket and is the only successful Democratic Mayoralty candidate in the history of that Borough.

He has always maintained an active interest in political affairs, and has a good record as a public official; exhibiting a practical understanding of his duties and the courage of his convictions.

He has served in his community on the committees for all the war activities; is President of the Madison Home Defense League; Chairman for the Borough of the State Council of Defense, and for the American Defense League. He has an unassailable record in his personal attitude and public utterances on an uncompromising American stand before the war and on the necessities of the situation since the declaration of war.

His known public record is a guarantee that he will support the policies of the Administration in the prosecution of the war and the enforcement of peace terms as outlined by President Wilson and accepted by all the allied Governments.

The Fifth Congressional District is constituted of Union and Morris Counties. Union County furnished the party candidate in 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916, and also in other years prior to 1910. Morris County has not had a candidate since 1902, or in sixteen years. According to all precedent it is the turn of a Morris County Democrat to be nominated, and in OTTO ROSS Morris presents a candidate who has the entire support of the party throughout the County, and who is a loyal and active Democrat, as is shown by the fact that his home town of Madison was carried for the Democratic Congressional candidate at each of the last four elections, though it is rated as a Republican stronghold.

MR. ROSS has the personal and political strength, and the qualifications to win in November if he is nominated, and the Union County Democrats are asked to support him for the nomination.

Vote for OTTO ROSS at the Primary Election on September 24th.

Paid for by Frank Waters, Campaign Manager for Otto Ross.

PRIMARY ELECTION, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1918

For member of the House of Representatives of the United States, Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey, term ending March 4, 1919

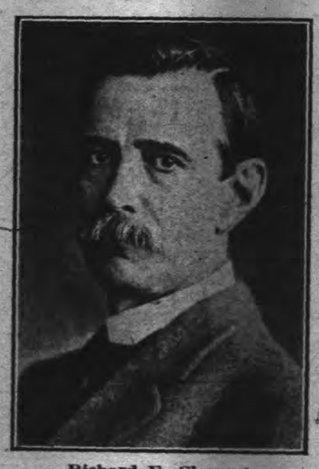
VOTE FOR ONE

X	RICHARD E. CLEMENT	Democrat

For member of the House of Representatives of the United States, Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey, term beginning March 4, 1919

VOTE FOR ONE

X	RICHARD E. CLEMENT	Democrat



Richard E. Clement

The term ending March 4, 1919, is the unexpired term of the late John H. Capstick of Morris County and extends from November 5, 1918, to March 4, 1919—four months.

The regular term of two years begins March 4, 1919, and ends March 4, 1921.

The interests of the people are paramount and the people of the district and of the Nation will unquestionably be better served by one man holding office for 28 consecutive months than by two men, one for 4 months and a second for a 24-month term.

MR. CLEMENT IS PLEDGED:

(a) To help win the war.
(b) To support President Wilson.
(c) To stand for social justice.

1—To support a policy of force to the limit of America's power and endurance until an American peace, a conclusive peace, is won.
2—To support and reward men in the service of America, who, arms in hand, win by force an American peace.
3—To support President Wilson in his policies.
4—To apply to every legislative program President Wilson's test: "Is it just, is it for the benefit of the average man, without influence or privilege; does it embody in real fact the highest conception of social justice and of right-dealing without respect of person or class or particular interest?"

Only those measures and those measures only, which satisfy affirmatively this high test will have Mr. Clement's support.

Water Companies Plan Huge Supply Reservoir on Johnston's Drive

Big Tank of Twenty Million Gallons Capacity Will Be Erected if State Board Grants Permit to Draw Supply from Millstone River

Application by the Plainfield-Union Water Company and four other allied water supply concerns for permission from the State Board of Conservation and Development to derive an additional water supply from the Millstone River in Somerset county reveals the information that the five concerns have joined forces to build a twenty-million gallon capacity reservoir on Johnston's Drive at a point overlooking Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Associated with the Plainfield Union Company are the Elizabethtown Water Company, the Middlesex Water Company, the Raritan Township Water Company and the Piscataway Water Company. Recent heavy demands upon their output, because of camps and cantonments being located in the districts supplied, have forced the five concerns to hasten improved facilities and as the project necessary is too great from a financial point of few for one alone, they have decided to share the expense in proportionate amounts. It is estimated that the total cost will be $1,500,000 and would be much larger than this but for the fact that time was taken by the forelock a number of years ago when a provisional thirty-six inch main was built from Bound Brook to Elizabeth. In the event of the State Board granting permission to tap the Millstone River at a point where it empties into the Raritan, this main will be used to bring the supply to the reservoir on Johnston's Drive. It was further learned yesterday that the Plainfield-Union Company has had plans for the new reservoir for nearly two years and would have gone ahead with the construction work sometime ago but for the outbreak of the war and the subsequent disorganized condition of labor and financial fields.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company developed from the old Plainfield Water Supply Company. It now furnishes water for fire and household purposes to Plainfield and Elizabeth, together will all intervening towns along the New Jersey Central. Originally it sent its daily output from the 500,000 gallon capacity standpipe at Netherwood but this was torn down a few weeks ago following the completion of a huge reservoir on a hill in Fanwood township capable of holding nine million gallons. Even this is proving inadequate because of increased consumption, and with the additional needs of the allied concerns, the twenty-million galloni reservoir mentioned is becoming an absolute want. At the present time the supply for the Plainfield-Union Company is derived from the Netherwood wells, while the Middlesex Company pumps its water from the same underground river at points just over the city line on Park avenue and in South Plainfield. The Millstone River has been selected for the additional gallons because it is the only stream in this vicinity that is fed by a series of springs and is never in the muddied condition characterizing the South Branch, the North Branch and other feeders of the Raritan.

Application for permission to develop the supply of water from the Millstone River was made to the Conservation Board by Frank Bergen, president of the Plainfield-Union Company and the Middlesex Company. Should the necessary grant be given, it was said, work would be commenced at once on the reservoir, a pumping station and new mains from the junction of the Millstone and Raritan Rivers to the thirty-six inch main at Bound Brook. It was state that in the event of an emergency, the output of water could be made fifty millions gallons a day, nearly twice the amount now supplied by all five companies.

The territory supplied with water by the five affiliated companies contains approximately 200,000 inhabitants and numerous large manufacturing establishments, particularly along Staten Island Sound from Elizabeth to Perth Amboy. The government hospital at Colonia opened recently is now calling for 500,000 gallons daily and the Raritan Ordnance station at Bonhamtown will soon be requiring twice that amount, an emergency that has taxed the available supplies.

The answer of the Conservation Board to the application cannot be predicted as yet but the officials of the five concerns do not look for any obstacles in their lans for construction work in the near future.

Death Comes to Frazee Putnam

Following an illness of three week's from acute Brights' disease, death came at 2:30 this morning to Frazee Putnam at his home on Park place, the borough. His trouble began with an attack of malarial fever but quickly developed to more serious trouble and for the past week he had been in a critical condition.

Mr. Putnam was born in this city, and had lived in the community all his life. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Putnam, and was one of the best known residents of the twin municipalities. At an early age, the deceased learned the compositor's trade in the office of the Evening News, published by the late Thomas W. Morrison at 21 Somerset street. Afterward he was employed in various local newspaper and printing establishments. With Henry Dresselt, now connected with the Record composing staff, Mr. Putnam operated the first typesetting machine ever brought to Plainfield. It was located in the office of the Daily Press and required two men for operation, one on the keyboard and the other at spacing. The machine was known as a Unitype and was the forerunner of the modern linotype machines now used by newspapers. Mr. Putnam's last place of employment was with the Courier-News.

The deceased was a member of Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias; Plainfield Benevolent Council of Juniors, the Printers' Union and the Exempt Firemen's Association. He was prominent for many years in the Plainfield volunteer fire department. Mr. Putnam was a man of unassuming disposition, very quiet in his ways but one who readily made friends and always kept them. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Nellie Arnold, daughter of Tax Collector James K. Arnold; a brother, Frank Putnam, of East Second street, and one sister, Mrs. Emily L. Laird, of Claymont, Del.

The funeral will be held at the late home on Park place Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

All in Readiness For N. R. A. Second War Garden Show

The Netherwood Residents' Association's second annual exhibition of products resulting from its home garden competition will take place in the Parish Hall, at South and Woodland avenues, tomorrow afternoon. All persons interested are cordially invited to attend with the assurance from the committee that they will be fully repaid for their time and trouble.

The idea of the home garden competition grew out of the Association's determination last year to do everything possible to help in the production of foodstuffs, thereby aiding in winning the war. The prizes offered induced many young people below the ages of eighteen to raise vegetables themselves and the result, when the exhibition was held, was astonishing to the Association itself and also to the parents and friends. There were twenty-seven entries in the competition last year and this year there are thirty-two.

The Parish Hall will contain the displays of vegetables entered in the contest as well as others to be submitted by grown folks in the hope of winning one of the beautiful blue ribbons. The seniors have also gone to great trouble to aid in decorating the hall. A class for home canned goods has also been opened in which women are evidencing great interest, ribbons having been offered for these also. A competent committee of judges will carefully consider every entury tomorrow, awarding cash prizes and ribbons to the home gardener whose product shows exceptional merit.

President A. C. Wilmerding, who has devoted many hours of his time to promoting the war garden idea, announced today that the committee of judges composed of George C. Scott, Lewis J. Geary and Charles L. Stanley, had made the following awards in the home garden competition to boys or girls under seventeen years of age:

Class A (unassisted)—First prize, $3.00 and Association's blue ribbon and the George C. Scott cup, to F. Vinton Lawrence, Jr., 1314 Denmark road. Second prize, $2.00 and Association's red ribbon to Katharine L. Wilmerding, 518 Belvidere avenue. High Highly Commended, Henry Quinn's garden, 709 East Seventh street, and Madeline Wilmerding's garden, 518 Belvidere avenue.

Class B (assisted)—First prize, $2.00 and Association's blue ribbon and the Lewis J. Geary cup, to James H. Wernig, 1122 South avenue. Second prize, $1.00 and the Association's red ribbon, to Samuel W. Koffler, 1110 South avenue.

Special Urizes—For garden conducted by the youngest entrant, the William A. DeLong cup and the Association's blue ribbon; to Ruth B. Wilmerding, 518 Belvidere avenue. For the neatest and best ordered garden, 6 prize dahlia bulbs offered by H. S. Beebe, to Madeleine R. Wilmering.

$25,000 Fire At Rajotte's Brick-Yard

J. Albert Rajotte's brick yard, on Second street, Dunellen, the largest in this part of the State, together with a large quantity of valuable machinery, was almost completely destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning, entailing a loss estimated at $25,000.

A workman living near the plant, which is just over the city line on Jefferson avenue, discovered the flames and after rousing Mr. Rajotte, whose home is on the Plainfield side of Jefferson avenue, sent a call to the Dunellen fire department. Its prompt response saved a big barn and several other structures. Mr. Rajotte, himself and several neighbors got out twelve horses and a cow that were in the danger zone. The barn housing them was aflame on the roof several times but was kept wet down and finally was saved. The fire made a brilliant illumination in the sky and someone turned in an alarm to the North Plainfield department from box 154 at Rockview terrace, believing the blaze was in the borough district. The firemen responded but returned on learning that the location was out of the limits.

The part of the plant destroyed includes three huge sheds. These housed the boiler and engine rooms, the dryer house and the pit house. The machinery, especially the moulds and grinders in the latter as well as the engines and boilers, were very valuable and can hardly be replaced at this time. A big storehouse where hundreds of thousands of bricks are kept was one of the buildings escaping. The $25,000 estimated loss is only partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Rajotte said this morning that he was unable to advance any explanation as the cause of the blaze.

Charles Otto Smith Weds Miss Scott

Miss Myrtle Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Scott, of Avon avenue, Newark, was married last Saturday afternoon to Charles Otto Smith, of Spooner avenue, who for many years has conducted a grocery at Fourth and Liberty streets.

The ceremony took place at the home of Rev. Dr. J. C. Brownell, pastor of the Newark church, and was witnessed only by a few friends. Mr. and Mrs. Smith afterward left for a brief wedding trip to Atlantic City, which terminated this week. They will be at home to their friends after October 1 in a newly furnished home at 972 Arlington avenue.

Mr. Smith is one of Plainfield's best known young business men. He lived in the borough for some time and was active as a member of the volunteer fire department. He is a member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks, Knights of the Golden Eagle, Odd Fellows and Exempt Firemen's Association, and has the best wishes of his associates in these and also his hundreds of other friends. His bride, although having been a resident of Newark, has gained a wide acquaintance locally through numerous visits to the city and borough. She is a sister to George Warren Scott, of Watchung avenue, the well-known musician who at various times has been in charge of the orchestras at the local theatres.

"Hub" Reynolds at Last Gets Overseas

Herbert Reynolds, of Watchung avenue, known to his friends as "Hub," has arrived safely overseas. Word to this effect came to friends in town this week and it is believed he is in France.

The news of "Hub's" arrival was pleasing to his many local acquaintances as it enable him to fulfill a cherished desire. Originally a member of Company K at the time war was declared, he was rejected for service because he was underweight and underheight for the existing regulations. Three times after that, he tried to enlist in various branches of the services but was turned down. Finally the draft opened the way for him to "beak into" the army and he went to Camp Dix as a selective from North Plainfield in the same contingent with his brother, Frank Reynolds, who is also overseas now.

From Camp Dix, "Hub" was sent to Camp Johnston, Fla., where he was a member of the 29th Butchering Company of the quartermasters' department. This division of the army takes care of the provisions for the soldiers and as the young North Plainfielder learned the butcher's trade in his father's shop, he was able to become a member of the butchery corps. After his training period at Camp Johnston, he was transferred to Camp Lee, Va., and after a brief stay at an embarkation point went overseas.

Thirty-Three Men Leave for Camp Humphreys

Another big contingent of selectives, numbering thirty-three in all, left Plainfield at 11:30 this morning on a special train bound for Camp Humphreys, Va. They were accorded the usual rousing send-off at the North avenue station, following a short parade from Exemption Headquarters in the Babcock building through the business district to the station platform.

The original list of men leaving today contained thirty-one names, but this was afterward revised. Four men were dropped because of being underweight and one secured exemption on the ground that he was a married man with dependents. The underweight men were Antonio Ricci, Frederick William Green, James Heron, Jr., and Edward A. Hayden. The married man is David Driscoll, of 752 East Second street. Five other men were named in their places and beside these two others were also placed in the contingent, making the thirty-three leaving today.

James M. Cullin, of 1001 South Second street, will be sent to Camp Dix tomorrow as a limited service man. He is to be assigned to clerical work at the cantonment. Mr. Cullen has been in Georgia as an employe of the Frederick T. Ley Company, which built the International Motor Company's big addition recently, and returned to Plainfield a few days ago in answer to the exemption board's call. John J. Colton, who was to have gone to Camp Dix with a Plainfield contingent last Tuesday, failed to present himself at the proper time. Yesterday the exemption board received word that he was ill at Newark and deferred induction.

Edward Meyers, of 117 Watchung avenue, and Joseph Mutnick, of 243 East Third street, who were to have gone with the contingent today, had their induction deferred because of General Crowder's order not to send out selectives of the Hebrew faith on the beginning of the Jewish holidays.

The thirty-three men, leaving this morning, are the following:

Gabriel Groletto, Forest road, Scotch Plains.
Charles Allegar, 25 Elm place.
James Cortlandt Fleming, 19 Woodbine avenue.
Anthony Ford Wormser, Fanwood.
Walter Valentine Kutcha, Mountain avenue, Scotch Plains.
Alfred Henry Luthman, 120 Madison avenue.
Paul Heteji, 1350 West Front street.
Ray Walker Shearer, 315 Central avenue.
Michael Pendolino, 234 East Fourth street.
Dominick Mangino, 218 Muhlenberg place.
Matthew J. Sabino, 331 Netherwood avenue.
Joseph Aloysius McEvoy, 609 John street.
George Boyton, Mountainside.
August Meyer, 722 West Third street.
Walter James Heckel, Mountainside.
Lloyd Eben Orser, 336 East Fifth street.
Harold L. VanAlstyne, 434 East Seventh street.
Edward Joseph Schlinger, 255 East Second street.
Anton Carovillano, 218 Muhlenberg place.
John Ellis Bush, 475 West Front street.
Antonio Violafi 826 Richmond street.
Angelo di Cuallo, Cook avenue, Scotch Plains.
Joseph Santa Barbara, 263 Watson avenue.
Joseph Cathald, 100 West Front street.
John J. Nolan, 742 East Seventh street.
George M. Gildersleeve, 435 East Sixh street.
Roy Trimmer, 511 Washington street.
Thomas J. Gleason, 220 Church street.
Harry I. Huff, West Front street.
Frank Petrucelli, 325 East Third street.
John Szcepin, North avenue.

SCHOOLS REOPENING.

The schools of the city and borough will reopen after the summer vacation next Tuesday, September 9. Preparations are being made for a heavy enrollment in the lower grades but it is believed there will be a noticeable falling off in the high school and grammar departments because of war enlistments and activities.

WHO MUST REGISTER

All male persons must register who shall have attained their eighteenth birthday and shall not have attained their forty-sixth birthday on or before September 12.

Early Service for Men Registering Next Week

General Crowder Announces Draft Drawing Will Take Place by October 1 and First Registrants Will Be Sent to Camp Three Weeks Later--Estimated Number of 18 to 46 Year Men in Plainfield District Is 5,000

Announcement comes from General Crowder at Washington today that the big annual drawing from the master list of draft registrants to be made next Thursday will take place probably not later than October 1, and perhaps any time after September 22. Within three weeks after the drawing, the General said, the work of sending men to the camps to fill up army divisions will commence.

In this city, everything is in readiness for the big registration affecting men between the ages of 18 and 46 years. The election board officers serving at the general elections have volunteered their services to aid in the work and City Clerk John J. Carroll has designated the city schools as the places of registration instead of using each regular election district. This will make but nine places to register instead of eighteen, as was at first contemplated.

The Plainfield men can register at any of the following school buildings between the hours of 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. next Thursday: Lincoln School, Berckman and East Second streets; Emerson Avenue School, Emerson avenue; Bryant School, East Sixth street; Evergreen Avenue School, Evergreen avenue; High School, Arlington avenu and West Ninth street; Washington School, Darrow avenue and Essex street; Irving School, West Fourth street and Monroe avenue; Jefferson School, Myrtle avenue and Franklin School, West Fourth street and Arlington avenue, in Fanwood, Scotch Plains and Mountainside, which are included in the Plainfield draft district, the men will present themselves at their usual election polling place.

After the registration, all the registrants have to do is to sit back and wait the coming of their questionnaires. This will be only a short time despite the fact that the number of men in the Plainfield district between the ages of 18 and 46 is placed at about 5,000. In the original registration of men from twenty-one to thirty-one years o afge, the number in the district was 2,950.

Provost Marshal General Crowder issued last night the following statement with the authority of the War Department:

"For the purpose of clearing up uncertainty which seems to exist among some of the older men involved in the extension in the draft ages to include men between 18 and 45, both inclusive, the following statement is made:

"A man is considered to be included within the new age limits unless on or before registration day, September 12, he reached his forty-sixth birthday. If his age is 45 years and 364 days on September 12, he must register.

"The minimum age limit of 18 years, on the other hand, is intended to include any young man, who, on or before September 12, shall have reached his eighteenth birthday."

Regulations for the registration of persons absent from the jurisdiction of their draft boards on registration day have been issued. They place the responsibility on the absentee to send his card, properly made but, to be in the hands of his local board on registration day. Failure to do this will result in arrest, imprisonment for a year and then immediate induction into the army.

To obviate the necessity of these absentees going home to register, the various district draft boards have been supplied with extra cards, and the absentees can go to any one of them and have their cards filled out with the skilled help of board members. The board member or clerk who assists in filling it out will certify to it, and then the absentee must send it to his own district board. He must include with it a stamped and self-addressed envelope in which his local board will return to him his registration certificate.

If the absentee does not know the address of his local draft board, and if he lives in a city of over 30,000, he can address the envelope containing his card to the Mayor of his city; if in a city of less than 30,000 or in the country, to the clerk of the county in which he lives; if in an unorganized county, to the clerk of the county to which the county in which he lives is attached for judicial purposes; and if in the country, but his State is subdivided into townships for administrative purposes, to the clerk of the township.

Impressions of the War as Written By Private Gleason

Expressing the belief that mothers would more gladly give up their sons if they could but see the devastated countries of Europe, Private John Gleason, of Church street, this city, writes interestingly of many things in a letter received this week by his sister, Mrs. Frank Van Nest, also of Church street.

Private Gleason has been in the service since last fall and has been abroad several months as an infantry man. He is a typical American lad, full of enthusiasm and vigor and possessed of an eye that sees and makes permanent pictures of new scenes. These he tells about is his communication, beside making observations that will appeal to all who read them, especially the mothers, whose heart-strings are torn when their boys start out for the big fight in the name of honor and justice.

The young private, in referring to an uncle, who, because of illness, has been discharged from the British navy after four years of active service, speaks of the great work being done by the Allied ships in running down the skulking submarines. With personal mention taken out, Private Gleason's letter is as follows:

Somewhere in France,
August 4, 1918.

Dear May:

I received your letters on the 2nd and was glad to hear from you, as they were the first I got since I have been in France. I am also pleased to find everybody well at home. As this letter leaves me in the best of health and spirits, I cannot kick. I a mnot usrprised to learn that Tom is now to go in the army. Well, it will make either a man or nothing of him, but I have no fear as to the outcome. Up to the present time I have experienced all ends of the game and am better for it. As to mother, she would be able to stand it if she saw these countries (France and England), that I've been in, and saw the things I have seen. She would see and realize what we are fighting for and, what a wonderful country the U. S. A. is along-side of them. I tell you, May, you are living in God's own country. They don't even start to compare with our own fair land.

Speaking about the life it is not as bad as one might imagine. Of course, we are not sleeping on feather beds, but the eats are good and plentiful, and where in Plainfield could you go out every night and listen to a band concert? A regular band of fifty pieces, too, our regimental band.

Speaking of money, I am well supplied at present. The reason is we have been paid two months' pay within the last ten days. Over here the saloons are wide open at certain hours of the day to the soldiers, and as a result the booze shops are doing a business never before thought of. They charge fancy prices for their liquor, too, but as liquor does not appeal to me, I should worry what they charge. You say Uncle John has been discharged from the navy. Well, he deserves it, as does any man who puts in three or four years on the sea which is infested with submarines. When opt on the sea in a warship hunting "subs," you get very little sleep. You are always in danger of getting blown up with a mine or being torpedoed. You don't realize what fine work the English and Americans are doing on the sea until you see them fighting these things. I have had the pleasure to see them work and also to see them fight. It was not very much pleasure at the time. When a submarine pops up within a couple of hundred feet of the boat you are in it is not very funny. Now that we have arrived over here safely, the trip seems like a dream and it was worth a couple of years of my life or any man's life for that matter.

You say mother was worried about the letter that was cut out. I remember that letter. I said something that I should not have said. They are very strict. They won't allow us to say very much. You say the papers are on the way. I have not as yet received any .I don't know whether they are allowed to come across. Find out for sure, and if they are not allowed to come, cut out some interesting parts of the paper and mail them to me.

Hoping you are all well at home, I remain.

Your loving brother,
JOHN.

SERGEANT McCORMICK KILLED.

Sergeant James McCormick, a former Plainfielder, was numbered among the Americans recently killed in action. He was one of the first conductors on the Plainfield Street Railway and was a brother to Henry McCormick, also a former conductor, now manager of a big power plant in England. Sergeant McCormick enlisted from the West Indies, where he was employed by the Government when the war broke out.

Caught in Slacker Raid "Toots" Van Nest's Call for Help Gets Brothers in Same Net

Three Plainfield young men, Harold, Fred and Milton Van Nest, of 239A East Second street, will have occasion to remember for a long time the Department of Justice's slacker raid in Newark this week, as each was caught in the big dragnet thrown out. None of the triot is eligible for draft service but nevertheless they had to spend many hours as prisoners in the Newark armory before their claims were allowed.

The circumstances concerning the arrest of the brothers were quite humorous, the elder of the three drawing the other two into the trouble in an effort to get his own release. Harold, of "Toots" as he is better known, landed in the big net early in the afternoon. He was on his way to New York as driver of a big seven-passenger Cadillac used by the Standard Aero plant in this city, making the trip by way of the "danger zone." Although he is twenty-four years old, "Toots" has only forty-nine inches of stature, an amount so small that an ordinary secret service man would have never noticed him in the seat of the big car. A watchful detective, however, yanked him from his position from behind the wheel and finding that "Toots" had left his classification card at home, consigned him to the temporary jail. Spectators called on the big secret service man to "have a heart" but he remarked that "duty was duty" and insisted that the little Plainfielder who had been legally excused from being a soldier, should be placed among the slacker suspects.

At the armory "Toots" discovered a lot of official sympathizers yet none of them could order his release until his card had been secured. He telephoned his predicament to Plainfield and his father and two brothers started for Newark by automobile after finding the needed classification certificate. This was somewhere around six o'clock and shortly after the rescuing party left this city, an officer in charge at the armory decided that "Toots'" stature would bar him from any army in the world unless the Lilliputians decided to have one and gave him a ticket of admission to the outside world. In his joy, he forgot that his relatives were hurrying to his aid and started home by trolley.

About six-thirty, excited, Father Van Nest and his other two sons drove into Newark as fast as the speed laws allowed. They were taking the shortest route to the armory, when a secret service man held up the flying machine and asked Fred and Milton for their cards. Neither had one as they are not twenty-one years of age, but the officer of the Government would accept no declaration from father or sons. A few minutes later they were bundled into a patrol-wagon and landed as prisoners in the armory from which "Toots" had escaped only a short while before. The only consolation the angry parent got was to go back home and get the birth certificates of the two sons and this he did. It was nearly two o'clock Wednesday morning before he returned to the armory with the necessary evidence to release the two boys who had gotten into trouble through being good Samaritans.

"Toots" offered all kinds of apologies when the two brothers got back home but they declared in the presence of witnesses that he could rot in jail or any other place before they ever make another attempt to get him out of trouble.

OBITUARY.

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. SARAH C. STRINGHAM.

Mrs. Sarah C. Stringham, widow of David Stringham, died yesterday at the Margaret Home on Arlington place, where she had lived for some time. She was eighty-one years old and a native of New York State. The body was sent to her former home in Poughkeepsie where the funeral and interment will take place.

TELL A. BEGUELIN.

Tell A. Beguelin, a resident of Plainfield for many years, and at on etime a member of the Common Council, died Tuesday morning at his home in the Silbert building, 148 East Front street, following an illness of nine weeks with a complication of troubles. The funeral was held at the residence last night, in charge of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church. many relatives and friends attending. Private burial was made today in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Although Mr. Beguelin had lived a rather quiet, almost retired life, in recent years, he enjoyed a very large acquaintance. He came to Plainfield in 1876 from Chauxde-Fond, Switzerland, the place of his birth in 1851 and also the native town of his wife, who survives him. He was a watchmake rby trade and on coming to America established a watch and jewelry business at 70 Nassau street, New York. He became one of the most prominent men in the business down town. His establishment was known to the trade everywhere and was patronized by many Plainfielders from its beginning. Mr. Beguelin was considered an expert in all lines of jewelry but he was especially proficient in his judgment of watches. During all the years that he was in business in New York, Mr. Begnelin became acquainted with hundreds of commuters and he exchanged greetings with them each day up till the time his illness began in June.

In politics Mr. Beguelin was a staunch Democrat and as a leader in this party, he was elected to the Common Council, more than thirty years ago. He served two terms, one of them as president of the body. At that time his home was on East Front street in the residence now occupied by F. R. F. Huntsman. As an official, Mr. Beguelin was faithful in introducing only such ordinances or resolutions as he thought best for the interests of the community. He had taken no active part in civic affairs for man yyears but always kept in touch with the local situation. He was an exceptionally ready conversationalist and being the possessor of a large library, was a master of many subjects. His only fraternal affiliations was with Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men.

Beside his wife, who was Miss Emma Dryer, Mr. Beguelin is survived only by one daughter. Miss Louise Beguelin.

MISS NANNA IDA NIELSON.

The funeral of Miss Nanna Ida Nielson, whose death occurred Monday, after a long illness, was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of her father, Christian Nielson, 1463 East Second street. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, of this city, officiated in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Nielson was a native of Michigan, where she was born in 1880, but had lived in Plainfield for the past twenty years. She was a member of the Park Avenue Baptist church and active in its work until ill health prevented. Beside her father, she is survived by two brothers, Arne Peter Nielson, of Springfield, Mass., and Fred Nielson; of East Second street; also a sister, Mrs. John C. Goble, of East Second street.

Government Fully Prepared to Hunt Down Old and New Slackers

Completion of a nation-wide organization to hunt down those attempting to evade the provisions of the new selective service law was announced this week by the War Department. Besides representatives in every State, the government also will have agents in other countries. While the War Department feels that the great body of Americans between the ages of eighteen and forty-five will register, it is determined that any who seek to dodge their obligations shall not escape. All agents will have their instructions before registration day next Thursday.

An appeal to the women of the nation to help make the registration a success was issued Tuesday by the women's committee of the Council of National Defense through Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, its chairman. Every woman, said Dr. Shaw, is equally in honor bound to inspire, encourage and urg ethe men of her family to perform their patriotic duty."

In announcing the War Department's intention to round up all slackers, Provost Marshal General Crowder said it is estimated that between 20,000 and 25,000 men subject to the first selective service law have been arrested since June 5, 1917, for failing to register. Cases have been prepared against those who fled to Mexico and expatriation is the least of the penalties awaiting them when they attempt to return, either during or after the war. Several colonies of these slackers have been formed in Mexico, and the names of those in them are known to the Government. Canada ceased to be a haven after the adoption of the British-American treaty.

"Already, with the various and innumerable factors now at the disposal of the government," said General Crowder, "the ways of the slacker under the original draft law have become increasingly hard. It is estimated that between 20,000 and 25,000 have been rounded up since June 5, 1917. The names of others not yet apprehended, because of absence from the country, are in possession of the government, and prosecution faces any one of them who, having fled the country to escape the draft, attempts to return. Under the terms of the law police officials in all the States, counties and cities throughout the country are required to co-operate with the Department of Justice and other federal agencies in enforcing the provisions of the act. Besides these agencies, however, are scores upon scores of private organizations, national or local in scope, that have been set up by patriotic citizens to ferret out the men who would shirk the call of their country.

"For the man who has failed to register and for the man who has refused to obey or has ignored the orders of local boards, life is becoming increasingly miserable. The Department of Justice has on file the names of 3,000 slackers who fled to Mexico before June 5, 1917, to escape registration. Against each one of them a complete case has been prepared, so that immediate prosecution can be undertaken the moment the man attempts to recross the border, whether the attempt is made during the war or afterward. Expatriation is the least of the penalties awaiting him. The present whereabouts of these slackers in Mexico is equally well known to the department, and close watch is kept on the individual movements of all of them.

"Despite the fact that the majority of these men are from wealthy families in the United States, who keep them supplied more or less liberally with funds, their lot is one of constant harassment. In Mexico City, for example, where the more wealthy ones have established a sort of colony, they are ostracized completely, not only by other Americans resident in the city who are above draft age, but by the natives as well. They are constantly subjected to insults and taunts as they pass through the streets.

"The status of those less well equipped with funds is in many instances desperate. Native and foreign business, houses alike refuse them employment At Guanajuato, for example, not only was a crowd of these slackers applying for work at the mines refused employment, in spite of a labor shortage, but a committee of Americans living there is reported to have waited on them with a demand that they leave the town within a specified number of hours. Numbers of these slackers have sought peace in camps in isolated sections among the mountains. others have been compelled to accept the lowest kind of menial labor on ranches, despised even by the peons with whom they work.

"Just as the government has the names of these men, so it has the names of those who fled to Canada to escape registration. With the going into effect of the British-America nreciprocal draft treaty, these men must either face conscription into the Canadian army or return to the United States to face imprisonment and ultimate induction into the service.

"Women in all communities, particularly those having relatives who have gone to the front, have been particularly helful to the government in ferreting out young men who failed to register. Tips from such women have time and again resulted in round-ups of slackers.

"Employers in various sections of the country are beginning to make it a requirement for all applicants for positions, who are of draft age, to present their registration cards and classification cards before giving them employment.

"The registrant's protection is to have with him at all times his registration cards until he has been classified, and thereafter his final classification card. Failure to carry these credentials will render him liable to arrest at any time."

Miss Mable Barnshaw returned home Monday night, after a short stay with her cousin. Miss Margaret Hammil, of West Eighth street.

Dr. A. H. Dundon, of Somerset street, the borough, reurned home after a few days' stay at Barnegat.

Miss Mary Skiff, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., spent the past week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCue, of West Fourth street.

Dr. Maxson Told of Schools' Part in Winning the War

The part of the public schools in the paramount task of winning the war, and the part the schools must take providing for the future welfare of the country are the chief topics considered by Commissioner Calvin N. Kendall in his annual letter to Dr. Henry M. Maxson and other school officials and teachers of New Jersey. He congratulates the schools upon what has already been accomplished and urges increased devotion in the future.

In speaking of the work done in the schools toward the carrying on of various war activities, Dr. Kendall said that the efforts to further the Red Cross drive, war gardens, farm work, the succor of French and Belgian children, thrift stamps and the conservation of food have called out new efforts on the part of both teachers and pupils. All far-sighted teachers, he said, realize that the first purpose of the schools is the privilege of making whatever contributions they can to the winning of the war. War work, Dr. Kendall declared, has given much vitality to the schools and has given motive, interest and purpose.

"Much of the English work in the schools," he said, "should center about the war activities of the school and the community. Here is a fine opportunity to make the English work more vital, a quality which it often lacks. There can be no better training in the use of clear, concise English than in the four-minute speeches. In some schools there have been short essay contests on such subjects as "Why Sugar Is Scarce," and "How I Earned and Saved Money to Buy Thrift Stamps," the judges being chosen from men and women in the neighborhood.

"It is nothing new to say that interest in the war should be capitalized to make geography and history interesting. The map of Europe should be in constant evidence. The location of belligerent countries and neutral nations, with their respective resources, should be known o pupils. Much of the conventional geography can be laid aside for the time being, for larger and more timely values."

Protest Against High Priced Tomatoes

Declaring a charge of ten or even eight cents a pound for tomatoes by dealers who buy them for three cents is an offense against the people of the State, the Bureau of Markets of the State Department of Agriculture, in its market news service bulletin this week, urges a further campaign of price publicity by newspapers, local organizations and patriotic persons in general.

"Many letters have been received from the campaign started last week," says the bulletin. "Instances of retail prices of from five to ten cents per pound were reported. A sixteen-quart basket of tomatoes contains twenty-eight pounds. Even in some of the northern counties seventy-five cents is the top price at wholesale for extra fancy stock. The average price to the store keepers in the large cities in Essex and Hudson counties is between two and three cents per pound. At four or five cents a pound dealers could afford to handle them. Consumers should remember, however, that tomatoes do not grow all perfect and that where they are fastidious in selecting only perfect specimens, the dealer must be paid for the poorer looking ones which are thrown aside. Ten or even eight cents a pound for tomatoes for dealers who buy them for three cents is an offense against the people of this State and should not be tolerated.

"The woman's committee of the Council of National Defense has recognized the importance of profit cutting in this matter of increasing the immediate consumption of tomatoes, and without a doubt the effect of their interest will be felt within a day or two.

"Consumers are urged to demand not over fifty per cent. profit on tomatoes in less than basket lots and not over twenty-five per cent. profit in basket lots."

Pointing out the value of tomatoes as an element of diet, the bulletin says the United States Government has adopted canned tomatoes as its safeguard against digestive ailments, suc has scurvy, in the army and navy. Since canning factories cannot use all the present supply and the demand in the cities for immediate consumption is disappointing, the bulletin declares, many tons of tomatoes are going to waste each day in the South Jersey fields. Every family is urged to buy at least a sixteen quart basket.

Hasting's Big Show, A Riot of Comedy Music and Color

Bright, snappy, colorful, with abundance of catchy music, enlivening dances, and a succession of laughgable comic scenes, fittingly describes the performance of the "Hastings" Big Show, which will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday, afternoon and night. No organization on the Columbia Amusement Company's circuit shows such marked advance in burlesque as does the combination controlled by Harry Hastings, and it is due to his long experience in the amusement field, and unspairing expense that he has gotten up an entertainment in which there is so much to please both the eye and ear. In a sartorial way, the costumes and trappings are on a par with the more pretentious Broadway successes, the frequent changes of harmoniously blended dresses, each one cut more bizarre than the other, being noteworthy. And when it comes to dancing, groupings, and ensembles and classy finales, the originator must be credited with an ability for getting the best effects out of graceful, ingenuous and sprightly combinations. But all of this would prove unsatisfactory to the lover of burlesque unless plenty of scope is given to laugh over absurb and comic episodes, witty savings and ridiculous situations. With Dan Coleman, long popular ni vaudeville, and until recently a star in musical comedy, this demand is fully met. Mr. Coleman, who appears in the two burlesques, is droll and unctious and he is resourceful in introducing new "Business" that keeps the risibilities of the auditon excited throughout the performance. He is one of our few comedians who can exploit ridiculous humon without appearing silly, and back of all his work, the keen observer will recognize that he is presenting a fine piece of character study. His mannerisms accentuate his humor. Frank Mallahan proves a good foil to his style and Phil Peters plays German characters with unction. Miss Esther Higbee, who leads the female contingent as a prima donna, is dashing, good to look upon and possesses a keen perception of the true spirit of burlesque. No woman in this field of amusement displays more handsome costumes or more of a variety than does Miss Babe Burnett. She is full of bounce and nerve and is a fine character comedienne. She is versatile, a good dancer and singer. Alma Bauer is demure in action, a sweet singer, and a capital actress. The chorus of two dozen is comely, gingerly and sprightly in action.

DAN COLEMAN, WITH HARRY HASTINGS' BIG SHOW, AT THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18th.

Returned Soldier Relates Experiences At the Plainfield

True stories of the great war and songs the soldiers sing were heard at the Plainfield Theatre, yesterday afternoon and last night, when Sergeant-Major Bissett, just back from the trenches, appeared on the program to tell of his experiences over there. His introduction proved a big surprise to the patrons of the house, but it was one that was genuinely appreciated and not to be forgotten soon, as are many of the theatrical offerings of the day. It is probable that crowded houses will be the rule during the remainder of Sergeant-Major Bissett's stay.

Other enjoyable features on the bill opening yesterday for the last half of the week are Francis Ford's martal masterpiece of film production, "Berlin via America," and strong vaudeville numbers. The latter include Tina Midgets; comedienne; Harry LeCoy, juggler extraordinary, and the Anita Bush Trio of colored singers.

Francis Ford directed the masterly production of "Berlin via America" and takes the part of "Phil Kelly," the leading role, himself. Supporting his is Edna Emerson as an American girl doing her bit, and the action of the story reveals a young American's punishment of the Huns who destroyed the homes of French people and assaulted all who came to worship at the shrine of what was once their abiding place.

Next Monday and Wednesday Manager Shannon will offer as the feature of a combination program of photo-plays and vaudeville, Mary MacLaren, the American Beauty of the screen, in the Universal attraction, "Bread," direct from a successful engagement at the Broadway Theatre, New York. "Bread" is a big vital story of a young girl's struggle between hunger and honor. A great picture made still greater by Mary MacLaren's beauty and talent.

Jury Trial for Alleged Gamblers

Sitting in the city court, Tuesday, Judge William G. DeMeza granted the request of Harry Merstrick and four other men at Merstrick's home on Liberty street recently, to have a jury trial of the charge against them. Tuesday, September 17, was fixed as the date for the proceedings.

The case has excited considerable attention from the fact that the police charged Merstrick with keeping a disorderly house by permitting gambling to go on at the premises, but which is vigorously denied by the former and the four men arrested at his home following the police raid. It is alleged by the defendants that there was no gambling going on at the house at the time they were arrested and that the only "evidence" the police secured was a pack of cards found in a bureau draw. Merstrick and his companions have engaged counsel and proposed to fight the charge to a bitter finish. Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed will represent the city at the trial.

NEW TRAFFIC RULES NOW IN EFFECT.

The change in traffic regulations for the business section of the city went into effect Wednesday, on order from Mayor Calkins and members of the police department are now watching the result for further action in the near future.

The change permits parking on Front street and Park avenue for thirty minutes instead of twenty minutes as heretofore. The signs will be changed as soon as possible, but the change is immediately effective.

Vehicles will also be permitted to park on Front street after 7 o'clock p. m. without limit as to time, except on Saturday evenings. This is for the benefit of theatre goers. The traffic posts will be moved away from the curb at 7 p. m. every night except Saturdays, thus removing the prohibitive sign; and will be replaced on the curb in the morning.

It is expected that these changes will lessen the parking on Madison avenue and Park avenue, where the streets are narrow, and also lessen the disturbance complained about by people living on Madison avenue. If not, further restrictions may be necessary. Mayor Calkins said this morning that he hoped the public would be as patient as possible while the problem is being worked out. "We are trying," he said, "to be fair to everybody—householders, business men, and the travelling public. It is not so easy as it looks, and we would be glad to have suggestions from anybody. In the end we may succeed in a fairly equitable disposition of the matter."

Mrs. Mary S. DeNise and granddaughters, the Misses Hazel and Heren DeNise, of 315 West Front street, returned yesterday after a two weeks' stay at Keansburg.

ONCE AGAIN THE HOO-DOO NOTT.

The old adage about throwing good money after bad is beginning to become an absolute reality in the case of the city's piece of hoo-doo fire apparatus, a Nott engine located at headquarters. Purchased originally at a cost of $8,500, it began gobbling up loose change almost from the day it was put in service without giving satisfactory return on any but one occasion. This was when it managed to chug its way through one fire at Netherwood, but never after that was it a factor in fighting flames. Most of the time it stood as an eye-sore and a source of worriment to the members of the department who sought to make it pay for its keep if nothing else.

Last winter the engine gave out completely, but an expert who looked it over said it could be made worth while if it was given a new motor. His advice was followed out to the tune of about $3,000 divided between the needed machinery and the cost of installing it. Everybody was happy and everybody was glad until three weeks ago, when a representative of the Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters came to Plainfield to see the engine go through an official test. Rumor has it that the try-out as conducted on the Clinton avenue bridge over Greenbrook was a dismal failure and despite the attempts of the firemen to make the hoo-doo work properly, it got as cranky as a low-down Missouri mule. Finally the insurance man told the officer in charge to take the Nott back home before it kicked itself all to pieces as the pump roller chained bearings gave evidence of uneasiness. So far, the underwriters have charitably refrained from passing judgment on the Nott either one way or the other.

Tuesday afternoon the engine was coaxed into answering an alarm for a fire at the Berfelden mills on Washington avenue. It reached there all right, but when it came time to go home there was nothing doing. An expert garage man called into action after the balky vehicle had been towed back to its stall said that it needed a new magneto costing about $125. This magneto, it is said, will clear up the trouble, but how a magneto can overcome a bad pump chain is more than the average automobile expert can figure out. Maybe it will and maybe it won't, but at any rate the man in the street who was warned as a youngster not to go throw good money after bad, is wondering if it will be advisable to spend any more coin on a decrepit engine that has cost more than $12,000 in a little over four years.

SLACKERS NOT NUMEROUS HERE.

In the midst of the big slacker raids being conducted in the metropolitan district and other parts of the country, Plainfield may well congratulate itself that its shirkers at home are few and far between. Her young citizenship responded nobly to the registration call last year and only one or two cases of shirking have since been discovered. These were dealt with in the summary fashion prescribed by law and further search by the police has failed to find any man between the age of twenty-one and thirty-six evading his bounden duty.

Next week there comes another registration and the male citizens from eighteen, to forty-five will not be found wanting. Each and every one will not only present himself at the registration places but will also be ready when the call comes to don a uniform and proceed to the camp where they will receive the necessary military training fitting them for work in Pershing's rapidly growing army. There is much to do overseas and the men of Plainfield know it as well as the government authorities at Washington who are planning the rapid overthrow of the invading Hun.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Watchung bore the name of "Washingtonville?"

When George L. Fox drew many Plainfielders to New York to see his famous interpretation of "Humpty-Dumpty?"

When you worked yourself half to death helping father turn the ice cream freezer on his promise to give you the dasher?

When mother took you by the hand and led you to school for the first time in your promising young life?

When someone impelled by genuine patriotic motives started a movemnt to erect a monument at the Watchung-Crescent avenue triangle in honor of the Plainfield boys giving up their lives in the Civil War, but which, sad to relate, has never been carried out?

When father kept you working around the yard on Saturday and the gang came along holding up crossed fingers which de-coded meant: "We are bound for the swimming hole; sneak out the first chance you get?"

Democrats File No Petitions

Contrary to expectations the Democrats of the city filed no petitions for local offices as the time limit expired Wednesday night. It was the general impression that a candidate for Mayor or Common Council would be introduced at the last moment but as none appeared at 10 o'clock, the anxious ones realized there was nothing doing in the Jeffersonian ranks.

Most important among the Republican petitions for candidacy at the primaries as filed are those of Mayor Calkins for re-election and former Mayor George W. V. Moy as an aspirant for the Mayoralty chair, which he once occupied. This will be the main contest locally at the primaries on September 24. The only other contest arises in the Fourth ward, where two candidates filed petitions for councilman to succeed Francis J. Blatz, the present president of the Council who has demonstrated by his failure to file a petition that he does not care to be returned. The claimants for his place are Arthur E. Force, the well-known department store proprietor, and Irving Kunzman, the attorney. James A. Maynard also file ad petition as Republican candidate in the Fourth ward, to fill the unexpired term of Councilman Charles C. Graves, who recently removed to the Third ward, and was appointed at large to succeed Leslie R. Fort.

Tax Collector William R. Townsend will be unopposed in his candidacy for re-nomination as tax collector and the other petitions filed beside his are the following:

Councilman for the First ward, Nelson Y. Hull, to succeed Theodore J. Martin; councilman for the Second ward, Marion S. Ackerman, to succeed himself; councilman for the Second ward, Arthur Lovell, to fill the unexpired term of John Dahl; councilman for the Third ward, G. Herbert Condict, to succeed himself.

PETER HENNESSEY DIED IN ELIZABETH HOSPITAL.

Peter Hennessey, a former well-known local resident, died in the Elizabeth General Hospital, yesterday afternoon, after an illness of two years, resulting from an injury received while at work as foreman of a construction gang on the New Jersey Central. The funeral will be held in St. Joseph's church, the borough, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Hennessey lived for a long time on Duer street, the borough, and later in the Laing apartments on West Second street, opposite the Plainfield Theatre. Two years ago he removed to El Mora in order to live nearer his daughter, Miss Winifred Hennessey, who entered an Elizabeth hospital as a pupil nurse. The family was very well known here partly because the members were active in the work of St. Joseph's parish.

Beside Miss Winifred Hennessey, Mr. Hennessey leaves one other daughter, Mrs. Stanley Godfrey, who resided with him at El Mora.

George Stewart Hit by McAdoo's Order

Director General McAdoo's recent order that railroad men shall not engage in politics has caused changes in Elizabeth's political circles. One of those hardest hit is George J. Stewart, chairman of the Republican city committee and a member for twenty years of the Republican county committee, who has resigned both positions and may be compelled to tender his resignation as a member of the Union County Board of Elections.

Stewart is conductor on a Pennsylvania express train running from New York to Harrisburg. His action came as a shock to those interested in county politics. In an effort to learn his real status, Mr. Stewart will have a representative appear before Director General McAdoo and seek to learn whether he must sever his connections with the elections board. Judge Carlton B. Pierce, who recently recommended to Governor Edge that Stewart be reappointed, believes that Stewart's position is safe.

The order also may affect Arthur L. Beyer, one of the two Democratic candidates for the Mayoralty nomination. Beyer is a brakeman on the Central Railroad, and entered the campaign as the "workingman's candidate." He filed his petition Wednesday and as yet has said nothing about McAdob's order.

Herbert L. Pascoe, Republican candidate for the Republican city committee in the Twelfth ward, also must resign as a chief clerk for the Pennsylvania Railroad or relinquish his fight for election to the committee, it is said. Another affected is George Hoffman, member of the Board of Elections, Second district, Fourth ward. He is a clerk on the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Urgent Demand for Refugee Garments

At the Red Cross headquarters on Watchung avenue and in the auxiliary work rooms there are a great many garments to be made. If everyone who reads this notice will divide up her time, and allot a certain number of hours a week to Red Cross work, there would be no difficulty in caring for the requisition.

War is an emergency. It is a time of constantly changing needs and constantly changing work for those who must see that the comfort and demands of the men at the front and those behind the lines are cared for. It is the duty of every citizen in the country to aid in some way this work of relief.

The work of the Red Cross is an amergency work; at one time the demand is for socks, again for garments or for dressings, again for comfort kits. Just now the need for garments, both hospital and for the refugees, is very great.

The American Red Cross has assumed the responsibility of clothing these refugees. In the condition under which they live, their clothing wears out very rapidly, and unless we fulfill our agreement they have no one to whom to turn for assistance. The civilian population of the United States should be ready and willing to aid the civilians of the Allied countries, quite as much as they are willing to aid the Army and Navy. The presentation of a Red Cross garment bearing a Red Cross label clearly demonstrates to these refugees America's interest, in their welfare and her anxiety to be of assistance to them. This fact as much as anything else has helped to keep up the morale of the civilians, which in turn is reflected in the morale of their armies.

The Red Cross plan of work for the next few months will include a large number of refugee and hospital garments, and in response to a request from Division Headquarters to increase the facilities for doing this work, the executive committee at Chapter Headquarters, 1107 Watchung avenue, has made plans to enlarge the sewing department. The sewing department will be closed Monday and Tuesday, the ninth and tenth, in order that this change may be made, and will be ready for work on Wednesday, the eleventh. Show your patriotism! The boys are answering the call to the Colors. It is just as urgent for you to answer the call to the Red Cross sewing rooms.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The Second District Draft Board at Newark, yesterday, refused the request of James M. McCarthy, of East Sixth street, to be placed in a deferred class and moved him up to Class 1-A. McCarthy is the son of the late William McCarthy, and his widowed mother has one other son in the army.

At a meeting of captains and workers, held in the campaign headquarters in the Babcock building, last night, all arrangements were completed for the drive to be held in this city in behalf of the Jewish War Relief Fund. Plainfield's quota is to be $20,000 and Chairman William Newcorn believes that amount will be raised during the alloted period from September 8 to 18.

Clifford A. Braider, of Putnam avenue, was yesterday designated by the New York Y. M. C. A. headquarters staff to be in readiness for early departure overseas as a Y. M. C. A. worker. Mr. Braider resigned his position as organist at the First M. E. church and gave up all other private affairs in order to do his bit for the soldier boys in France.

Commencing Saturday night, September 21, Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will conduct a series of Saturday night dances in its recreation rooms on East Front street.

Bryce Taylor, a member of the staff of A. M. Runyon's undertaking establishment, left yesterday for Syracuse, N. Y., to enter the military training barracks as a selective from New York. Although a resident of Plainfield but a comparatively short time, Mr. Taylor had a host of friends locally, and was a member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks.

First Lieut. Edmund G. Chamberlain, of San Antonio, Tex., who has been cited for the Victoria Cross and the Congressional Medal of Honor for his achievements as an aviator, is a nephew of Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of East Seventh street, this city. The exploit took place July 28 over the English battle front, when, without permission, Lieut. Chamberlain engaged twelve German aeroplanes, destroyed five, damaged two, and with his own machine damaged, swept down and scattered a detachment of German soldiers, captured one and carried a wounded French officer to safety. The aviator is twenty-eight years old and a graduate of Princeton. His grandfather was Dr. Fidelio Gillett, a physician here many years ago. His mother was Miss Addie Gillett, a pupil in the Plainfield High School during her girlhood.

Heeding a request of the postmaster-general, the New York Telephone Company has announced that hereafter it will install no extensions or further telephone service than what is absolutely necessary. A general order to this effect has been sent broadcast through the country.

Thomas Wheeler, of this city, has been named by Governor Edge to be one of the New Jersey delegates at the game and fish convention in New York city on September 12 and 13.

The failure of an automatic rheostat to shut off the electric power at the Berfelden Mills on Washington avenue caused a $300 fire Tuesday afternoon. The power from the outside had been shut off during the afternoon, but unknown to the engineer the rheostat did not drop to its regular position. When the current was turned on by the Public Serviee at 4:30 there was enough current passing through the wire to start ignition and a blaze resulted. The fire department put the flames out with chemicals after responding to an alarm from box 42. Most of the damage was done to the rheostat and the electric wire. Messrs. Ryder & Graves placed men at work immediately after the fire was out and by working all night, placed everything in condition for the mill to resume operations Wednesday morning.

William B. Leggett and Harold O. Voorhis, of this city, have received second lieutenants commissions in the field artillery of the central officers' training school at Camp Taylor, Ky.

An electric iron left standing on an ironing board at the home of H. H. Smith at 710 Richmond street, disturbed the serenity of that neighborhood Sunday afternoon. The electric current started a fire, someone saw smoke pouring through a window and in a few minutes the fire department was on the scene. There was nothing to do at the Smith house as the offending iron and board had previously been removed, but the excitement was appreciated by the small boys suffering from the Sabbath quietude.

Judge DeMeza evidently realized the unward tendency of prices, Tuesday morning, and big fines were the result. Among them was one of twenty dollars imposed on Irving Cassett, colored, who, in company with Lena Upsher, was arraigned for disorderly conduct. The Upsher woman was fined $5. Anther fine of twenty dollars was imposed on James Rogers, colored, for stealing a pocketbook containing $16 from Albert Cook, while fines of $10 each were directed against Steve Rosko, of West Third street, and Andrew Gaydos, of Lyman place, arrested for fighting on West Third street. All five persons handed over the amounts in preference to going to jail.

How the Government Plans to Raise $8,012,792,000 for War Purposes

Under the new war revenue bill, favorably reported to the House, Tuesday, by the ways and means committss, the American people will pay in taxes approximately $8,012,792,000 of this year's estimated expenditure of $24,000,000,000. The remainder of nearly $16,000,000,000 will be left to posterity in the form of bonds.

Most taxes provided in present revenue measures were substantially increased and new items were added, including many luxuries and a war profits tax recommended by President Wilson. Nearly $5,500,000,000 of the taxes will come from excess and war profits and individual and corporation incomes.

The committee left no stone unturned in its effort to seek out all incomes for taxation, and even persons below the legal age of twenty-one years whose income this year exceeds the exemptions of $1,000 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons must make returns. With the enormous increases in salaries in certain lines since the war began and the demand for workers even below the legal age, members of the committee are satisfied that a large yield will come from salaries of persons under twenty-one, both men and women.

In presenting the bill, Chairman Kitchin read a detailed committee report explaining each section of the bill and also the general policy of the committee in framing the measure and the reasons for accepting for this year, at least, Secretary McAdoo's recommendation that one-third of the war cost be met with taxation. No fixed policy along this line could be made, the committee said, because of changing conditions from year to year.

The largest source of estimated revenue is from taxes on excess profits, including war profits—$3,100,000,—and the next is from taxes on incomes—$1,482,186,000 from individuals and $828,000,000 from corporations.

The income tax exemptions under the new bill are the same as under the old—$1,000 for single persons and $2,000 for married persons, with $200 additional allowed for each dependent child under eighteen years of age. An exemption of $200 for each dependent incapable of self-support because of mental or physical disability also is allowed.

The estimated yield from sources other than incomes and excess and war profits include:

Transportation: Freight, $75,000,000; express, $20,000,000; passenger fares, $60,000,000; seats and berths, $5,000,000; oil by pipe lines, $4,550,000.

Telegraph and telephone messages, $16,000,000; insurance, $12,000,000; admissions (theatres, circuses, etc.), $100,000,000; club dues, $9,000,000.

Excise taxes: Automobiles, etc., $123,750,000; jewelry, sporting goods, etc., $30,000,000; other taxes on luxuries at ten per cent., $88,760,000; other taxes on luxuries (apparel, etc., above certain prescribed prices), at 20 per cent., $181,095,000.

Gasolene, $40,000,000; yachts and pleasure boats, $1,000,000.

Beverages (liquors and soft drinks), $1,137,600,000; stamp taxes, $32,000,000; tobacco, cigars, $61,364,000; cigarettes, $165,240,000; tobacco, $104,000,000; snuff, $9,100,000; papers and tubes, $1,500,000.

Special taxes: Capital stock, $50,000,000; brokers, $1,765,000; theatres, etc., $2,143,000; mail order sales, $5,000,000; bowling alleys, billiard and pool tables, $2,200,000; shooting galleries, $400,000; riding academies, $50,000; business license tax, $10,000,000; manufacturers of tobacco, $69,000; manufacturers of cigars, $850,000; manufacturers of cigarettes, $240,000; use of automobiles and motorcycles, $72,920,000.

The report explains the provisions of the bill in detail. It said the committee determined what proportion of the cast of the war this year should be financed by taxation and by bonds, not from previous experience, as there was no analogy in history, but upon thorough consideration of the effect on the morale of the people, upon price inflation, upon production, and upon relative ability of the people to pay taxes now and after the war.

The committee explained that it had decided upon the raising of $8,000,000,000 by taxation because it had accepted as a sound fiscal policy the recommendation of Secretary McAdoo that one-third of the government's estimate expenditures of $24,000,000,000 this year be obtained from this source and the remaining two-thirds by bond.

"While the committee," the report added, "makes this recommendation for the current year, it realizes that no fixed policy as to relation of taxes to bonds for the future can be determined at this time and that the amount that should be raised by taxation in any given year must necessarily be determined after due consideration is given business and financial conditions existing in such year. The committee further adopted the policy that so far as practicable the $8,000,000,000 should be raised from taxes on incomes, excess and war profits, and luxuries and semi-luxuries. The committee has endeavored to distribute equitably the new tax burden and to levy the taxes in such a way that the burden should be met by those most able to pay. It has endeavored to wipe out all inequalities in the operation of existing la wand recommends the repeal of the major portions of the revenue acts of 1916 and 1917 in order that the existing internal revenue laws so far as deemed practicable will be in one act and therefore more readily accessible to the taxpayer."

The report said that the bill levied on all citizens or residents of the United States a normal tax of twelve per cent. upon the amount of income in excess of exemptions, except that on the first $4,000 of the taxable amount the rate shall be six per cent. The measure also increases the sur-taxes all along the line. The advances by grades compared with the percentage under existing law are: $5,000 to $7,500 incomes, increased from 1 to 2 per cent.; $7,500 to $10,000, from 2 to 3 per cent.; $10,000 to $12,500, from 3 to 7 per cent.; $12,500 to $15,000, from 4 to 7 per cent.; $15,000 to $20,000, from 5 to 10 per cent.; $20,000 to $30,000, from 8 to 15 per cent.; $30,000 to $40,000, from 8 to 20 per cent.; $40,000 to $50,000, from 12 to 25 per cent.; $50,000 to $60,000, from 12 to 32 per cent.; $60,000 to $70,000, from 17 to 38 per cent.; $70,000 to $80,000, from 17 to 42 per cent.; $80,000 to $90,000, from 22 to 46 per cent.; $90,000 to $100,000, from 22 to 48 per cent.; $100,000 to $150,000, from 27 to 50 per cent.; $150,000 to $200,000, from 31 to 50 per cent.; $200,000 to $250,000, from 37 to 52 per cent.; $250,000 to $300,000, from 42 to 55 per cent. The rate continues to increase, but on incomes of over $5,000,0000 the increase is only from 63 per cent. under the present bill to 65 per cent.

The bill levies a corporation tax of eighteen per cent. upon the amount of the net income in excess of the credits allowed, but provides that the rate shall be twelve per cent. upon so much of this amount as does not exceed the dividends paid during the taxable year plus the amount paid during the taxable year out of the earning or profits in discharge of bonds and other interest-bearing obligations outstanding prior to the begining of that year.

This provision was under fire in the committee, but without change. Under it a corporation having $100,000 net income in excess of its credits which pays out during the year $50,000 in dividends and discharges $10,000 worth of bonds would then be taxed twelve per cent. on $60,000 and eighteen per cent. on $40,000. The committee believes that this rebate of six per cent. on distributed profits will stimulate the payment of dividends which will be subject to sur-tax in the hands of the stockholders. The bill makes no change in the corporations exempt from income tax.

Partnerships are not liable to income tax but each partner will pay his income tax upon his share of the partnership profits whether distributed or not.

The bill applies the war and excess profits taxes to corporations only. Provision is made to protect corporations whose invested capital is less than $50,000 and those corporations in which invested capital is not a material producing factor.

Increases also were made in the estate tax which will range from three per cent. to forty per cent. The increases as compared with the present bill follow: Not exceeding $50,000 from 2 to 3 per cent.; $50,000 to $150,000 four to six; $150,000 to $250,000, six to nine; $250,000 to $450,000, nine to twelve; $450,000 to $1,000,000, ten to fifteen; $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, twelve to eighteen; $2,000,000 to $3,000,000, fourteen to twenty-one; $3,000,000 to $4,000,000, sixteen to twenty-four; $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, eighteen to twenty-seven; $5,000,000 to $8,000,000, twenty to thirty; $8,000,000 to $10,000,000, twenty-two to thirty-five; and exceeding $10,000,00, twenty-five to forty.

The transportation and insurance taxes already made public include a new tax of ten per cent. upon the amount paid to any telegraph or telephone company for any special leased wire or talking circuit, but does not apply to collection and dissemination of news through the public press or in the conduct by a common carrier or telegraph or telephone company of its business as such.

There is no reference to the imminence of prohibition legislation in what the report said about the beverage tax. Some new administrative provisions are imposed upon liquor including elimination of every exemption such as the present law provision that retail liquor dealers may hold fifty gallons of distilled spirits and twenty-five gallons of wines free from the floor tax.

The tobacco rates already made public, the report said, are fixed at approximately the highest revenue producing rates that can safely be levied without greatly reduced consumption of tobacco and consequent reduction in revenue.

So far as practicable the committee has placed the excise taxes upon the manufacturer, producer or importer. In the second group of articles regarded as a luxury when sold over a fixed price, the committee believed that these taxes should be paid by the consumer and collected by the retailer and by him returned to the government.

Cities to Continue Fare Raise Fight

"No compromise" was the attitude taken Wednesday by the executive committee of the New Jersey League of Municipalities which met at the mayor's office in Newark to discuss the developments of the trolley fare controversy resulting from the hearing before the utility board last week and which was continued yesterday.

George L. Record made a formal report to the committee setting forth that President McCarter testified before the utility board that, as a result of the wage increase ordered by the War Labor Board it would be necessary for the trolley company to find an additional revenue of $830,000 between September 15 and January 1, and that the increase in wages for a year would call for an additional revenue of $1,800,000.

Mr. Record asked for directions from the committee and he was authorized to continue the fight; first, on the ground that the franchise contracts with municipalities were binding and could not be broken without the consent of both parties to the contract; and, second, that if a new rate were to be made it must be base don the valuation of the property.

Seventeen Election Officers Quit Places

Judge Carlton B. Pierce, in conference with the Union County Board of Elections, Wednesday, accepted the resignations of seventeen election officers in various parts of the county, after he had had carefully explained to him the reasons for their being unable to serve. He will announce the appointments to fill the vacancies on Friday.

The fact that the nation is at war is the paramount cause for most of the retirements. A number have enlisted and others have been drafted, while a few have removed from their districts. One has died.

The boards all over the county met Wednesday to organise and make arrangements for the first registration day on September 18. There is considerable confusion caused by the many changes in personnel and the new laws. The county board has not yet been able to procure copies of the election laws for the smaller boards.

The resignations that were accepted were as follows:

Democrats—Thomas P. Crane, New Providence; James J. McCann, Third ward, First district, Plainfield, a candidate for office; Walter J. Davis, Second district, Roselle, army; Thomas E. Powers, Fifth ward, Fourth district, Elizabeth, navy; John J. Clifford, First ward, Second district, Summit, drafted; Neil Trimble, Fifth ward, Fourth district, Elizabeth, drafted, and James J. McCaffery, Second ward, First district, Plainfield, ill.

Republicans—George P. Johnson and William H. Roll, Linden township, removed; Thomas Baird, Second ward, First district, Summit, removed; Clarence E. Hadden, Third ward, Fourth district, Plainfield, removed; John D. Eldridge, Second ward, Second district, Elizabeth, war work; Charles Dallart, Kenilworth, died; William Reed, Second ward, Third district, Elizabeth, removed; Arthur R. Day, Fourth ward, First district, Plainfield, drafted; V. A. Hungerford, Second district, Cranford, drafted, and William L. A. Roehney, First ward, Third district, war work.

New Men at Dix to Relieve Those Fit For Foreign Duty

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

The first of the 5,000 limited service men who began arriving at Camp Dix, Tuesday, from New Jersey and Delaware will be assigned to the 153d Depot Brigade to relieve all special duty and permanent training men who have been found physically fit for overseas duty. The Pennsylvania limited service contingent, the first to be sent to Dix fro mthat State, will begin arriving today.

Under a new ruling of the War Department all men in the depot brigade who are physically fit and have been stationed with that organization for six months must be transferred to some overseas branch of the service. Nearly all these men are non-commissioned officers, who have been retained to instruct the newly arrived men. This was necessary in order that no time might be lost in getting them into shape. Now it is the plan to have these limited service men trained for this work and they can remain at Dix as instructors.

Orders have been issued granting furloughs to Hebrew soldiers from noon today to Monday morning and again from noon September 14, to the morning of September 17, to allow them to observe the holy days of their faith. Arrangements will also be made to have services in camp for men unable to make the trip to their homes.

To replace coast artillerymen who are being sent overseas to man the heavy field guns, several details have been transferred from Dix to coast artillery units for training at handling coast defense weapons.

Mounted men from the remount station took place Monday in the Labor Day celebration at Mooresstown. The feature was a mimic battle staged by the State militia and a demonstration of trick riding by the Dix men. The band of the 109th Engineers was heard for the first time.

A detail of seventy-six enlisted men has been transferred to the quartermaster corps training school at Camp Johnston, Fla. The successful candidates will be given commissions in that branch of the service.

Sergeant C. A. Barrett, of Passaic, who has been attached to the base hospital, has received word of his promotion to a second lieutenancy in the sanitary corps. He has been transferred to Battle Creek, Mich.

ELIZABETH PLANTS LOAN MEN TO PUBLIC SERVICE.

Because the Public Service Railway Company is short of help, this making it impossible to put as many cars into operation, during the rush hours, as are necessary, several of the Elizabeth, plants have come to the rescue of the company. The Standard Aircraft Corporation, the Moore plant and the Singer Company have fallen into line and are helping the Public Service by loaning them men during certain hours of the day.

The reason that these companies are able to do this is because in their employ they have a number of men who before the war worked on the street cars. These men left the Public Service in order that they might get the higher wages offered at the several plants, and their departure was a heavy blow for the company. However, when they were called to go back on the cars the men soon agreed to do so, with the result that the street car service to all three of thse plants has been much better since the new plan was started.

Parke Appointment As Council Member Pleases Citizens

The selection of Henry B. Park, of Alber tstreet, to succeed Charles C. Graves as a member of the Common Council from the Fourth ward has met with the endorsement of the citizens in general and particularly those of the district which he will directly represent.

Although a resident of the city but three years, Mr Park has made himself thoroughly acquainted with the community and its needs. He is a Philadelphian originally, progressive in his ideas but thoroughly business like at all times. He is connected with the A. H. Berry Company, of New York, a widely known electrical supply house. His knowledge of the electrical game will preve of a special value to the citizens as a number of improvements are contemplated in the police and fire alarm systems that require experience in the preparation. Both he and the numbers of his family have gained an unusually wide acquaintance since coming to Plainfield and the Fourth ward residents are contgratulating themselves upon the Council's appointment of such an able successor to Mr. Graves. The latter resigned as Fourth ward councilman because of his removal to the Third ward but retained his seat with the city fathers by receiving the appointment as councilman-at-large to succeed Leslie R. Fort, resigned.

Mr. Park has made it known that although he is willing to act as councilman for the time being, he does not wish to enter the general field as an candidate for re-election in November. He will remain with the body only until January 1, at which time he will be succeeded by the man named at the polls.

The appointment of Mr. Park was made at Monday night's meeting of the Council, the regular semi-monthly session. A large amount of business was transacted, one of the most important matters being the giving of public notice that on September 20 application will be made to the judge of the Court of Common Pleas at Elizabeth to have commissioners appointed to assess benefits accruing from the improvement of Ravine road, Leland avenue, Sumner avenue, Lake street, Kensington, Edgewood and Stelle avenues by the installation of macadam pavement and the improvement of a portion of West Front street, East Second street, North avenue, East Fifth street, Madison avenue, Park avenue, Watchung avenue, East Fourth street, East and West Seventh streets, and Crescent avenue by the installation of brick or concreae pavement. After the cost of improving these streets has been apportioned assessments will be levied against the property owners. In the case of those streets which have been improved with brick or macadam pavement the assesment will be paid in installments.

The total cost of installing brick and macadam pavement was $150,000. This debt will be met by the sale of bonds bearing interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, and they will be retired in lots of $10,000 each year between July, 1919, and July, 1933. Under this plan the cost to the property owners affected by these improvements will not be heavy; they will have a number of years in which to pay off the assessment, and the improvement is one of a lasting character.

The New York Telephone Company petitioned the Council for permission to open West Eighth street, at the corner of Park avenue, for the purpose of improving its service in that neighborhood. The excavation will not disturb the pavement recently installed at that point. Permission was granted.

Mayor Clakins appointed Walter C. Scott and E. J. Kennedy special policemen.

The engineer of sewers reported twelve sewer permits granted last month.

The overseer of the poor reported expenditures of $930.46 for the month of August.

The Council paid the following claims for the last half of August:

Salaries and wages, officials and general office employes, $1,022.75; general appropriation account, $9,196.80; City Hall, $1,785.75; District Court, $13.50; salaries and wages, Shade Tree Commission, $70.50; Shade Tree Commission, $6.70; salaries and wages, street department, $1,213.93; street department, $6,540.57; salaries and wages, sewer department, $214.78; sewer department, $199.86; salaries and wages, police department, $1,347.97; police department, $215.63; salaries and wages, fire department, $1,609.21; fire department appropriation, $766.50; salaries and wages, poor department, $125.25; poor department appropriation, $688.96; tax department appropriation, $82.53; street lighting appropriation, $1,679.71. Total, $26,780.90.

Gray Decries Patriotism of Edge and Richards in Bitter Reply

That Senator Emerson L. Richards and Governor Edge were jointly responsible for an attempt to prevent the establishment of a big gun testing station eighteen miles from Atlantic City is charged by Congressman Edward W. Gray. The assertion comes in a new reply to Senator Richards' attacks on Mr. Gray's candidacy for the United States Senatorial nomination.

"The time has passed for treating Mr. Richards merely with levity and contempt," Mr. Gray states. "In himself he represents nothing, but as the creature and servant of Governor Edge he must be regarded as repreesnting and being a part of the Edge machine.

"I have already hinted that his military coat covers a slacker's heart," the Congressman continues. "I now directly challenge his sincerity and patriotism and those of Governor Edge as well."

Mr. Gray then goes on to relate that just prior to the entrance of the United States into the war Senator Richards introduced a bill designed to prevent the testing of any guns over six inches in diameter within twenty miles of a city of 50,000 population or more. He asserts that this was aimed at the Bethlehem Steel Company, which had just acquired land in Cape May county, and he charges that both Senator Richards and Governor Edge tried to force the bill through, "to protect the delicate nerves of guests at Atlantic City," despite the intervention of the federal authorities in behalf of the steel company.

The statement continues:

"The alleged virtues of Governor Edge's war administration have been so widely and persistently advertised by the Edge press agency as to be offensive to good taste. It is my purpose, in the interest of political decency, to show that these are only sham xirtues and that the real objects of the Edge administration have been and are to make Mr. Edge United States Senator and to promote the interests of Atlantic City at an expense of the taxpayers of New Jersey.

"Profiteers are contemptible creatures. The American who puts profit before patriotism is a disgrace to his country. And when Governor Edge, Governor dEZ11Foetaoinshrdlumunn Senator Richards and other active members of the Edge machine play the interests of Atlantic City against the cause of humanity and democracy, as they did in the episode I am about to relate, the sincerity of their patriotic professions may well be brought into question.

"Richards, on February 20, 1917, introduced in the State Senate bill No. 258, the object of which was to prevent the completion and use by the Bethlehem Steel Company of a proving ground for the testing of large guns on a tract of some 20,000 acres of land located in Cape May county, eighteen miles distant from Atlantic City. It had been a difficult task for the steel company to find sufficient ground in the East for this purpose, and it took more than two years to obtain the titles to the tract in question.

"The object of Senator Richards' bill was to protect the delicate nerves of guests at Atlantic City (for this was the only city affected) from the sound of gunfire eighteen miles away. In this Senator Richards was entirely consistent, as a casual examination of the facts will show that he and Governor Edge and their immediate associates have always played the interests of Atlantic City against the interests of the rest of the State of New Jersey. It was well known when the bill was introduced that our country was on the very brink of war with Germany. The Richards bill in full was as follows:

"'If any person, persons or corporation shall fire or project, or cause to be fired or projected, any shot, shell or any other projectile, of a size exceeding six inches in diameter, from any gun, cannon or other instrument, for the purpose of testing the said shot, shell or other projectile, the said gun, cannon or other instrument, or any of them, at any point in this State which shall be nearer than twenty miles from any city having a population exceeding fifty thousand, he, she or they so offending shall severally forfeit the sum of two hundred dollars, to be recovered by an action at law before anw justice of the peace of the said State, at the snit of anl person who will prosecute the same to effect, to the sole use of the prosecutor with costs of suit, and the said firing or projecting of such shot, shell or other projectile shall be esteemed a public nuisance. This act shall take effect immediately'

"So much interested was Governor Edge in the passage of this measure that when it became evident it would fail in the House, he called Seymour P. Gilbert, Charles A. LeMaster, Harry T. Hagaman and other members from the floor and asked them to support it. Richards himself, Senator McCran, of Passaic county, and Enoch Johnson, former sheriff of Atlantic county and campaign manager for Mr. Edge, lobbied on the floor of the Assembly for the passage of the bill. Senator Richards made a deal with Edward Schoen, Speaker of the Assembly, by which Schoen agreed to support the bill in the House and Richards agreed in expence to pass the Newark ripper bills in the Senate.

"In the mean time, the United States Government has learned of the efforts of Governor Edge—for Richards was only his instrument—to prevent the establishment of the proving ground and had protested against the proposed legislation. In spite of this protest, Richards succeeded in getting the bill through the State Senate, but Speaker Schoen was unable to carry out his end of the deal in the House, and the bill was defeated in that body, to the credit of the members of the House who had opposed it and of the State of New Jersey.

"The proving ground was needed primarily for the testing of large guns. If Richards' bill limiting tests to six-inch guns had passed, the proving ground would have been practically useless. The great demand of the Allies was for big guns, as th egreat demand of the United States has been for big guns, but Governor Edge, with Richards and other of his henchmen, could think only of the interests of Atlantic City. Scores of flourishing summer resorts are located on the North Jersey coast within ten miles or less of the Sandy Hook proving grounds and no complaint has been made by the residents. But Atlantic City is sacred! Its interests are greater than those of humanity and the United States of America.

"It is evident, from Richards' last attack on me, that he and all the Edge camp are in a cold sweat over the growing strength of my candidacy. Richards suggests that I have insulted the State militian in my references to him. God help New Jersey if the State militia were made up of Emerison Richardses, say I. He says Governor Stokes is not with me. I have never asked Governor Stokes for his support, but I know he believes that Governor Edge's candidacy is unconstitutional and is not with Mr. Record. Richards says that not one of my Republican colleagues in the House of Representatives has publicly announced he would support me. I have asked none for his support. They are all running for re-election, and to ask them for support under the circumstances might be in keeping with Atlantic City methods, but not with mine. At the same time I know that several of them are opposed to Governor Edge. Richards winds up his misstatements by asserting that for a number of years I was a member of the executive committee of the Essex County Republican Committee, which disapproved, as he puts it, of my Senatorial aspirations by an overwhelming majority. First, I was never a member of the executive committee, and, secondly, the illegal endorsement by this committee of Governor Edge's candidacy was brought about by the connivance of Governor Edge himself in defiance of a law which he had signed. Moreover, if Richards will take the trouble to inquire in Newark, he can easily learn that nearly all the elected members of the county committee are supporting my candidacy."

War Department More Lenient with Building Material

Building material manufacturers, who earlier in the war were fearful of being relegated by Government edict to the ranks of non-essentials, have learned within the last few weeks that the promise of the War Industries Board to give to the building industry every consideration compatible with the war-winning program, are being amply fulfilled according to The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

Edwin B. Parker, Priorities Commissioner of the War Industries Board, has informed the manufacturers of lime that theirs is a partial war industry and that he will receive applications from any manufacturer for a place on the preference list. This action following a similar course in the case of Portland cement and certain clay products, notably hollow tile for special uses, has lifted one of the greatest perplexities from the building manufacturing and distributing interests that have rested heavily upon them since the war began. Other commodities are to receive consideration of the board in their turn and in consequence the trade on the dawn of the last quarter of the year looks with clearer vision into the immediate future, not so much, perhaps on the basis of new prospective construction work as upon the prospects of being able to supply sufficient building materials for reserve so that when building money does become easier building materials will not be so scarce as to make even essential building construction well nigh prohibitive.

The plan to have a building material man represented on the War Industries Board has been taken up by various associations and according to advices received in the trade last week John A. Kling, president of the Kelley Island Lime and Transport Company, of Cleveland, has been recommended for the place. W. A. Fay, president of the National Builders' Supply Association, in speaking yesterday of the condition of the building material interests in war time said:

"The building business of the country has been put in a distressing condition. Housing conditions have suffered greatly and many business firms have been forced to suspend, and one of the country's foremost enterprises is being rapidly disorganized. To hope for 'business as usual' would be at this time unpatriotic, because a degree of curtailment is admittedly necessary. But better things are already in sight through a closer understanding of the importance of building materials as a war time essential, at least in part, and the Government itself has expressed a desire to study the conditions closely so as not to make the situation any more distressing than actual necessities require."

Building material prices at the week-end were, for the most part, without change. Common brick prevails at the $14 level, although there is evidence that the quotations will stiffen. The demand for the last two weeks has been practically without change, the drop below $14 having been due to over-anxiousness of individual manufacturers to sell so as to release barges. Manufacturers seem confident that under the operation of the labor distribution law it will be easier for them to obtain necessary labor to burn the brick already stacked as well as fuel. Linseed oil prices remain at or near $1.90 and in consequence the September circular to the paint trade emphasizes the desirability of general use of asphaltum paints for roofs, metals, farm buildings and other kinds of rough construction as a consequence measure. It is increasingly difficult to supply the trade with linseed oil paints. New bag rebates for Portland cement are 25 cents instead of ten, or $1 a barrel. The export base price for this district is $1.75.

"PLEDGED TO PRESIDENT WILSON'S DEMOCRATIC POLICIES"

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS, present Mayor of Madison, Morris County, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District for the full term in Congress, was born in Galveston, Texas, January seventh, 1874, of American ancestry antedating the Revolutionary war.

He has resided in New York and New Jersey since boyhood and has been a lifelong Democrat. He has been elected a Councilman, and twice elected Mayor of Madison Borough on the Democratic ticket and is the only successful Democratic Mayoralty candidate in the history of that Borough.

He has always maintained an active interest in political affairs, and has a good record as a public official; exhibiting a practical understanding of his duties and the courage of his convictions.

He has served in his community on the committees for all the war activities; is President of the Madison Home Defense League; Chairman for the Borough of the State Council of Defense, and for the American Defense League. He has an unassailable record in his personal attitude and public utterances on an uncompromising American stand before the war and on the necessities of the situation since the declaration of war.

His known public record is a guarantee that he will support the policies of the Administration in the prosecution of the war and the enforcement of peace terms as outlined by President Wilson and accepted by all the allied Governments.

The Fifth Congressional District is constituted of Union and Morris Counties. Union County furnished the party candidate in 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916, and also in other years prior to 1910. Morris County has not had a candidate since 1902, or in sixteen years. According to all precedent it is the turn of a Morris County Democrat to be nominated, and in OTTO ROSS Morris presents a candidate who has the entire support of the party throughout the County, and who is a loyal and active Democrat, as is shown by the fact that his home town of Madison was carried for the Democratic Congressional candidate at each of the last four elections, though it is rated as a Republican stronghold.

MR. ROSS has the personal and political strength, and the qualifications to win in November if he is nominated, and the Union County Democrats are asked to support him for the nomination.

Vote for OTTO ROSS at the Primary Election on September 24th.

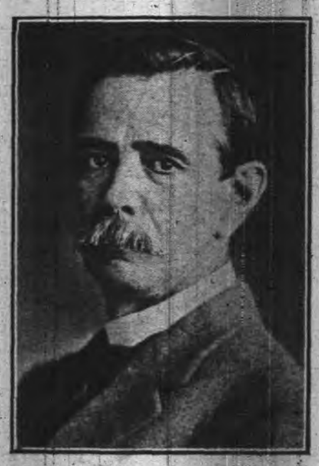
VOTE FOR ONE

[X] RICHARD E. CLEMENT Democrat

For member of the House of Representatives of the United States, Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey, term beginning March 4, 1919

VOTE FOR ONE

[X] RICHARD E. CLEMENT Democrat



Mr. Clement will stand by the flag of the country, by our boys in arms and by Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States.

National interests—business interests—the interests of the people of the nation and of the Fifth Congressional District of New Jersey will best be served by electing an Elizabeth man as Representative in Congress. VOTE TWICE for Mr. Clement, and by your action ensure the election of one who will win in November and give to President Wilson strong and able support in both war and social policies.

Mr. Clement is the first Elizabeth Democrat to seek the office of Congressman since 1894.

During the 24-year period, 1894-1918 Democrats and residents of Plainfield, of Westfield, and of Morris County have been honored with the nomination for Congress.

Elizabeth constitutes about one-third of the Fifth District, and the city is industrially, commercially, financially, politically, and nationally of importance at least equal to either of the other portions of the district. In common fairness she is entitled to name the candidate this year.

Ban on Beer Will Cost City $20,000 In Revenue

President Wilson's order that no more beer or near-beer be brewed after December 1st will cost the city of Plainfield about twenty thousand dollars annually in tax revenue.

This amount is made up by the retail license fee of $1,200 each paid by eight saloon-keepers, three fees of $1,000 each paid by wholesalers and the aggregate tax paid by these same dealers on assessable stocks of liquor and personal equipment needed to carry on their business.

The $20,000 income will cease to be paid into the municipal coffers, because failure to get supplies of beer will make it impossible for the saloon-men and wholesalers to continue in business. Beer is by far the mainstay of the trade and without it as a revenue maker the licensed places cannot continue operations. In Plainfield the liquor applications are presented in January, acted upon at the first meeting of the Common Council in February and become operative March first. It is quite probable that some of the saloon-men will close up the first of the year; or as soon as their stocks of ale and beer become exhausted. It is quite probable that no licenses will be granted next February anyway, as the bone-dry law destined to go into effect next July would prevent the yearly application.

In addition to the direct loss of $20,000, the suspension of wholesale and retail liquor places will bring about the depreciation of properties and considerable loss to the dealers beside that caused by the suspension of business. One of these is in the cases where the businesses are conducted in leased premises. Several of the retailers, in order to protect themselves, entered into long contracts as tenants and these will hold as no allowance was made for the termination of the saloon proposition. Two of the downtown dealers have been paying top-notch rentals for the stores they occupy and once their leases are up the owners will be unable to secure anything like the old income.

Six of the eight local retail places carry on the saloon trade in connection with a hotel and the latter end of the business will undergo a material change. It is not to be gainsaid that there will be a considerable alteration in this respect with particular reference to the Queen City, the Kensington, the Farmers' and the Waldorf Hotels.

Loan Quota Estimated at $3,500,000

Although the official figures have not yet been made known, Plainfield's quota in the coming eight billion Liberty Loan campaign to commence on September 28 is predicted to be about $3,500,000. Washington has practically completed its apportionments and the exact quota may be forthcoming in a few days.

In the drive of last May, when the national drive was placed at four billion, Plainfield's share was $1,769,000. This was over-subscribed by a very substantial amount and local officials have no hesitancy in saying that Plainfield will undoubtedly take three and a half million dollars' worth of bonds in the coming campaign.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has already commenced the organization of the city's Bond campaign machinery by appointing a general committee to assume charge. Sherman B. Joost, of Belvidere avenue, who is admirably fitted for the position in every way, has been named as chairman. He takes the place of A. Willis West, who acted as chairman in the last campaign, but who is unable to undertake the management again. Mr. Joost will have as a direct assistant Francis K. Anderson, named as vice chairman, while Leonard Eggleston will be secretary and treasurer. The remainder of the committee will be composed of the following:

Marion S. Ackerman, Leland D. Albin, J. Whitney Baker, F. Seymour Barr, Francis J. Blatz, W. E. Besler, Lindsey Best, E. W. Bulkley, J. Herbert Case, Mrs. Darold D. Corbusier, Henry T. Cleaver, Henry J. Cochran, Hon. J. Henry Crane, Thomas C. Vail, Arthur E. Crone, E. V. Cox, E. F. Feickert, Henry S. Fullerton, Charles H. Frost, Joseph W. Gayett, Hon. Alexander Gilbert, George M. Holstein, Frank J. Hubbard, DeWitt C. Hubbell, David T. Kenney, W. L. Lockwood, S. D. Lounsbery, A. Willis West, H. B. McDonald, John G. McLaughlin, J. Hartley Mellick, Hon. William Newcorn, D. M. Runyon, Hon. William N. Runyon, Herman Schwed, A. W. Searing, Jr., Charles S. Sminck, Joseph M. Shellabarger, Arthur E. Smith, J. Augustus Smith, Dr. Philip B. Strong, A. A. Tilney.

In naming the Citizens' Committee to handle the loan campaign in Plainfield yesterday, Mayor Calkins made the following announcement:

"To the people of Plainfield:

"In the First and Second Loans Plainfield was not able to reach its quota, principally because many people having their business in New York subscribed there. Attention was directed to this fact at the time of the Third Loan last April with the gratifying result that our quota was largely over-subscribed, and it is therefore to be urged upon all who live here that they subscribe again through our local banking institutions which will be able to afford the same facilities that are to be obtained in New York and elsewhere.

"The purpose of this loan, as with the earlier loans, is to provide the Government with the means to carry on the war until victory is won and nations may live in peace and unafraid. But we have another object, namely, to enlist the direct, personal interest of the people as a whole in this great war for human rights. The great majority of us cannot perform military service, but we can show our purpose to have a share in the struggle and in the victory which is to be ours. I understand that about 4,500,000 people subscribed to the first loan, about 9,000,000 to the second and nearly twice as many to the third. If this time we largely exceed the number of subscribers to the last loan, we shall be doing about the best thing we can to bring encouragement to our allies and to our own splendid army in France, until the great might of this nation has been brought fully into play and victory is achieved."

Camp Dix Men to Learn Horseshoeing

Other News of Interest From the Big Cantonment at Wrightstown, Where Many Plainfield Boys Are Under Instruction.

Another opportunity of advancement has been offered to the men in the depot brigade at Camp Dix through an order of the War Department, which directs that details of suitable men from the brigade be sent to the schools for instruction of enlisted men for duy as horseshoers, teamsters, packers and saddlers, which have been established at the various auxiliary remount depots. The course in horseshoeing lasts three months and the other classes one month. Upon the completion of their course the students will be returned to their respective commands and await assignment to new duties.

As men of the field artillery are finding little use for rifles at the front, it is announced that the entire personnel, except chaplains and member sof the medical department attached, will be armed with the pistol. Eight automatic rifles will be furnished each battery, headquarters company and supply company. All rifles now in possession of these men are to be turned into the ordnance depot.

Emphasizing the necessity of cleanliness, a recent order directs each man to bathe at least twice weekly and to wash his hands before every meal. Cooks have also been instructed to dress cleanly and to bathe daily, giving particular attention to the care of their hands and finger nails. Teeth are also to be brushed at least twice daily—after breakfast and supper—under the supervision of non-commissioned officers.

That the American bands that go overseas in the future with divisions trained in this country will be up to the standard is evident from the instructions sent out to cantonment commanders. Major General Hugh L. Scott, commander at Dix, has issued an order outlining the plan for training bands as recommended by the board which met under instructions of last July. A total of forty-seven instruments has been authorized, with an additional four instruments for marching purposes in lieu of bassoons and obpes, which are only suitable for concert work. It is intended that the bassoonist will play cymbals while on the march.

It is proposed to have the bands divided into groups for practice each in charge of the best musician in it. Individual instruction is to be given and this will be followed by a rehearsal as a whole. Another suggestion is that volunteers from companies assist the bands by singing patriotic numbers and marching songs, so that the musicians can obtain the necessary practice accompanying singing detachments.

As regards the trumpet and drum cors, which have been recently added, it is recommended that the trumpeters be taught to read music and play all calls with spirit and intelligently, and to play marching music, in connection with the drums, in two or three part arrangements. Drummers should also be taught to play from music.

Arrangements are being made by Frank Wandle, director of Knights of Columbus activities at Camp Dix, to have Alma Gluck, the singer, visit here and sing to the men of Dix in the main Knights of Columbus building. James P. Dunn, of Philadelphia, is conducting the negotiations, and it is expected that the artist will be at the camp in October.

Mess sergeants and cooks are aiding the government now by saving all peach and prune pits, which will be used in the manufacture of carbon needed in the making of gas masks.

John Winzenreid Tells How French Entertain Our Boys

How royally the French people entertain the American soldiers who are billetted at their homes over night as they march toward the firing line and how generous these people are, in spite of the privations they undergo themselves, are told of in a letter written by Wagoner John A. Winzenreid, of this city, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Winzenreid, of 312 Lee place.

The young soldier was a member of Troop D when it was ordered to Camp McClellan, at Anniston, Ala. After the Plainfield unit had been disbanded, he was made a member of the 112th Heavy Field Artillery and went overseas with the 29th Division. His letter was written at Tours, France, on August 8th, and is as follows:

Tours, Aug. 8, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father:

Just a line to let you know that I am still enjoying all the good things to be had "over here." I returned from my last road trip Sunday afternoon, August 4, and since then I have been doing nothing, but eating and sleeping and "doing the town." My last trip brought me from Tours, which is our station for the present, to a place called Redon, over near the coast, from which place I wrote my last letter to you. During these trips I have had opportunities to see small towns and villages as well as large ones and to make new acquaintances amongst the people, which is not very hard for an American soldier to do. In one place where I had occasion to stay for two days, we were living with some of the families there, and they gave us the best of everything; gave us feather beds to sleep in and the best food that they could get. Now this is more than is either required or expected of them, for when we reach a place of that kind, the Mayor gives us an order to deliver to certain families for a night's lodging, nothing else; so naturally we don't look for feather beds, or anything like that when we go to these homes. But this one family, whose name was Du Bois, first gave me a big supper and then showed me a hot bath and feather bed, and when I came down stairs next morning with my pack on my back, ready to go out and buy my breakfast (we are given money by the government for our meals), the good lady made me take off my pack and mached me into the kitchen where she had fried eggs, coffee, bread and butter waiting for me. (It made me feel right as if I was back at 312 Lee place for about a half-hour). And when I offered to pay her for the meals I had a hard proposition to convince her that I wasn't trying to insult her good cooking. Of course everyone didn't do the same as she but the majority did almost as much and wouldn't accept anything for it but "Mairci, Madame, Mairci." (That means, Thank you, Madam, thank you.) It just goes to show that they can't do too much for us, especially when we are out by ourselves on such trips as I am engaged in making now.

I don't know how long it will be before I go out on the road again, but I hope it will be soon, for I really enjoy such work and meeting new people and making new friends.

To date I haven't received any mail from you, but I can hardly expect any for a few days yet, because only a few of the boys got mail so far and it was mailed on or before the same day we left America. So I am looking forward to getting a letter or two next week, and I hope that the next time I write I will be answering your letter and not trying to write a new one, for it is no easy job.

I hope you have received all of my letters to date, and in time. I wrote the first day we landed and oce a week since then, so this should have been the sixth letter you have received from me at least, unless some of them have been lost in the mails.

If we stay in Tours another two weeks, I am going to have my picture taken. I will send you one of I do.

With love to all, I am, as ever,

Your loving son,

JOHN.

Mayor Confers With Employers

At the suggestion of Mayor Leighton Calkins, representatives of the Pond, Scott, International and Standard Arero industrial plants met in the executive's office this morning for the purpose of facilitating the establishmenti n Plainfield of an agency of the Federal Employment Service, should the large employers of labor so desire. Such agencies are now in operation in Newark, New Brunswick, Trenton and other places and are a big help to the government in its plan of giving preference to essential industries in the distribution of workmen.

It developed at the conference that the feeling of the industrial heads was in favor of an agency and Mayor Calkins suggested that he could lay the matter before the State Department of abor for its co-operation. This plan will be carried out and another meeting will be held at the Mayor's office some time next week, to which invitations to have representatives resent will be extended to every plant in the city employing 100 or more persons.

Fighter Asserts Kaiser's Finish Is Coming Soon

That "Kaiser Bill's" finish is coming soon and that it will be done with his own guns and ammunition as it is wrested from his men, is the prediction of Jack Otis, a young Jersey City lad who is well known in Plainfield, through visits to his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fay, of 173 North avenue.

Private Otis is a member of "the Fighting Ninth," as the Ninth Infantry is known, and has been in action on the French front the best part of eight months. He has seen a lot of "over the top" rushes, but is unable to tell about them yet, because of restructions. In a letter received by Mr. and Mrs. Fay from him this week, he describes how the American boys are handing the Germans some awful "wallups" in the beginning of the rush that is to mark the end of the Prussian autocrat's tyranny. Souvenirs by the hundreds, he says, are being taken from the Germans in the trenches and he facetiously adds that the boys would be wearing machine guns as watch jobs, if they were not so heavy. One of Private Otis' own captures was a typewriter and the interesting letter he wrote was struck off on this machine. In the personal mention, he refers to a New York woman whose family has been identified with the Ninth Regiment for many years and whose handsome home on Fifth avenue has been thrown open for the use of any of this unit on returning to America. He also refers to Mr. and Mrs. Fay's grandson, Sanford Pugh, who is in France as a member of an aviation corps. This is the letter which Private Otis wrote:

France, Aug. 12, 1918.

My dear Uncle Tom and Aunt Mary:

Your most welcome letter received and was very glad to hear from you, also that everybody is in the best of health, as it leaves me the same at present. I am glad to hear that Catharine is over with you. Tell her that her soldier brother Jack wants her to be real good and when I get back home I will bring her a lot of nice souvenirs. Our outfit certainly got its share. They are all wearing boche belts, watches, iron crosses, buttons, and in fact they would wear boche machine guns if they could carry them. It sure was a circus when we started the boche on the run. There was instances when we captured 20 or 30 of them in their dugouts. A few of them showed fight but on an average they throw up their hands when we get within bayonet reach of them. All we could hear was "Kamerad," their cry for "I surrender." We sure gave them complete hell. They didn't care for our style of fighting; saw we are too quick; that we don't give them a fighting chance. I suppose they expected us to lie down and let them bump us off at their leisure. We will put the finishing touches to Kaiser Bill before long. He has been having things all his own way and now it's our turn. We've been shooting his own guns and ammunition at him besides our own, so you can imagine how hot it is for him. Everything is rosy with me so far.

About that woman you mentioned, her husband used to be in command of this regiment and we appreciate what she is doing for the boys. Charlie is sick in the hospital, but he expects to be back with us before long. I was promoted to company mechanic at $40.00 a month. I certainly can make good use of it as I have an allotment insurance and a Liberty Bond to pay for each month. Tom Morrissey is over here. He is in the artillery. Do you hear from Sandford regularly? He is in a good branch of the service and I bet he llesk it, eh. I haven't heard from him in some time. I hope that he is O. K.

Give my best love and regards to the folks in Plainfield and Harrison; my best love to Aunty and Catharine. I would like to send you some souvenirs but I am afraid that they wouldn't get there, so you will have to be patient for awhile and there is a while lot I would like to tell you, but you know, Uncle, our censor is pretty strict and rather than chance sending you a cut-up letter I omit a whole lot. But never mind, I may have a chance to give you a vague account of my experiences. Well, Uncle, write soon again. What do you think of my typewriting? Some class, eh. It's a machine that we found in the woods after the fight.

With best love and regards,

GETS JAIL SENTENCE FOR ROBBING BROTHER.

William Cass, twenty years old, of Park avenue, was sent to jail for sixty days by Judge DeMeza this morning, after he had been found guilty of entering his brother Edward's home at 321 Park avenue and stealing a quantity of furniture, wearing aparel and blankets, which he sold to a junkman. The only excuse he made for his action was that his brother told him to take the things, but this was denied by the latter.

Cass was given the preference of paying $25 as fine, but as he had no way of securing the amount he was consigned to the care of the county jail warden.

City's Coal Situation Is Not So Good

The coal situation in Plainfield today is in an unsatisfactory state and unless improvement comes in a very short time the difficulties of last winter will occur on a larger scale before next February. Mayor Leighton Calkins, Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, Chairman Marion S. Ackerman, of the municipal affairs committee of the Common Council, and other will go to Newark next Monday for a second conference with the State administrator, Richard Jenkinson, on the needs of the city. Because of an increase in population, an increased quota is one of the most essential requirements, and it is believed that this will be allowed.

The Plainfield dealers are approaching the winter with less than half the supplies they had at this season last year. Shipments are slow, but in one sense of the word the operators are sending out orders in accordance with the amount of coal fixed for the district by the State authorities. There are many householders who have not yet secured their first one-third deliveries, mainly for the reason that they did not place their orders. When they wake up to the fact that they must absolutely abide by the rules as laid down last spring there is apt to be an outcry and not a little confusion.

The usual advance of thirty cents on the price of coal went into effect in Plainfield las week. At the present time there is a wide variety of prices due to the fact that there is stHl a difference between line and independent figures and also that where there are any stocks carried over into September the summer prices of thirty cents less must prevail. It was stated today that the highest figure for coal in Plainfield was $9.82 a ton for the nut sizes.

Mayor Calkins neld a meeting Monday night in his office, attended by the committee he appointed last July to consider the local coal situation. There were present as representatives of the local coal dealers Messrs. P. J. McDonough, F. J. Harris and Arthur T. Goodenough; also M. S. Ackerman, of the Councilmanic Public Affairs Committee; Corporation Counsel Reed and W. H. Williams, vice president of the Delaware and Hudson River Railroad.

The Mayor and members of this committee went to Newark about six weeks ago, and presented to Fuel Administrator Jenkinson a carefully prepared tabulated statement, showing the amount of coal delivered to consumers at that time, and the amount represented by orders on the coal dealers' books; also figures showing an increase of 5,000 in population, and 463 houses to be supplied with coal this year, not supplied in 1916. In 1915 there were 200 vacant houses, now all occupied, and many new and small double houses have since been constructed.

The administrator accepted the figures presented, and promised that Plainfield would be alloted its full quota.

Mayor Calkins said to a Record reporter regarding Monday night's meeting: "I asked the members of the Coal Committee to attend a conference, that we might discuss ways and means to better the general coal situation. We are not especially concerned for the well-to-do, who will get along somehow. But we must have coal here for the small consumer to get when he needs it, especially the working class, who cannot finance advance purchases.

"We are assured by Dr. Garfield that coal will be steadily supplied, even though slowly, and that there will not be actual want this winter. Nevertheless, coal is coming here in very small quantity. We presented to the State Fuel Administrator last July a statement of our requirements. I have requested another conference with him, and shall go to Newark with members of our local committee next Monday. We will show how much coal has come in during the two summer months, and how much we still need.

"We shall also lay before Mr. Jenkinson the facts regarding the administration of coal distribution here in Plainfield. The local administratpr should have a competent paid clerk, to check all orders placed with the local dealers, which should be filed in the administrator's office, by card index, to prevent double orders being placed by anybody. There has been some of this selfishness going on by householders in Plainfield, who have tried, and in some cases have succeeded, in getting a second "third" of their coal supply by placing orders with different dealers, and falsifying their statements in order to do this. There is a jail penalty for anyone caught in this sort of unpatriotic game, and we purpose to put a stop to it. We also want the local coal administration properly financed to maintain an efficient organization. People will make all sorts of sacrifices, and cheerfully, as long as everybody plays the game fair. We owe a duty to the patriotic public to see that there is absolute fairness all round, and that the selfishly inclined who try to take an advantage are sharply pulled up."

4,041 Men Registered In Plainfield District

Gratifying Number Is 120 Above Official Estimate Made by Washington---Work of Giving Serial Numbers and Preparation of Questionaires Now Going On

Men in the Plainfield draft district between the ages of 18 and 46 years, inclusive, to the number of 4,041, registered themselves yesterday, in compliance with the order emanating from Washington and destined to add 2,000,000 more soldiers to Pershing's army.

The result in Plainfield was only 120 above Washington's estimate of 3,921 for the district, although local estimates ran the possible number up to 5,000. Secretary Walter Freeman, of the draft board, has already placed his large force of workers on the lists and will be busily engaged for several days, placing the registrants in classified form. The questionnaires are also being prepared and as soon as Washington gives the word, these will be mailed out in the same manner as was done in previous cases. According to statements from General Crowder, the national drawing will take place before October 1st and by the middle of that month the first Class A-1 men will be examined and ready for the call to camp.

In all parts of the district the work of registration ran very smoothly. In Plainfield proper the eighteen election boards served as official registrars and though they were pushed to the limit most of the day they stuck to their jobs throughout the full period from 7:00 a. m. to 9:00 p. m., with meal hours excepted. By 10:00 last night all the returns were in Secretary Freeman's hands in such complete form that he was able to forward his report to Trenton by 11:00 o'clock.

The registration shows that the Plainfield district has a decidedly cosmopolitan population. Practically every nation on the globe is represented on the lists and at times the registrars were put at their wits' end to secure satisfactory answers from aliens unable to speak English. The total number of aliens registered was 979, practically one-fourth of the total registration. The total number of white men was placed at 3,636 and colored 395. There were no Indians, but an Asiatic hue was given by the signing up of 7 Orientals. The number of enemy aliens, including both declarant and non-declarant, was found to be 140.

A complete summary of the Plainfield registration, defining the number of citizens and aliens, together with their division into nationalities, races and ages is given as follows:

Severe Penalty If Sugar Cards Are Not Returned

County Food Administrator Ernest R. Ackerman announced from his office in this city, yesterday, that all users of large quantities of sugar, such as confectioners and candy-makers, should have their estimate cards returned to him by September 20th, otherwise they would be deprived of all October, November and December consignments.

This move has been made necessary because of the severe restrictions placed upon the county administrators by the national administration in seeking the solve the sugar problem. It is absolutely necessary that full figures be obtained from each district in order to make the State allotments. The estimate cards have been sent out and those receiving them should make it a point to carefully figure up their needs and return the statement to Mr. Ackerman without delay. This request does not affect householders as their needs are provided for in another way.

Mr. Ackerman attended a meeting at Newark, Monday, called by State Food Administrator William S. Tyler, of this city, and which was attended by all the county food heads. Many of the problems confronting these officials were discussed and much valuable information was secured for the proper regulation of food conservation. Incidental to the meeting the following new flour regulations were announced:

Mixed flours made according to the following regulations should be labeled "Victory Mixed Flour," and labeled with the ingredients in order of their proportion. The flours so mixed must be milled in accordance with the standards of the United States Food Administration.

No "mixed flours" (except pancake flours) shall be made or manufactured except in the exact proportions as outlined below:

Mixed wheat and barley flour shall be in proportion of four pounds of wheat flour to one pound of barley flour.

Mixed wheat and corn flour shall contain the proportions of four pounds of wheat flour to one pound of corn flour.

Mixed wheat, barley and corn flour shall contain the proportions of eight pounds wheat flour to one pound of barley and one pound corn flour.

Mixed wheat and rye flour shall contain the proportion of three pounds of wheat flour and not less than two pounds of rye flour.

Whole wheat, entire wheat, of Graham flour or meal shall contain at least 95 per cent. of the wheat berry.

All the above "Victory Flours" may be sold without substitutes, but at no greater price from the miller, wholesaler or retail dealer than in the case of standard wheat flour.

The foregoing rules prescribing proportions apply only to mixed flour manufactured after September 1, 1918.

LOCAL MEN COMPLETE OFFICERS' COURSE.

Included in the list of sixty-five New Jersey soldiers who have just been graduated from the field artillery central officers' training camp at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky, and are eligible for appointments as second lieutenants of field artillery are the following Plainfielders:

Sergeant Clinton Steele Berrien, of 107 West Seventh street; Private Allen Vander Hoel Heely, of 321 West Eighth street, and Sergeant (medical department) Frank Tanham, of 227 East Sixth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent W. Nash, Jr., of Martine avenue, returned Monday after a visit with Mr. Nash's parents at their summer home at Spring Lake.

William Collier's "Nothing But Lies" A Coming Attraction

Local theatre-goers are in for a rare treat next Thursday, September 19th, when William Collier, America's premier comedian, appears at the Plainfield Theatre in his new play, "Nothing But Lies." William Collier is the best farceur in this country today and his new play is said to be one of those sure fire successes that no one ought to miss seeing.

Local playgoers are to have a chance to pass judgment on this new play before New York sees it. After a two weeks' tour it is booked for an all-season run at the Longacre Theatre, New York. G. M. Anderson and L. Lawrence Weber, Mr. Collier's managers, have surrounded their star with players of renown and ability. Olive Wyndham plays the leading female role in this new farce. Rapley Holmes, Grant Stewart, Frank Monroe, Norval Keedwell, Florence Enright, William Riley Patten and Jane Blake are some of the other players.

Aaron Hoffman, the most successful dramatist of the day, is responsible for this new farce which is in three acts with a prologue. It would not be fair to spoil one's enjoyment by telling the story of the play but suffice it to say that Mr. Hoffman is an expert playwright and knows that a successful play for William Collier must be laden with fun. "Nothing But Lies" is funny and is interlarded with witty dialogue and laugh-provoking situations.

This new play of Mr. Collier's must not be confused in the minds of playgoers with his former starring vehicle, "Nothing But The Truth." It is true that the title is somewhat similar but that is about all there is alike in the two plays. "Nothing But Lies" is built around an original idea and is not even a sequel to the old play.

Dave Marion and His New Big Show Coming Next Week

An event of more than ordinary theatrical interest will be the appearance next Tuesday at the Plainfield theatre of that peer of all burlesque comedians, Dave Marion, who is accompanied by his own company of representative artists.

Dave Marion's unique style of comedy, his well earned title of "King of Burlesque Comedy Workers," his unusual success in the producing field and the superior quality of all his productions, are all reasons which attach significance to the announcement of his annual appearance at a theatre.

Mr. Marion regards the burlesque field from a producing standpoint, as worthy of the very best that a producing genius can give it. That is why he gives burlesque a brand new show every year, no matter how great his previous success had been. Some producers argue that a good show is good enough for several years, but Mr. Marion claims that, no matter how good a show is, it must to a certain extent exhaust itself in one season.

That is why there is always an annual cleaning out with the Marion output. Other shows may remain the same but those who go to see Dave Marion may be sure to find him in new surroundings with a new book, fresh costumes and scenery that is just making its debut. This year his show is a new one entitled "America's Best" and the production is as much of a superlative as is the title. It is the best that Mr. Marion's genius for producing could conjure up, the best that scenic artists and costumers could aid him in presenting, the best that talented actors and pretty girls could lend a hand to. It is a burlesque show which will appeal to burlesque's most critical and that will please everybody.

Appetizing Menu At The Plainfield

Manager Shannon has given the patrons of the Plainfield Theatre many an appetizing theatrical menu, but none so pleasing as that which came to the house yesterday to remain for the rest of the week. The principal course was a five-reel photoplay feature, "Moral Suicide," starring John Mason, Anne Luther and Leah Baird, the strongest trio of stellar artists yet seen in a screen production. In addition there was a delightful vaudeville bill to be taken as a relish or dessert, according to the taste of the spectator, but no matter what the choice the result was just as pleasing.

First on the program of vaudeville was Drena Mack and Lew West in a charming number, which comprised piano selections, songs and dances. They are a clever pair and made good from the start. Following them was Paul Brady, a comedian worthy of the name, and also Weber and Levee, in a miniature revue, one of those tabloid musical comedy acts that always please the eye and delight the ear.

To make certain that the audience got its money's worth, Manager Shannon also presented the latest "Scfeen Telegram," showing actual happenings all over the world and several one-reel dramatic and comedy pictures. Augmenting all these was Professor Wetton's orchestra with a program of popular selections, in itself a number worth the price of admission.

This bill will be repeated in its entirety at all performances at the Plainfield today and tomorrow and is recommended to amusement lovers craving wholesome entertainment at a small cost.

Charles Ward, Jr., of Clinton avenue, left Monday to enter Seton Hall College at South Orange. He was graduated last June from the Plainfield High School.

Senate Candidates Attitude on Question of Woman Suffrage

The New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association has secured the following statements from candidates for the United States Senatorial nomination, relative to their attitude on votes for women:

Governor Walter E. Edge, Republican: "I favor an amendment to the Federal Constitution extending the ballot upon ratification by the States. Immemoriably devoted to the sacred duties of the home, and now responding nobly and zealously to the patriotic demands of the Nation in war times, women as a class richly deserve to have the question of suffrage put squarely before the tribunal of the people."

Hon. George M. LaMonte, Democrat: "In these days when the women at home are doing the day's work, the greatest injustice I know of is depriving them of the right to vote. Their interests are the same as those of the men and their sacrifice is greater. The Federal Amendment for woman suffrage should be passed by the Senate and ratified by the State Legislatures."

Hon. George L. Record, Republican: "I am now and have always been a believer in he principle that the women in this country have the same right to vote as the men. The immense sacrifices which women are now making to help bring the great war to a conclusion ought to remove the last vestige of doubt in any fair mind of the propriety and justice of giving women the right to vote."

Hon. Charles O'C. Hennessy, Democrat: "I believe the denial to women of the right to vote is an indefensible violation of the principle and spirit of democracy. Therefore I am for woman suffrage everywhere, and favor the amendment to the Federal Constitution that would establish political equality throughout the United States for all classes of our citizens."

Hon. Frank M. McDermit, Democrat: "I believe in universal suffrage. Democracy cannot find its fullest expression in the ballot until men and women alike share in its privileges. I believe in a constitutional amendment which will give the vote to women as well as men, and will actively and in an unqualified manner favor such an amendment, or the passage and ratification of the Federal Woman Suffrage Amendment."

Hon. Alexander Simpson, Democrat: "As I stated when I was in the Legislature. I am for woman suffrage as one of President Wilson's policies."

James M. Reilly, Socialist: "I believe in the American doctrine that 'Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.' Therefore I believe in votes for women. I hope for the speedy passage and ratification of the Federal Woman Suffrage Amendment."

Hon. David Baird, Republican. Senator Baird has not replied to a request for a statement to his position in regard to the passage and ratification of the Federal Woman Suffrage Amendment.

Hon. Edward W. Gray, Republican. Congressman Gray has not replied to a request for a statement as to his attitude on the Federal Amendment, but he voted against it in Congress last winter, and says in his campaign platform: that woman suffrage in his opinion "makes for a degenerated manhood, a degenerated nation and degenerated civilization."

United States Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, favors the passage and ratification of the Federal Amendment. He states that "I shall not only vote to submit this question to the several State Legislatures, but am in favor of the principle itself involved—equal suffrage for all Americans, irrespective of sex."

WILLIAM C. RYDER ARRIVES OVERSEAS.

William C. Ryder, of Grant avenue, is one of the many Plainfielders arriving overseas during the past week. He went out of Camp Dix as a member of the 112th Field Signal Corps, attached to the 87th Division. Previous to his entrance to the army, Private Ryder was a foreman at the Standard Aero plant in Elizabeth, entering the shop from the Plainfield fire department, in which he served for several years.

John Fox, of Grant avenue, brother to Mrs. Clifford Randolph, of that street, also arrived overseas this week. He and Ryder left Plainfield on July 25th, as members of a selective contingent.

Louis Benton, of Church street, who went to Beaumont, Texas, last January, returned to the city this week and has taken a temporary position as clerk at the Hotel Kensington.

AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane, who has recently been the guest of Vincent W. Nash at his cottage at Spring Lake, left the latter place this week to conclude a recuperating sojourn at Atlantic City. If his condition permits it, he will attend the convention of the Exempt Firemen's Association and the State Firemen's Relief Association at Atlantic City next Friday and Saturday. Inspector Doane had been quite ill for a period of nearly four weeks before going to the shore. His stay at Spring Lake improved him greatly and he will resume his duties as building inspector immediately after his return to town.

For Our Friends In the Struggle

All of us have friends in this fight. Not a community in the length and breadth of the land has failed to send men to the front. Not a home exists where the circle of relatives, friends, acquaintances remains unbroken. Everywhere the service flag flies, with its decoration of stars for the men in camp or at the front.

Jesus said, "Greater love hath no man than this that he lay down his life for a friend." These friends of ours in France, Italy, Russia, on transport, battleship, destroyer, have manifested this great love. They are ready to lay down their lives for us who remain to carry on the daily work of the nation. They face unshrinkingly the dangers of the deadliest war of history. Some have already made the supreme sacrifice, and gold stars on the service flags mark their devotion.

True friendship involves obligations as well as confers privileges. The men in service are discharging those obligations. Are we keeping pace with them, service for service, duty for duty? In the give-and-take of ordinary life, we do not hesitate to lend a hand. If a friend need a favor, it is forthcoming. Gladly we anticipate need by offering help. There is a pride in being able to aid.

These friends of ours over there need our help now—need it in the most critical emergency of their lives. They need our unswerving devotion and loyalty, and they need our dollars. The government which they and we support asks us to subscribe to the Fourth Liberty Loan in order to carry the war alonog to a victorious conclusion. This is not much to ask; it is not much to give. When our friends are spending their blood, it is a slight thing for us to spend our spare dollars to back them up. We can and ought to do more than that. We should purchase Liberty Bonds with our spare dollars, and we should arrange our affairs so that we have more money to spare for that purpose.

It can be done, by taking thought. Luxuries can be cut off and our ideas of necessities adjusted. Friendship is not worth much if it will not stand some inconvenience, some hardship, some sacrifice for its preservation. It is the severity of the pinch which tests its quality. If it pinches us to take the new bonds, we should take them the more gladly, because by that fact we testify to the worth of our devotion to these friends of ours in service who stand ready to bear such burdens for us.

Much Wounded Soldier Recovering, Jokes in Letter About Battle

A letter that is humorous in spite of the conditions under which it was written has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schwalbach, of Scotch Plains, from their son, Private Henry Schwalbach, who is now in a French hospital recovering from wounds received on July 21.

"Just a few lines to let you know I am getting along well," he says in the letter he sent. "I was wounded by a German machine gun bullet in going 'over the top,' and as I was being carried to the rear on a stretcher I was hit in the mouth by a second bullet—ha-ha!"

The first bullet that hit young Schwalbach went entirely through his body but did not hit a vital spot. It was only fifty-eight days after he had recovered from two previous wounds that he rejoined his command and was again wounded.

He is now entitled to wear five gold stripes on his sleeve, he says in the letterfi three for wounds and two for a year of foreign service. He is only a little over seventeen years of age.

Robrt Walpole, of Scotch Plains, grandfather on Friday last celebrated his eighty-sixth birthday anniversary and heard with pride of young Schwalbach's grit. The aged man was in the civil War and for eighteen years was a deputy sheriff, retiring in 1911.

Record Delivers His One Hundredth Speech

Back from a third trip through the State, George L. Record, candidate for the Republican United States Senatorial nomination, Tuesday night, on historic Bergen Square, on Jersey City Heights, close by his own home, held the 100th meeting of his sensational campaign. The famous tent which has been pitched more than once in each county of the State, was crowded Tuesday night by a big and enthusiastic audience of Record's neighbors and Jersey City voters wh omade glad Record's heart by the warmth and cordiality with which they received the candidate's stirring declaration in favor of government ownership, woman suffrage and national prohibition; in favor of increased war taxes on great wealth, and in favor of providing employment for returning soldiers and discharged munition workers after the war by forcing idle land into use.

Former Assemblyman James G. Blauvelt, of Paterson, and Assemblyman O. Bell Cose, of Essex, spoke with Record. A cornetist played patriotic airs before the speech making, and the big audience rose and stood at attention while "The Star Spangled Banner" was played.

Not content with speaking in his tent every night, Record is now holding noonday meetings in Military Park in Newark.

OBITUARY

Personal Mention of Plainfielders and Others Who Have Heeded the Summons of Death During the Past Week.

MRS. ISAAC L. MILLER.

Following an illness of three months, death came early Monday morning to Mrs. Wilhelmenia C. Miller, wife of Isaac L. Miller, at her home at 744 Watchung avenue. The funeral was held at the late residence Tuesday afternoon and was private, as was also the burial in Hillside cemetery. Rev. J. O. McKelvey officiated in both instances.

During her forty-six years of residence in Plainfield, Mrs. Miller had led a very active life. She was particularly interested in the work of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, but was also known as a prominent member of several of the city's women's organizations. These included the Monday Afternoon Club, which she helped to organize, and of which she was president for numerous terms, and of the Plainfield branch of the McAll Auxiliary. She was a woman of scholarly attainments and her assistance was frequently sought in matters of a civic nature affecting women. Her loss in this respect will be felt for a long time to come.

Mrs. Miller's native town was Buffalo, N. Y., where she was born seventy-two years ago. She was married to Mr. Miller in 1870 and came to Plainfield two years later, after a short stay in Brooklyn.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Miller is survived by one son, Brockholst K. Miller, the well known local attorney, one brother, Harry Walbridge, of Buffalo, and one sister, Mrs. E. P. Bowen, of Niagara Falls.

LESTER B. HARRIS.

Lester Benedict Harris, a widely known Plainfielder, died Sunday night at his home at 535 West Front street. He had been ailing for some time, but his illness had not been considered especially serious, until his sudden turn for the worse occurred, while he was at Manasquan last week. He was immediately brought to Plainfield, but despite the best of medical attention sank rapidly until the end came.

A private funeral service was held at the late residence, Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. H. St. George Burrill, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross. Numerous floral tributes were extended by friends in Plainfield, Jersey City, Metuchen and other places, as an evidence of the esteem in which he was held. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

The pall bearers were George Wescott, E. C. Wescott, Thomas Brantingham, George O. Stevens and John P. Owens, of this city, and A. G. Smith, of Bayonne.

Mr. Harris was sixty-one years old and was born in Jersey City, where he was engaged in business for many years. At the inheritance of a large bequest from a relative, he removed to a farm near Oak Tree and resided there for a long time. About fifteen years ago he came to Plainfield to make his home at the address on West Front street, where he died. He was a nephew of E. C. Benedict, the prominent New York jeweler and was connected with other well known New York families.

After quitting the farm at Oak Tree, Mr. Harris' particular hobby was that of trotting horses and at various times he owned several thoroughbreds. One of these was "Review Bells," which he entered at all the big fairs and trotting meets in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and adjacent States. Mr. Harris did not drive himself, always prefering to be a spectator of his horse's work; the animal was first under the wire many times through the skillful driving of Thomas Brantingham. In addition to the fat purses carried away by the owner, "Review Bells" was awarded scores of cups and ribbons.

Mr. Harris was very democratic in his manner and the hundreds of friends he had in Plainfield came from all parts of the city. His acquaintanceship extended beyond the confines of the State and numbered scores of persons in New York, Philadelphia and other places. The fact that he had become the possessor of a large fortune made no change in his demeanor and it was a pleasure at all times to meet him.

Mr. Harris' near surviving relatives are his wife and three sons. The latter are Stanley Harris, of Jersey City, Leon Harris, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and Gerard Harris, who went to Camp Dix recently as a member of a Plainfield contingent of selectives.

MRS. CLARA C. MACKEY.

Mrs. Clara C. Mackey, whose home was at the "Plainfield" on Park avenue, died at Muhlenberg Hospital on Saturday night, in her seventy-sixth year. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. H. F. Hussey, of Somerville, and burial was in the Somerville cemetery.

Mrs. Mackey was a native of New York, but came to Plainfield two years ago from California, where she had been residing with a relative. Besides the granddaughter mentioned, she leaves one daughter, Mrs. Alice M. Camp, of New York.

EDWARD D. FLUCK.

Edward D. Fluck, for many years a resident of Plainfield, until his removal to East Orange in 1915, died suddenly at his home in the latter place Sunday. The funeral was held at the late residence, 269 North 19th street, Tuesday night, and was in charge of Masonic fraters. A further service was held at Easton, Pa., Wednesday morning, and burial took place in that city. Friends from Plainfield attended the obsequies at both places.

Mr. Fluck was born in Easton seventy-two years ago, but moved to Plainfield more than a quarter of a century ago to take a position at the Potter plant, having been an expert moulder. The family home was on Lee place for a long time, but previous to the removal to East Orange was on West Fifth street, near Lee place. Mr. Fluck was a member of Queen City Lodge of Odd Fellows of this city and possessed a wide local acquaintance. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Herbert Fluck, of East Orange, and Sergeant Arthur Fluck, of the 312th Infantry, now in France.

MRS. MARY BRUNNER.

Mrs. Mary Brunner, widow of Joseph G. Brunner, died Saturday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Newman, of Fairmount avenue, Oakland Park, just over the city line on Park avenue. The funeral was held in St. Mary's church, Tuesday morning, and burial was in Calvary cemetery, Brooklyn. Beside Mrs. Newman, the deceased leaves two sons, both residing in New York.

SAMUEL HARLIN.

Samuel Harlin, aged 52 years, died Monday night at his home on Howard street, the borough, following a long illness. He was a stone-flagger by trade and had lived in this vicinity practically all his life. The funeral was held at the late home Wednesday afternoon, in charge of Rev. D. W. Skellenger, pastor of Hope chapel, and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Mr. Harlin is survived by his wife, three daughters and two sons. The latter are Edna, Adele, Ida, George and Edwin.

ALBERT G. PERRY.

The funeral of Albert G. Perry, for more than half a century a resident of the "Prideville" section of North Plainfield and prominent locally as a veteran of the Civil War, because of his having survived the horrors of Andersonville prison, was held at his late home on Harrinson avenue Sunday afternoon. Rev. H. St George Burrill, of the Church of the Holy Cross, was the officiating clergyman, and scores of relatives and friends, in addition to a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., were in attendance. Burial was in Hillside cemetery, the following Grand Army men acting as pall-bearers: J. Worth Coddington, William N. Pangborn, James Lewis, Dr. J. F. Berg, I. L. McVoy and John King.

Mr. Perry was familiarly known as "Colonel," but the title was an honorary one and not an official commission. He was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1843, and lived there until after the Civil War, at which time he removed to North Plainfield. He was a shoemaker by trade and for many years conducted a repairing shop on Park avenue. On account of advancing years, he gave up the downtown place of business to locate another establishment at his home on Harrison avenue. Several months ago his health began to fail and the development of complications brought about his end last Thursday night.

In September, 1863, "Colonel" Perry entered the Union Army at Philadelphia as a member of Company D, 83rd Infantry. He served with distinction for nearly a year, taking part in numerous big engagements, but escaping serious wounds. In the Potomac camaign he was taken prisoner and for nearly a year underwent the privations at Andersonville that killed so many of his associates. The diseases which attacked him in the terrible pen disfigured his face and left him a physical wreck. He was eventually paroled just as the war came to a close.

Mr. Perry is survived by his widow and eight children, nearly all of whom reside in the borough.

ARTHUR J. DUNN.

The funeral of Arthur J. Dunn, of 731 South avenue, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital from complications following the extraction of a tooth, was held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning. A large gathering of relatives and friends attended the requiem mass, said by the Rev. Father Holsters. The profusion of floral tributes included set pieces from Plainfield Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles, and the Machinists' Union, to both of which he belonged. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: James, William and John Kiley, James Mahoney, Frank Cashin and Richard Hennessey.

Mr. Dunn was twenty-eight years old and had lived in this city for the past fifteen years. He was employed as machinist at local industrial plants, but two days previous to his death government papers arrived announcing his acceptance in the Naval Aviation Corps.

Several weeks ago Mr. Dunn was bothered by an ulcerated tooth. On going to a local dentist, he was advised that complications might ensue if the offending molar was taken out and the latter suggested that he go to a specialist in New York. This he did and on the advice of the specialist submitted to an extraction. Almost immediately afterward, evidences of blood poison developed and later on spinal meningitis developed. The sufferer was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, but efforts of the physicians failed to stay the disease.

Besides his parents, with whom he lived, Mr. Dunn is survived by two sisters and four brothers. They are: Mrs. James Scott and Miss Myrtle Dunn, Cletus, Charles and Thomas Dunn, of this city, and Harry Dunn, of Westfield.

MRS. ANNA LUTZ.

Mrs. Anna Lutz, widow of Henry Lutz and a former well-known Plainfielder, died at her home in Washington, D. C., Saturday night, following a long illness. The body was brought to Plainfield and taken to the home of an old friend, Mrs. Catherine Lynch, of 683 West Fourth street, and the funeral was held in St. Mary's church Tuesday morning, the deceased having been a former communicant. The requiem mass was offered by Rev. Father B. M. Bogan in the presence of many relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Lutz's home was on West Fourth street for many years. Her husband was employed for a long time by the Tracy family on West Eighth street, but he removed to Washington, following the appointment of two of his daughters to government positions. One of them, Miss Martha Lutz, is now a member of the bar in the District of Columbia. Later a third daughter also entered upon a government position and all three are still in Uncle Sam's service. Mr. Lutz died about two years ago and Mrs. Lutz had been in poor health since that time.

Beside Miss Martha Lutz, the surviving daughters are the Misses Julia and Marguerite Lutz.

MISS ELEANOR MOREHOUSE.

Miss Eleanor Morehouse, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morehouse, of Woodland avenue, died Tuesday, after a brief illness. The little girl was a pupil at the Bryant School and was a great favorite with all who knew her. The funeral was held at the parents' home yesterday afternoon, in charge of the Brethren and burial was in Hillside cemetery.

MRS. JAMES ALLESANDRO.

Mrs. Filomena Allesandro, wife of James Allesando, died at her home on Plainfield avenue, South Plainfield, Monday. The funeral was held in the Church of the Sacred Heart, South Plainfield, Wednesday morning, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, this city.

MISS ELLEN E. NILES.

Miss Ellen E. Niles, seventy-two years old, who taught in the Plainfield public schools for thirty-five years, died Sunday at her home on Crescent avenue after a long illness with asthma. She was born in Binghamton, N. Y., and came to Plainfield when a young woman. She taught ancient history and mathematics and rhetoric in the High School until retired in 1907 on pension. She was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and the Rasores Club.

Miss Niles is survived by two brothers, Harry Niles, of Minneapolis, and Charles Niles, of Binghamton, and two cousins, Miss M. Louise Cooper, of Montclaid, and Dr. W. L. Stowell, of New York. A private funeral service was held at her home Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church, officiated. Burial took place at Binghamton.

"Bookman" Writes of the Troop Trains

The Record is in receipt of a timely poem from Stephen Townsend, of Clinton avenue, who is known to many Plainfielders as "The Bookman," because of his dealing in books of all kinds. His effusion deals with the troop trains passing through Plainfield daily and though it is his first attempt at rhyme, it has more than usual merit. It will be noticed that Mr. Townsend hyphenates Berlin for several reasons, first for poet's license, second to give the proper accent and, third, to signify thta the boys from America are going to split the real Berlin in half before many days. Here is the poem:

TROOP TRAINS.

Boys in Blue and Gold and Brown,
Rumble thru' our good old town:
Peapack — Plainfield — "Quibbletown"—
Bound Brook — Trenton — Bonhamtown.

On to Belgium—on to France,
Put the Kaiser in a trance.
On to Ber-lin—"over there,"
Here they come from everywhere.

Hear them rumble through the town.
There they go to gain renown.
There they go to free the world,
Freedom's banners are unfurled.

Cars from North—South—East and West,
Bear the boys who we love best.
Take your hats off!—raise a cheer!
For these lives we all hold dear.

Line the sidewalks and the tracks—
Get right down to "Old Brass Tacks,"
As the Fathers did of yore—
With the musket o'er the door.

Take your hats off!—raise a cheer!
For these boys we all hold dear!!

—THE BOOK-MAN.

G. H. Reed, Chester S. Wagner, E. F. Randolph and J. A. Shjarback left Plainfield Sunday for Boston to undergo the medical examination for entrance to the Merchant Marine.

State Commissioner Smith's Report Shows Startling Growth in New Jersey Insurance

Some idea of the greatness of the institutions under the State supervision of the Department of Banking and Insurance is shown by the annual report of the insurance companies other than fire and marine doing business in this State just compiled by Commissioner Frank H. Smith, of this city, a copy of which is now in the hands of Governor Walter E. Edge. The figures appear enormous and the receipts and the assets both run into billions of dollars. The report is for year ending December 31, 1917.

Companies doing business are divided as follows: Fixed premium life companies, 40; fidelity and casualty companies, 64; assessment life associations, 4; title and mortgage guarantee companies, 10; Mutual Casualty Company, 1; fraternal beneficiary associations, 93; total, 212.

Four fratenal beneficiary associations have been admitted to transact business during the year, as follows: American Woodmen, North American Union, Roman and Greek Catholic Gymnastic Slovak Union Sokol, Slovak Timbermen's Beneficial Union.

The Improved Order of Heptasophs and the National Temperance Life Insurance Society withdrew from the State or ceased business during the year.

Germania Life Insurance Company changed its name to Guardian Life Insurance Company of America.

Toal assets and liabilities are shown in the forty life insurance companies as $5,513,513,660, of which the four New Jersey companies, Colonial, Mutual Benefit, Mutual Life and Prudential have $698,432,064.

The total income of all companies was $1,116,002,906, of which New Jersey companies received $178,807,893, and companies of other States, $937,195,070, and the total paid policy holders was $550,661,650, of which New Jersey companies paid $71,669,639.

The aggregate number of ordinary life policies is 10,357,975, with a total amount of $20,120,651,231, of which tremendous amount New Jersey companies carry $2,474,104,792, for 1,643,344 policy holders; number of policies issued during the year was 1,420,404, of which 240,395 was by New Jersey companies, the total amount of all companies being $3,088,539,322.

The number of policies paid or canceled during the year was 628,809, a gain for the year of 791,595.

The number of industrial life policies in force throughout the country attains the total of 34,586,662, showing that one in three of the entire population, men, women and children, of the United States, has an industrial policy of insurance and the greatness of New Jersey companies appears from the figures shown that 15,206,073 of the total number were issued by the four New Jersey companies, of which 1,425,793 were issued during the past year.

The total of all industrial policies is $4,762,332,677, of which $2,073,192,662, or nearly half, is in the four life insurances companies of this State.

The total number of life insurance policies in force in New Jersey, issued by the forty companies, is 1,872,175 and the total of the policies is $1,057,203,664, of which industrial policies total $405,027,866. The premiums received during the year were $32,627,270, and the claims paid amount to $14,003,821.

The total income from premiums in the United States and elsewhere was $69,164,268, larger than in 1916 and the sum of $550,661,650, was paid policy holders; this total was $23,411,254 greater than the premiums of the previous year. The companies issued 782,959 more policies and wrote $694,271,416 more insurance than in 1916, but in New Jersey the policies written show a slight decrease; 2,034 less in number, $12,505 less in amount than the writings of the year before.

Number of associations doing business in the State is eighty-five with a total membership of 5,997,209, of which 13,233 are in New Jersey; total amount of policies is $7,152,121,108, of which $109,648,286 are issued in New Jersey. The assessments collected in United States amounted to $2,087,317 and the death claims paid $1,626,259.

The fiscal year ending July 1, 1918, was the first year of the operation of this act, which applies to all New Jersey employes, excepting those of farm labor and domestic servants only. The year has been largely one of preparation and the bringing of all employers under the law, either by obliging them to obtain policies of insurance or to prove to the satisfaction of the commissioner their ability to personally pay compensation to their workman when injured.

The compensation rating and inspection bureau is now engaged in compiling the returns received from companies as to the cost of carrying compensation insurance during the years 1914, 1915 and 1916 with the intention of making equitable rates for the future. When the companies wished to increase rates January 1, 1918, to the extent of a flat five per cent, because of war conditions, their proposal was denied by the Commissioner for the reason principally that the advances in the scale of wages and salaries operated in favor of the carriers and offset any increase in the cost of conducting the insurance business of the companies.

When there was an attempt to increase the rates for compensation insurance, on a new scale running from $10 to $250, this proposal also was vetoed by Commissioner Smith, who reduced the scale by fifty per cent., excepting that no minimum was reduced below $10 per year.

As a result of certain later changes, the minimum premiums effective in this State are more favorable to the employer than those generally effective elsewhere.

An experience rating plan has just been adopted which will take into account, in so far as possible, the accident record of the individual enterprise, and also the "Associated Companies" have now agreed, under rates announced, that they are in position to accept those classes of risks known, because of their extra hazardness, as the "Prohibited List."

These sixty-nine companies have assets of $278,860,185, of which $93,610,960 is capital, and surplus claims paid during year were $83,609,426.

All of the 212 companies and associations reported are under the supervision and inspection of the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance and those companies which have their home office in other States are obliged by law to deposit certain large amounts of securities in care of New Jersey's Commissioner as security for liabilities to New Jersey policy holders or beneficiaries

Giebelhouse Will Protest Hearing to Be Held Next Week

More than 4,000 shares of stock in various mining and other concerns is mentioned among the effects of the late Johanna M. G. Blume-Giebelhouse, of West Front street, this city, as being worthless in an inventory of her personal property that has just been filed with the surrogate by Lamar Van Sickle and B. Frank Coriell, the appraisers. The total value represented is $37,217.91.

Mrs. Giebelhouse died last March, leaving an estate estimated at nearly $500,000. The will was offered for probate several months ago, but is being contested by two sons, who allege undue influence. An adjourned hearing on the protest will be heard before Judge Pierce in Orphans' Court next week.

Among other items enumerated in the inventory is a mortgage for $10,000 held on the farm of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York. His home is on the Valley road, Watchung. It was due on July 15, 1917, but is still unpaid. She also held life insurance policies amounting to $10,000.

The concerns in which she held stock were: Five hundred in Vesuvius Oil Company, San Francisco; one thousand in Timberline Mine Company; thousand in Columbia Mine Company; five hundred in Dew Drop Mine Company; eighty in Crescent Embossing Company, and thousand in Ni Wo Mining Company. She also possessed other stock.

The appraisal of realty holdings has not yet been made. She was the owner of valuable Newark and New York realty.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Koenig, who have been making their home with Mrs. Koenig's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, of Chatham place, the borough, left this week for Newark to reside their permanently, as Mr. Koenig is employed in that city.

Cigarettes by the Millions for Boys Serving Uncle Sam

One billion four hundred million cigarettes have been ordered by the Knights of Columbus for free distribution to our soldiers and sailors and their allies. Nearly half a billion of them have already been sent overseas and millions are being distributed by K. of C. secretaries to soldiers each week.

Our fighting men no longer have to seek a K. of C. building to get their supply of cigarettes or other "smokes," because the Knights have put a part of the organization in France on wheels and fleets of motor trucks follow the troops wherever they go. Men in the front line trenches or on the move are constantly kept supplied with "somkes" in addition to chewing gum, chocolate, soap and towels and other articles by K. of C. secretaries.

The boys at camps in this country are also supplied with cigarettes and other articles by the Knights, and 10,000 cigarettes are sent each week to the headquarters of the National Catholic Women's League, 154 East 38th street, New York city, where soldiers are entertained while visiting in the city.

Nearly 6,000,000 cigars have been ordered also by the Knights, and factories are busy supplying 4,000,000 corn cob pipes. In addition the Knights contracted for 3,000,000 pounds of chewing tobacco. Great quantities of all these supplies have already gone forward, while factories are working overtime to supply the balance.

Accompanying the fleet of motor trucks with K. of C. supplies to the front lines are twenty-five automobile camp kitchens. From them, the K. of C. serve hot chocolate free to the fighting men.

Mrs. Joseph Clark and daughter, Miss Helen Clark, of East Second street, returned Monday, after a two months' stay at Midland Beach.

A QUESTION OF FAIR PLAY.

In 1916, when the contract was let, the P. F. Kenny Company, a corporation, was low bidder for the general contracting work on the City Hall, and got that contract. The contractor was required by the terms of the contract to furnish all the brick, stone and other materials called for by the specifications and was entitled to be paid after the same were properly installed and became a part of the building. The contractor, of course, purchased such materials from concerns which manufactured or dealt in them and it was up to them to collect their money from the contractor, or if the contractor failed to pay them when the contractor got his money from the city, they might notify the city so that it could hold out from the contractor from money to grow due him later, the amount due from the contractor to the material man. After the building was raised and enclosed, the contractor failed. At that time he had been paid all that he was entitled to up to that date. Under the contract the city was entitled to finish the job and if that was done for less than the balance of the contract price, the surplus would go to the contractor or to its creditors, if they filed claims. If it cost more to finish the job than the balance of the contract price, neither the contractor nor its creditors would be entitled to anything. On the contrary, the city would have a claim against the contractor if it cost to complete the job more than the unpaid balance of the contract price. These are the usual terms in such contracts, and both contractors and material men are familiar with them.

After the contractor failed, the Monahan Stone Company, which had sold stone to the contractor, claimed that the contractor owed it $13,00, and demanded that the city pay this bill, threatening that otherwise it would prevent the completion of the building by means of a strike called by the International Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' Union. There was no claim that labor had any grievance. Every man who had worked on the job was a union man and every one of them had been paid in full. There was no question of wages, hours, or dispute of any kind in any way involving labor. It was simply an attempt to take $13,000 out of the taxpayers of Plainfield for the benefit of a large concern which had sold stone to the contractor and failed to collect from the contractor. The city had paid the contractor for the stone, but the contractor had not paid the concern from which he bought it. That was all there was to it. Mayor Calkins told the Monahan people that if they thought they had any right to collect from the city, they could bring suit and the city would help get an early trial. If the court found that the stone concern was entitled to any money from the city, it would be promptly paid. That certainly was a fair proposition—fair to the stone man and fair to the taxpayers. The city was good for anything it owed. But he pointed out that neither he nor the Common Council nor the city treasurer could give away public money nor pay claims which the city did not owe. The Monahan people persisted in their attempts to force payment by the city, by holding up the building. To this end they induced certain officers of the International Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' Union to declare the building unfair, although labor had no grievance. Monahan and those officers have been indicted by the Grand Jury and the indictment was sustained in the New Jersey Supreme Court. Appeal from that decision is now pending in the Court of Errors.

None of the indicted men reside in Plainfield. No craft except the Masons, Bricklayers and Plasterers' Union was concerned in the strike.

The local members of that union were not, at the time, even in sympathy with the strike, because it is said they knew that no union man who had worked on the job, directly or indirectly, had any grievance. Members of other crafts openly stated that the calling of a strike for the purpose of collecting a bill due to a material man, whose workmen had been paid in full, was unheard of and contrary to the rules of labor organizations.

Under the circumstances, how could it be fairly charged that Mayor Calkins was opposed to organized labor? How could he have consented to the payment demanded by the manufacturer of stone? He did not oppose labor in refusing to pay that bill. The American public, whether belonging to labor organizations or not, approves of fair play and any one who attempts to fool the public by distorting the records, is likely to be hoist by his own petard.

NO CONGRESSMAN FROM PLAINFIELD.

Ernest R. Ackerman's aggressive campaign for the nomination for Congress on the Republican ticket before the primaries on September 24 recalls to mind that Plainfield never has been represented in the House of Representatives by one of its Favorite Sons. Furthermore the interesting fact is that no Republican from Union county has ever represented the Fifth Congressional district who has not come from either Elizabeth or from Morris county.

The late John H. Capstick was Congressman from Morris and he succeeded William E. Tuttle, Democrat, from Westfield, in 1915. Mr. Tuttle was preceded in office by Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, who served continuously for eight terms or sixteen years. His predecessor was John T. Dunn, Democrat, of Elizabeth, who succeeded John Kean, Jr., Republican, also from Elizabeth. In 1873-5 Amos Clark, Jr., of Elizabeth, a Republican, sat in Congress from Union county.

It seems safe to assume that a man who in six years left such a fine record for work accomplished as Mr. Ackerman did when he retired from the State Senate that Union county will be well represented should he be the party nominee on the 24th of this month and should be the winner at the general election in November.

Reference has been made in Elizabeth and Summit newspapers to the fact that Mr. Ackerman is running only for the long term that begins in March, 1919. There have been suggestions made that he state his reasons why he is not running for both terms. The reasons are these:

Mr. Ackerman is a man of very large affairs. More than a dozen different major interests depend upon his personal guidance and judgment, either in whole or in part. These cannot be set aside and adjusted within ten days as would be necessary were he to run for the unexpired term of the late Congressman Capstick and be successful at the primaries. Besides, it requires from two to three months for a new man untrained in legislative procedure to become acquainted with the routine of law-making bodies; an experience which Mr. Ackerman can take with him in large measure because of his having served both as member and President of the State Senate. If Mr. Ackerman is nominated and elected he will have so adjusted his business affairs by the fourth of March, 1919, that he will be able to be a 100 per cent. representative of the district. The privileges of the floor of the House are always accorded to members-elect and it will be possible for Mr. Ackerman, if chosen to represent the district in Congress, to acquaint himself with the routine of the Lower House at Washington in the matters differing from those in the Upper House at Trenton.

The nation has placed a premium on business men. The Fifth Congressional district is destined to have a vital part to play in the nation's trade and industrial readjustments after the war, especially since Union county, representing a part of the Fifth district, touches upon what is destined to be the greatest harbor in the world. It is indeed fitting that a business man be sent to Congress for the long term and there is probably no other man in the district better equipped for the place than Ernest R. Ackerman.

WHAT'S BECOME OF THE GOOD OLD DAYS—

When Plainfield bore the inelegant name of "Pinchgut?"

When the Postmaster and some of his near associates attended hammock parties down Greenbrook way?

When there were more torch light processions and less speechmaking during a political campaign?

When you considered yourself a person of importance if the teacher at the Washington School gave you charge of one of the sashes?

When people thought it was impossible to run an automobile without wearing outlandish togs and low rakish caps that made them look like safe blowers?

When every newly married couple was given charivari and the gang refused to go away until the bridegroom came out with a handful of beer checks or a couple of boxes of prime perfectos?

T. N. T. TIPS TOLD IN HUGGER-MUGGER.

Don't say we said so, but there are a lot of men who were forty-four last year who found that they were over forty-six yesterday.

Nothing to it now but buckling right down to business, getting the new-comers off to camp and thence over-there for a speedy ending of the whole blame thing.

Can you imagine the comment going on in Berlin today, as the newspapers convey the information that 13,000,000 more determined Americans are a few steps nearer military duty?

Beside small pay and continuous duty, add another tribulation to the lot of the Plainfield firemen. They may be called upon at any time to drive the Nott out of headquarters and explain to the jeering crowd why it can't go any further than Front and Somerset streets.

"A newspaper has another duty to the community besides printing the news of the day and advertisements, that is to be a leader of thought and discuss the questions of the hour."—Courier-News, September 7.

Well, old top, why not get busy?

Ludendorff is ascertaining the interesting information that every little allied movement on the western front has a wallop all its own.

From the row created by the New York district draft round-up, we doubt if it'll be tried on again. So Plainfield is likely to escape a like man-hunt—at least for the present.

It was possibly one of the Mayor of Summit's ancestors, the famous Franklin who played around a bit with lightning. The Republicans in Plainfield have noticed some dark clouds in Summit but they seem to be nothing but wind clouds and it is very doubtful if there is enough electricity in the air for political lightning to strike in that vicinity. Baerman Death Deeply Deplored In Plainfield

The death of Roswell F. Baerman, the eighteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Baerman, in the Elizabeth General Hospital, Monday afternoon, from injuries received Sunday night, when he was run down by a trolley car at Broad street and Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth, has caused deep regret in Plainfield. Because of the family having resided in Dunellen for many years, the young man was well known in this city. He was a pupil at Leal School at one time and also at the Plainfield High School and had hundreds of local acquaintances. His death termined a promising career, as he possessed, more than ordinary talent as a sculptor and gave promise of doing great things, if his life had been spared.

Young Baerman was crossing the street at the corner mentioned when the car ran him down. It was in charge of Motorman Jacob Fox, who admitted to the police that it had gotten beyond his control a block away. Although he made desperate attempts to stop it, he was unable to do so until after Baerman had been thrown beneath the wheels and terribly mangled. Every effort was made to stay the loss of blood before an ambulance arrived to make him to the haspital, but so much ebbed away that he was unable to survive the shock. Fox was held on a charge of manslaughter and later released when the Public Service Corporation furnished bail to the sum of $5,000. Miss Mary Gaynor, conductorette of the car, became so hysterical at the sight of the young lad's mangled form that she had to be taken to the hospital for treatment. She was also placed under bonds by the police as a material witness.

Baerman, who was the son of F. Donald and May E. Baerman, of 216 South Broad street, Elizabeth, was born at Madison, February 22, 1900. When he was but a small child the family moved to Dunellen, but the lad never attended the public schools of that borough, his father giving him private instruction at home. Later he attended the Leal School in this city, and the Plainfield High School.

At the age of 4 he showed a remarkable talent for clay modeling, which developed rapidly. When he was only 11 years old he was taken to the Museum of Natural History in New York, where he modeled a likeness of a hippopotamus known to the frequenters of the museum as "Caliph," which was so perfect that it was said that only one other person at the museum could have excelled it. The young man at the age of 17 was regularly employed by the Museum of Natural History as a sculptor and naturalist. After the United States entered the war he felt that he should be in some active service for his Government and looking much older than his actual years tried to enlist. One of his shoulders was stiff as the result of an injury in early life and for that reason he was rejected.

Still determined to be in some work essential to the winning of the war, he obtained a leave of absence from the museum and obtained employment at the Port Newark Terminal Shipyards as a riveter. He had been working there for the past four months.

Mr. Baerman, the boy's father, conducted a poultry farm at Dunellen and spends a good part of his time in that place. Besides his parents, he is survived by two brothers, Freeman Henry and Donald Gerard Baerman, and two sisters, Helen Celia and Molly Dalzelle Baerman.

AUTO HITS GIRL.

Mary Polap, of 319 North Front street, was crossing Park avenue, near the railroad bridge, yesterday afternoon, when she was knocked down by an auto delivery driven by Harry Suydam, of 531 West Front street. Suydam took to girl to the office of Dr. Endicott, who found that her injuries were only minor cuts and bruises.

"HERE IS YOUR CHANCE."

Composed by Chas. P. Freligh.

When the boys were first drafted
To the age of thirty-one,
A few seemed dissatisfied;
Wanted to carry a gun.

They went around a-shouting
Because they were past the age,
And thought it a downright shame—
Flew into an awful rage.

But "Uncle Sam" has helped them;
He's going to give them a chance
To do something that's essential
Do go fight over in France.

You'll hear a different story,
They'll try every way and form—
To try and claim an exemption,
And oh! how they'll fret and storm.

But "Uncle Sam" don't mind that,
He's heard these stories before.
That's why he raised the limit,
For we all know war is war.

Now if you have ambition
And want to do your share,
Put your shoulder to the wheel
As if you did not care.

How hard may be your labor,
How hard may be your lot,
Do your all for Uncle Sam
And give most all you've got.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF

Happenings of the Past Week Tersely Told For Busy Readers.

The Loyal Band of Trinity Reformed church Bible school gave a reception Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Elizabeth Scheelein, of Pearl street, the borough, in honor of Miss Ella Conover, of Elmwood place, who is to leave shortly for overseas duty as an enlisted nurse.

Pasquale Loardo, a young Italian, was arrested by the North Plainfield police Tuesday at the request of the Waterbury, Conn., Exemption Board. It is asserted that Loardo registered in Waterbury on June 5th last, but failed to present himself for examination. He was traced to North Plainfield and the police located him at a boarding house on Steiner place.

At the request of Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, of this city, the Union County Board of Freeholders has offered a reward of $500 for information leading to the arrest of the murderer or murderers of Arthur L. Kupfer and Miss Edith Janny, of Perth Amboy, at Rahway, on August 22d. It is believed that the offer of the reward may bring material help to County Detective John A. Galatian, who is in charge of the case and who is working on several clues.

Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, has been allowed a writ of certiorari by the Supreme Court at Trenton to review the decision of Justice James J. Bergen, setting aside the Dunellen liquor vote, which favored the abolition of saloons and other licensed liquor places from the borough limits. The Jtusice's ruling was based on the fact that soldiers at the front had not been given a chance to exercise the right of suffrage when the matter was taken to the polls. Mr. Brown made application for the writ of certiorari as chairman of a committee of citizens in favor of the dry measure.

The following young men who registered at Weiss' Boro Pharmacy for enlistment in the Merchant Marine left this week for Boston to take the necessary physical examination before admission: C. J. Texier, E. F. Hand, W. J. Smith, E. A. Perrett, E. C. Wakefield, H. Eckert, W. S. Dealaman, M. W. Kline, C. E. Rise and C. D. Kellogg, of this city, also Albert Kelly, of Scotch Plains.

An automobile driven by Mrs. Francis de Lacy Hyde, of Mountain avenue, the borough, collided with a bicycle ridden by Edmund D. Young, of West Front street, at North and Watchung avenues, Monday morning. The bicycle was demolished, but Young escaped with only a few bruises. Bystanders who witnessed the accident declared that the wheelman was to blame, as he was looking backward when the collision occurred and had previously given no signal to Mrs. Hyde that he was about to turn the corner.

The Hodgson Brothers Company, of New York, now has a large force of men at work on the alteration job at the City National Bank at Park avenue and Front street. Preparations are being hurried to move back to the big deposit vault weighing twenty-one tons to a new location further along on the Park avenue side of the banking quarters. It is believed this will be accomplished in about three weeks and will be done without any interruption to the bank's extensive business.

The portable traffic post at Park avenue and East Front street has been knocked over so many times and so frequently shifted about by careless auto drivers that Street Commissioner Gavett has decided to place a permanent post at this point. It will have a concrete base and rounded at the botto mto safely sheer off any vehicle wheels pumping against it. It is possible that similar posts will be located in other parts of the city later on.

Claiming that he had liabilities of $1,686 and only $230 worth of assets to offset them, Louis B. Goldstein, proprietor of a grocery store at 196 Grove street, the borough, made application for a decree of bankruptcy the past week. The court referred his petition to Referee Atwood L. DeCoster for final disposition.

Everet Ditzel, an eighteen-year old youth, who was arrested at Watchung avenue and Fourth street on August 18 last, after he had terrorized the passengers on a Union Line trolley by firing five shots from a revolver, as he stood on the back platform, will be arraigned for sentence before Judge Carlton B. Pierce in the Union County Coudt today. When arraignlast week, he pleaded guilty to a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and discharging a firearm in the public street. At the time of his arrest, Ditzel appeared to be mentally unbalanced and the police had difficulty in extracting any information from him. He refused to tell where he lived and at first claimed to be twenty-two years ago. The latter statement was retracted when steps were made to have him placed in charge of the military authorities as a non-registrant. Since his confinement to the county jail, the culprit has changed his demeanor to the extent of giving Newburg, N. Y., as his home and telling more in detail about himself.

The Union County Board of Freeholders has issued invitations to officials, newspapermen and citizens throughout the county to attend an inspection of the "prison farm" at New Providence on Thursday, September 19th. Those wishing to attend are requested to meet at the House in Elizabeth at 2:00 o'clock on the afternoon of the date mentioned. Free transportation is to be provided to and from the farm. Plainfielders who are interested in this method of bettering conditions surrounding local prisoners are urged to attend the inspection, as it will give them a complete idea of what has been done by the Freeholders and the reasons for the appropriations to erect new buildings.

A sample of the expert knitting done by Plainfield firemen stationed at headquarters on East Second street is on display in one of Tepper Brothers' show windows. It is in the form of a fine big blanket made of knitted squares, made mostly by James McDonough, Harry Wierenga and George Leland, who have proved apt pupils in a class, organized by Mrs. Robert Woodhouse, of East Seventh street. The blanket is to be presented to the government hospital at Colonia.

Plans Advanced for Belt Line Railroad Beginning at Linden

Further details of the belt line railroad that is to be built through Elizabeth from the Staten Island Sound through Summit and other northern New Jersey points until it sweeps in a wide arc to Piermont-on-the-Hudson are now available. Under the direction of the New York and New Jersey port commission the surveying and planning of the road that it expected to relieve industrial congestion has been started.

According to the plans for the road as being worked out by the survey, the line, which has been termed by official Washington as a war necessity, will be approximately thirty-five miles long. Starting probably on the Linden flats of the Sound, it will cut across Elizabeth and Roselle on the B. & O. freight line until Aldene is reached, and then take the line of the Rahway Valley Railroad to Summit. From there it will continue north through Bergen county until the arc to Piermont is completed.

The problems being studied include the building of two tunnels, one near Summit and the other near Paterson, the location and profiling of a gradient under restricted percentages and the prevention of grade crossings at roadways and intersecting railroads.

It is stated that the tentative beltline railroad route favored by the port and harbor commission takes in all of the large industrial centers of North Jersey. Spur lines and sidings at big industrial plants will permit the loading of freight direct on cars, as well as the direct discharge of freight.

A number of Jersey men, including residents in Elizabeth and Summit, are interested in the project. The proposed line would cross all the big railroads of the State, including the Delaware and Lackawanna at Summit, the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Lehigh Valley at Aldene and the Pennsylvania at Elizabeth. Those who favor the idea foresee a huge railroad terminus along the Staten Island Sound.

The proposition was first carried to the harbor commission a year ago and more lately on to Washington. Now the sanction and aid of the Federal Government has been obtained.

New Revenue Bill May Lower Taxes on Liberty Bonds

A new complication arose yesterday in connection with the big Revenue Bill now under consideration by the House. A material lessening of estimated revenue derived from surtaxes on interest from Liberty Bonds is threatened.

The matter of protecting the next Liberty Loan sale, which begins September 28, was discussed by Secretary McAdoo and Chairman Kitchin, of the Ways and Means Committee, before the Revenue Bill entered its final stages. Mr. McAdoo insisted that either higher rates of interest must be allowed or lower surtaxes imposed. Mr. Kitchin did not accept that view. As a consequence, the surtaxes did not exempt Liberty bonds, although the interest rate will be determined in a separate measure.

It is expected that the Ways and Means Committee will take this matter up at an early date, and seek to reach some conclusion regarding the new Liberty Bonds. In view of Mr. McAdoo's apprehension that difficulty in selling the bonds may arise, the problem becomes one of vital importance.

A letter written by Secretary McAdoo to Chairman Kitchen relative to the interest on and the income from Liberty bonds was made public yesterday.

This statement is made by Mr. McAdoo:

"In order to give the numerous small holders of Liberty bonds the advantage of a market upon which they may sell their bonds in case of necessity, and also to attract subscriptions from the great number of investors of ample means, but not of great wealth, it will be immediately necessary either to increase the interest rate or to neutralize the increased surtaxes by freezing the bonds to a limited extent from such taxes.

The opinion is expressed by Mr. McAdoo that holders of the first, second and third Liberty bonds should participate in the abatement allowed those who herefater become purchasers.

Secretary McAdoo also recommends legislation removing the limit under which one person may hold but $1,000 of war savings certificates. He asks that this be made to apply separately to each series, so that a person may buy an additional $1,000 of those sold in 1919. He requests that the limit of $2,000,000,000 be enlarged.

The draft of a bill to make his suggestives effective accompanies Secretary McAdoo's letter to Mr. Kitchin. It provides that the interest on bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan not exceeding in value $30,000 shall be free from surtaxes and excess and war profits taxes. An exemption of $45,000 is made for holders of the First, Second and Third Liberty Loan bonds.

The aggregate volume of war savings certificates is increased to four billion.

Plainfield Man Made Chairman In "Y. M." Plan

The plan to enlist "a million boys behind a million fighters" under the designation of "Red Triangle Boys" has the hearty approval of F. Wayland Ayer, of Camden, chairman of the Eastern Department of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Ayer has had some exceptional experience directing successful campaigns for benevolent and religious objects, and he is a firm friend of the boys and everything that is for their betterment. What he thinks of the scheme is expressed in these words:

"As chairman of the Eastern Department Committee, I shall be greatly disappointed if this plan is not followed with the result that the boys will contribute their full share of the more than $150,000,000, which will, I trust, be received in response to our next appeal."

The New Jersey War Work Council has many prominent business men interested in the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the State, some of whom are serving in various capacities on committees. One of these big men is A. L. Kennelly, a member of a big paper firm of New York, whose home is at 826 West Seventh street, this city. He will act as chairman of the committee that will direct the boys' campaign. Mr. Kennelly is deeply interested in the work and hopes to devote considerable of his time to the campaign.

Charles A. Coburn, State secretary, has been complimented for the selection of Charles R. Scott, as executive secretary of the boys' movement. Its success is regarded as already assured. Mr. Scott is one of the most popular workers among the boys in the Y. M. C. A. He has been the boys' secretary in Newark for eighteen years and his silver anniversary with the association will be completed on October 10, 1918.

The aim of the movement is the development of boys in intelligent, sacrificial investment of their lives in behalf of the great cause. They will be asked to earn and give. In enrolling the "Red Triangle Boys" it is planned to have each boy designate the amount he wishes to give to the campaign. He will be informed that five dollars will provide the Y. M. C. A. privileges for one soldier or one sailor for a period of three months. This gives him a concrete idea of what his money will accomplish.

The complete plans for the boys' campaign are being carefully prepared by Executive Secretary Scott. It is estimated there are nearly ten million boys in the country, and it is felt the task of enlisting one-tenth of that number should not be difficult. At all events under the direction of Executive Secretary Scott the Boys' Division will set an active pace once the work is begun, and there will be plenty of activity among the boys of New Jersey up to the closing of the big drive in November.

Mr. and Mrs. John Neagle and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rowland, have removed from 453 West Sixth street, to Monroe avenue, near Sherman avenue.

Preference List To Be Guide in Draft Exemption

The new preference list made public by the War Industries Board foreshadows a much more drastic curtailment of the lesser essential industries, officials declared today.

It definitely prescribed what industries shall receive basic materials first in order of their importance in contributing to victory. No materials will be available for other industries until the needs of those accorded preference are fully supplied.

There are four great classes, the first embracing plants engaged in the more vital war work, such as aircraft production and ammunition making. Class two includes copper, brass, locomotives, steel wire and kindred industries. Class three takes care of electrical equipment, food, factories and a few others. Newspapers, tobacco plants, medical factories and others are included under Class four.

The list will furnish a key to draft officials for granting industrial exemption, and determining whether a man is engaged in an essential pursuit. "Key men"—the absolutely essential ones—will in some cases be excused, officials say, but it is also predicted some dilution of labor will be necessary even in the more important plants.

Men claiming exemption in these classes must obtain affidavits of employers, setting forth that they are indispensable.

The complete list follows:

Class One.

Plants principally engaged in producing aircraft, supplies and equipment; ammunition for the United States and the Allies; ordnance and small arms for the United States and Allies; chemicals for explosives, ammunition and aircraft and use in chemical warfare; metallurgical coke and by-products, including toluol; explosives for military purposes; feed for livestock and poultry; food, including cereals and cereal products; meats, including poultry; fish, vegetables, fruit, sugar, syrups, glucose, butter, eggs, cheese, milk, cream, lard, lard compounds, oleomargarine and other substitutes for butter or lard; vegetable oil, beans, salt, coffee, baking powder, soda and yeast, ammonia for refrigeration, fungicides; oil and natural gas for fuel or mechanical purposes (including pipe lines and pumping stations); ships, other than pleasure craft or vessels not built for the United States or the Allies or under license of the Shipping Board; steel plants; plants producing solely steel ingots and castings by the various processes; domestic consumers of fuel and electric energy for residential consumption, including homes, apartment houses, residential flats, restaurants and hotels; coal mines, arsenals, cantonments and camps of the army and navy yards; railways operated by the United States Railroad Administration; maintenance and operation of ships, excluding pleasure craft not common carriers and maintenance of public buildings used as hospitals or sanitariums.

Class Two.

FLATTERY NOT RELISHED BY AMERICAN HEROES.

American officers and soldiers, who have been in the thick of things, protest very frankly against the exaggerated stories that have been published. I have noticed, says Warner Allen, British correspondent, among nearly all the American troops I have met a very genuine and praiseworthy modesty. One company officer, who was having a short spell of convalescence after being badly gassed, said to me:

"We do not want to be told we are the best troops in the world. We know we are new to this job and have a lot to learn. It is enough for us to know that what we have done has satisfied such fighting soldiers as Marshal Foch and General Mangin and, after their praise, we resent the idea of any newspaper correspondent describing us as supermen. All we ask is to give us our due and no more."

County Still Shy on Sale of Stamps

Charles H. K. Halsey, chairman of the Union county War Savings Stamp committee, announced this week that $108,517.59 worth of these government securities have been sold in Union county during the past month.

Of this amount $58,545.69 has been sold at the Elizabeth postoffice. Elizabeth disposed of more than half of the amount sold throughout the county.

Despite the fact that the sales amounted to $108,517.59 last month, it was a decided drop from the sales of July, which amounted to $173,050.11, and June, which almost totaled July's mark. The total amount sold in Union county since the first of the year is $825,000, and more than $500,000 was received in pledges in the last drive. This only brings the grand total up to $1,325,000, and the quota for Union county is $2,632,000, leaving the amount short more than a million dollars.

Mr. Halsey urges the people to invest in these stamps, which are one of the best investments. He declared that only four more months are allotted to complete the quota, and does not want to see Union county fall short in its allotment.

It is likely that after the next Liberty Loan campaign that another Thrift Stamp drive will be launched, so that Union county will go over the top for W. S. S. Mr. Halsey urges that every body who pledged himself to buy stamps each month live up to the pledge, and continue to purchase the stamps.

Harry E. Kenyon, of East Fifth street, has resigned his position as bookkeeper with the Boice-Runyon Company to accept a similar one with the J. D. Loizeaux Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Thompson, of Sherman avenue, are the parents of a son, who arrived at their home a few days ago.

Orders Trolleys Off Bridge at New Brunswick

Declaring the continued use of the Albany street bridge across the Raritan River at New Brunswick unsafe, the Public Utilities Commission has ordered the Public Service Railway Company and the Public Service Railroad Company to cease operating cars over the bridge, beginning next Sunday. The railroad company operates what is known as the New Brunswick Fast Line, running between Trenton and Newark, for the most part over a private right of way. Other cars crossing the bridge are operated by the railway company.

The order closing the bridge to trolley traffic is a sequel to a report handed down by the commission July 25 last recommending that the construction of a modern new bridge be undertaken and prosecuted continuously, not later than September 15. As no action has been taken in this direction, the board decided that the safety of the traveling public demanded that the bridge be closed.

The formal order for the closing of the bridge was issued by the board Wednesday afternoon. It set forth briefly the fact that the present structure had been condemned by the board's engineer as unsafe, and added that temporary repair work on the bridge has been inadequate to support traffic.

The question of replacing the Albany street bridge has been considered by various bodies, including the Middlesex freeholders, the Council of New Brunswick, and the State Highway Commission, for some time past. An effort was made about a month ago to have the State Highway Commission construct a new bridge on the ground that it formed a part of the proposed State highway system. The commission admitted the importance of the bridge, but was unable to undertake to replace it, both because of funds and legal complications involving its jurisdiction.

In addition to Public Service Railway cars running from New Brunswick to various points in adjacent territory, the bridge is used largely by motor trucks, including army trucks, many of which are heavily laden.

The old draw bridge spanning the Raritan, which has been called unsafe by the Public Utilities Commission, has been subjected to a series of attacks since the advent of the trolley system on the public highways and the heavy automobile traffic, particularly since the roads in this section have been used so much by the great army trucks. Camp Raritan, located near Metuchen, with its more than 12,000 soldiers, has used the bridge extensively, and because of the fact that the bridge is now taxed to many times its estimated strength when it was constructed in 1893 to replace one built in 1820 there are two guards night and day on the structure to prevent any other vehicle crossing the bridge while a trolley car is crossing.

The present bridge is of the iron trestle sort with a wood flooring. It is turned by two men when necessary to open the way for boats to pass. When it was constructed it was not estimated that it would be compelled to carry the traffic that it now carries. It was then built for horse-drawn vehicles, but at the present time there are three lines of trolleys running over it in addition to the army trucks and the continuous stream of automobiles and other vehicles, and, according to County Engineer Alvin Fox, of Perth Amboy, it shows its inability to maintain the strain much longer.

Cars are using the bridge frequently, and for the past three years the efforts to have a new structure replace the present one have carried the question into court. The freeholders attempted to compel the Public Service Railway Company to build a new bridge, but the Public Utilities Commission held that as the freeholders had built the present bridge and had maintained it the board could not compel the railway company to construct a new one. This question was carried to the Supreme Court, and the court sustained the Utilities Board.

Numerous efforts since then to build a new bridge have been futile. The old Middlesex Board of Freeholders, which went out of existence last January, left the work unfinished, and the new board was unable to accomplish anything along these lines. The question aof money entered into it, and only recently the capital issues committee of the Federal Reserve Board approved the issuing of $90,000 worth of bonds for a new bridge.

Samuel Taverner Springs Surprise on Friends

Samuel R. Taverner, of Madison avenue, sprang a surprise on his many local friends this week by announcing that he had been a benedict since Tuesday, September 3. On that date he married Miss Marion Tom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tom, of Cooper avenue, Fanwood. The ceremony took place in New York city and was attended only by the necessary witnesses. After a wedding trip to Boston, the couple returned to this city and are making their home at 514 Madison avenue.

Mr. Taverner has been a resident of Plainfield for the past ten years, following his graduation from Rutgers College as a civil engineer. He was employed for some time in the engineering department of the New Jersey Central, resigning this position to reside at Ballston Spa, N. Y., pending the disposition of his mother's estate. For the past few months he has been acting as inspector of roads in Union county for the State Highways Commission. He is a prominent member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks and the members of this organization unite with his many other local friends in extending congratulations.

Local Board of Health Engages Nurse--Inspector

Miss May Merriman, of the New York City Health Department, has been secured by the Plainfield Board of Health in the double capacity of public health nurse and inspector. Miss Merriman is a registered trained nurse and is especially well qualified for her work, having spent six years under Dr. Josephine Baker, who has so successfully directed the child hygiene work in New York city. Her work will be largely educational in character.

GOVERNMENT WILL PAY DEPENDENTS.

Dependents of soldiers reported "missing in action" will continue to receive remittances for allotments and allowances, but until the men are officially reported dead, no payments of voluntary insurance or Government compensation will be made. So far the War Department has not certified any of the missing, which include prisoners taken by the enemy and those killed whose bodies are not recovered, as to be considered dead.

Second Annual Farm Exhibition of Netherwood Residents' Association Even More Successful Than First

Netherwood residents in particular and Plainfielders in general are still talking of the remarkable success of the second annal "War Garden and Farm Show" of the Netherwood Residents' Association last Saturday afternoon. It took place in the Parish House at South and Woodland avenues and was the wind-up of the home garden conquest, conducted by the hustling organization during the past summer.

In order to stimulate interest in the governmenta's appeal for more vegetable production during the summer of 1917, the Netherwood Residents' Assocation offered prizes for boys and girls who would plant a garden of their own and promised substantial awards for the best products. Not only the children but the grown-ups became greatly interested and the returns, as shown by the first exhibition last September, corroborated the predictions of the contest originators.

The enthusiasm was so great that it was decided to hold a similar contest this year with almost double the success of its predecessor. Where there were a total of 104 entries last year of fruits, vegetables and cut flowers, this year there were nearly 200. Having had previous experience, it is plain to be seen that the young folks had profited by what they had learned in vegetable growing and the exhibits were a delight to the eyes of veteran gardeners. In many cases the judges had to figure long and wisely before making the decision that placed one little fellow's product above the rest.

The exhibit drew a big crowd to the Parish House all through Saturday afternoon. The specimens from the home gardens were attractively displayed on wooden plates and also in glass. They were backed up by masses of cut flowers in vases, mostly the contributions of grown-ups, shocks of corn and nodding sunflowers still standing on their long stalks. Golden pumpkins were everywhere about the room and it was not a hard matter for the visitors to imagine themselves at a real country fair. An added feature this year was a class for home canning. It resulted in twenty-five entries of such a tempting nature that if covetous eyes could have purloined they would have been missing long before the judges announced the prize winners. Another feature this year was the exhibition of a beautiful woolen blanket knitted by 16 members of the city fire department, also a sweater knitted by one of the men.

Henry White Herrman, of West Seventh street, this city, who has a wide reputation as a patriotic speaker, mad ea splendid address at one period during the afternoon. It was filled with many appropriate and original remarks, which, with his injection of patriotic themes, gripped his auditors for nearly half an hour. The conclusion of the address produced round after round of applause.

Loss of Revenue From Beer Ban Provided For

There is no necessity for the imposition of taxes additional to those provided in the $8,000,000 revenue bill to make up whatever loss in revnue may result from the proposed cessation of beer brewing on December 1, and national prohibition on July 1, next, Representative Fordney, of Michigan, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means committee, declared in the House Tuesday.

Fordney quoted Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper as estimating that under the revnue bill passed last year there had already been raised $4,500,000,000, although the original estimates totalled $3,941,663,000. He added that as Roper had also figured that an additional $1,000,000,000 could be collected under this bill, there was no reason to believe that any serious loss of revenue from the abolition of alcoholic drinks could not be met without heaping up other taxes

Gen. March Improving Reports of Casualties

The system of listing and making public in this country the casualties sustained by our forces overseas must necessarily be one of gradual development in the line of meeting all interests concerned. The announcement by General March of the policy, by way of being followed by the War Department, shows that the military authorities are endeavoring to show every consideration in this important matter.

The lists as published up to this time have included not only the names of American soldiers dead on the field of honor, who have succumbed to wounds received in battle and who have died of disease or the result of accident, but also the missing and those who have sustained wounds the nature of which has not been determined.

When the new system of listing casualties is in effect, the casualty lists cabled daily from the other side will include the names only of the dead and missing. These lists will be given out for publication, and, of course, notification, on their receipt at Washington, will immediately be wired by the army authorities, in individual cases, to relatives, or the one given by the soldier in question as the nearest friend. In addition General Pershing will forward by courier twice a week lists of all wounded. These latter lists, in their completeness, will be made public from Washington. Full data will be given in connection with the wounded, so that relatives and friends may be advised explicitly as to the nature of wounds.

This plan seems to be designed for the prevention of unnecessary anxiety. According to the system which has operated, hundreds of cases of undetermined wounds have been reported, and relatives and friends simply have had to wait for further details. Soon, when reports of wounds come, information, as exact as possible, will be afforded with respect to the nature of the wounds. Obviously such information could not be put on the government cables. Under the past system it is probable that many men reported younded, nature undetermined, have recovered and have been returned to some degree of service before the news of their having been wounded has been sent to this country.

Without question, the greatest speed possible should be employed in transmitting the names of those Americans who have made the supreme sacrifice or who must be listed among the missing. As to the wounded, the giving of certitude regarding the nature of wounds would appear to be sensible as well as considerate policy, and Americans may be assured that this information will be furnished as soon as it can be reliably collected and sent by messenger.—Newark Evening News.

"PLEDGED TO PRESIDENT WILSON'S DEMOCRATIC POLICIES"

OTTO ROSS

OTTO ROSS, present Mayor of Madison, Morris County, candidate for the Democratic nomination in the Fifth District for the full term in Congress, was born in Galveston, Texas, January seventh, 1874, of American ancestry antedating the Revolutionary war.

He has resided in New York and New Jersey since boyhood and has been a lifelong Democrat. He has been elected a Councilman, and twice elected Mayor of Madison Borough on the Democratic ticket and is the only successful Democratic Mayoralty candidate in the history of that Borough.

He has always maintained an active interest in political affairs, and has a good record as a public official; exhibiting a practical understanding of his duties and the courage of his convictions.

OTTO ROSS

He has served in his community on the committees for all the war activities; is President of the Madison Home Defense League; Chairman for the Borough of the State Council of Defense, and for the American Defense League. He has an unassailable record in his personal attitude and public utterances on an uncompromising American stand before the war and on the necessities of the situation since the declaration of war.

His known public record is a guarantee that he will support the policies of the Administration in the prosecution of the war and the enforcement of peace terms as outlined by President Wilson and accepted by all the allied Governments.

The Fifth Congressional District is constituted of Union and Morris Counties. Union County furnished the party candidate in 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916, and also in other years prior to 1910. Morris County has not had a candidate since 1902, or in sixteen years. According to all precedent it is the turn of a Morris County Democrat to be nominated, and in OTTO ROSS Morris presents a candidate who has the entire support of the party throughout the County, and who is a loyal and active Democrat, as is shown by the fact that his home town of Madison was carried for the Democratic Congressional candidate at each of the last four elections, though it is rated as a Republican stronghold.

MR. ROSS has the personal and political strength, and the qualifications to win in November if he is nominated, and the Union County Democrats are asked to support him for the nomination.

Vote for OTTO ROSS at the Primary Election on September 24th.

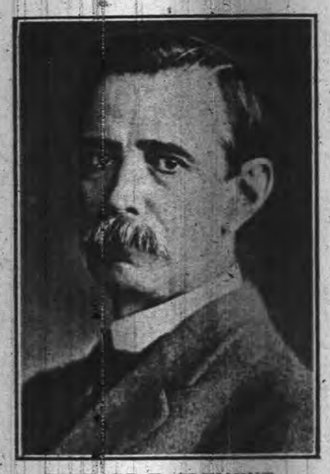
Democrats of Union County



RICHARD E. CLEMENT

IT IS MOST IMPORTANT THAT YOU VOTE IN THE PRIMARY ELECTION. Select your candidate and vote for him. This is the only way to make all of your political influence count. One vote may decide the election. Democrats are supporting Richard E. Clement for Congress because they believe that if nominated in September he will be elected in November; because he has lived and worked in Union County continuously for more than 30 years, knows the district, its people and their needs, and will serve them with a mind and a will single to their interests; because they believe he should be promoted to a position of greater responsibility and power for rendering service to the people, to the city, the State and the nation; because they believe him to be successful as an administrator, as an executive and a master of detail, and because SERVICE is the keynote of his candidacy. He is intensely American. He is a Democrat, and he asks for the vote of every Democrat.

THE TIME FOR ACTION IS TUESDAY, SEPT. 24, 1918.

Polls Open 12:30 P. M.; Close 9:00 P. M.

Fate of $1,500,000 Worth of Flowers Hangs in Balance as Owner Awaits Winter's Supply of Fuel

The fate of one million dollars' worth of rare orchids, to say nothing of another half million dollars' worth of Gardenias and rose bushes now flourishing in the artificial tropical heat of R. W. Young's immense glass houses at Harris Lane, five miles from this city, depend upon the ability of the owner to secure a sufficient amount of coal during the coming winter. While every possible allowance is being made by the fuel administrators to prevent the loss of the rare orchids, which cannot be replaced within six or seven years, hard and fast rules make the continuance of conservatories a secondary matter under the essential industries.

The Young green houses, as a group, are said to be the largest in the country. They cover in all an area of twelve acres under glass, in addition to the boiler house, packing, potting and other buildings. The green houses themselves are eighteen in number, seven of them being thirty-eight feet wide and five hundred feet long, three of them thirty-eight feet wide and three hundred feet long, and the others of varying dimensions up to two hundred and fifty feet long. Their total valuation is $1,500,000. In extremely cold weather it requires two carloads of coal, or about one hundred tons every twenty-four hours, to maintain the proper temperature required by the growing plants. Last winter, Mr. Young had sufficient supply on hand to see him through the memorable fuel shortage, but with the constant curtailing of shipments, the problem of getting supplies has become one of an absolutely serious nature.

As a precautionary measure, the number of Gardenias and rose bushes has been greatly lessened during the summer, as they are plants more easily replaced than the orchids. The latter are the delicate "babies" of the florist game and beside being susceptible to the slightest lowering of their customary warmth cannot be replaced within six years. Some of the rarest specimens require from seven to eight years' careful nursing before a single compensatory bud can be taken from their stalks. In the collection of these rare flowers at the conservatories in question are a total of one hundred thousand specimens of all sizes and ages, aggregating in value an even million dollars. Most of the growing ones are worth from $100 to $500 each, while those in bloom are valued at $1,000. Standing above all others are several in the "aristocracy class" as they could not be purchased for less than $3,000. They are of the rare, white varieties, imported from South America, and as anyone familiar with flowers can tell you white orchids are anything but plentiful. Men who have made these particular flowers a lifelong study are in charge of the Young specimens and the white varieties require a close inspection every day for any evidences of insect attack or "suffering" from cold. They receive the same case as a mother extends her baby and should one of the beauties give indication of illness a consultation is held as serious as that conducted by doctors when deciding upon a patient's chances for life.

Outside of the orchids, the most valuable stock in trade at the Young houses, are the Gardenias. They are not so delicate as their associates in the other houses, but on account of the great number of them their aggregate worth is a matter of no small moment. They, too, must have heat and lots of it, and should it not be forthcoming this winteer, it will be a long time before their owner could replace them, if at all. The flower, which is named in honor of Dr. Alexander Garden, gives off a most fragrant odor and is much in demand during the winter time. Mr. Young many thousands of them at his Fifth avenue store in New York and also ships many thousands to dealers in Philadelphia, Newark, Easton, Allentown, Plainfield, New Brunswick and other places. These same dealers purchase their orchids from him, although the bulk of his products are sold at his retail establishment and at the store of a fashionable Philadelphia florist.

The roses nurtured by Mr. Young are exceptional beauties but although they require difficult atmospheric conditions to produce for the market, the bushes can undergo a freezing and yet be brought back in shape later on. For this reason, they do not figure as heavily in the coal proposition as the orchids and Gardenias yet their loss is an item that would put the average florist out of business. Ordinarily Mr. Young employs a force of thirty men to keep all his flowers and to start new plants on the road to finaicial maturity. Preparation for a fuelless winter, however, has stopped all new work and the force is already lowered to twenty-five. Later on it may be cut down still more, the number depending entirely on how much coal can be secured.

Mr. Young started the present enormous business himself and on a very small scale. He has gradually built it up to the existing proportions and stands today as one of America's foremost florists. His orchids and Gardenias are known everywhere and his roses never fail to excite admiration. The formalities of war, however, do not take flowers into consideration and for that reason the rare and costly specimens at the green houses are approaching a grave epoch in their career. There may yet be a betterment in conditions but as things stand at present, the life of the orchids especially are dependent upon the supply of coal coming this way during next December, January and February.

Garages Told They Can Have No Coal

Already hit hard by the gasolineless Sundays, automobile garages have received the information this week that they are not to receive any coal if there be a shortage in the districts where they are located. The Government advises and recommends, however, that coke and bituminus grades of fuel are to be had and are good substitutes if handled properly.

The coal situation in Plainfield has not changed in any material respect since last week, although shipments are beginning to come in a little better.

Mayor Calkins spent an hour and a half with the State Fuel Administrator in Newark. Monday, going over the local coal situation. With the Mayor were Councilman M. S. Ackerman, Corporation Counsel Reed, and W. H. Williams, of the Delaware and Hudson Company, whose home is on Rockview avenue, the borough. Figures were presented showing exactly how much coal has come into Plainfield and how much is needed to fill orders which have been placed. The State Administrator said that his survey of the whole State would be completed in a week or ten days, and this would show what communities have received more coal than others. He would then be in a position to equalize deliveries. He thought that Plainfield, on the facts as presented, would be entitled to early consideration.

Mayor Calkins said to a Record reporter yesterday that he felt encouraged as a result of the trip, but that the committee which went to Newark Monday intended to keep right at the thing, and not let up in the least until everybody gets his two-thirds supply. "We are not asking favors for Plainfield," he said, "but only to be as well treated as other communities are. We shall be safe maybe when people have a two-thirds supply, because some coal will be coming in all through the winter months. There should, however, be a basic reserve supply in the local yards for people who must buy in small quantities at frequent intervals. In other words, as we approach winter all the coal that comes here should not go into cellars, but a reserve should be available for those who can buy only by the quarter and half ton."

The committee also requested the State Administrator to arrange for active local administration in Plainfield, so that all coal arriving in Plainfield shall be distributed with absolute fairness.

Another "Vet" Fireman Quits the Department

Harry Wierenga, of Wallace place, is the latest member of the Plainfield fire department to quit the service. He left last Monday morning to accept a well-paying position with the British-American Metals Company which recently began operations in the old Manganese Safe plant at Clinton avenue and South Second street. Several other members of the department are also considering taking positions in local industrial shops.

Mr. Wierenga had been in the department for five years and was considered one of the ablest fire-fighters in the service. He has always been stationed at Headquarters, where he acted as apparatus driver. Mr. Wierenga's resignation makes the department fourteen men shy at the present time, the total number of privates being only about half of what is called for by the fire board's orders.

PRIVATE FUNERAL FOR DR. C. B. MATHEWSON.

The funeral of Dr. Charles Brenton Mathewson, who died yesterday morning at his home on Sandford avenue, will be held at the residence this afternoon, and will be private. In accordance with his wishes, the body will be cremated at the Linden Crematory.

Dr. Mathewson was born at Wickford, R. I., in 1853 and had lived in Plainfield twenty-five years. He had practically been retired for a long time. His only near surviving relatices is his niece, Mrs. C. B. Lufborrow, wife of Dr. Lufborrow, of West Front street.

Brothers Die Soon After Each Other

Thirty-six hours after his twenty-year-old brother, Paul Rolla Apgar, a member of the Merchant Marine, had died of pneumonia, following an attack of Spanish influenza, contracted in Boston, William H. Apgar, thirty-eight years old, passed away in Muhlenberg Hospital last night. He was also a victim of pneumonia, having been taken ill last Friday. He was removed to Muhlenberg shortly after his brother died but nothing could be done to save his life.

The funeral of the brother, Rolla, was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. Rev. Father B. M. Bogan offered a requiem mass in the presence of many relatives and friends, only a few of the latter up to that time knowing that the second death had occurred.

Both young men were the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Neaf Apgar, of 40 Clinton avenue. William lived with his wife and four children next door, at 44 Clinton avenue. He was an engineer on the New Jersey Central. Beside his parents, he is survived by five brothers and two sisters. They are: James, of Wyoming; Thomas, Hazelwood. John and Roy, and Mrs. Joseph Dunlap and Miss Madeline Apgar, of this city.

Fire Chief Jennings In Attendance At Joint Conventions

Andrew D. Jennings, head of the Plainfield fire department, is among the officials attending the joint conventions of the State Firemen's Relief Association and the State Chiefs' Association being held at Atlantic City today and tomorrow. Sessions for the Relief Association gatherings begin this afternoon and will continue tomorrow afternoon, while the chiefs will confer tomorrow morning.

In addition to Chief Jennings, delegates from Local No. 7, of Plainfield, to the Relief Association convention are: Wesley J. Dunn, Paul Adams and Vincent W. Nash. Former Chief T. O. Doane, of this city, has been at Atlantic City during the past week and will attend the gathering of chiefs tomorrow morning.

Chief Jennings was a member of a party of New Jersey's best known chiefs leaving Newark, yesterday morning, for the shore resort. The trip was made by automobile and numbered beside the Plainfielder, Chief Paul Moore, of Newark; Chief William F. Ingold, of Edgewater, and Chief William Ziegler, of Hackensack, also Fire Commissioner Connelly, of Newark. A number of the chiefs in this and other parties were accompanied by their wives and members of their families.

The two conventions will be among the most important that the organizations have held in many years as because of conditions brought about by the war, numerous vital questions concerning firemen will be discussed.

Mackay or Wills May Become Acting Governor of State

Assuming that State Senator Emerson Richards, of Atlantic county, will be out of the contest for Acting Governor in the event of Governor Edge's election to the United States Senate and his retirement before the close of his term, it seems probable that the honor will go to either Senator William B. Mackay, Jr., of Bergen county, or Senator Harold B. Wells, of Burlington, prospective candidates for the Senate presidency.

As told, Mr. Richards is going into the army, and this statement has been accepted as tantamount to a declaration that he will not seek the presidency of the Senate, for which position he had been assured of the support of a majority of the hold-over Senators.

A legislative session of four weeks, one-half as long as the record-breaking eight-week session this year, is the novelty now being planned by Republican leaders for next winter. Reasons advanced for the still further curtailment of the session is the necessity for conservation along all lines. A brief session, it is argued, will not only have man power, but will be productive of other economies along various lines.

To carry out the program successfully will necessitate a considerable amount of preliminary work, along lines similar to those of last year, when nearly all the essential legislation was prepared in advance of the actual session, so that, when the Legislature met, it was practically ready for final action. The greatest difficulty in the way of a short sessions is the preparation of the appropriation bills, which might necessitate a recess and the return of the Legislature for the passage of the appropriation measures only.

Edward L. Bauer Appears A Favorite

A canvass of the city this week has demonstrated that Edward L. Bauer, of Elizabeth, is the big favorite in the campaign for nomination on the Republican ticket for the office of county registrar.

Mr. Bauer has hundreds of warm friends in Plainfield who have come in contact with him through his connection with the registrar's office, one of the most important in the county. He was deputy registrar from 1909 to 1917 and became registrar on appointment from Governor Edge when Frank H. Smith resigned last year. He has been handling the affairs of the office in such ac rediable manner that Republican voters seem almost unanimousl n their desire to have him remain in the position.

Mr. Bauer was born in Elizabeth and has been active in its affairs for many years. He is president of the El Mora Association, a civic organization of large proportions; a director in one of Elizabeth's building and loan associations and has played an important part in the development of Elizabeth real estate. Something like 18,000 papers are handled in the registrar's office during the year and Mr. Bauer has so simplified this work that it is turning in the county a net profit over all expenses of about $3,000 annually.

CAMP DIX MEN BEGIN PRIMARY VOTE

The first of the 20,000 Jersey soldiers now stationed at Dix began to cast their votes in the primary election Monday morning. The Y. M. auditorium is being used as a polling place and about 4,500 men from the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Eleventh battalions of the depot brigade have vvoted. Monday afternoon the men from the Tenth, Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth battalions, the 413th Labor Battalion and the 811th Pioneer Infantry will cast their sealed ballots.

The election vote is being gathered under the direction of election commissioners sent to Camp Dix by the State and when the returns are all in the sealed envelopes will be taken to the State House and then sent out to the various election boards, so that the totals can be counted on the primary day.

Work has begun on enlargements to the soldiers' club house conducted by the New Jersey Women Suffrage Association at Wrightstown. The cafeteria is being enlarged and the large garage in the back will be turned into a kitchen where large numbers of home-made pies can be made. The improvements are made possible through the generosity of Mrs. John White, of Atlantic City.

The funeral of John Borman, who died at his home on East Second street yesterday noon, after an illness of only two days, will be held at the residence Sunday afternoon, in charge of Rev. Mr. Dauble, of Warrenville. Interment will be in the Springdale cemetery.

Mr. Borman was in his seventieth year and moved to Plainfield from Warrenville ten years ago. Beside his wife, he leaves the following sons and daughters: Julius H., of West Fourth street; Charles A., of Church street; Benjamin H., with Company A, 311th Infantry, in France; Elmer A., also in France; Mrs. Fannie Thompson, and Mrs. Edward Allen, living at he parental home.

Three Die In Family In Four Days

For the third time in four days, death entered the Brennan family of this city, yesterday, when John Brennan, sixty years old, of 305 East Fourth street, died in Muhlenberg Hospital. He had been ill several weeks with complications and was barely alive on Tuesday night, when his brother, Thomas Brennan, of Webster place, died suddenly from heart trouble brought on by excessive grief over the demise of his daughter, Miss Winifred Brenann, twenty-four years old, who passed away Monday from pneumonia.

An additional sad tinge is given the trio of deaths from the fact that Miss Brennan was to have been married next week to Stewart Hedden, of Clinton avenue. A double funeral for herself and her father was held in St. Mary's church when a solemn high mass of requiem was offered in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Hennessey was the celebrant, Rev. Father Bagon, deacon, and Rev. Father Holsters, sub-deacon. The funeral of John Brennan will be held in the same church tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Thomas Brennan was fifty-eight years old but had lived in Plainfield a long time. For many years he was employed in the city's street department, resigning recently to take a position at the Scott Press Works. He was found unconscious on South Second street, Tuesday night, and died before Dr. Yood arrived in response to a call. Beside his wife, he leaves six daughters and three sons. The yare: Celcilia A. Brennan, Mrs. J. N. Leonard, of Westervelt avenue; Mrs. Charles Walpole, of Scotch Plains; Ann, Sarah and Agnes Brennan and Thomas, John and Francis, living at home.

John Brennan was unmarried and leaves one brother, James, and two sisters, Helen and Bessie Brennan, with whom he lived on East Fourth street.

Former Local Man Is Made Lieut.-Colonel

Among the recent army promotions announced from Washington was that of Major E. Llewelyn Bull, formerly of this city, to be a lieutenant-colonel. For the present he is to continue as a member of the instructing faculty at West Point, because of a slight physical diability affecting one foot but later on may be sent overseas with a new division.

News of the promotion was a source of great satisfaction to local people as Lieutenant-Colonel Bull spent his boyhood in Plainfield and was educated at the local schools. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Bull, whose home was on East Ninth street for many years, and a brother to the late Dr. Charles P. Bull, who died in Texas last June. At the present time, he is one of the only two members of the original family living, the other being a brother, William Bull, of Bridgeport, Conn. The latter still owns the old family residence on East Ninth street.

After leaving the old Stillman High School in 1895, Colonel Bull attended Leal's School for a year and then entered West Point. Receiving his commission as lieutenant five years later, he was assigned to duty in the Philippines and made a most enviable record. During the greater part of his career in the field he was attached to the Twenty-second Infantry and the colonel in command once told a Plainfielder that "Lieutenant Bull is the finest soldier ever coming out of Plainfield, as they never make more than one of his kind in the same town." While in active service in the Philippines, Colonel Bull was not only exceptionally proficient as a commanding officer, but qualified repeatedly as an expert rifle man.

Following a fall, the Colonel submitted to what was supposed to be a slight operation to remedy a lameness in one foot, but afterward it seemed to be worse. The trouble bothered his walking considerably and for this reason, he was assigned to instruction work. He was stationed at the military academy as major when the promotion to lieutenant-colonel was announced.

AUTO THIEVES CAUGHT IN NEW YORK

Two men, who it is believed are the ones who stole John Kiely's Ford automobile from in front of the Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday night, were arrested in New York at midnight, last night. The missing machine was found in their possession. The men gave their names as Walsh and Ryan, and claimed to lived in New York city.

Lieutenant Higgins, of the local police force, went to New York this morning to bring the two men back to Plainfield.

New Registrants To Be In Camp by October 7

Call for Twenty-seven White Men Finds Local Board Seven Short and Deficiency Must Be Made Up From Latest Class

That at least a few of the Plainfield men who registered last week will be in camp by the seventh of next month, became apparent in the office of the local Exemption Board today, when Chief Clerk Walter Freeman found himself seven selectives short on a call for twenty-seven whites received from Adjutant-General Gilkyson.

Of all the classes registered previous to September 12, only fifteen 1-A men were listed when the call came in. Since then, five others in other classes have asked for voluntary induction and were accepted after they had been found physically fit. It is now quite certain that the other seven needed will have to be taken from the new class and if any other calls are received it will mean a "speeding up" of the local draft machinery to get the necessary contingent.

Belated cards coming in have brought the total of September 12 registrants in the Plainfield district up to 4,094. Those between the ages of nineteen and thirty-six have been placed in a separate class and are now receiving their questionnaires. Mr. Freeman and his staff are sending out the documents at the rate of about 200 a day. Just as soon as they come back without any claim for exemption the work of physical examination will commence. It is quite probable that a large number of these will take place next week. The twenty-seven white men making up the call for October 7 will go to Camp Dix and will mark the beginning of actual military duty for the newest registrants.

The local board this week also received a call from headquarters for seventeen colored selectives to be sent to Camp Dix on Thursday, September 26, leaving the North avenue station on the 9:38 train. Only fifteen colored men were available when the call came but two others from last week's registration have been asked to be sent, thus making up the needed number. The names of the seventeen to go were announced today as follows:

Thomas Reidlick, Harry C. Davenport, Alexander Eggleston, George Leslie Kingslow, Robert Cooke, Edward Coleman, William Eugene Grobes, George Winston Evans, Wilbert Freeman, Vernal J. Williams, Melvin Halsey, Clifford Upshur, Thomas E. Ford, Julius Smith, John D. Williams, Thomas Brown.

Quits Public Service After 24 Years of Duty and Three Flirtations With Death

After twenty-four years of continuous service in the electric department of the Public Service Corporation, Daniel J. Guinee, of Liberty street, tendered his resignation this week to become chief electrician at the Spicer plant in South Plainfield. The change was much of a surprise to his hundreds of friends as he had been so faithful and steady in his old place that he had become almost an "institution" in electrical service work in the Plainfield district.

Mr. Guinee began his electrical career with the old Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, which was succeeded sixteen years ago by the Public Service. His first employment was at the Madison avenue power plant, graduating from there to the line gang. He became an expert line man and at the present time, possesses a better knowledge of the electric wiring system in Plainfield than any other man. In recent years, he held the title of foreman of the line gang, which puts in all service wires from the street poles to the houses or stores. The district in which he operated included beside Plainfield and North Plainfield, part of Dunellen, and all of Scotch Plains, South Plainfield and Watchung.

In the course of his connection with the Public Service, Mr. Guinee has on three occasions had serious accidents which all but cost him his life. One of the most notable occurred on Clinton avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, nine years ago, when, in clearing away trouble on service lines, he came in contact with the high tension feed wire bringing power from the Metuchen station to Plainfield. A current of 13,00 volts coursed through his body, rendering him unconscious but for some reason or other, not snuffing out his life. One hand was so badly burned by the current, as he caught hold of the wire, that a finger had to be amputated. Despite this terrible experience, which would have convinced the ordinary lineman that he had better seek other fields of endeavor, Mr. Guinee returned to the job after a fourteen weeks' stay in Muhlenberg Hospital. Twice again did he receive electric shocks and falls from poles calculated to place the average man on the casualty list, but each time he re-appeared on the job as though nothing of moment had occurred. It is only because the Spicer company offered much better opportunities with a full appreciation of his ability and faithfulness that the line foreman decided to terminate his long Public Service career.
